DONATED By
PANDIT SHAMBOO NATH DAR.
(1901 — 1969)
ADVOCATE, and former President
SRINAGAR MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

DATE LABEL

1233

*Call No.*_____ *Date*_____

*Acc. No.*_____

K. UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

This book should be returned on or before the last date stamped above. An over-due charge of .06 P. will be levied for each day if the book is kept beyond that day.

INDIAN CASES

CONTAINING

FULL REPORTS OF DECISIONS

OF

The Privy Council, the High Courts of Allahabad, Bombay, Calcutta and Madras, the Chief Courts of Lower Burma and the Punjab, the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners of Central Provinces, Oudh, Sind and Upper Burma

REPORTED IN

The following 20 Legal Periodicals:

Allahabad (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Journal; Bombay (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Reporter; Burma (1) Law Times, (2) Lower Burma Rulings, (3) Upper Burma Rulings; Calcutta (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Journal, (3) Weekly Notes; Madras (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Journal, (3) Law Times, (4) Weekly Notes; Nagpur Law Reports; Oudh Cases; Punjab (1) Law Reporter, (2) Record, (3) Weekly Reporter; Sind Law Reporter

WITH

A large number of extra Rulings of High Courts not reported elsewhere.

G. N. Das
Advocate High Court
Jammu & Kashmir
Srinagar.

VOLUME XIII, 1912.

EDITOR:

S. D. CHAUDHRI, B.A., LL.B.,

PLEADER, CHIEF COURT, PUNJAB, LAHORE.

JOINT-EDITORS:

HEM CHANDRA MITRA, B.A., B.L., Vakil, High Court, CALCUTTA.
M. M. MURZBAN, Barrister-at-Law, Advocate, High Court, BOMBAY.
A. PARMESHWOR DYAL, B.A., LL.B., Vakil, High Court, ALLAHABAD.
M. PARTHASARATHY, B.A., B.L., High Court Vakil, MADRAS.
SHAIKH MUHAMMAD IQBAL, B.A. (CANTAB), M.A. (PUNJAB), Ph. D. (MUNICH), Barrister-at-Law, Advocate, Chief Court, PUNJAB, LAHORE.
PANDIT GOKARAN NATH MISRA, M.A., LL.B., Vakil, High Court, N.-W. P., Pleader, Judicial Commissioner's Court, (OUDH), LUCKNOW.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY THE MANAGER,
AT THE "LAW PUBLISHING PRESS," LAHORE.

PRINTED IN 1912. RE-PRINTED IN 1914.

Books Checked

UNIVERSITY LIB.
K. DIVISION
Acc No 75382
Date 10.12.69

CONSOLIDATED

Comparative Tables showing seriatim the Volumes and Pages of all Indian Law Journals and Reports, for the 1st quarter of 1912, with the corresponding pages of Indian Cases Volumes 1 to 15.

Table 1

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

(A).—34 I. L. R., ALLAHABAD SERIES, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH, 1912.

Page of Vol. 34 I. L. R., All., 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1911-12. V.	P.
1	Muhammad Usman v. Muhammad Abdul Ghafur ...	11	319
4	Beni Ram v. Man Singh ...	11	663
8	Chunni Lal v. Sita Ram ...	11	476
13	Jiwan Ram v. Tondi Singh ...	11	305
20	Mohsin Ali v. Masum Ali ...	11	672
22	Abdullah Khan v. Bundi ...	11	710
25	Bhola Nath v. Kishori ...	11	646
32	Rangam Lal v. Jhandu ...	11	640
36	Muhammad Sharif v. Bande Ali ...	11	474
41	Khub Chand v. Harmukh Rai ...	12	183
43	Kuldip Dube v. Mahaul Dube ...	11	705
49	Salig Ram v. Chaha Mal ...	11	712
53	Muhammad Nazir Khan v. Makhdum Bakhsh ...	11	737
57	Jit Singh v. Maharaj Singh ...	13	257
63	Jamna Das v. Ram Autar Pande ...	13	304
65	Lekhraj Kunwar v. Harpal Singh	13	269
72	Ganga Singh v. Banwari Lal ...	9	700
78	Emperor v. Masit ...	12	837
79	Indar Sen Singh v. Harpal Singh	12	915
89	Emperor v. Naushe Ali Khan ...	12	844
91	Emperor v. Gur Prasad Gir ...	12	990
93	——— v. Abdul Wahid Khan ...	12	987
96	——— v. Ahmad Khan ...	12	988
98	Bishambhar Nath v. Bhullo ...	12	920
102	Gur Narain v. Shadi Lal ...	12	607
103	Mamraj v. Brij Lal Chakravarti ...	12	587
109	Zaib-un-nissa v. Maharaja of Benares ...	12	604
113	Jagannath Prasad v. Badri Prasad	11	768
115	Emperor v. Sardar ...	12	836
118	——— v. Ram Naresh Singh ...	13	921
121	Raghubir Singh v. Ram Chandar	12	927
123	Gaura Bibi v. Ghasita ...	12	603
126	Nand Ram v. Bhupal Singh ...	13	5
129	Abdulla v. Ram Lal ...	12	601
135	Ganpat Rai v. Munni Lal ...	13	34
140	Shankar Lal v. Sarup Lal ...	13	19
143	Shami Nath Chaudhri v. Ramjas	13	80
146	Emperor v. Behari Lal ...	13
148	Huran Bibi v. Hingan Bibi ...	12
150	Jagarnath Ojha v. Ram Phal ...	13	79
155	Kedar Nath v. Naipal Singh ...	12	922

(B).—9 ALLAHABAD LAW JOURNAL, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH, 1912.

Page of Vol. 9 A.L.J. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1911-12. V.	P.
1	Shami Nath v. Ramjas ...	13	80
4	Abdul Hakim Khan v. Chandna ...	13	83
8	Ganpat Prasad v. Sarju ...	13	94
12	Sarvi Begum v. Haider Shah ...	13	404
15	Balmakund v. Kundun Lal ...	13	943
17	Mewa Lal v. Ahmad Ali ...	13	929
19	Ishar Das v. Asaf Ali Khan ...	13	134
23	Sohni v. Mohan Koer ...	13	944
29	Kanhai Lal v. Hulas Singh ...	13	939
33	Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed ...	13	331
37	Jamna Das v. Ram Autar Pande...	13	304
40	Lekhraj Kunwar v. Harpal Singh	13	269
48	Jagannath Prasad v. Badri Prasad	11	768
51	Emperor v. Ram Naresh Singh ...	13	921
54	Ganpat Rai v. Munni Lal ...	13	24
59	Khazan Singh v. Panna Lal ...	13	131
63	Dirgbijai Singh v. Bhan Partab Shah Singh ...	13	945
67	Baldeo Singh v. Hira Lal ...	13	951
72	Ram Sarup v. Jasodha Kunwar ...	13	138
79	Maharaja of Benares v. Lalji Singh	13	187
84	Fakhran Bibi v. Nageshar Ram ...	13	954
86	Gendan Lal v. Babu Ram ...	13	197
95	Mutsaddi Lal v. Mule Mal ...	13	384
97	Balmakund v. Emperor ..	13	778
103	Kanhaya Lal v. Girdhari Lal ...	13	956
105	Chittar Kuar v. Gaura Kuar ...	13	320
108	Jackson v. Jackson ...	13	958
111	Bande Ali v. Gokul Misir ...	13	154
124	Ajudhia Pershad v. Ram Lal ...	13	284
131	Habib-ullah v. Abdul Hamid ...	13	963
137	Muhammad Umar Khan v. Muhammad Niaz-ud-din Khan ...	13	344
148	Wilaiti Begam v. Fazal Husain Khan ...	13	961
152	Ahmad Said Khan v. Masi-ullah Khan ...	13	975
156	Gauri Shanker Lal v. Emperor ...	13	1006
158	Raja Dei v. Ummed Singh ...	13	632
162	Bansi v. Emperor ...	13	829
165	Durga Prasad Lahiri v. Sashibala Debi ...	14	463
170	Gulzari Lal v. Ganga Ram ...	14	652
173	Elizabeth C. Balanchette v. Secretary of State for India ...	13	417
180	Dhian Singh v. Emperor ...	14	649
183	Birjbasi Lal v. Salig Ram ...	14	472
188	Ram Chandra Das v. Farzand Ali Khan ...	13	531
198	Rashik Lal v. Ram Narain ...	13	573
207	Shankar Lal v. Mahtab Dei ...	14	414
211	Sat Narain v. Badri Nath ...	13	645
215	Mata Din v. Ahmad Ali ...	13	976
226	Jugal Kishor v. Ram Narain ...	13	619
231	Abdul Ghafur v. Raza Husain ...	13	829
233	Banarsi Das v. Banarsi Das ...	14	416
234	Khadim Husain v. Bharat Singh	14	433
238	Jainath Pathak v. Kalka Upadhia	13	613
244	Kishori Lal v. Todar Singh ...	13	535
253	Brijnath Sarin v. Byrne ...	13	506
258	Narain Das v. Ram Prasad ...	14	455
260	Lal Singh v. Emperor ...	14	657
262	Baijnath Dube v Emperor ...	14	653
263	Debi Mangal Prasad v. Mahadeo Prasad Singh ...	14	1000
276	Mi Me v. Mi Shwe Ma ...	14	475
285	W. J. O'Grady v. Harbert Winn...	14	135
288	Babu Lal v. Emperor ...	14	666
290	Gobardhan Sahi v. Mahabir Singh	14	506
292	Bikram Singh v. Narain Singh ...	14	59
294	Heydorn and Co. v. Muhammad Shafi ...	14	507
297	Lachhmi Narain v. Turab-un-nissa	14	505
300	Parbati v. Baijnath Pathak ...	14	61
307	Jasauli v. Emperor ...	14	734
308	Ram Singh v. Mathura ...	14	599
310	Ram Dial v. Emperor ...	14	607
311	Gopi Narain v. Kunj Behari Lal...	13	625
323	Manohar Lal v. Ram Babu ...	14	674
332	Mahomed Ibrahim Hossein Khan v. Ambika Pershad Singh ...	14	496
348	Bhondo v. Salig Ram ...	14	810
351	Bela Rani v. Mahabir Singh ...	14	116
355	Bharosa Pathak v. Emperor ...	13	999
358	Ram Krishna v Ram Kirpanidh	14	97
362	Nathumal v. Abdul Wahid Khan...	14	812
365	Khetpal v. Tikam Singh ...	14	172

S. N. Das
Advocate High Court
Jammu & Kashmir
Srinagar

S. N. Das
Advocate High Court
Jammu & Kashmir
Srinagar.

Table 2

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

(A).—33 I. L. R., BOMBAY SERIES, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH, 1912.

Page of Vol. 36 I. L. R., Bom. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1911. V.	P.
1	Kaikhusru Aderji v. Secretary of State ...	12	117
20	Bai Jamnabai, In re ...	11	554
29	Ghelabhai Gavrishankar v. Uderam Icharam ...	12	577
37	Trimbak Bhikaji v. Shankar Shamrav ...	12	532
42	Motilal Virchand v. Thakore Chandrasangji ...	12	549
47	Chunilal Virchand v. Ahmedabad Municipality ...	12	540
53	Pirojshah v. Manibhai ...	12	543
58	Kassum Goolam Hoosein v. Dayabhai Amarsi ...	12	547
61	Ahmedabad Municipality v. Ramji Kuber ...	12	551
68	Dattatraya Vishnu v. Vishnu Narayan ...	12	949
77	Fatmabai v. Sonbai ...	11	568
81	Municipal Commissioner for the City of Bombay v. Mathuradas	11	995
88	Ganpat v. Tulsiram ...	12	271
91	Dharma Bal Patil v. Balamiya ...	12	545
94	Ghelabhai Gavrishankar v. Hargowan Ramji ...	12	928
105	Merali Visram v. Sheriff Dewji ...	12	687
111	Salebhai Abdul Kader v. Bai Safiabu ...	12	702
116	Tanaji Dagde v. Shankar Sakharam	12	564
120	Trikam Purshottam v. Natha Daji	12	359
123	Keshav v. Jairam ...	12	709
127	Muljibhai Narbheram v. Patel Lakhmidas ...	12	711
131	Parwatibai v. Chatru Limbaji ...	12	708
135	Pandurang Balaji v. Dnyanu ...	12	9-6
138	Gangadhar Parappa v Yellu ...	12	714
139	Jasudin v. Sakharam Ganesh ...	12	693
144	Sayyad Jiaul Hussan Khan v. Sitaram Bhau ...	12	720
146	Bagas Umarji v. Nathabhai Utamram ...	12	737
151	Chunilal Jamnadas v. Bhanumati	12	727
156	Sorabji Coovarji v. Kala Raghunath ...	12	911
164	Velchand v. Flagg ...	13	853

(B).—14 BOMBAY LAW REPORTER, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH, 1912.

Page of Vol. 14 Bom. L. R. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
1	Jamna Das v. Ram Autar Pande...	13	304
5	Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed ...	13	331
9	Govind Baba v. Jijibai Saheb ...	13	849
14	Gopal v. Rajaram ...	13	851
18	Velchand v. Flagg ...	13	853
22	Pandurang v. Gangaram ...	13	855
26	Abdul Kayam v. Bahadur Vithoba	13	858
30	Jit Singh v. Maharaj Singh ...	13	257
33	Thakurain Lekhraj Kunwar v. Thakur Harpal Singh ...	13	269
40	Emperor v. Hari ...	13	827
41	——— v. Balwant ...	13	825
45	Shivlal v. Tricumdas Mills Co. Ld.	14	353
77	Secretary of State v. Sadashiv ...	14	434
89	Tukaram v. Narayan ...	14	438
115	Mahadev v. Janu ...	14	447
120	Ismailmiya v. Wahadani Begam...	14	469

(B).—14 BOMBAY LAW REPORTER, 1912—concld.

Page of Vol. 14 Bom. L. R. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.	Page of Vol. 14 Bom. L. R. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
124	Vasudeo v. Govind ...	14	473	212	Kunwar Ragho Prasad v. Lala Mewa Lal ...	15	177
128	Rakhmini v. Dhondu ...	14	466	220	Debi Mangal Prasad Singh v. Mahadeo Prasad Singh ...	14	1000
135	Emperor v. Somnath ...	14	764	231	Claridge, In re ...	15	93
137	——— v. Kanji ...	14	669	236	Emperor v. C. W. King ...	15	96
141	——— v. Imankhan ...	14	671	237	Haridas Lalji v. Narotam Raghavji	14	769
144	——— v. Keshavlal ...	14	672	250	Gangadas v. Bai Suraj ...	14	777
146	——— v. Dwarka Poonja ...	14	598	254	Sahadu Manaji v. Devlya Jaba ...	14	780
147	——— v. Chhotalal ...	14	970	259	Dalpat Zopdoo v. Mahadu Uka ...	14	782
158	——— v. Dattatraya ...	14	974	261	Ambaidas Parag v. Jijibhai Raiji	14	979
163	——— v. Jina Badhar ...	14	757	264	Vithoba Kondiba v. Tejiram Bhavaniram ...	14	977
165	Lakhichand v. Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company ...	14	793	267	Rangubai v. Subaji Ramchandra...	14	821
177	Durga Prasad v. Srimati Sashibala Debi ...	14	463	270	Ibrahim Ali Khan v. Muhammad Ahsan Ullah ...	13	695
182	Muhammad Umar Khan v. Muhammad Niaz-ud-din Khan ...	13	344	280	Mahomed Ibrahim Hossein Khan v. Ambika Pershad Singh ...	14	496
192	Mata Din v Sheikh Ahmad Ali ...	13	976	295	Abdul Rajak v. Bai Jimbabai ...	14	988
204	Mi Me v. Mi Shwe Ma ...	14	475

Table 3

BURMA (LOWER) CHIEF COURT.

(A).—5 BURMA LAW TIMES, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH, 1912.

Page of Vol. 5 Bur. L. T. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1911-12. V.	P.	Page of Vol. 5 Bur. L. T. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
1	Ma We v. Maung Cheik ...	12	797	30	Navana Chiai Madar v. Peria Curpen Chetty ...	14	637
5	Momein Bee Bee v. Ariff Ebrahim Malim ...	14	508	33	Subramanian Chetty v. Mg. Po Thet ...	14	801
9	Nga I v. Emperor ...	14	651	36	Mg. Pwe v. Maung Daw Na ...	14	809
11	Wong Yone Wain v. Emperor ...	14	653	37	Nga Than v. Emperor ...	14	765
13	Tan Gaw Pok v. Sundaresan Chetty ...	14	626	38	Jordan v. Emperor ...	14	763
15	Matilda Brown v. Trevor Figg Francis ...	14	628	39	Macmillan, In re ...	14	804
17	Nga Thwe v. Emperor ...	14	656	45	Cohen v. Mg. Ba Chit ...	14	811
20	Emperor v. Thomas Pellako ...	14	643	47	Nambiar v. Sundrabai ...	14	813
				49	Nga Shwe Pa v. Mi Yon ...	14	815

(A).—5 BURMA LAW TIMES, 1912—concld.

Page of Vol. 5 Bur. L. T. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.	Page of Vol. 5 Bur. L. T. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
52	Nga Kyin Ya v. Mi Tok ...	14	818	79	Shwe Wa v. Sullivan ...	15	368
55	Nga Tok v. Nga Kasim ...	14	978	80	S. R. M. C. T. Chetty v. Ko Aung Gyi ...	15	276
57	Nga La v. Nga Than ...	14	837	81	A. P. S. V. Firm v. Shree Safatulla	15	363
61	Mi Kan Yon v. Nga Pwe ...	14	843	85	Ma Yin Za v. C. Nash ...	15	353
72	Maung Po Tu v. Chaung Taik ...	15	358	87	Maung Pu v. Napean ...	15	355
73	Ma Ein Thu v. Maung Hla Dun ...	15	360	92	San Paw Aung v. King-Emperor	15	305
75	Mahomed Sultan v. The Moulmein Municipal Committee ...	15	361	95	Christensen v. Sattia ...	15	374
77	Ma Sein Hnyin v. Lutchman Chetty	15	366

6 LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT RULINGS, FROM OCTOBER TO DECEMBER, 1911.

Page of Vol. 6 L. B. R. 1911.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.	Page of Vol. 6 L. B. R. 1911.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
34	Momein Bee Bee v. Ariff Ebrahim Malim ...	14	508	43	Po Nyun v. Muthu Karapan Chetty	14	437
38	Po Yon v. Messrs. Mohr Brothers & Co., Ltd. ...	13	386	44	On Pe v. Kun Ti ...	14	447
41	Nga I v. King-Emperor ...	14	651	46	Wong Yone Main v. King-Emperor ...	14	653

Table 4

BURMA (UPPER) JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

1 UPPER BURMA RULINGS, FROM JULY TO DECEMBER, 1911.

Page of Vol. 1 U. B. R. 1911.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V	P.	Page of Vol. 1 U. B. R. 1911.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
96	Ah Tat v. Emperor ...	14	968	100	Ali Muddin v. Meah Jan ...	15	89
98	Na Kaung Nyein v. Emperor ...	14	973	105	Nga Ba Gyaw v. King-Emperor ...	15	311

Table 5

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

(A).—39 I. L. R., CALCUTTA SERIES, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH, 1912.

Page of Vol. 39 I. L. R. Cal. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1911-12. V.	P.
1	Rameshwar Singh v. Secretary of State ...	12	114
26	Rang Lal Singh v. Ravaneshwar Pershad Singh ...	12	174
33	Kamini Debi v. Pramatha Nath Mookerjee ...	10	491
53	Abhoy Charan Jalia v. Dwarka Nath Mahto ...	11	180
59	Paul v. Robson ...	12	60
84	Tripendeswar Mitter v. Corporation of Calcutta ...	11	997
87	Dinesh Chandra Roy Chowdhury v. Biraj Kamini Dasee ...	11	67
104	Begg, Dunlop & Co. v. Jagannath Marwari ...	11	417
119	Lalit Chandra Chanda Chowdhury v. Emperor ...	15	65
138	Afazuddi Khan v. Prasanna Gain	14	991
141	Deb Narain Dutt v. Chairman of the Barnipur Municipality ...	12	32
146	Abdul Karim v. Abdus Sobhan ...	13	243
150	Emperor v. Abbas ...	12	833
157	Mehi Singh v. Mangal Khandu ...	12	297
164	Rudolf Stallmann, In the matter of ...	12	273
220	Midnapore Zemindari Company, Ld., v. Naresh Narain Roy ...	11	939
227	Jati Kar v. Mukunda Deb ...	11	884
232	Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed Chowdhuri ...	13	331
238	Ambar Ali v. Anjab Ali ...	14	768
241	Raghubar Sahi v. Protap Udoy Nath Sahi Deo ...	13	193

(B).—15 CALCUTTA LAW JOURNAL, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH, 1912.

Page of Vol. 15 C. L. J. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1911-12. V.	P.
1	Koilash Chandra Santra v. Gajendra Nath Misra ...	13	407
3	Narsingh Narain v. Sheikh Jahi Mistry ...	13	414
6	Upendra Chandra Mandal v. Sheikh Sobhan ...	11	183
7	Imrit Chamar v. Sirdhari Pandey	13	120
12	Sridhan Chattopadhyaya v. Kalipada Chuckerbutty ...	11	971
14	Mahomed Farid v. Mahomed Abdul Gafur ...	13	434
17	Ram Narain Singh v. Odindra Nath Mookerjee ...	13	440
23	Dwarka Nath Roy v. Sarat Chandra Singh Roy ...	11	872
40	Kishan Prasad Sinha v. Purnendu Narain Sinha ...	11	820
49	Gouri Dutt v. Amar Chand ...	13	907
52	Annada Prasanna Mukerjee v. Nagendra Nath Biswas ..	11	123
54	Ganga Pershad Sahu v. Irshad Ali Khan ...	13	959
57	Nabadwip Chandra Saha v. Jugal Dasee Dasya ...	7	214
61	Jadunandan Prosad Singh v. Koer Kallyan Singh ...	13	653
68	Jamna Das v. Pandit Ramautar Pande ...	13	304
69	Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed ...	13	331

(B).—15 CALCUTTA LAW JOURNAL, 1912—concld.

Page of Vol. 15 C. L. J. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1910 to 1912. V.	P.
72	Thakurain Lekhraj Kunwar v. Thakur Harpal Singh ...	13	269
78	Jit Singh v. Maharaj Singh ...	13	257
80	Gajendra Ghorai v. Emperor ...	13	1004
82	Bepin Behari De v. Emperor ...	11	255
83	Dulhin Mathura Koer v. Bangsidhari Singh ...	10	880
88	Bajrang Binari Lal v. Lachmi Narain ...	13	944
89	Raghubar Dayal Sukul v. Jadu Nandan Misser ...	13	365
97	Bhagwat Prasad v. Murarilal ...	7	427
110	Narsingh Narain Singh v. Ajodhya Prasad Singh ...	13	118
114	Sibu Sant v. Nitai Charan Das ...	9	806
120	Gopal Lal Sahai v. Bahorni ...	13	900
122	Ali Mahamad v. Nayan Rajah ...	13	912
123	Sreepati Charan v. Shamaldhone Dutt ...	8	22
128	Jadu Nath Bose v. Premmoni Dasi	6	414
132	Harendra Lal Roy v. Purna Chandra ...	14	368
137	Ramdayal Das v. Ramtanoo Das...	11	464
138	Raikishori Ghose v. Kumudini Kanta Ghose ...	14	377
142	Subhadra Koer v. Dhajadhari Gossain ...	13	898
145	Raja Raghubar Sahi v. Pratap Uday Nath Sahi Deo ...	13	193
147	Subhadra Koer v. Dhajadhari Goswami ...	14	380
151	Khirode Chunder Roy v. Emperor	13	993
160	Lakshiram Mandal v. Sonatan Basar ...	7	775
162	Kunja Lal v. Dinabandhu Jha ...	14	458
167	Rasik Chandra Ghose v. Jitendra Kumar Ghose ...	8	77
170	Abdul Sobhan v. Monab Ali ..	14	453
172	Muhammad Umar Khan v. Muhammad Niaz-ud-din Khan ...	13	344
180	Durga Prasad v. Sashibala Debi ...	14	463
184	Sris Chandra Bose v. Fakir Chandra	11	592
186	Sukheswar Phukan v. Emperor ...	11	593
187	Beni Madho Singh v. Pran Singh	14	456

Page of Vol. 15 C. L. J. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1910 to 1912. V.	P.
191	Lalmohan Thakur v. Nanda Lal ...	14	461
194	Birendra Kishore v. Akram Ali ...	13	513
203	Birendra Kishore v. Rosan ...	13	518
204	Gokul Krishna Das v. Sasimukhi Dasi ...	13	23
211	Janaki Dass v. Bengal Nagpur Railway Co. Ld. ...	13	509
215	Bengal Nagpur Railway Co Ld. v. Rampratap ...	13	529
217	Raj Kumar Roy v. Harekrishna Chakravarti ...	10	355
219	Rakimuddin Ahmed v Naimulla	9	623
220	Maharam v. Telamuddin Khan ...	13	606
224	Tincowri Santra, In re ...	14	208
225	Fatik Chandra Rai v. Atlas Bibi ..	14	478
227	Satya Sri Ghoshal v. Kartik Chandra Das ...	13	596
228	Chakouri Mahton v Ganga Pershad	12	609
239	Chagmull v. Jai Narain ...	13	605
241	Hedlot Khasia v Karan Khasiani	13	377
251	Chandra Kumar Dhar v. Ramdin Poddar ...	13	702
254	Chandra Sekhar Prosad Singh v. Hari Harendra Sahi ...	10	898
256	Ramdeo Pershad Singh v. Gopi Koeri ...	13	349
258	Gora Chand v. Basanta Kumar ..	12	684
263	Abdul Gani v. Azizul Huq ...	14	611
267	Dawlat Koer v. Siva Pershad ...	10	615
270	Mata Din v. Sheikh Ahmad Ali ...	13	976
276	Mi Me v. Mi Shive Ma ...	14	475
281	Secretary of State v Kalika Prosad	14	609
305	Lalit Chandra v. Baikuntha Nath	5	395
308	Rakhal Das v. Prodyat Coomar ...	6	121
310	Rani Dassi v. Asutosh Roy ...	6	206
312	Martyrose v. Courjon ...	14	981
323	Tufani Sheikh v. Emperor ...	14	667
325	Jaymangal Pershad Narayan Singh v. Jhagroo Sahu ...	11	591
327	Ragho Prasad v. Mewa Lal ...	15	177
332	Narain Chandra v. Mohendra Nath	14	820
334	Rukminimoyi Dasi v. Poran Chunder ...	14	823
335	Sati Nath v. Ratanmani ...	14	808

(C).—16 CALCUTTA WEEKLY NOTES, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH, 1912.

Page of Vol. 16 C. W. N. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1911-12. V.	P.
122	Jit Singh v. Maharaj Singh ...	13	257
124	Deoki Nandan Singh v. Bansi Singh ...	10	371
126	Khubsurat Kuer v. Saroda Charan Guha ...	12	165
129	Jati Kar v. Mukanda Bashi ...	11	884
132	Laldhari Singh v. Manager Court of Wards Bhabatpura Estate ...	12	70
137	Ramavatar Singh v. Tulsi Prosad Singh ...	11	713
143	Dr. H. P. Sandyal v. Kunjeswar Misra ...	13	781
145	Peary Mohan Das v. D. Weston ...	13	721
217	Thakurain Lekhraj Kunwar v. Thakur Harpal Singh ...	13	269
225	Somaruddi Mollah v. Port Canning and Land Improvement Company, Ld. ...	13	481
227	Gangadhar Das v. Bhikari Charan Das ...	13	403
231	Mohamed Abdul Hossain v. Sarifan	12	593
235	Taran Chandra v. Ganendra Nath Roy ...	11	30
237	Hara Kumar Chatterjee, In re ...	11	997
238	Paimullah v. Emperor ...	13	783
241	Jyoti Proshad Singh Dev v. George Mathew Darby ...	12	482
247	Kedar Nath v. Manu Bibi ...	13	879
251	Shaikh Samaraddi v. Shyama Churn Sen ...	11	637
252	Abdullah v. Kunj Behari Lal ...	12	149
256	Narsingh Narayan Singh v. Ajodhya Prosad Singh ...	13	118
259	Ban Behari Kapur v. Khetterpal Sinha Roy ...	13	785
263	Deputy Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. Chulhan Ahir ...	13	826
265	Gopessur Dutt v. Bissessur Datt...	13	577
288	Elahi Buksh v. Ram Narayan ...	10	117
289	N. C. Sircar and Sons v. Baraboni Coal Concern Ld. ...	13	868
294	Raghubur Sahi v. Pratap Udoy Nath Sahi Deo ...	13	193
297	Lal Gopal Dutt v. Khororiah Majozilla Zemindary Syndicate Ld.	13	673
299	Gokul Krishna Das v. Sashimukhi Dasi ...	13	23
304	Birendra Kishore Manikya v. Akram Ali ...	13	5.3
311	Barkal Parida v. Jogendra Nath Sen ...	11	259
313	Abdul Hossein v. Ram Churn Law	12	459
317	Prya Nath v. Mahendra Kumar ...	10	376

Page of Vol. 16 C. W. N. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1910 to 1912. V.	P.
322	Mohadeo Pershad v. Sheikh Pachkari ...	13	941
325	Bhuttacharya & Co. v. Cawnpur Woolen Mills Co., Ld. ...	13	943
327	Krishna Das Roy v. Land Acquisition Collector of Pabna ...	13	470
329	East India Railway Co. v. Sispal Lal ...	12	596
332	Patringa Koer v. Madhava Nand Ram ...	12	65
336	Gurameah v. Emperor ...	13	1002
338	Mata Din v. Ahmad Ali ...	13	976
346	Rampal Singh v. Nand Lal ...	13	603
347	Dwarka Missra v. Rampratap Missra ...	10	41
351	Nanda Kumar Dey v. Ajodhya Sahu ...	11	465
356	Janaki Das v. Bengal Nagpore Railway Co. ...	13	509
360	Bengal Nagpur Railway Co. v. Ramprotab Gonesham Das ...	13	529
362	Bir Bikram Deo v. Secretary of State ...	13	965
383	Ramdeo Prashad Singh v. Gopi Koeri ...	13	349
384	Baisnab Charan v. Gatinath Munshi	13	830
386	Moses Amado Taylor, In the matter of ...	15	72
394	Golam Hossein v. Fatima Begum	6	300
395	Nash Mohini Dasi v. Debendra Nath Sinha ...	13	604
396	Kutabullah Sarkar v. Durga Charan Rudra ...	13	424
398	Tara Nath Chakraverty v. Iswar Chandra Das Sarkar ...	11	164
402	Begg, Dunlop & Co. v. Jaggannath Marwari ...	11	4 7
409	Debi Mangal Prosad Singh v. Mahadeo Prasad Singh ...	14	1000
417	Harold Tucker, In the matter of ...	15	398
418	Satya Sri Ghoshal v. Kartick Chandra Das ...	13	596
420	Shakaruddin Choudry v. Rani Hemangini Dasi ...	13	192
421	Nalini Behary Ray v. Fulmani Dasi	13	457
424	Ramjas Agarwalla v. India General Navigation and Railway Company Limited ...	14	627
426	Aliar Rai v. Jhingur Tewari ...	13	844
431	Harbans Sahai v. Emperor ...	15	77
433	Kunwar Ragho Prosad v. Lala Mewa Lal ...	15	177
440	Ranjit Lal v. Bijoy Krishna ...	14	17
444	Sahadra Koer v. Ramadin Chowdry	13	898
447	Sahodra Koer v. Dhajadhari Gosain	14	380

(C).—16 CALCUTTA WEEKLY NOTES, 1912—concld.

Page of Vol. 16 C. W. N. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.	Page of Vol. 16 C. W. N. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
451	Abdul Ghani v. Azizul Haque ...	14	641	471	Emperor v. Salimulla ...	14	598
455	Sew Karan v. Corporation of Calcutta ...	14	205	472	Romesh Chandra Sen, In re ...	14	682
458	Muhammad Umar Khan v. Muhammad Niaz-ud din Khan ...	13	344	475	Radha Kant Chuckerbutty v. Ramananda Shaba ...	13	698
466	Jeolal Mahton v. Loke Narayan Mahton ...	15	184	480	Syed Mahomed Zahurul Huq v. Shah Wazirul Huq ...	14	31

Table 6

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

(A).—35 I. L. R., MADRAS SERIES, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH, 1912.

Page of Vol. 35 I. L. R. Mad. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1910 to 1912. V.	P.	Page of Vol. 35 I. L. R. Mad. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1910 to 1912. V.	P.
1	Tuljaram Row v. Alagappa Chettiar ...	8	340	75	Kumara Venkata Perumal v. Ramasamy Chetty ...	9	875
21	Mallikarjuna Dugget v. Secretary of State ...	14	401	92	Govindasami Pillai v. Dakshinamurthi Poosari ...	8	760
26	Thiruvengadathamiah v. Mungiah	12	775	95	Syed Ajam Sahib v. Ananthanarayana Aiyar ...	8	668
28	Vibudapriya Thirthaswamy v. Esoof Sahib ...	8	175	108	Maharaja of Bobbili v. Zamindar of Chundi ...	8	860
35	Ramu Aiyar v. Palaniappa Chetty	8	117	114	Rajai Tirumal Raju v. Muthial Naidu ...	9	289
39	Kovvuri Basivi Reddi v. Tallapragada Nagamma ...	8	1087	120	Fakir Nynar Muhamed v. Kandasawmy Kulathu Vandan ...	14	993
42	Raman Namboodri v. Achutha Pishurodi ...	14	415	124	Arumugam Chetty v. Jagaveera Rama Venkateswara Eitappa ...	8	330
44	Krishnasami Chettiar v. Ramasami Chettiar ...	8	763	139	Venkata Narasimha Naidu v. Ravi Subbayya ...	9	738
47	Chinnu Pillai v. Kalimuthu Chetti	9	596
63	Narayanan Chetty v. Muthiah Servai ...	8	520

(B).—22 MADRAS LAW JOURNAL, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH, 1912.

Page of Vol. 22 M. L. J. 1912	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1911-12. V.	P.
1	Nadarsa Rowthen v. Amirtham ...	12	414
12	Hanumanthaiyan v. Meenatchi Naidu ...	12	412
14	Subba Naidu v. Ethirajammal ...	12	673
23	Kalliani Amma v. Govinda Menon	12	492
35	Abdul Khadir v. Shaiva Ravuthar	12	679
44	Rajammal v. Emperor ...	12	653
45	Jijamba Bai Sahib v. Jathai Row Sahib ...	14	374
47	Kothe Raman v. Minger Pocker ...	13	174
49	Narayana Iyer v. Subramania Iyer	13	985
52	Jeer Chetti v. Rangasawmi Chetti	12	618
60	Vasudevad Nambudri v. Sankaran Nambudri ...	12	719
62	Somasundaram Chetty v. Ramiah	12	635
68	Batcha Chetty v. Ponnusawmy Chetty ...	13	16
73	Jeremiah v Vas ...	12	961
85	Sivagnanam Servaigar v. Ramsawmy Chettiar ..	13	7
105	Nataraja Iyer v. Subbiah Iyer ...	13	91
108	Anantarazu v. Narayanarazu ...	13	96
109	Thambi Marakayar v. Hamed Marakayar ...	12	1006
112	Ramappa, In re ...	13	103
114	Venkateswara Sastri, In re ...	11	795
118	Achutha Menon v. Sankaran Nair	12	1007
121	Gopal Row v. Veerappen ...	13	95
122	Packrichi v. Kumbacha ...	13	236
124	Subbiah Pillai v. Vellappa Naicker	13	176
125	Krishnamachariar v. Bagiammal	12	439
126	Narayanan v. Sankaran ...	13	233
127	Achanna v. Venkataramanna ...	13	175
129	Venkatagiri Aiyar v. Sadagopachariar ...	14	449
136	Venkatasubbiah v. Seshachellum	12	173
138	Arulanandham Pillai, In re ...	13	221
139	Sevugan Chetty v. Krishna Aiyangar ...	13	268
141	Assistant Sessions Judge of North Arcot v. Ramaniammal ...	13	275
146	Gopala Menon v. Anujan Rajah ...	13	179
148	Swaminatha Naicker v. Paul ...	12	251
149	D'Coutha v. Assan Kunhu ...	10	665
151	Valla Achan v. Ravunni Nair ...	12	140
152	Gopalsami Iyer v. Subramania Sastri ...	12	207

Page of Vol. 22 M. L. J. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
154	Ismail Ghami v. Katinna Rowther	13	215
155	Velu Nattan, In re ...	12	526
156	Mutyala Papayya v. Kosuri Muramullu ...	13	322
159	Rajagopala Raju v. Radhayya ...	13	205
161	Kuppusami Iyengar v. Subbaraya Rowtha ...	13	324
166	Subbaraya Iyer v. Ramasawmy Pillai ...	13	204
169	Ramanuja Ammal v. Marikuruthu Ammal ...	13	313
170	Ponnuswamy Nadar v. Letchmanan Chettiar ...	12	657
181	Muthia Chetti v. Emperor ...	13	286
184	Subbiah Servai, In re ...	13	278
186	Arunachella Thevan v. Emperor ..	13	282
187	Srinivasa Aiyar v. Balakrishna Devai ...	13	800
190	Saminatha Pathan v. Soranatha Ammal ...	12	692
193	Komma Somakka v. Pedda Ramiah	13	251
201	Sengoda Goundan v. Raju Goundan	13	39
204	Govinda Pillai v. Meenatchi Achi	13	152
207	Gopala Aiyar v. Ramaswamy Sastrigal ...	10	320
212	Venkatesa Iyengar v. Kamalammal	13	463
217	Ramien v. Veerappudian ...	14	394
219	Vedachella Mudaliar v. Vijayaraghava Chariar ...	13	71
221	Parie Amma v. Moothoran ...	12	765
225	Tej Mal v. Papayamma ...	13	788
228	Ramanuja Ammal v. Sawmi Pillai	13	795
231	Anantanarayana Iyer v. Savithri Ammal ...	13	458
240	Muhammad Umar Khan v. Muhammad Niaz-ud-din Khan ...	13	344
247	Albrecht v. Bathee Jellamma ...	13	453
251	Gurusawmi Nadar, In re ...	13	831
253	Venkayamma Row v. Narayanaswami Naidu ...	14	396
257	Govinda Naicken v. Aiyavu Iyer	13	471
260	Subbama v. Audilakshmamma ...	13	870
265	Narayudu v. Venkamma ...	13	866
270	Venkata Row v. Crown ...	14	418
276	Krishnasawmi Aiyar, In re ...	14	965
284	Muruga Chetty v. Rajasami ...	14	823

(C).—11 MADRAS LAW TIMES, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH, 1912.

Page of Vol. 11 M. L. T. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1911-12. V.	P.
1	Thakurain Lekhraj Kunwar v. Thakur Harpal Singh ...	13	269
6	Jamna Das v Ram Autar Pande...	13	304
8	Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed	13	331
11	Mutyala Papayya v. Kosuri Muramallu ...	13	322
13	Chidiri Kristappa v. Siddhamsetti Yamanappa ...	13	159
14	Kosuri Rajagopala v. Datla Radhayya ...	13	205
15	Kuppusami Iyengar v. Subbaraya Rowtha ...	13	324
18	Subbaraya Iyer v. Ramasawmi Pillai ...	13	204
19	Adisupalli Venkata Row v. Marikuruthu Ammal ...	13	313
20	Arunachella Thevan, In re ...	13	282
21	Muthia Chetty v. Emperor ...	13	286
23	Subbiah Servai, In re ...	13	278
24	Adala Yerrivadu, In re ...	13	216
25	Tej Mal v. Jagappilla Papayamma	13	788
27	Adusupatti Venkata Rao v. Sawmi Pillai ...	13	795
30	Neechooli Pattie Amma v. Moothoran ...	12	765
32	Gurusawmi Nadar, In re ...	13	831
33	Gujjalapadi Subba Naidu v. Venkata Subba Naidu ...	13	113
38	Ramasami Chetti v. Karuthalachi	12	751
53	Albrecht v. Bathee Jellamma ...	13	453
56	Sanka Krishnamurthi v. Bank of Burma, Ld. ...	14	389
63	Anantanarayana Iyer v. Savithri Ammal ...	13	458
69	Pamien v. Veerapuddian ...	14	394
71	Ramasawmy Reddi v. Abboy Chetty	11	17
73	Durga Prasad v. Sashibala Debi...	14	463
76	Muhammad Umar Khan v. Muhammad Niaz-ud-din Khan ...	13	344
84	Venkatesa Iyengar v. Kamalammal	13	463
87	Govinda Naicken v. Apath Sahaya Iyer ...	13	471
90	Lakshmi Venkayamma Row v. Gopisetti Narayanaswami Naidu	14	396
93	Basrur Venkata Row, In re ...	14	418
103	Pugalia Vettorammal v. Vettor Goundan ...	13	475
112	Maravadi v. Pamakkar ...	14	383
121	Gadiyan Narayudu v. Mallavarapu Venkamma ...	13	866
124	Allareddi Subbamma v. Nallapareddi Adi Lakshmamma ...	13	870
127	Public Prosecutor v. Mushunooru Suryanarayanamoorty ...	13	833
142	Muthusawmy Chettiar v. Subramania Iyer ...	14	69
144	Thiruvengadaw Pillay v. Doridla Subbiah ...	13	659
145	Mata Din v. Ahmad Ali ...	13	976
155	Ramiah v. Ramaswami ...	13	903
157	Valliammai Achi v. Nataraja Pillay	13	906
159	Srinivasa Iyer v. Balkristna Devai	13	860
160	Pitchuvier v. Perumal Konan ...	13	651
162	Chockalingam Pillai v. Emperor...	13	819
169	Mi Me v. Mi Shwe Ma ...	14	475
174	Narayana Kutti Goundan v. Pechiammal ...	15	206
182	Krishnasamy Doss Reddy, In re...	13	648
184	Kommeneni Chinna Veerayya v. Kommeneni Lakshminarasamma	15	213
186	Vellai Ocha Thevan, In re ...	15	315
187	Venkataramana Iyer v. Kittammal	15	184
188	Gudlavellaru Venkataratnam v. Vellathambi Venkataratnam ...	15	218
190	Narna Balayya v. Rudravaram Venkatappa ...	15	221
191	Kolli Appiah, In re ...	13	832
192	Koripalli Ramiah v. Sajja Subbiah	13	315
193	Ragho Prasad v. Mewa Lal ...	15	177
198	Sivavadivelu Pillai v. Ponnammal	15	365
199	Vijayaraghava Reddi v. Komarappa Reddi ...	15	367
201	Akilandan Pillai v. Chinnasawmy Moopan ...	13	649
202	Sivaprakasam v. Palaniappa Mudaliar ...	15	369
203	Ghulam Ali, In the matter of ...	15	371
207	Challapalli Hanumanulu Pantulu v. Secretary of State ...	15	376
209	Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Vemru Chinta Reddi ...	15	378
212	Satrucherla Veerabhadra Raju v. Ganta Kumari Naidu ...	15	393
213	Advocate General v. Govindasawmi ...	15	306
214	Public Prosecutor v. Bala Nagi Reddi ...	15	308
216	Kulandaivelu Padayachi v. Kamatchi Ayyar ...	15	388
217	Debi Mangal Prasad Singh v. Mahadeo Prasad Singh ...	14	1000
225	Ibrahim Ali Khan v. Muhammad Ahsan Ullah Khan ...	13	695
232	Kunhichekkan v. Lydia Arucanden	14	480
240	Kishen Bahadur v. Ramasawmy Mudaliar ...	14	491
241	Andiappa Pillai v. Muthukumara Thevan ...	14	140

(C).—11 MADRAS LAW TIMES, 1911—concld.

Page of Vol. 11 M. L. T. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
245	Venkatachelam Iyer v. Subramania Iyer ...	14	144
246	Raman Chetty v. Nagarathna Naicker ...	15	380
248	Singaram Chettiar v. Kaliyana Sundaram Pillay ...	15	283
251	Veerana Nadan v. Emperor ...	15	310
253	Narayanasawmy Naicken v. Emperor ...	15	79
256	Maharaja of Vizayanagaram v. Mahaswaram Ramabhadrayya...	15	397
257	Sivagurunatha Chettiar v. Ramaswamy Iyengar ...	15	399
261	Prattipati Seshayya, In re ...	15	403
262	Subramania Pillay v. Dakshinamurthi Mudali ...	15	193
265	Mahomed Ibrahim Hossein Khan v. Ambika Pershad Singh ...	14	496
276	Sundararamier v. Muthu Ganapathigal ...	14	184
280	Muruga Chetty v. Rajasami ...	14	823
296	Vakil of the High Court, In the matter of ...	14	965
301	Muthayamanigaran v. Lakku Reddiar ...	14	255
305	Arunachalam Pattar v. Seshan Pattar ...	14	189
307	Venkatanarayana Pillai v. Subbammal ...	14	209
312	Srinivasa Sundara Thathachariar v. Krishnaswamy Iyengar ...	15	354

(D).—(1912) 1 MADRAS WEEKLY NOTES, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH.

Page of Vol. (1912) 1 M. W. N.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1911-12. V.	P.
1	Kuppusami Iyengar v. Subbaraya Ravutha Munda Nainar ...	13	324
3	Assistant Sessions Judge of North Arcot v. Ramanamal ...	13	275
7	Mutyala Bapayya v. Kosuri Muramullu ...	13	322
9	Adusupalli Venkata Row v. Marikruthu Ammal ...	13	313
9	Subbaraya Aiyar v. Ramasamy Pillai ...	13	204
11	Velluvakandi Kunhi Pathumma v. Ponnanki Moossan Mammad ...	13	300
16	Ponnusawmy Nadan v. Emperor ...	13	110
16	Thakurain Lekhraj Kunwar v. Thakur Harpal Singh ...	13	269
22	Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed ...	13	331
24	Sellapadi Mahalakshmi Ammal v. Sriman Mathvasiddhantha Onnahini Nidhi, Ld. ...	11	865
29	Jit Singh v. Maharaj Singh ...	13	257
32	Jamna Das v. Ram Autar Pande	13	304
35	Arunachala Tevan v. Emperor ...	13	282
36	Chidrie Kristappa v. Siddamsetti Zamanappa ...	13	159
37	Raman Menon v. Chandra Sekharan Patter ...	13	203
38	Jayanthi Krishtappa v. Jayanthi Chennayya ...	13	188
39	Kosuri Rajagopala Raju v. Datla Radhayya ...	13	205
41	Katchalai Mudali v. Kuppanna Mudali ...	13	182
42	Ramaswami Ayengar v. Muthuswami Aiyer ...	13	799
42	Subbian Servai v. Emperor ...	13	278
44	Venkatachalapathy Aiyen v. Perumal Aiyen ...	13	133
45	Cheria Imbichi Beebe v. Syed Ali	13	791
47	Gurusawmi Nadan v. Emperor ...	13	831
49	Mandi Ghasi v. Emperor ...	13	781
49	Tadikonda Venkayya v. Kodali Venkatasubbamma ...	13	486
50	Aiya Chalamaya v. Emperor ...	13	777

(D).—(1912) 1 MADRAS WEEKLY NOTES—contd.

Page of Vol. (1912) 1 M. W. N.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1911-12. V.	P.
50	Tejmal Sowcar v. Jaggupillai Papayamma ...	13	788
53	George Albrecht v. Bathee Yellamma ...	13	453
56	Adusupatti Venkata Row v. Sami Pillai ...	13	795
59	Anantanarayana Iyer v. Savittri Ammal ...	13	458
65	Venkatesa Iyengar v. Komalammal ...	13	463
68	Malla Veeranna v. Malla Chelamayya ...	13	467
69	Emperor v. Arumukham Pillai ...	13	780
70	Sunkara Ramiah v. Sunkara Subbammah ...	13	489
72	Maddaniah v. Bhimappa ...	13	469
73	Durga Prasad v. Srimati Sashibala Debi ...	14	463
77	Muhammad Umar Khan v. Muhammad Niaz-ud-din Khan ...	13	344
84	Crown Prosecutor v. Andiasavaloo Naidoo ...	13	832
85	Rasoolkhan Saheb v. Emperor ...	13	927
85	Arunachalamiyer v. Athmakoor Ram Mohan Roy ...	12	184
87	Govinda Naicken v. Apathsahaya Iyer ...	13	471
89	Pugalia Vettorammal v. Vettor Goundan ...	13	475
97	Sessions Judge of Vizagapatam v. Gorle Kandungadu ...	13	828
99	Seeni Ammal v. Angamuttu Nadar	13	802
100	Venkattan v. Emperor ...	14	655
101	Lakshmi Venkayamma Rao v. Narayanasami Naidu ...	14	396
105	Sivagurunatha Chettiar v. Ramaswamy Iyengar ...	15	299
109	Maradevi v. Pammakka ...	14	383
117	Ramuvien v. Veerappudayan ...	14	394
119	Chockalingam Pillai v. Emperor...	13	819
125	Basrur Venkata Row v. Emperor...	14	418
136	Public Prosecutor v. Suryanarayanamoorty ...	13	833
150	Sreenivasier v. Balakrishna Devai	13	860
152	Ambalam Pakkiya Udayan v. Right Reverend J. M. Barthe ...	13	599
158	Manikka Mudaliar v. Daivasikamani Pillai ...	13	595
158	Hanumanthaiyan v. Meenatchi Naidu ...	12	412
161	Malaiyya Pillai v. Thirumalai Perumal Pillai ...	12	170
163	Pichuvier v. Perumal Konan ...	13	651
164	Challavenkata Reddy v. Devabhaktuni Mruthunjayadu ...	14	65

Page of Vol. (1912) 1 M. W. N.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
166	Chellammal v. Krishnaswami Iyer	13	618
167	Krishnasami Doss Reddy, In re ...	13	648
169	Narainasawmy Naicken v. Emperor	15	79
172	Akilandam Pillai v. Chinnasami Moopan ...	13	649
173	Venkataramana Iyer v. Kittammal	15	184
174	Ponna Krishnavasudemudu v. Kouviriri Basuri Reddi ...	15	188
175	Rangachariar, In re ...	15	190
176	Thiruvengadam Pillai v. Doredla Subbiah ...	13	659
177	Savirimuthu Moopan v. Sattan Chinnappan ...	15	185
178	Allareddi Subbamma v. Adi Lakshmamma ...	13	870
181	Ganapathi Pillai, In re ...	15	186
182	Atyam Venkiah, In re ...	15	186
183	Mata Din v. Ahmad Ali ...	13	976
193	Perumal Naicken v. Emperor ...	13	817
196	Velappa Goundan, In re ...	13	640
198	Vellaimmai Achi v. Nataraja Pillai	13	906
199	Chelesani Ramaya v. Chelasani Ramaswami ...	13	903
201	Mi Me v. Mi Shwe Ma ...	14	475
207	King-Emperor v. Nilakanta ...	14	849
311	Ragho Prasad v. Mewa Sab ...	15	177
316	Nawab Ibrahim Ali Khan v. Nawab Muhammad Ahsan Ullah Khan	13	659
324	Debi Mangal Prasad Singh v. Mahadeo Prasad Singh ...	14	1000
352	Muruga Chetty v. Rajasami ...	14	823
348	Vakil, in the matter of ...	14	965
353	Narayana Kutti Goundan v. Pechiammal ...	15	206
361	Ulagappa Chettiar v. Peria Karuppan Chetty ...	15	195
361	Sangu Iyer v. Subbiah Iyer ...	13	642
362	Vellai Ocha Thevan v. Emperor ...	15	315
363	Subramania Pillai v. Dakshnamurthi Mudaliar ...	15	193
366	Narayana Iyer v. Venkatarama Aiyar ...	15	202
367	Syed Mahomed Ibrahim Hossein Khan v. Ambika Pershad Singh	14	496
378	Sessions Judge of Tanjore v. Thiagaraja Thevan ...	15	313
379	Srinivasa Sundara Thathachariar v. Krishnasamy Iyengar ...	15	354
380	Rayi Krishnayya v. Ganga Bai ...	15	357
381	Gopisetti Narayanasamy Naidu Garu v. Bondada China Narsigadu ...	15	359
382	Sivaprakasam v. Palaniappa Mudaliar ...	15	369
383	Sivavadiveloo Pillai v. Ponnamal...	15	365

(D).—(1912) 1 MADRAS WEEKLY NOTES—concld.

Page of Vol. (1912) 1 M. W.N.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
384	Gudlavalleru Venkataratnam v. Vellathambi Venkataratnam ...	15	218
386	Kunhichekkan v. Lydia Aruchanden	14	480
393	Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Vemure Chinta Reddi ...	15	378
395	Chinna Krishna Reddy v. Merri Poliah ...	15	317
396	Advocate-General v. Govindasami	15	306
397	Singaram Chettiar v. Kalyanasundram Pillai ...	15	383
400	Kolli Appiah v. Emperor ...	13	832
400	Varidsahayam Fernandez v. Renchordin Kheki ...	15	362
401	Govinda Varier v. Paru Amma ...	15	360
401	Chathkutty Nair v. Kalath Chandu Kutti Nair ...	15	224
402	Annathuri Iyer v. Ramanuja Chariar ...	15	223
403	Maharajah of Vizianagaram v. Maheswaram Ramabhadriah ...	15	397
404	Veerana Nadan v. Emperor ...	15	310
405	Public Prosecutor v. Bala Nagi Reddi ...	15	308
407	Seetharama Chettier v. Krishna Row ...	15	406
409	Kulandavelu Padayachi v. Kamatchi Aiyer ...	15	388
410	Vijia Raghava Reddi v. Komarappa Reddi ...	15	3[illegible]7
411	Singanamala Krishnamacharlu v. Singanamala Venkatamma ...	15	408
412	Yelambal Achi v. Govindasami Odayar ...	15	370
413	Sri Janaganti China Venkatarajaum Garu v. Kappojee Linganna	15	382
414	Narna Balayya v. Venkatappa ...	15	221
415	Koripalli Ramiah v. Sajja Subbiah	13	315
416	Abdul Kadir Beari v. Bagade Shiva Rao ...	15	377

Table 7

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

8 NAGPUR LAW REPORTS, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH, 1912.

Page of Vol. 8 N. L. R. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
1	Bhop Singh v. Karmoti ...	14	428
7	Nathusa v. Phulchandsa ...	14	399
11	Krishna v. Balia ...	14	403
13	Balaprasad v. Kanoo ...	14	407
17	Saroopchand v. Tularam ...	13	902
18	Shrikison v. Chatarsingh ...	13	904
20	Emperor v. Lekria ...	13	1005
22	Ganeshdas v. Shankar ...	13	909
29	Bapu v. Temsa ...	13	982
34	Deorao v. Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company ...	14	684
36	Maroti v. Balaji ...	14	786
39	Tejsingh v. Lalji ...	14	788
42	Vithoba v. Tanba ...	14	673
44	Gopal v. Dhondya ...	14	685

Table 8

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

(A).—15 OUDH CASES, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH, 1912.

Page of Vol. 15 O. C. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.	Page of Vol. 15 O. C. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
1	Badri Singh v. Chandika Singh ...	14	8	49	Mata Din v. Ahmad Ali ...	13	976
7	Nazir Ahmad v. Swami Dyal ...	13	986	55	Amir Begam v. Khwaja Syed Badr-ud-din Husain ...	15	2
22	Waliulla v. Ejaz Ali ...	13	984	58	Mohammad Amir Mirza Beg v. Kedar Nath ...	15	202
25	Tajammul Husain v. Raunak Ali	13	979	67	Wazir Mohammad v. Har Pershad	13	613
33	Girdhari Lal v. Jaswant Singh ...	15	181	78	Nathe v. Tasadduq Husain ...	15	212
39	Amir Ali v. Nizam Ali ...	14	584	81	Debi Sahai v. Gauri Shankar Sahai	15	214
43	Hub Lal v. Ganga ...	15	191
45	Bhan Partab Sahai v. Sheo Dat Bahadur Singh ...	15	189

Table 9

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

(A).—13 PUNJAB LAW REPORTER, FROM JANUARY TO 7TH APRIL, 1912.

No. of Vol. 13 P. L. R. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1911-12. V.	P.	No. of Vol. 15 P. L. R. 1914.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
1	Kala v. Lachmi ...	12	576	20	Emperor v. Ganda Singh ...	13	109
2	Hira Singh v. Mohar Singh ...	12	605	21	Umar Din v. Budhe Khan ...	13	58
3	Tara Chand v. Chiman ...	12	530	22	Prem Singh v. Mokand Singh ...	13	62
4	Ali Mardan v. Mohar Singh ...	12	532	23	Jiwa v. Buta ...	13	167
5	Ghulam Fatima v. Jantan Bibi ...	12	625	24	Kariman v. Masiti ...	13	171
6	Dharm Singh v. Ali Marad Khan	12	616	25	Muhammad v. Imam Khatun ...	13	172
7	Amir Chand v. Sundar Mal ...	12	617	26	Balmokand v. Aya Singh ...	13	63
8	Sewa Ram v. Balu Ram ...	12	623	27	Nura v. Nazir Din ...	13	18
9	Raman v. Chinto ...	12	623	28	Bishna v. Rattani ...	13	92
10	Fazal Ahmad v. Khan Bahadur ...	12	624	29	Ram Chand v. Ram Jowaya ...	14	494
11	Ali Muhammad v. Emperor ...	12	515	30	Kirpal Singh v. Sant Singh ...	13	305
12	Muhammad Umar Khan v. Muhammad Niaz Din Khan ...	13	344	31	Isar Das v. Ghulam Haider ...	14	799
13	Sawan Singh v. Jafar Khan ...	13	405	32	Bhola v. Brij Lall ...	13	900
14	O'Brien v. Abdul Rahman ...	13	6	33	Parman Nand v. Arura Ram ...	14	674
15	Mohammad v. Sukha Singh ...	13	20	34	Bhagtu v. Bua Ditta ...	13	957
16	Muhammad Badar Khan v. Chiragh Shah ...	13	32	35	Kanhya Lal v. Narpat Rai ...	14	793
17	Muhammad v. Bakko ...	13	27	36	Tulsi Ram v. Karm Chand ...	13	955
18	Amar Singh v. Husaina ...	13	28	37	Crown v. Sadapur ...	13	924
19	Mehr Singh v. Devi Dyal ...	13	50	38	Stamp Act, In re ...	13	350
				39	Devta Jamlu v. Hari Das ...	13	248
				40	Nathu Ram v. Karmon ...	13	326

(A).—13 PUNJAB LAW REPORTER, 1912—concld.

No. of Vol. 13 P. L. R. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1911-12. V.	P.
41	Partap Singh v. Panjabu ...	13	177
42	Sayad Mir Nawab v. Hardeo ...	12	871
43	Lal Chand v. Crown ...	14	604
44	Hazara Singh v. Harnam Singh ...	13	180
45	Ida v. Rahim Bakhsh ...	12	857
46	Pir Bakhsh v. Emperor ...	13	220
47	Chet Singh v. Allahditta ...	13	877
48	Mela Ram v. Bando ...	12	859
49	Muhammad Ali v. Muhammad Shah ...	12	850
50	Sahib v. Usman ...	13	72
51	Bela Singh v. Labh Singh ...	13	298
52	Shadi Khan v. BeebeeUmdan Begam	13	73
53	Fateh Din v. Allah Ditta ...	13	77
54	Tola Singh v. Mohammad ...	15	467
55	Bhagat Ram v. Sidhu ...	12	595
56	Emperor v. Qadir Bhakhsh ...	13	209
57	Badri Das v. Santa Singh ...	13	873
58	Tulsa Singh v. Natha Singh ...	15	469
59	Fatma v. Imtiazi Jan ...	13	930
60	Balmokand v. Manak Chand ...	13	928
61	Ganpat Rai v. Sardara ...	13	511
62	Salig Ram v. Rai Chand ...	14	468
63	Narayan Singh v. Lal Singh ...	15	478
64	Mangal v. Crown ...	14	758
65	Karm Ilahi v. Sultan Alam ...	13	812
66	Sita Ram v. Gobind Sahai ...	15	314
67	Radha Kishan v. Crown ...	15	316
68	Sundar Singh v. Crown ...	15	318
69	Dhian Singh v. Dhian Singh ...	13	312
70	Mrs. R. Sharkey v. Mrs. Jerry Allard ...	13	433
71	Dasaundhi v. Chanda Singh ...	13	421
72	Tulsi v. Madho Ram ...	13	343
73	Rukman Devi v. Sain Das ...	13	401

(B).—47 PUNJAB RECORD, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH, 1912.

No. of Vol. 47 P. R. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1911-12. V.	P.
	Civil.
1	Fatma v. Imtiazi Jan ...	13	930
2	Dalo Mal v. Sundar ...	11	523
3	Badri Das v. Santa Singh ...	13	873
4	Indar v. Rao ...	11	35
5	Bhagat Ram v. Siddu ...	12	595
6	Mansa Ram v. Behari ...	12	453
7	Mahmud Bakhsh v. Hassan Bakhsh	11	708
8	Singer Manufacturing Co., Delhi v. Yar Muhammad ...	10	141
9	Achhar Singh v. Badhawa Singh	11	404
10	Sahib Dial v. Lajpat Rai ...	14	510
11	Duni Chand v. Aziz Khan ...	10	207
12	Hamid Ullah v. Sahibji ...	14	624
13	Ali Muhammad v. Suraj-ud-din ...	10	236
14	Rahmat Ali Khan v. Bubu Zuhra	14	486
15	Saif-ud-din v. Hans Raj ...	11	76
16	Umra v. Karim Bakhsh ...	11	492
17	Ghulam Muhammad v. Latif Ahmad Khan ...	14	495
18	People's Bank of India, Ld., v. Abdul Karim ...	14	512
19	Muhammad v. Bakhto ...	13	27
20	Indar Narain v. Onkar Lal ...	10	130
21	Piare Lal v. Ram Chand ...	11	443
22	Moti Singh v. Maghar ...	11	880
23	Rughnath Das v. Rahiman ...	14	776
24	Hazara Singh v. Harnam Singh ...	13	180
25	Partap Singh v. Panjabu ...	13	177
26	Jiwa v. Buta ...	13	167
27	Shahab-ud-din v. Barkati ...	14	779
28	Azim Khan v. Mustaqim Khan ...	14	782
29	Tari Baz Khan v. Fateh Khan ...	13	316
30	Tulsi v. Madho Ram ...	13	343
31	Bhero Das v. Mona ...	14	783
32	Chhangu v. Muhammad Bakhsh ...	8	666
33	Ram Jawaya Shah v. Natha ...	14	787
34	Najabat Ali v. Mehtab Bibi ...	14	789
35	Gobind Ram v. Muhammad Ali ...	11	317
	Criminal
1	Crown v. Sadapur ...	13	924
2	Ali Muhammad v. Emperor ...	12	515
3	Crown v. Qadir Bakhsh ...	13	209
	Revenue
1	Nura v. Nasir Din ...	13	18

(C).—7 PUNJAB WEEKLY REPORTER, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH, 1912.

No. of Vol. 7 P. W. R. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
	Civil.
1	Ram Devi v. Shib Devi ...	13	290
2	Sundar Singh v. Deva Singh ...	13	863
3	Nihal Chand v. Chanda Singh ...	13	859
4	Hafiz Mahbub Bakhsh v. Abdul Rahman ...	13	816
5	Khanu v. Fateh Khan ...	13	851
6	Umar Khan v. Niaz Din Khan ...	13	344
7	Sawan Singh v. Jafar Khan ...	13	405
8	Duni v. Ali Mohammad ...	13	857
9	Lehna Singh v. Santa Singh ...	13	852
10	Ramji Das v. Shankar Das ...	13	855
11	Sarkhara v. Nawab ...	13	850
12	Alim Ali v. Nabbu ...	13	314
13	Abdul Karim v. Sahib Jan ...	13	917
14	Pars Ram v. Muhammad Yasin Khan ...	13	953
15	Amar Singh v. Husaina ...	13	28
16	Narpat Rai v. Devi Das ...	14	375
17	Narpat Rai v. Devi Das ...	14	379
18	Balmokand v. Aya Singh ...	13	68
19	Fateh Din v. Allah Ditta ...	13	77
20	Bishna v. Rattani ...	13	92
21	Jiwa v. Buta ...	13	167
22	Hazara Singh v. Harnam Singh ...	13	180
23	Umar Din v. Budhe Khan ...	13	58
24	Jan Khan v. Ahmad ...	13	445
25	Tulsi Ram v. Karm Chand ...	13	955
26	Bhagtu v. Bua Ditta ...	13	957
27	Bhola v. Brij Lall ...	13	960
28	O'Brien v. Abdul Rahman ...	13	6
29	Kariman v. Masiti ...	13	171
30	Prem Singh v. Mokand Singh ...	13	62
31	Chet Singh v. Allahditta ...	13	877
32	Mehr Singh v. Devi Dyal ...	13	50
33	Fatma v. Imtiazi Jan ...	13	930
34	Shadi Khan v. Umdan Begam ...	13	73

No. of Vol. 7 P. W. R. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1911-12. V.	P.
	Civil—concld.
35	Salig Ram v. Rai Chand ...	14	463
36	Muhammad v. Sukhan Ram ...	13	20
37	Muhammad v. Imam Khatun ...	13	172
38	Bindraban v. Ganpat Rai ...	14	463
39	Muhammad v. Bakko ...	13	27
40	Mangal Singh v. Dula ...	14	477
41	Prabhu Dial v. Kahan ...	14	479
42	Dalo Mal v. Sundar ...	11	523
43	Muhammad Badar Khan v. Chiragh Shah ...	13	32
44	Badri Das v. Santa Singh ...	13	873
45	Rukman Devi v. Sain Das ...	13	401
46	Indar v. Rao ...	11	35
47	Devta Jamlu v. Hari Das ...	13	348
48	Bela Singh v. Labh Singh ...	13	298
49	Heta Ram v. Chandan ...	13	447
50	Ibrahim Ali Khan v. Muhammad Ahsan Ullah Khan ...	13	695
51	Dhian Singh v. Dhian Singh ...	13	312
52	Khair Ahmad v. Mir Ahmad Ullah	13	408
53	Ahmad Khan v. Ratan Chand ...	13	539
	Criminal.
1	Isa v. Ranon ...	13	824
2	Nabi Bakhsh v. Crown ...	Unreportable.
3	Balmokand v. Manak Chand ...	13	928
4	Sita Ram v. Gobind Sahai ...	15	314
5	Mangal v. Crown ...	14	758
6	Sundar Singh v. Crown ...	15	318
7	Radha Kishen v. Crown ...	15	3.6
	Revenue.
1	Bahawal v. Nurkhan ...	13	815
2	Lehri v. Shiv Nath ...	13	865

Table 10

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

5 SIND LAW REPORTER, FROM JULY TO SEPTEMBER, 1911.

Page of Vol. 5 S. L. R. 1911.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1911-12. V.	P.	Page of Vol. 5 S. L. R. 1911.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
107	Manghirmal v. Vithalram ...	13	225	140	Mathradas v. Secretary of State...	13	237
122	Haji Changal v. Basarmal ...	13	214	153	Bodomal v. Crown ...	13	213
123	Imperator v. Rino ...	13	210	155	Doulatram v. Halo Kanya ...	13	244
125	Haji Mansoor v. Mahomedin ...	13	234	168	Sobhomal v. Pohumal ...	13	255
129	Imperator v. Haji Alu ...	13	215	173	Imperator v. Rajabali ...	13	284
130	Lekhraj v. Imambux ...	12	987	174	Crown v. Audal ...	13	273
131	Crown v. Morio Khan ...	12	986	179	Karam Bahadin v. Crown ...	13	223
133	Mc'Gill v. Byrne ...	13	217	181	Manghanmal v. Fernandez ...	13	260
135	Imperator v. Abdul Latif ...	13	219	184	Hemandas v. Chellaram ...	13	264
136	Bukshali v. Crown ...	13	220	190	Dur Mahomed v. Allahdino ...	13	224
137	Imperator v. Bhojraj ...	13	222

Table 11

CRIMINAL LAW JOURNAL OF INDIA.

13 CRIMINAL LAW JOURNAL, FROM JANUARY TO MARCH, 1912.

Page of Vol. 13 Cr. L. J. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.	Page of Vol. 13 Cr. L. J. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
1	Bala Pasban Kuldip Lal v. Gurwar Misser ...	13	111	21	Bodomal Kishinchand v. Emperor	13	213
3	Emperor v. Ganda Singh ...	13	109	21	Lakshminarain Apuram v. Emperor	13	213
4	Raghunandan Prosad Singh v. Ram Narain Singh ...	13	97	22	Changal Halapoto v. Basarmal ...	13	214
6	Krishna Proshad v. Rabindra Nath	13	99	23	Ismail Ghami Ammal v. Katima Rowther ...	13	215
8	Emperor v. Behari Lal ...	13	101	23	Imperator v. Alu ...	13	215
9	Babu Pershad v. Emperor ...	13	102	24	Adala Yerrivadu, In re ...	13	216
15	Theophilus Ramappa, In re ...	13	108	25	Mr. McGill v. Mr. Byrne ...	13	217
16	Pounusawmy Naidu v. Emperor...	13	110	26	Meher Sardar v. Emperor ...	13	218
17	Emperor v. Qadir Bakhsh ...	13	209	27	Imperator v. Abdul Latif ...	13	219
18	Imperator v. Rino ...	13	210	28	Pir Bakhsh v. Emperor ...	13	220
19	Muthuvarapu Seshiah v. Gatram Ramiah ...	13	211	28	Bakshali v. Emperor ...	13	220
				29	Arulanantham Pillai, In re ...	13	221
				30	Imperator v. Bhojraj ...	13	222

13 CRIMINAL LAW JOURNAL, 1912—concld.

Page of Vol. 13 Cr. L. J. 1914.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912. V.	P.
31	Karam Bahadin v. Emperor ...	13	223
32	Dur Mahomed v. Allahdino ...	13	224
33	Emperor v. Andal ...	13	273
35	Assistant Sessions Judge of North Arcot v. Ramammal ...	13	275
38	Subbiah Servai, In re ...	13	278
39	Kader Sundar v. Emperor ...	13	279
42	Arunachella Tevan, In re ...	13	282
43	Ganesh Pershad v. Emperor ...	13	283
44	Imperator v. Rajabali ...	13	284
44	Ajodhia Parshad v. Ram Lal ...	13	284
46	Muthiah Chetty, In re ...	13	286
48	Surya v. Lachmi Narain ...	13	288
49	Nga Pyan v. Emperor ...	13	385
50	Nga Po Yon v. Mohr Brothers and Co. Ld. ...	13	386
52	Madar Sahib v. Emperor ...	13	388
53	Mi Hla So v. Nga Then ...	13	389
54	Nga Po Chein v. Emperor ...	13	390
55	Dragon v. Emelie Mi Taik Dragon	13	391
56	Nga Lu Pe v. Emperor ...	13	392
58	Emperor v. Nga Sit Cho ...	13	394
59	Nga Po Shat v. Emperor ...	13	395
61	Rudra Prosad, In re ...	13	397
62	Emperor v. Nga Po Sin ...	13	398
62	Jang Bahadur Lal v. Emperor ...	13	398
65	Peary Mohan Das v. D. Weston ...	13	721
120	Amodini Dasee v. Dorson Ghose ..	13	776
121	Aiya Chalamya v. Emperor ...	13	777
122	Nga Pu v. Emperor ...	13	778
122	Balmakund v. Emperor ...	13	778
124	Emperor v. Arumukham Pillai ...	13	780
125	Sandyal v. Kunjeswar Misra ...	13	781
125	Mandi Ghasi v. Emperor ...	13	781
126	Dewat Singh v. Emperor ...	13	782
126	Kamini Mohan Das v. Harendra Kumar ...	13	782
127	Paimullah v. Emperor ...	13	783
129	Perumal Naicken, In re ...	13	817
131	Chockalingam Pillay, In re ...	13	819
136	Isa v Ranon ...	13	824
137	Emperor v. Balwant Kondo Patole	13	825
138	Deputy Superintendent v. Chulhan Ahir ...	13	826
139	Emperor v. Hari Govind Limave...	13	827
140	Gorle Kandungadu, In re ...	13	828
141	Abdul Ghafoor, In re v. Raza Husain ...	13	829
141	Bansi v. Emperor ...	13	829
142	Baisnab Charan Manjhi v. Gati Nath Munshi ...	13	830
143	Gurusawmi Nadan v. Emperor ...	13	831
144	Kolli Appiah, In re ...	13	832
144	Emperor v. Andiasavaloo Naidoo	13	832
145	Public Prosecutor v. Mushunooru Suryanarayanamoorty ...	13	833
156	Alia Rai v. Jhingur Tewari ...	13	844
159	Musai v. Emperor ...	13	847
161	Satish Chandra Sarkar v. Emperor	13	913
162	Me Tha v. Nga San E ...	13	914
164	Vithoo v. Emperor ...	13	916
167	Waris Ali v. Emperor ...	13	919
169	Emperor v. Ram Naresh Singh ...	13	921
170	Emperor v. Murli Singh ...	13	922
172	Emperor v. Sadapur ...	13	924
173	Tunnoo Mia v. Emperor ...	13	925
175	Bhoja Ram v. Emperor ...	13	927
175	Rasoolkhan Saheb v. Emperor ...	13	927
176	Balmokand v. Nanak Chand ...	13	928
177	Khirode Chunder Roy Chowdhury v. Emperor ...	13	993
182	Lad Khan v. Emperor ...	13	998
183	Bharosa Patak v. Emperor ...	13	999
184	Ambika Prosad Singh v. Gur Sahai Singh ...	13	1000
185	Emperor v. Sohan Singh ...	13	1001
186	Gurameah v. Emperor ...	13	1002
188	Gajendra Ghorai v. Emperor ...	13	1004
188	Emperor v. Dilsukh ...	13	1004
189	Emperor v. Lekria ...	13	1005
190	Gauri Shankar Lal v. Emperor ...	13	1006
191	Ram Charan Chandra v. Tirupulla Sheikh ...	13	1007

TABLE

OF

Cases reported in Volume XIII of Indian Cases, 1912.

An asterisk (*) denotes cases not reported yet elsewhere.

Names of cases reported.		Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XIII.
Abdul Ghafoor v. Raza Husain	...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 231; 34 A. 267; 13 Cr. L. J. 141 ...	829
Abdul Ghani v. Abdul Majid	...	*All. High Court ...	116
Abdul Hakim Khan v. Chandan	...	s. c 9 A. L. J. 4; 34 A. 165 ...	83
Abdul Karim v. Abdul Rahman	...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 618; 15 C.L.J. 672	364
Abdul Karim v. Abdus Sobhan	...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 44; 39 C. 146 ...	243
Abdul Karim v. Sahib Jan	...	s. c. 13 P. W. R. 1912 ...	947
Abdul Kayam v. Bahadur Vithoba	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 26 ...	858
Abdul Rahman v. Bhagwan Das	...	s. c. 59 P W. R. 1912; 120 P. L. R. 1912 ...	720
Abdullah Beg v. Abbul Hasan	...	*All High Court ...	350
Abhai Charan Chakrawati v. Kesho Das	...	*All. High Court ...	642
Adala Yerrivadu, In re	...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 24; 13 Cr. L. J. 24	216
Adhari Dubain v. Sheodihal Pande	...	*All. High Court ...	708
Adusupalli v. Marikurthu	...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 19; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 9; 22 M. L. J. 169 ...	313
Adusupatti Venkata Rao v. Swami Pillai	...	s. c. 11 M L. T. 27; (1912) 1 M. M. N 56; 22 M. L. J. 228 ...	795
Ahmad Khan v. Ratan Chand	...	s. c. 53 P. W. R. 1912; 50 P. R. 1912 ...	539
Ahmad Said Khan v. Masi-ullah Khan	...	s. c. 9. A. L. J. 152; 34 A. 250 ...	975
Aiya Chalamaya v. Emperor	...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 50; 13 Cr. L. J. 121 ...	777
Ajodhia Parshad v. Ram Lal	...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 124; 34 A. 197; 13 Cr. L. J. 44 ...	284
Ajodhya Prasad v. Jagdish Singh	...	s. c. 14 O. C. 321 ...	813
Akhju Singh v. Jagannath Prasad	...	*Cal. High Court ...	1
Akilandam Pillai v. Chinnasawmi Moopan	...	s. c (1912) 1 M. W. N. 172; 11 M. L. T. 201 ...	649
Albrecht v. Bathee Jellamma	...	s. c. 11 M L. T. 53; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 53; 22 M. L. J. 247 ...	453
Ali Mohammad v. Nayan Rajah Bhuiya	...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 122; 16 C. W. N. 620 note ...	912
Alia Rai v. Jhingur Tewari	...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 426; 15 C. L. J. 403; 39 C. 476; 13 Cr. L. J. 156	844
Alim Ali v. Nabbu	...	s. c. 12 P. W. R 1912 ...	314
Allareddi Subbamma v. Nallapareddi	...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 124, (1912) 1 M. W. N. 178; 22 M. L. J. 260 ...	870
Aman ullah v. Abdul Ghafur	...	s. c. 85 P. R. 1911 ...	808

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XIII.
Amar Singh v. Husaina ...	s. c 15 P. W. R. 1912; 13 P. L. R. 1912; 36 P. R. 1912 ...	28
Ambalam Pakkiya Udayan v. J. M. Bathe ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 152 ...	599
Ambika Prosad Singh v. Gur Sahai Singh ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 184 ...	1000
Amodini Dassee v. Darson Ghose ...	s. c. 38 C. 828; 13 Cr. L J. 120 ...	776
Anantanarayana Iyer v. Savittri Ammal ...	s c (1912) 1 M. W.N. 59; 11 M.L. T. 63; 22 M. L. J. 231 ...	458
Acantarazu Garu v. Narayanarazu Garu ...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 531; 10 M. L. T. 504; 22 M. L. J. 108 ...	96
Angulia & Co v. Sassoon & Co. ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 593 ...	705
Annada Prosad v. Sham Sundar ...	*Cal. High Court ...	688
Arnold v. Arnold ...	s. c. 38 C. 907 ...	491
Arulanantham Pillai, In re ...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 558; 10 M. L T. 550; 22 M. L. J. 138 ...	221
Arunachella Tevan, In re ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 20; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 35; 22 M. L. J. 186; 13 Cr. L. J. 42 ...	282
Asalat Khan v. Birendra Kishore ...	*Cal. High Court ...	519
Ashutosh Chatterjee v. Sudhindra Chandra Moulik ...	*Cal. High Court ...	597
Assistant Sessions Judge of North Arcot v. Ramammal ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 563; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 3; 22 M. L. J. 141; 13 Cr. L. J. 35 ...	275
Atal Bajadar v. Madan Dai ...	*Cal. High Court ...	694
Atul Chandra Dutt v. Eson Ali ...	*Cal. High Court ...	423
Babu Pershad v. Emperor ...	s c. 13 Cr. L J. 9 ...	102
Badri Das v. Ram Rikh ...	*All. High Court ...	142
Badri Das v. Santa Singh ...	s. c 3 P. R. 1912; 44 P. W.R. 1912	873
Badruddin Hasan v. Amir Begam ...	s. c. 14 O. C. 308 ...	520
Bahawal v. Nurkhan ...	s. c 1 P. W. R. 1912, Rev. ...	815
Baij Nath v. Jang Bahadur ...	*Cal. High Court ...	657
Baisnab Charan Manjhi v. Gati Nath Munshi	s c. 16 C. W. N. 384; 39 C. 469; 13 Cr. L. J. 142 ...	830
Bajrang Behari Lal v. Lachmi Narain ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 88 ...	944
Bakhtawari v. Shibban Lal ...	s. c. 69 P. W. R. 1912; 121 P. L. R. 1912 ...	621
Bakshali v. Emperor ...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 136; 13 Cr. L. J. 28	220
Bala Pasban Kuldip Lal v. Gurwar Misser ...	s c 13 Cr. L J. 1 ...	111
Bala Proshad v. Partab Singh ...	*All. High Court ...	38
Baldeo Singh v. Hira Lal ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 67 ...	951
Balmakund v. Emperor ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 97; 34 A. 192; 13 Cr. L. J. 122 ...	773
Balmakund v. Kundan Lal ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 15 ...	943
Balmokand v. Aya Singh ...	s. c. 18 P. W. R. 1912; 26 P. L. R. 1912 ...	68
Balmokand v. Nanak Chand ...	s. c. 3 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 176 ...	928

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XIII.
	s. c. 38 C. 923; 16 C. W. N. 159 ...	725
Banbihari Kapur v. Khetra Pal Singh Roy ...	s. c 9 A. L. J. 111; 34 A. 172 ...	154
Bandey Ali v. Gokul Misir ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	473
Banke Behari Lal v. Ahlad Singh ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 162; 34 A. 210; 13 Cr. L. J 141 ...	829
Bansi v. Emperor ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 29 ...	982
Bapu v. Temsa ...	s. c. 48 P. W. R. 1912 ...	298
Bela Singh v. Labh Singh ...	s. c. 16 C. W.N. 360; 15 C.L.J. 215	529
Bengal Nagpur Co. Ld. v. Ram Protap Ghaneswam Das ...	*Cal. High Court ...	691
Bhagabati Koer v. Sohodra Koer ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 122 ...	495
Bhagan v. Munnu ...	s. c. 14 O. C. 295 ...	466
Bhagannah v. Chandi Singh ...	s c 26 P. W. R. 1912; 34 P. L. R. 1912 ...	957
Bhagtu v. Bua Ditta ...	s. c. 7 N. L. R. 179 ...	862
Bhaosirgh v. Hazari ...	s. c. 9 A L.J. 355; 13 Cr. L. J. 183	999
Bharosa Patak v. Emperor ...	s. c. 21 P. W. R. 1912 Cr; 115 P.L. R. 1912; 13 Cr. L. J. 175 ...	927
Bhoja Ram v. Emperor ...	s. c. 27 P. W. R. 1912; 32 P. L. R. 1912 ...	960
Bhola v. Brij Lal ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 325 ...	943
Bhuttacharya and Co. v. Cawnpore Woollen Mills Co. Ld. ...	*All. High Court ...	156
Bihari Lal v. Durga Das ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	547
Binda Prasad v. Gaya Prasad Singh ...	s. c 16 C. W. N. 362; 9 A L. J. 585; 15 C. L. J. 633 P. C. ...	965
Bir Bikram Deo v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 304; 15 C. L. J. 194; 39 C. 439 ...	513
Birendra Kishore v. Akram Ali ...	*Cal. High Court ...	517
Birendra Kishore v. Dilwar Ali ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 203; 39 C. 453 ...	518
Birendra Kishore v. Roshan Khan ...	s. c. 9 A. L J. 254 ...	506
Birjnath Sarin v. Byrne ...	*Cal. High Court ...	63
Birco Gorain v. Jainurat Koer ...	s. c. 20 P. W. R. 1912; 28 P. L. R. 1912 ...	92
Bishna v. Rattani ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 173 ...	417
Blarchett v. Secretary of State ...	s. c 5 S. L. R. 153; 13 Cr. L. J. 21	213
Bodomal Kishinchand v. Emperor ...	s. c. 14 O. C. 343 ...	803
Brij Mohan Lal v Munni Bibi ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 94 ...	328
Brindarani Choudhrani v. Annoda Mohan Ray	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 239 ...	605
Chag Mull v. Jai Narain ...	s. c. 61 P. W. R. 1912; 108 P. L. R. 1912; 53 P. R. 1912 ...	665
Chajju Mal v. Telu Mal ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 155; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 199 ...	903
Chalasamy Ramiah v. Chalasamy Ramaswami	*All. High Court ...	530
Champa Lal v. Sham Sundar Mali ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 251; 16 C. W. N. 496 ...	702
Chandra Kumar v. Ram Din ...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 122; 13 Cr. L. J. 22	214
Changal Halapoto v. Basarmal ...

S. N. Dar
Advocate High Court
Jammu & Kashmir
Srinagar

Names of cases reported.		Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XIII.
Chellammal v. Krishnasawmy Iyer	...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 166 ...	618
Chet Singh v. Allahditta	...	s. c. 31 P. W. R. 1912; 47 P. L. R. 1912 ...	877
Cheria Imbichi Bibee v. Syed Ali	...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 45 ...	791
Cheriyonni v. Nhera Poyile	...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 587; 10 M. L. T. 528; 22 M. L. J. 47 ...	174
Chhotey Lal v. Har Narain	...	*All. High Court ...	634
Chidrie Kristappa v. Siddamsetti Yamanappa		s. c. 11 M. L. T. 12; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 36 ...	159
Chittar Kuar v. Goura Kuar	...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 105; 34 A. 189 ...	320
Chockalingam Pillai, In re	...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 162; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 119; 13 Cr. L. J. 131 ...	819
Dalgliesh v. Nandan Misser	...	*Cal. High Court ...	186
Dan Singh v. Phangan Singh	...	s. c 83 P. R. 1911 ...	796
Dasaundhi v. Chanda Singh	...	s. c. 85 P. W. R. 1912; 45 P. R. 1912 ...	421
Debendra Nath v. Bindhubala Dasi	...	*Cal. High Court ...	125
Debi Das v. Chairman of Motihari Municipality		*Cal. High Court ...	183
Deo Raj v. Govind Parshad	...	s. c. 55 P. W. R. 1912 ...	647
Deputy Superintendent v. Chulhan Ahir	...	s. c. 16 C.W.N. 263; 13 Cr L.J. 138	826
Devidas v. Ramlal	...	s. c. 7 N. L. R. 190 ...	864
Devta Jamlu v. Hari Das	...	s. c. 39 P. L. R. 1912; 47 P. W. R. 1912 ...	348
Dewat Singh v. Emperor	...	s. c. 11 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 4 P. R. 1912 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 126 ...	782
Dhian Singh v. Dhian Singh	...	s. c 51 P. W. R. 1912 ...	312
Dibakar Nag v. Mrittunjoy Bhattacharya	...	*Cal. High Court ...	495
Dirg Bijai Singh v. Bhan Partab Shah Singh		s. c. 9 A. L. J. 63 ...	945
Doulatram v. Halo Kanya	...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 155 ...	244
Dragon v. Emelie Mi Taik Dragon	...	s. c. 4 Bur. L.T. 269; 13 Cr. L.J. 55	391
Dukhimoni Dasi v. Tulsi Charan	...	*Cal. High Court ...	512
Duni v. Ali Mohammad	...	s. c. 8 P. W. R. 1912 ...	857
Dur Mahomed v. Allahdino	...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 190; 13 Cr. L. J. 32	224
Durga Shankar v. Ram Ratan	...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	544
Dwarka Nath v. Pralhad Ram	...	*Cal. High Court ...	201
Emperor v. Andal	...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 174; 13 Cr. L. J. 33	273
——— v. Andiasavaloo Naidoo	...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 84; 13 Cr. L. J. 144 ...	832
——— v. Arumukham Pillai	...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 69; 13 Cr. L. J. 124 ...	780
——— v. Balwant Kondo Patole	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L.R. 41; 13 Cr.L.J. 137	825
——— v. Behari Lal	...	s. c. 8 A. L. J. 1324; 34 A. 146; 13 Cr. L. J. 8 ...	101
——— v. Dilsukh	...	s. c. 19 P.R. 1911 Cr., 13 Cr.L.J. 188	1004
——— v. Ganda Singh	...	s. c. 20 P. L. R. 1912; 13 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 3 ...	109
——— v. Hari Govind Limaye	...	s. c. 14 Bom.L.R. 40; 13 Cr.L.J. 139	827
——— v. Lekria	...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 20; 13 Cr. L. J. 189	1005

Names of cases reported.		Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XIII.
		s. c. 33 A. 775; 13 Cr. L. J. 170 ...	922
Emperor v. Murli Sirgh	...	s. c 4 Bur. L. T. 270; 13 Cr. L. J. 62	398
——— v. Nga Po Sin	...	s. c 4 Bur. L. T. 271; 13 Cr. L. J. 58	394
——— v. Nga Sit Cho	...	s. c 3 P. R. 1912 Cr ; 9 P. W. R. 1912 Cr ; 13 Cr. L. J. 17 ...	209
——— v. Qadir Bakhsh	...	s. c 9 A L. J. 51; 34 A. 118; 13 Cr. L J. 169 ...	921
——— v. Ram Naresh Singh	...	s. c. 1 P. R. 1912 Cr ; 37 P. L. R. 1912; 15 P. W. R. 1912 Cr ; 13 Cr L. J. 172 ...	924
——— v. Sadapur	...	s. c 18 P. R. 1911 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 185 ...	1001
——— v. Sohan Singh	...	*Cal. High Court ...	311
Ensar Ali v. Yakub Ali	...	s c 9 A. L. J 84 ...	954
Fakhran Bibi v. Nageshar Ram	...	s c. 62 P. W. R. 1912 ...	709
Fakir Chand v. Ram Chand	...	s c. 76 P.W.R. 1912; 48 P. R. 1912	561
Fateh Chand v. Kirpa Singh	...	s. c. 19 P. W R. 1912 ...	77
Fateh Din v. Allah Ditta	...	s. c 81 P. R. 1911 ...	790
Fateh Din v. Nikka	...	s. c. 1 P R. 1912; 33 P. W. R. 1912	930
Fatma v. Imtiazi Jan	...	s. c 11 M L.T. 121; 22 M. L. J. 265	866
Gadiyam Narayudu v. Mallavarapu Venkamma		s. c. 15 C. L J. 80; 13 Cr.L. J. 188	1004
Gajendra Ghorai v. Emperor	...	s. c. 77 P. W. R 1912 ...	661
Ganda Singh v. Nathu Ram	...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 43 ...	283
Ganesh Pershad v. Emperor	...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 22 ...	909
Ganeshdas v. Shankar	...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 54 ...	959
Ganga Pershad Sahu v. Irshad Ali Khan	...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 227 ...	403
Gangadhar Das v. Bhikari Charan Das	...	*Cal. High Court ...	206
Ganpat v. Balmakund	...	s. c 9 A. L. J. 8; 34 A. 168 ...	94
Ganpat Prasad v. Sarju	...	s. c. 9 A. L J. 54; 34 A. 135 ...	34
Ganpat Rai v. Munni Lal	...	s. c. 67 P. W. R 1912 ...	511
Ganpat Rai v. Sardara	...	s. c. 9 A. L J. 156; 13 Cr. L. J 190	1006
Gauri Shankar Lal v. Emperor	...	s. c 9 A. L. J. 86 ...	197
Gendan Lal v. Babu Ram	...	s. c 9 A L. J. 496 ...	191
Ghansham Singh v. Teg Bahadur Singh	...	s. c. 60 P. W. R 1912; 79 P. L. R. 1912 ...	319
Ghasi Ram v. Jai Lal	...	*Ajmer-Merwara Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	363
Ghisu v. Ram Ballabh	...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 574 ...	59
Gokul Chand v. Shib Charan	...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 299; 15 C. L. J. 204 ...	23
Gokul Krishna Das v. Shashi Mukhi Dasi	...	s. c. 16 C. W. N 108 ...	329
Gopal Chandra Chakrabarty v. Radharaman Das Babaji	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R 14 ...	851
Gopal Ghela v. Rajaram Amtha	...	s. c 15 C. L. J. 120 ...	900
Gopal Lal v. Bahorni	...	s. c 10 M. L. T. 522; 22 M. L. J. 121 ...	95
Gopal Row v. Veerappan Servaikaran	...	s. c 16 C W. N 265; 39 C. 245 ...	577
Gopessur Dutt v. Bissessur Dutt	...

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XIII.
Gopi Narain v. Kunj Behari Lal ...	s. c 9 A. L. J. 311 ...	625
Gorle Kandungadu, In re ...	s. c.(1912)1 M.W.N. 97; 13 Cr. L. J. 140 ...	828
Gouri Dutt v. Amar Chand ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 49 ...	907
Govind Baba Gujar v. Shrimant Jijibai Saheb	s. c. 14 Bom. L R. 9; 36 B. 189 ...	849
Govinda Naicken v. Arathshaya Iyer ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 87; 11 M. L T. 87; 22 M L J 257 ...	471
Govinda Pillay v. Meeratchi Achi ...	s. c 10 M. L. T. 493; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 563; 22 M. L. J. 204 ...	152
Gujjalapadi Subba Naidu v. Gujjalapadi Vancatasubba Naidu ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 33 ...	113
Gul Mahomed v. Abdul Jubbar ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 498; 15 C. L J. 683 ...	694
Gunniah Vencatachalapathy Aiyar v. Perumal Iyer ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 527; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 44 ...	133
Gurameah v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 33?; 39 C. 403; 13 Cr. L. J. 186 ...	1002
Gurusawmy Nadan v. Emperor ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M W N. 47; 11 M.L.T. 32; 22 M.L J. 251; 13 Cr.L.J. 143	831
H. W. G. v. Mrs. H. W. G. ...	*All. High Court ...	617
Habeebullah v. Abdul Hamid ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 131; 34 A. 261 ...	963
Haddington Island Quarry Co. Ld. v. Alden Wesley ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 554 ...	261
Hansraj v. Narain Chand ...	s. c. 86 P. R 1911 ...	716
Hardey Narain v. Mrs. Powell ...	*All. High Court ...	420
Hari Narain Chatterjee v. Ishwar Chandra Chatterjee ...	*Cal. High Court ...	457
Hari Singh v. Bholi ...	s. c. 64 P. W. R. 1912; 119 P. L. R. 1912 ...	719
Harnamon v. Santa Singh ...	s. c. 98 P. W. R. 1912 ...	711
Hazara Singh v. Harnam Singh ...	s. c. 22 P. W. R. 1912; 44 P. L. R. 1912; 24 P. R. 1912 ...	180
Hedlot Khasia v. Ka Ran Khasiani ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 241 ...	377
Hemandas v. Chellaram ...	s. c. 5 S L. R 184 ...	264
Heta Ram v. Chandan ...	s. c. 49 P. W. R. 1912 ...	447
Hewa Mal v. Karunamoy Gupta ...	*Cal. High Court ...	542
Ibrahim Ali Khan v. Mahammad Ahsan Ullah	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 225; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 316; 50 P. W. R 1912; 15 C. L J. 352; 9 A. L J. 390; 14 Bom. L. R. 276; 22 M. L. J. 478; 16 C. W. N. 625 P. C. ...	695
Imambandi v. Matasuddi ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 621 ...	678
Imperator v. Abdul Latif ...	s. c. 5 S. L R. 135; 13 Cr. L. J. 27	219
——— v. Alu ...	s. c. 5 S. L R. 129; 13 Cr. L. J. 23	215
——— v. Bhojraj ...	s c. 5 S. L. R. 137; 13 Cr. L J. 30	222
——— v. Rajabali ...	s. c. 5 S. L R. 173; 13 Cr. L J 44	284
——— v. Rino ...	s. c. 5 S. L R. 123; 13 Cr. L J. 18	210

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XIII.
Imrit Chamar v. Sridhar Panday ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 7 ...	120
Indar Dawan Singh v. Deputy Commissioner, Fyzabad ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	629
Isa v. Ranon ...	s. c. 1 P. W. R. 1912 Cr; 83 P. L. R. 1912; 13 Cr. L. J. 136 ...	824
Ishar Das v. Asaf Ali Khan ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 19; 34 A. 186 ...	134
Ismail Ghami Ammal v. Katima Rowther ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 573; 22 M. L. J. 154; 13 Cr. L. J. 23 ...	215
Jackson v. Jackson ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 108; 34 A. 203 ...	958
Jadunandan Prosad Singha v. Koer Kalliyan Singh ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 61; 16 C. W. N. 612 ...	653
Jafar Husain v. Husan Ara Begam ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	609
Jafri Begam v. Ghasu Khan ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	504
Jagan Nath v. Debi Sahay ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	493
Jagar Nath v. Ramphal ...	s. c. 8 A. L. J. 1312; 34 A. 150 ...	79
Jagarnath Das v. Bibi Rupa ...	*Cal. High Court ...	85
Jagat Chandra Majumdar v. Munsef Ali Sarkar	*Cal. High Court ...	671
Jamna Das v. Ram Autar ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 97; 11 M. L. T. 6; 9 A. L. J. 37; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 32; 15 C. L. J. 68; 14 Bom. L. R. 1; 21 M. L. J. 1158; 34 A. 63 P. C. ...	304
Jan Khan v. Ahmad ...	s. c. 24 P. W. R. 1912 ...	445
Jang Bahadur Lal v. Emperor ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 652; 13 Cr. L. J. 62	398
Jainath Pathak v. Kalka Upadhya ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 238; 34 A. 285 ...	643
Janki Das v. Bengal Nagpur Railway Company ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 211; 16 C. W. N. 356 ...	509
Janki Das v. Tika Ram ...	*All. High Court ...	48
Janki Koeri v. Basdeo Ojha ...	*Cal. High Court ...	351
Janki Pershad Singh v. Yahia Hossain ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 211; 16 C. W. N. 356 ...	637
Janki Prashad v. Thakur Das ...	*All. High Court ...	21
Jasoda Dassi v. Rameswari Dassi ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 603 ...	374
Jayanti Kistappa v. Jayanti Chinnapiya ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 38 ...	188
Jesa Ram v. Thakar Das ...	s. c. 197 P. W. R. 1911 ...	468
Jit Singh v. Maharaj Singh ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 551; 16 C. W. N. 122; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 29; 15 C. L. J. 78; 14 Bom. L. R. 3[illegible]; 34 A. 57 P. C. ...	257
Jiwa v. Buta ...	s. c. 21 P. W. R. 1912; 23 P. L. R. 1912; 26 P. R. 1912 ...	167
Jiwan v. Dit ...	s. c. 103 P. W. R. 1912; 49 P. R. 1912 ...	549
Jnan Chandra Nag Das v. Lochh Mohan ...	*Cal. High Court ...	541

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XIII.
Jog Narain Singh v. Badri Das ...	*Cal. High Court ...	144
Jogal Kishore v. Ram Narain ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 226; 34 A. 268 ...	619
Jotindra Mohan v. Kedar Nath ...	*Cal. High Court ...	289
Kader Sundar v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 69; 13 Cr. L. J. 39	279
Kalimuddin v. Mahurni ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 382; 16 C. W. N. 662 ...	690
Kamini Mohan Das v. Harendra Kumar ...	s. c. 38 C. 876; 13 Cr. L. J. 126 ...	782
Kamini Moni Debi v. Khettra Mohan Ganguli	*Cal. High Court ...	43
Kanhai Lal v. Hulas Singh ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 29 ...	939
Kanhaya Lal v. Girdhari Lal ...	s. c. 9 A. L J. 103 ...	956
Karam Bahadin v. Emperor ...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 179; 13 Cr. L. J. 31	223
Karam Chand v. Sultan ...	s. c. 72 P. W. R. 1912 ...	650
Karim Khan v. Salmuddi ...	*Cal. High Court ...	594
Kariman v. Masiti ...	s. c. 29 P. W. R. 1912; 24 P. L. R. 1912 ...	171
Karippala v. Muchai Manakal ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 526; 22 M. L. J. 126 ...	233
Karm Ilahi v. Sultan Alam ...	s. c. 79 P. R. 1911 ...	812
Kashmire v. Ramsaran ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 660 ...	416
Katchalai Mudali v. Kuppanna Mudali ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 41 ...	182
Kedar Nath v. Manu Bibi ...	s. c 16 C. W. N. 247 ...	879
Khair Ahmad v. Mir Ahmad Ullah ...	s. c. 52 P. W. R. 1912 ...	408
Khanu v. Fateh Khan ...	s. c. 5 P. W. R. 1912 ...	861
Khazan Singh v. Panna Lal ...	s. c 9 A. L. J. 59 ...	131
Khirode Chunder Roy Chowdhury v. Emperor	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 151; 39 C. 377; 13 C. L. J. 177 ...	993
Kiman v Sultani Mal ...	s. c. 82 P. W. R. 1912 ...	559
Kirpal Singh v. Sant Singh ...	s. c. 71 P. R. 1911; 30 P. L. R. 1912	305
Kishori Lal v. Todar Singh ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 244 ...	535
Kailash Chandra v. Gajendra Nath ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 1 ...	407
Koipalli Ramiah v. Sajja Subbiah ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 192; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 415 ...	315
Kolli Appiah, In re ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 191; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 400; 13 Cr. L. J. 144 ...	832
Komma Somakka v. Kodidala Pedda Ramiah	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 519; 22 M. L. J. 193 ...	251
Kolpati Kuar v. Rajdhari Lal ...	*All. High Court ...	641
Kosuri Rajagopal v. Datla Radhayya ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 14; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 39; 22 M. L. J. 159 ...	205
Kovummal Packrichi v. Kovummal Keenhacha	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 538; 22 M. L. J. 122 ...	236
Krishna Das Roy v. Land Acquisition Collector, Pabna ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 327 ...	470
Krishna Proshad Mandal v. Rabindra Nath ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 6 ...	99
Krishnasawmi Doss, In re ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 167; 11 M. L. T. 182 ...	648

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XIII.
Kuar Radhka Raman Parshad v. Gulzari Kuar	*All. High Court ...	147
Koppusami Iyengar v. Subbaraya Rowtha Minda Naicar ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 15; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 1; 22 M. L. J 161 ...	324
Kuri v. Des Raj ...	s. c. 57 P. W. R. 1912 ...	443
Kutubullah Sarkar v. Durga Charan ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 396 ...	424
Lad Khan v. Emperor ...	s. c. 19 P. W. R 1912 Cr; 11 P. L. R. 1912; 13 Cr L. J. 182 ...	998
Labri v. Shiv Nath ...	s c. 2 P W. R. 1912 Rev. ...	865
Lakhi Chowdhuri v. Akloo Jha ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N 639 ...	123
Lakhi Kant Das v. Balabhadra Prosad Das ...	*Cal. High Court ...	336
Lakshminarain Apuram v. Emperor ...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 536; 13 Cr. L. J 21 ...	213
Lal Gopal Data Chowdhury v. Khorooriah Majezilla Zemindary Syndicate, Ld. ...	s c. 16 C. W. N. 297 ...	673
Lal Hussain v Hassa Khan ...	s. c 68 P. W R. 1912 ...	428
Lal Singh v. Pala Singh ...	s. c. 66 P. W. R 1912 ...	714
Lalji Panday v. Berhamdeo Panday ...	s c. 16 C. W. N. 89 ...	29
Lalmand v. Kalka Prasad ...	s c. 8 A. L J. 1326 ...	194
Lalu Ram v. Secretary of State ...	s. c 15 O. C. 117 ...	556
Lazaratnessa Bibi v. Mahomed Jaffar ...	*Cal. High Court ...	336
Lehna Singh v. Santa Singh ...	s. c 9 P. W. R. 1912 ...	852
Lekhraj v. Harpal Singh ...	s. c 11 M. L. T. 1; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 16; 9 A. L. J. 40; 16 C. W. N. 217; 15 C. L. J. 72; 14 Bom. L. R. 33; 34 A. 65 P. C.	269
Madan Mohan v. Manmatha Nath Bose ...	*Cal. High Court ...	425
Madan Mohun Dey v. Ganga Chandra Roy ...	*Cal. High Court ...	189
Madar Sahib v. Emperor ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L T. 259; 12 Cr. L.J. 52	388
Maddaniah v. Bhimappa ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 72 ...	469
Maghli v. Ladli ...	*All. High Court ...	644
Mahammad Mehdi Hassan Khan v. Sheoshankar Prasad Singh ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 552; 39 C. 353 ...	353
Maharani v. Ram Adhar ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	508
Mahbub Bakhsh v. Abdul Rahman ...	s. c. 4 P. W. R. 1912; 84 P. L. R. 1912 ...	816
Mahomed Farid v. Mahomed Abdul Gafur ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 14 ...	434
Malappurath Paramadhathil v. Channazhi Krishnan ...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 537 ...	234
Malla Veeranna v. Malla Chelamayya ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 63 ...	467
Mandi Ghasi v. Emperor ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 49; 13 Cr. L. J. 125 ...	781
Manghanmal v. Fernandez ...	s. c. 5 S. L R. 181 ...	260
Manghirmal v. Vithalram ...	s. c. 5 S L. R. 107 ...	225
Manikka Mudeliar v. Devasi Kamani Pillai ...	s. c (1912) 1 M. W. N. 158 ...	595
Manindra Nath v. Mohanunda Roy ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 360 ...	161
Mansoor v. Min Sahebdin ...	s. c 5 S. L. R. 125 ...	234

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XIII.
Mata Din v. Ahmad Ali ...	s c. 16 C. W. N. 338; 11 M. L. T. 145; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 183; 9 A L J. 215; 15 C. L. J. 270; 14 Bom. L R. 192; 15 O. C 49; 34 A. 213 P. C.
Matharadas v. Secretary of State ...	s c 5 S. L. R. 140 ...	976
Mathura Prosad v. Rukmini Koer ...	* Cal High Court ...	237
Matigara Coal Co. Ltd. v. Shragers, Ltd. ...	s. c 38 C. 824 ...	148
McGill v. Byrne ...	s. c 5 S. L R 133; 13 Cr L J. 25 ...	29
Mcinerny v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 33 C. 797 ...	217
Me Tha v. Nga San E ...	s c U. B. R. (1911), I, 90; 13 Cr. L. J. 162 ...	370
Megha Ram v. Makhan Lal ...	*Punjab Chief Court ...	914
Mehdi Lal v Grant ...	* Cal. High Court ...	6[illegible]7
Meher Sardar v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 46; 13 Cr. L J. 26 ...	636
Meher Singh v. Devi Dyal ...	s c. 32 P. W. R. 1912; 19 P L R. 1912; 38 P. R. 1912 ...	218
Mewa Lal v. Ahmad Ali ...	s c 9 A. L J. 17 ...	50
Mg Po Thwe v. Ma Baw ...	s c. 4 Bur. L. T. 272 ...	929
Mi Hla [illegible] v. Nga Than ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 268; 13 Cr L.J. 53 ...	373
Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 74; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 22; 9 A. L J. 33; 15 C. L. J. 69; 14 Bom. L. R 5; 39 C. 232; 21 M. L. J. 1156 P. C.	3[illegible]9
Miran Bakhsh v. Gonde Ram ...	s. c. 89 P. W. R. 1912 ...	331
Mohadeo Pershad v. Pachkari ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 322 ...	556
Mohammad v. Sukha Singh ...	s. c 36 P. W. R. 1912; 15 P. L. R. 1912 ...	941
Mohammad Hashim Ali Khan v. Sadiq Husain Khan ...	s. c. 14 O. C. 356 ...	20
Mohoram Sheikh Chaprasi v. Telamuddin Khan ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 567; 15 C.L.J.220 ...	882
Moula Bux v. Ajahar Molla ...	* Cal. High Court ...	606
Muhammad v. Bakko ...	s. c. 19 P. R. 1912; 17 P. L. R. 1912; 39 P. W. R. 1912 ...	689
Muhammad v. Imam Khatun ...	s. c. 25 P. L. R. 1912; 37 P. W. R. 1912 ...	27
Muhammad Badar Khan v. Chiragh Shah ...	s. c. 16 P. L. R. 1912; 43 P. W. R. 1912 ...	172
Muhammad Hussain v. Amir Haidar ...	* All. High Court ...	32
Muhammad Umar Khan v. Muhammad Niaz-uddin Khan ...	s. c. 6 P. W. R. 1912; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 77; 11 M. L. T. 76; 9 A. L. J 137; 15 C. L. J. 172; 12 P. L. R. 1912; 22 M. L. J. 240; 14 Bom. L. R. 132; 16 C. W. N. 458; 39 C. 418 P. C. ...	34[illegible]

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XIII.
Mullaseri Gopala Menon v. Krisheki Kovilaknath Manavikraman ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 568; 22 M. L. J. 146 ...	179
Muna v. Mansa Ram ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	624
Musai v. Emperor ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 159 ...	847
Muthiah Chetty, In re ...	s c. 11 M L. T. 21; 22 M. L J. 181; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 455; 13 Cr. L. J. 46	286
Muthuvarapu Seshiah v. Gatram Ramiah ...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 526; 13 Cr. L. J. 19	211
Muthuveerappa Chetti v. Ponnuswami Chetty	s c. 10 M. L. T. 477; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 561; 22 M. L. J. 68 ...	16
Mutsadi Lal v Mule Mal ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 95; 34 A. 205 ...	334
Mutyala Papayya v. Kosuri Muramallu ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 11; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 7; 22 M. L. J. 156 ...	322
N. C. Sircar and Sons v. Baraboni Coal Concern, Ld. ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 289 ...	868
Naba v. Piara Mal ...	s. c. 70 P. W. R. 1912; 44 P. R. 1912 ...	427
Nagendra Kumar Nath v. Hara Chandra Poddar ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 646 ...	376
Nalini Behari Roy v. Fulmani Dasi ...	s c. 16 C.W.N. 421; 15 C.L.J. 388	487
Nallasawmi Pillai v. Ramasawmi Pillay ...	*Mad. High Court ...	450
Nand Ram v. Bhupal Singh ...	s c. 8 A. L J. 1294; 34 A. 126 ..	5
Nanji Koer v. Umatul Batul ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 653 ...	40
Narak Lal v. Thagoo Lal ...	*Cal. High Court ...	455
Narshing Das v. Shamas Din ...	s. c. 207 P. L. R. 1911 ...	992
Narsing Narain v. Jahi Mistry ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 3 ..	414
Narsing Narain Singh v. Ajodhya Prosad Singh	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 110; 16 C. W. N. 256 ...	118
Nataraja Iyer v. South India Bank ...	s. c. 10 M. L T. 503; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 590; 22 M. L. J. 105 ...	91
Natesa Pillay v. Munusawmy Naicken ...	*Mad. High Court ...	313
Nathmal Das v. Dalip Singh ...	*All. High Court ...	401
Nathu Ram v. Karmon	s. c. 40 P. L. R. 1912; 115 P. W. R. 1912 ...	326
Nazir Ahmad v. Raghubar Dayal ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 7 ...	986
Nga Lu Pe v. Emperor ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 262; 13 Cr.L.J 55	392
Nga Paw v. Nga Lu Gale ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 265 ...	375
Nga Paw E v. Nga Sin ...	s. c. U. B. R. (1911) I, 92 ...	874
Nga Po Chein v. Emperor ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L T. 261; 13 Cr.L J. 54	390
Nga Po Shat v. Emperor ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 263; 13 Cr.L J. 59	395
Nga Po Yon v. Mohr Brothers and Co. Ltd. ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 279; 6 L. B.R. 38; 13 Cr. L. J. 50 ...	386
Nga Pu v. Emperor ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 27; 13 Cr.L.J. 122	778
Nga Pyan v. Emperor ...	s. c 4 Bur. L. T. 267; 13 Cr.L.J. 49	385
Nihal Chand v. Abdullah ...	*Punjab Chief Court ...	563

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XIII.
Nihal Chand v. Chanda Singh ...	s. c. 3 P. W. R. 1912; 32 P. L. R. 1912 ...	859
Nihal Devi v. Kishore Chand ...	s. c. 51 P. R. 1912 ...	564
Nihal Kaur v. Secretary of State ...	*Punjab Chief Court ...	550
Nura v. Nasir Din ...	s. c. 1 P. R. 1912 Rev.; 27 P. L. R. 1912; 5 P. W. R. 1912 Rev.	18
Nurullah Khan v. Hayatunnissa ...	*All. High Court ...	155
O'Brien v. Abdul Rahman ...	s. c. 28 P. W. R. 1912; 14 P. L. R. 1912 ...	6
Oudh Bihari Pande v. Maladeo Sahi ...	*All. High Court ...	646
Painu'lah v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C.W.N. 238; 13 Cr. L. J. 127	783
Pancham Singh v. Ganga Bakhsh Singh ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	490
Pandurang Bhiwaji v. Ganga Ram Garu ...	s. c. 14 Bom L. R. 22; 36 B. 203...	855
Parbhu Narain Singh v. Lalji Singh ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 79 ...	157
Parmeshar Dat v. Mohammad Abul Hasan Khan ...	s. c. 14 O. C. 335 ...	809
Parry & Co. v. Vadivelu Pillay ...	*Mad. High Court ...	160
Pare Ram v. Muhammad Yasin Khan ...	s. c. 14 P. W. R. 1912 ...	953
Partab Singh v. Parjabu ...	s. c. 41 P. L. R 1912; 25 P. R. 1912; 125 P. W. R. 1912 ...	177
Pathana v. Naba ...	s c. 87 P. R. 1911 ...	802
Peary Mohan Das v. Weston ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 145; 13 Cr. L. J. 65	721
Perumal Naicken, In re ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 193; 13 Cr. L. J. 129 ...	817
Pir Bakhsh v. Emperor ...	s. c. 36 P. L. R. 1912; 3 Cr. L. J. 28	220
Pitchuvir v. Perumal Konan ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 160; (1911) 1 M. W. N. 163 ...	651
Polina Achanna v. Madipati Venkataramana...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 585; 10 M. L. T. 542; 22 M L. J. 127 ...	175
Ponusawmy Naidu v. Emperor ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 16; 13 Cr. L. J. 16 ...	110
Prahlad Chandra v. Behari Lal Mookerjee ...	*Cal. High Court ...	686
Pran Singh v. Janardan Singh ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 541 ...	337
Prayag Narain Singh v. Sukdeo Narain Singh	*Cal. High Court ...	170
Prem Singh v. Mokand Singh ...	s. c. 30 P. W. R. 1912; 22 P. L. R. 1912 ...	62
Promoda Nath v. Alamgir Khan ...	*Cal. High Court ...	82
Public Prosecutor v. Mushunooru Suryanarayanamoorty ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 136; 11 M. L. T. 127 ; 13 Cr. L. J. 145 ...	833
Pugalia Vettorammal v. Vetter Goundan ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 89; 11 M. L. T. 103 ...	475
Qudrat Ullah v. Chunni Mal ...	*All. High Court ...	60
Radha Kant Chakravarti v. Ramananda Shaha	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 475; 15 C. L. J. 369 ...	698
Raghubar Dayal Sukul v. Jadu Nandan Missir	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 89; 16 C. W. N. 736	365
Raghubir Sahi v. Protap Udoy Nath Sahi Deo	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 294; 15 C. L. J. 145; 39 C. 241 ...	193

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XIII.
Raghubir Singh v. Umrao Singh ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	500
Raghunandan Prosad Singh v. Ram Narain Singh ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 4 ...	97
Raghunandan Singh v. Jarao ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	554
Raghunath Prosad v. Kashi Prosad ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 678 ...	88
Raj Kumar Sarkar v. Rajani Kanta Chakravati	*Cal. High Court ...	449
Raja v. Jannat Bibi ...	s. c. 79 P. W. R. 1912; 40 P. R 1912 ...	409
Raja Dei v. Umed Singh ...	s c 9 A. L. J 158; 34 A. 207 ...	632
Rajendra Narain v. Ashutosh Sanyal ...	*Cal. High Court ...	194
Ram Chand v. Diwan Chand ...	*Punjab Chief Court ...	571
Ram Charan Chandra v. Tirupulla Sheikh ...	s. c. 16 C.W. N. 645; 13 Cr. L. J. 191	1007
Ram Devi v. Shib Devi ...	s c. 1 P. W. R. 1912 ...	290
Ram Gopal v. Agent, Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway Co. ...	*Ajmer-Merwara Judl. Commr's Court ...	297
Ram Gopal v. Jagmohan Singh ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	631
Ram Narain v. Durga Dat ...	*Punjab Chief Court ...	568
Ram Narain Singh v. Odindra Nath ...	s. c 15 C. L. J. 17 ...	440
Ram Pal Singh v. Nandlal Marwari ...	s. c 16 C. W. N. 345 ...	603
Ram Prasad v. Bedo ...	*All. High Court ...	436
Ram Sarup v. Jasoda Kunwar ...	s c 9 A. L J. 72; 34 A. 158 ...	138
Ramadhar v. Sheo Narain ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	717
Ramanathan Chettiar v. Sokkanatha Gounden	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 559; 10 M. L. T. 532 ...	78
Ramasami Reddi v. Lakshmiambal Ammal ...	s. c. (1911) 2 M W. N. 568 ...	200
Ramaswami Ayengar v. Muthuswami Aiyer ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 42 ...	799
Ramchandra Das v. Farzand Ali Khan ...	s. c 9 A. L. J. 188: 34 A. 253 ...	531
Ramdeo Prosad Singh v. Gopi Koeri ...	s. c 16 C. W. N. 383; 15 C. L. J. 256 ...	349
Rameswar Singh v. Tirpit Singh ...	*Cal. High Court ...	140
Ramji Das v. Shankar Das ...	s. c. 10 P. W. R 1912 ...	855
Ramnath Zutshi v. Secretary of State ...	*All. High Court ...	46
Rangasamy Filllai v. Muthu Chidambara ...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 589 ...	183
Rashik Lal v. Ram Narain ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 198; 34 A. 273 ...	573
Rashmohini Dasi v. Debendra Nath Singha ...	s c 16 C. W. N. 604 ...	604
Rasoolkhan Saheb v. Emperor ...	s c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 85; 13 Cr. L. J. 175 ...	927
Raziuddin Hussain v. Taharat Husain ...	*Cal. High Court ...	498
Rudra Pratab Sahi v. Gajadhar Singh ...	s. c. 14 O. C. 257 ...	462
Rudra Prosad, In re ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 606; 13 Cr. L. J. 61	397
Rukman Devi v. Sain Das ...	s. c. 45 P. W. R 1912 ...	401
Sahib v. Usman ...	*Punjab Chief Court ...	72
Salimuddi v. Uzir Mahomed ...	*Cal. High Court ...	299
Sandyal v. Kunjeswar Misra ...	s. c 16 C. W. N. 143; 13 Cr. L. J. 125	781
Sanka Aiyar v. Subbiah Iyer ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 361 ...	642
Sankara Ramiah v. Sankara Subbamiah ...	s. c (1912) 1 M W. N. 70 ...	489

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XIII.
Santu v. Arjan Das ...	s. c 131 P. W. R. 1912 ...	318
Sarkhara v. Nawab ...	s. c 11 P. W. R. 1912 ...	850
Saroop Chand v. Tularam ...	s. c 8 N. L. R. 17 ...	902
Sarvoi Begam v. Haider Shah ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J 12 ...	404
Sat Narain v. Badri Nath ...	s. c 9 A. L. J. 2 1 ...	645
Satish Chandra Sarkar v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 499; 15 C. L. J. 396; 39 C. 454; 13 Cr. L. J. 161...	913
Satya Sri Ghoshal v. Kartik Chandra Das ...	s c. 15 C. L. J. 227; 16 C. W. N. 418 ...	596
Sawan Singh v. Jafar Khan ...	s. c. 7 P. W. R 1912; 13 P. L. R. 1912; 39 P. R. 1912 ...	405
Seeni Ammal v. Angamuttu Nadar ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 99 ...	802
Sengoda Gounden v Varadappan ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 488; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 534; 22 M. L. J. 201 ...	30
Sevugan Chetty v. Krishna Aiyangar ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 557; 22 M. L J. 139 ...	268
Shadi Khan v. Beebee Umdan Begam ...	s. c. 34 P. W. R. 1912 ...	73
Shah Muhammad v. Piara Mal ...	s. c. 84 P. R. 1911 ...	792
Shahbaz Khan v. Fazal Din ...	s. c. 74 P. W. R. 1912; 43 P. R. 1912 ...	430
Sham Lal v. Hazari Mal ...	s c. 15 C. L. J. 451 ...	326
Shaminath v. Ramjas ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 1; 34 A. 143 ...	80
Shankar Lal v. Saruplal ...	s. c. 8 A. L. J. 1297; 34 A. 140 ...	19
Sharashi Mohan Roy v. Ramesh Charan Roy...	*Cal. High Court ...	451
Sharkey v. Jery Allard ...	s. c. 78 P. W. R. 1912 ...	433
Sheonandan Singh v. Deo Saran Singh ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 647 ...	598
Sheru v. Jawahir Singh ...	*Punjab Chief Court ...	632
Sharikison v. Chatarsingh ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 18 ...	904
Shukuruddin v. Hemangini Debi ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 420 ...	192
Sinnachami v. Ramasamy Chettiar ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 463; (1911) 2 M. W. N 539; 22 M. L. J. 85 ..	7
Sital Prosad v. Bajirangi Sahai ...	*Cal. High Court ...	70
Sitaram v. Kalandi Patra ...	*Cal. High Court ...	127
Sobhomal v. Pohumal ...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 168 ...	255
Sohni v. Mohan Kuer ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 23 ...	944
Somaruddi Mollah v. Port Canning and Land Improvement Co., Ltd. ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 225 ...	481
Sreenivasier v. Balakrishna Devai ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 150; 11 M. L. T. 159; 22 M. L. J. 187 ...	860
Sri Rang Behary Lal v. Ranchheyya Lal ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 439 ...	128
Sriranga Boupala Balai Rao Garu v. Nayanim Bahadur Varu ...	*Mad. High Court ...	81
Stamp Act, In re ...	s. c. 38 P. L. R. 1912 ...	330
Subbaraya Iyer v. Ramasawmi Pillai ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 18; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 9; 22 M. L. J. 166 ...	204

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XIII.
Subbiah Servai, In re ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 23; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 42; 22 M. L. J. 184: 13 Cr. L. J. 38 ...	278
Subbhadra Koer v. Dhajadari Gossain ...	s. c. 15 C.L J. 142; 16 C. W. N. 444	898
Subiha Pillay v. Velappa Naicken ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 524; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 560; 22 M. L. J. 124 ...	176
Sukan Sahu v. Gangajali ...	*Cal. High Court ...	136
Sundar Singh v. Deva Singh ...	s. c. 2 P. W. R. 1912; 85 P. L. R. 1912 ...	863
Sundar Singh v. Har Kaur ...	s. c. 75 P. W. R. 1912; 77 P. L. R. 1912 ...	444
Surya v. Lachmi Narain ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 48 ...	283
Tadikonda Venkaya v. Kodali Venkatasubbamma ...	s. c. (1 12) 1 M. W. N. 49 ...	486
Tajammul Husain v. Raunak Ali ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 25 ...	979
Tara Chand Mukerji v. Afzal Beg ...	s. c. 8 A. L. J 1329; 34 A. 184 ...	185
Tari Baz Khan v. Fateh Khan ...	s. c. 29 P. R. 1912; 114 P. W. R. 1912 ...	316
Tej Mal v. Jagapilla Papayamma ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 25: (1912) 1 M. W. N. 50; 22 M. L. J. 225 ..	788
Tek Chand v. Gopal Devi ...	s. c. 46 P. R 1912 ...	482
Thakar Das v. Perma Nand ...	s. c. 95 P. R. 911 ...	963
Theophilus Ramappa, In re ...	s. c. 22 M. L. J. 112; 10 M. L. T. 517; 13 Cr. L. J. 15 ...	108
Thiruvengadam Pillai v. Doridla Subbiah ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 144; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 176 ...	659
Tota Singh v. Partap Singh ...	*Punjab Chief Court ...	670
Tulsi v. Madho Ram ...	s. c. 30 P. R. 1912; 133 P. W. R. 1912 ...	343
Tulsi Ram v. Karm Chand ...	s. c. 25 P. W. R 1912; 36 P. L. R. 1912 ...	955
Tunoo Mia v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 502; 15 C. L. J. 339; 39 C. 348; 13 Cr L. J. 173 ...	925
Ujal Singh v. Debya Singh Sardar ...	*Cal. High Court ...	184
Umar Ali v. Nasib-un-nissa ...	s. c. 82 P. R. 1911 ...	800
Umar Din v. Budhe Khan ...	s. c. 23 P. W. R. 1912; 21 P. L. R. 1912 ...	58
Upendra Nath Ghosh v. Chairman of the Calcutta Corporation ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 116 ...	332
Valliammai Achi v. Nataraja Pillay ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 157; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 198 ...	906
Varadayya Chetty v. Munusami Chetty ...	s. c. 10 M L. T. 514 ...	232
Variangattil Paksseri Raman Menon v. Sankarasubba Pattar ...	s c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 37 ...	203

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XIII.
Vedachella Mudaliar v. Vijayaraghavachariar	s. c. 22 M. L. J. 219; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 523 ...	71
Veerapa Chettyar, In re ...	*Mad. High Court ...	620
Velappa Gownden, In re ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 196 ...	640
Velchand Chhaganlal v. Lieut. A. Flagg ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 18; 36 B. 164...	853
Velluvakandi Kunhi Pathumma v. Ponnanki Moossan Mammad ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 11 ...	300
Venkadam Narayana Iyer v. Siva Subramania Iyer ...	s. c 22 M. L. J. 49 ...	985
Venkatesa Iyengar v. Kamalammal ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 65; 11 M. L T. 84; 22 M. L. J. 212 ...	463
Vithoo v. Emperor ...	s. c. 7 N. L. R. 185; 13 Cr. L. J. 164 ...	916
Waliullah v. Ejaz Ali ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 22 ...	984
Waris Ali v. Emperor ...	s. c. 7 N. L. R. 180; 13 Cr. L. J. 167 ...	919
Wazir Muhammad v. Har Prasad ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 67 ...	613
Weston v. Peary Mohan Das ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 119 ...	335
Wilaiti Begam v. Fazal Husain Khan ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 148 ...	961
Yimani Sitarama Sastrulu v. Gora Ramudu ...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 588 ...	190
Zenab v. Shah Nawaz Khan ...	s. c. 47 P. R. 1912 ...	526
Zia-ud-din v. Gobind Ram ...	s. c. 76 P. R. 1911 ...	323

Comparative Table

OF

Cases Reported in Volume XIII of Indian Cases, 1912.

Cases marked with an asterisk (*) have not yet been reported elsewhere.

Pages of Vol. XIII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
1	Akuju Singh v. Jagannath Prasad Singh ...	*
5	Nand Ram v. Bhupal Singh ...	s. c. 8 A. L. J. 1294; 34 A. 126.
5	O'Brien v. Abdul Rahman ...	s. c. 28 P. W. R. 1912; 14 P. L. R. 1912.
7	Sinnachami v. Ramasamy Chettiar ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 463; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 539; 22 M. L. J. 85.
16	Muthuveerappa Chetti v. Ponnuswami Chetti ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 477; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 561; 22 M. L. J. 68.
18	Nura v. Nasir Din ...	s. c. 1 P. R. 1912 Rev.; 27 P. L. R. 1912; 5 P. W. R. 1912 Rev.
19	Shankar Lal v. Saruplal ...	s. c. 8 A. L. J. 1297; 34 A. 140.
20	Mohammad v. Sukha Singh ...	s. c. 36 P. W. R. 1912; 15 P. L. R. 1912.
21	Janki Prashad v. Thakur Das ...	*
23	Gokul Krishna Das v. Shashi Mukhi Dasi ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 299; 15 C. L. J. 204.
27	Muhammad v. Bakko ...	s. c. 19 P. R. 1912; 17 P. L. R. 1912; 39 P. W. R. 1912.
28	Amar Singh v. Husaina ...	s. c. 15 P. W. R. 1912; 18 P. L. R. 1912; 36 P. R. 1912.
29	Lalji Panday v. Berhamdeo Panday ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 89.
32	Muhammad Badar Khan v. Chiragh Shah ...	s. c. 16 P. L. R. 1912; 43 P. W. R. 1912.
34	Ganpat Rai v. Munni Lal ...	s. c. 9. A. L. J. 54; 34 A. 135.
38	Bala Proshad v. Partab Singh ...	*
39	Sengoda Goundan v. Varadappan ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 488; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 534; 22 M. L. J. 201
40	Nanji Koer v. Umatul Batul ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 653.
43	Kamini Moni Debi v. Khettra Mohan ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 660.
46	Ramnath Zutshi v. Secretary of State ...	*
48	Janki Das v. Tika Ram ...	*
50	Mehr Singh v. Devi Dial ...	s. c. 32 P. W. R. 1912; 19 P. L. R. 1912; 38 P. R. 1912.
58	Umar Din v. Budhe Khan ...	s. c. 23 P. W. R. 1912; 21 P. L. R. 1912.
59	Gokul Chand v. Shib Charan ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 574.
60	Qudrat Ullah v. Chunni Mal ...	*
62	Prem Singh v. Mokand Singh ...	s. c. 30 P. W. R. 1912; 22 P. L. R. 1912.
63	Biroo Gorain v. Jainurat Koer ...	*
68	Balmokand v. Aya Singh ...	s. c. 18 P. W. R. 1912; 26 P. L. R. 1912.
70	Sital Prosad v. Bajrangi Sahai ...	*
71	Vedachella Mudaliar v. Vijayaraghavachariar ...	s. c. 22 M. L. J. 219; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 523.
72	Sahib v. Usman ...	*
73	Shadi Khan v. Beebee Umdan Begam ...	s. c. 34 P. W. R. 1912.
77	Fateh Din v. Allah Ditta ...	s. c. 19 P. W. R. 1912.
78	Ramanathan Chettiar v. Sokkanatha Gounden ...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 559; 10 M. L. T. 532.
79	Jagar Nath v. Ramphal ...	s. c. 8 A. L. J. 1312; 34 A. 150.
80	Shaminath v. Ramjas ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 1; 34 A. 143.
81	Sriranga Bupala Balai Rao Garu v. Nayanim Bahadur Varu ...	*
82	Promoda Nath v. Alamgir Khan ...	*
83	Abdul Hakim Khan v. Chandan ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 4; 34 A. 165.

Pages of Vol. XIII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
85	Jagarnath Das v. Bibi Rupa ...	*
88	Raghunath Prosad v. Kashi Prosad ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 678.
91	Nataraja Iyer v. South India Bank ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 503; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 590; 22 M. L. J. 105.
92	Bishna v. Rattani ...	s. c. 20 P. W. R. 1912; 28 P. L. R. 1912.
94	Ganpat Prasad v. Sarju ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 8; 34 A. 168.
95	Gopal Row v. Veerappan Servaikaran ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 522; 22 M. L. J. 121.
96	Anatarazu Garu v. Narayanarazu ...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 531; 10 M. L. T. 504; 22 M. L. J. 108.
97	Raghunandan Prosad v. Ram Narain Singh ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 4.
99	Krishna Proshad v. Rabindra Nath ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 6.
101	Emperor v. Behari Lal ...	s. c. 8 A. L. J. 1324; 34 A. 146; 13 Cr. L. J. 8.
102	Babu Pershad v. Emperor ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 9.
108	Theophilus Ramappa, In re ...	s. c. 22 M. L. J. 112; 10 M. L. T. 517; 13 Cr. L. J. 15.
109	Emperor v. Ganda Singh ...	s. c. 20 P. L. R. 1912; 13 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 3.
110	Ponnusawmy Naidu v. Emperor ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 16; 13 Cr. L. J. 16.
111	Bala Pasban Kuldip Lal v. Gurwar Misser ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 1.
113	Gujjalapadi Subba Naidu v. Gujjalapadi Vencatasuba Naidu ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 33.
116	Abdul Ghani v. Abdul Majid ...	*
118	Narsing Narain Singh v. Ajodhya Prosad Singh ...	s c. 15 C. L. J. 110; 16 C. W. N. 256.
120	Imrit Chamar v. Sridhar Panday ...	s c. 15 C. L. J. 7.
123	Lakhi Chowdhuri v. Akloo Jha ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 639.
125	Debendra Nath v. Bindhubala Dasi ...	*
127	Sitaram v. Kulandi Patra ...	*
128	Sri Rang Behary Lal v. Ranchheyya Lal ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 439.
131	Khazan Singh v. Panna Lal ...	s. c. 9. A. L. J. 59.
133	Gunniah Vencatachalapathy Aiyar v. Perumal Aiyar	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 527; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 44.
134	Ishar Das v. Asaf Ali Khan ...	s. c. 9. A. L. J. 19; 34 A. 186.
136	Sukan Sahu v. Gangajali ...	*
138	Ram Sarup v. Jasoda Kunwar ...	s. c. 9. A. L. J. 72; 34 A. 158.
140	Rameswar Singh v. Tirpit Singh ...	*
142	Badri Das v. Ram Rikh ...	*
144	Jog Narain Singh v. Badri Das ...	*
147	Kuar Radhka Raman Parshad v. Gulzari Kuar ...	*
148	Mathura Prosad v. Rukmini Koer ...	*
150	Muhammad Husain v. Amir Haidar ...	*
152	Govinda Pillay v. Meenatchi Achi ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 493; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 563; 22 M. L. J. 204.
154	Bandey Ali v. Gokul Misir ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 111; 34 A. 172.
155	Nurullah Khan v. Hayatunnissa ...	*
156	Bihari Lal v. Durga Das ...	*
159	Chidrie Kristappa v. Siddamsetti Yamanappa ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 13; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 36.
160	Parry & Co. v. Vadivelu Pillay ...	*
161	Manindra Nath v. Mohanunda Roy ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 360.
167	Jiwa v. Buta ...	s. c. 21 P. W. R. 1912; 23 P. L. R. 1912; 26 P. R. 1912.
170	Prayag Narain Singh v. Sukdeo Narain Singh ...	*
171	Kariman v. Masiti ...	s. c. 29 P. W. R. 1912; 24 P. L. R. 1912.
172	Muhammad v. Imam Khatun ...	s. c. 25 P. L. R. 1912; 37 P. W. R. 1912.
174	Cheriyonni v. Nhera Poyile ...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 587; 10 M. L. T. 528; 22 M. L. J. 47.
175	Polina Achanna v. Madipati Venkataramana ...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 585; 10 M. L. T. 542; 22 M. L. J. 127.
176	Subiha Pillay v. Velappa Naicken ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 524; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 560; 22 M. L. J. 124.
177	Partab Singh v. Panjabu ...	s. c. 41 P. L. R 1912; 25 P. R. 1912; 125 P. W. R. 1912.
179	Mullaseri Gopala Menon v. Krisheki Kovilaknath Manavikraman ...	s. c 10 M. L. T. 568; 22 M. L. J. 146.

Pages of Vol. XIII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.		Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
180	Hazara Singh v. Harnam Singh	...	s. c. 22 P. W. R. 1912; 44 P. L. R. 1912; 24 P. R. 1912.
182	Katchalai Mudali v. Kuppanna Mudali	...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 41.
183	Debi Das v. Chairman of Motihari Municipality	...	*
183	Rangasamy Pillai v. Muthu Chidambara	...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 589.
184	Ujal Singh v. Debya Singh Sardar	...	*
185	Tara Chand Mukerji v. Afzal Beg	...	s. c. 8 A. L. J. 1329; 34 A. 184.
186	Dalgliesh v. Nandan Misser	...	*
187	Parbhu Narain Singh v. Lalji Singh	...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 79.
188	Jayanti Kistappa v. Jayanti Chinnapiya	...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 38.
189	Madan Mohun Dey v. Ganga Chandra Roy	...	*
190	Yimani Sitarama Sastrulu v. Gora Ramudu	...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 588.
191	Ghansham Singh v. Tej Bahadur Singh	...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 496.
192	Shukuruddin v. Hemangini Debi	...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 420.
193	Raghubir Sahi v. Protap Udoy Nath Sahi Deo	...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 294; 15 C. L. J. 145; 39 C. 241.
194	Lalman v. Kalka Prasad	...	s c. 8 A. L. J. 1326.
194	Rajendra Narain Saha v. Ashutosh Sanyal	...	*
197	Gendan Lal v. Babu Ram	...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 86.
200	Ramasami Reddi v. Lakshmiambal Ammal	...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 568.
201	Dwarka Nath v. Pralhad Ram	...	*
203	Variangattil Paksseri Raman Menon v. Sankarasubba Pattar	...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 37.
204	Subbaraya Iyer v. Ramasawmi Pillai	...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 18; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 9; 22 M. L. J. 166.
205	Kosuri Rajagopal v. Datla Radhayya	...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 14; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 39; 22 M. L. J. 159.
206	Ganpat v. Balmakund	..	*
209	Emperor v. Qadir Bakhsh	...	s. c. 3 P. R. 1912 Cr.; 9 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 17.
210	Imperator v. Rino	...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 123; 13 Cr. L. J. 18.
211	Muthuvarapu Seshiah v. Gatram Ramiah	...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 526; 13 Cr. L. J. 19.
213	Bodomal Kishinchand v. Emperor	...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 153; 13 Cr. L. J. 21.
213	Lakshminarain Apuram v. Emperor	...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 536; 13 Cr. L. J. 21.
214	Changal Halapoto v. Basarmal	...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 122; 13 Cr. L. J. 22.
215	Ismail Ghami Ammal v. Katima Rowther	...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 573; 22 M. L. J. 154; 13 Cr. L. J. 23.
215	Imperator v. Alu	...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 129; 13 Cr. L. J. 23.
216	Adala Yerrivadu, In re	...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 24; 13 Cr. L. J. 24.
217	McGill v. Byrne	...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 133; 13 Cr. L. J. 25.
218	Meher Sardar v. Emperor	...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 46; 13 Cr. L. J. 26.
219	Imperator v. Abdul Latif	...	s c. 5 S. L. R. 135; 13 Cr. L. J. 27.
220	Pir Bakhsh v. Emperor	...	s. c. 46 P. L. R. 1912; 13 Cr. L. J. 28.
220	Bakshali v. Emperor	...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 136; 13 Cr. L. J. 28.
221	Arulanantham Pillai, In re	...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 558; 10 M. L. T. 550; 22 M. L. J. 138; 13 Cr. L. J. 29.
222	Imperator v. Bhojraj	...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 137; 13 Cr. L. J. 30.
223	Karam Bahadin v. Emperor	...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 179; 13 Cr. L. J. 31.
224	Dur Mahomed v. Allahdino	...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 190; 13 Cr. L. J. 22.
225	Manghirmal v. Vithalram	...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 107.
232	Varadayya Chetty v. Munusami Chetty	...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 514
233	Karippala v. Muchai Manakal	...	s. c. 10 M. L. T 526; 22 M. L. J. 126.
234	Malappurath Paramadhathil v. Channazhi Krishnan		s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 537.
234	Mansoor v. Min Sahebdin	...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 125.
236	Kovummal Packrichi v. Kovummal Keenhacha	...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 538; 22 M. L. J. 122.
237	Mathradas v. Secretary of State	...	s. c. 5 S L. R. 140.
243	Abdul Karim v. Abdus Sobhan	...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 44; 39 C. 146.
244	Doulatram v. Halo Kanya	...	s. c. 5 S. L. R 155.
251	Komma Somakka v. Kodidala Pedda Ramiah	...	s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 519; 22 M. L. J. 193.
255	Sobhomal v. Pohumal	...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 168.
257	Jit Singh v. Maharaj Singh	...	s. c. 10 M. L. T 551; 16 C W. N. 122; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 29; 15 C. L. J. 78; 14 Bom. L. R. 30; 34 A. 57.

Pages of Vol. XIII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
260	Manghanmal v. Fernandez ...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 181.
261	Haddington Island Quarry Co. Ld. v. Alden Wesley	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 554.
264	Hemandas v. Chellaram ...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 184.
268	Sevugan Chetty v. Krishna Aiyangar ...	s. c. 10 M. L. T. 557; 22 M. L. J. 139.
269	Lekraj v. Harpal Singh ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 1; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 16; 9 A. L. J. 40; 16 C. W. N. 217; 15 C. L. J. 72; 14 Bom. L R. 33: 34 A. 65.
273	Emperor v. Andal ...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 174; 13 Cr. L. J. 33.
275	Assistant Sessions Judge of North Arcot v. Ramammal ...	s c. 10 M. L T. 563; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 3; 22 M. L. J. 141; 13 Cr. L. J. 35.
878	Subbiah Servai, In re ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 23; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 42; 22 M. L. J. 184; 13 Cr. L. J. 38.
279	Kader Sundar v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 69; 13 Cr. L. J. 39.
282	Arunachella Tevan, In re ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 20; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 35; 22 M. L. J. 186; 13 Cr. L. J. 42.
283	Ganesh Pershad v. Emperor ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 43.
284	Imperator v. Rajabali ...	s. c. 5 S. L. R. 173; 13 Cr. L. J. 44.
284	Ajodhia Parshad v. Ram Lal ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 124; 34 A. 197; 13 Cr. L. J. 44.
286	Muthiah Chetty, In re ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 21; 22 M. L. J. 181; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 455; 13 Cr. L. J. 46.
288	Surya v. Lachmi Narain ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 48.
289	Jotindra Mohan v. Kedar Nath ...	*
290	Ram Devi v. Shib Devi ...	s. c. 1 P. W. R. 1912.
297	Ram Gopal v. Agent, Bombay Baroda and Central India Railway Co. ...	*
298	Bela Singh v. Labh Singh ...	s. c. 48 P. W. R. 1912.
299	Salimuddi v. Uzir Mahomed ...	*
300	Velluvakandi Kunhi Pathumma v. Ponnanki Moossan Mammad ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 11.
304	Jamna Das v. Ram Autar ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 97; 11 M. L. T. 6; 9 A. L. J. 37; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 32; 15 C. L. J. 68; 14 Bom. L. R. 1; 21 M. L. J. 1158; 34 A. 63.
305	Kirpal Singh v. Sant Singh ...	s. c. 71 P. R. 1911; 30 P. L. R. 1912.
311	Ensar Ali v. Yakub Ali ...	*
312	Dhian Singh v. Dhian Singh ...	s. c. 51 P. W. R. 1912.
313	Adusupalli v. Marikurthu ...	s. c. 11 M L. T. 19; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 9; 22 M. L. J. 169.
313	Natesa Pillay v Munusawmy Naicken ...	*
314	Alim Ali v. Nabbu ...	s. c. 12 P. W. R. 1912.
315	Koipalli Ramiah v. Sajja Subbiah ...	s. c. 11 M. L T. 192; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 415.
316	Tari Baz Khan v. Fateh Khan ...	s. c. 29 P. R. 1912; 114 P. W. R. 1912.
318	Santu v. Arjan Das ...	s. c. 131 P. W. R. 1912.
319	Ghasi Ram v. Jai Lal ...	s. c. 60 P. W. R. 1912; 79 P. R. 1912.
320	Chittar Kuar v. Goura Kuar ...	s c. 9 A. L. J. 105; 34 A. 189.
322	Mutyala Papayya v. Kosuri Muramallu ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 11; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 7; 22 M. L. J. 156.
323	Zia-ud-din v. Gobind Ram ...	s. c. 76 P. R. 1911.
324	Kuppusami Iyengar v. Subbaraya Rowtha Minda Nainar ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 15; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 1; 22 M. L. J. 161.
326	Nathu Ram v. Karmon ...	s. c. 40 P. L. R. 1912; 115 P. W. R. 1912.
326	Sham Lal v. Hazari Mal ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 451.
328	Brindarani Choudhrani v. Annoda Mohan Ray ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 94.
329	Gopal Chandra Chakrabarty v. Radharaman Das Babaji ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 108.
330	Stamp Act, In re ...	s. c. 38 P. L. R. 1912.
331	Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 74; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 22; 9 A. L. J. 33; 15 C. L. J. 69; 14 Bom. L. R. 5; 39 C. 232: 21 M. L. J. 1156.

Pages of Vol. XIII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
332	Upendra Nath Ghosh v Chairman of the Calcutta Corporation ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 116.
335	Weston v. Peary Mohan Das ...	s c. 16 C. W. N. 119.
336	Lazarannessa Bibi v. Mahomed Jaffar ...	*
336	Lakhi Kant Das v. Balabhadra Prosad Das ...	*
337	Pran Singh v. Janardan Singh ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 541.
343	Tulsi v. Madho Ram ...	s. c. 30 P. R. 1912; 133 P. W. R. 1912.
344	Muhammad Umar Khan v. Muhammad Niazuddin Khan ...	s. c. 6 P. W. R. 1912; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 77; 11 M. L. T. 76; 9 A. L. J. 137; 15 C. L. J. 172; 12 P. L. R. 1912; 22 M. L. J. 240; 14 Bom. L. R. 182; 16 C. W. N. 458; 39 C. 418.
348	Devta Jamlu v. Hari Das ...	s. c. 39 P. L. R. 1912; 47 P. W. R. 1912.
349	Ramdeo Prosad Singh v. Gopi Koeri ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 383; 15 C. L. J. 256.
350	Abdullah Beg v. Abdul Hasan ...	*
351	Janki Koeri v. Basdeo Ojha ...	*
353	Mahammad Mehdi Hassan Khan v. Sheoshankar Prasad Singh ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 552; 39 C. 353.
363	Ghisu v. Ram Ballabh ...	*
364	Abdul Karim v. Abdul Rahman ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 618; 15 C. L. J. 672.
365	Raghubar Dayal Sukul v. Jadu Nandan Missir ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 89; 16 C. W. N. 736.
370	Mcinerny v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 38 C. 797.
373	Mg Po Thwe v. Ma Baw ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 272.
374	Jasoda Dassi v. Rameswari Dassi ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 603.
375	Nga Paw v. Nga Lu Gale ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 265.
376	Nagendra Kumar Nath v. Hara Chandra Poddar ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 646.
377	Hedlot Khasia v. Ka Ran Khasiani ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 241.
384	Mutsadi Lal v. Mule Mal ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 95; 34 A. 205.
385	Nga Pyan v. Emperor ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 267; 13 Cr. L. J. 49.
386	Nga Po Yon v. Mohr Brothers and Co. Ld. ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 279; 6 L. B. R. 38; 13 Cr.L.J.50.
388	Madar Sahib v. Emperor ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 259; 13 Cr. L. J. 52.
389	Mi Hla So v. Nga Than ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 268; 13 Cr. L J. 53.
390	Nga Po Chein v. Emperor ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 261; 13 Cr. L. J. 54.
391	Dragon v. Emelie Mi Taik Dragon ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 269; 13 Cr. L. J. 55.
392	Nga Lu Pe v. Emperor ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T 262; 13 Cr. L. J. 56.
394	Emperor v. Nga Sit Cho ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 271; 13 Cr. L. J. 58.
395	Nga Po Shat v. Emperor ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 263; 13 Cr. L. J. 59.
397	Rudra Prosad, In re ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 606; 13 Cr. L. J. 61.
398	Emperor v. Nga Po Sin ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 270; 13 Cr. L. J 62.
398	Jang Bahadur Lal v. Emperor ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 652; 13 Cr. L. J. 62.
401	Nathmal Das v. Dalip Singh ...	*
401	Rukman Devi v. Sain Das ...	s. c. 45 P. W. R. 1912.
403	Gangadhar Das v. Bhikari Charan Das ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 227.
404	Sarvai Begam v. Haider Shah ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 12.
405	Sawan Singh v. Jafar Khan ...	s. c. 7 P. W. R. 1912; 13 P. L. R. 1912; 39 P. R. 1912.
407	Koilash Chandra v. Gajendra Nath ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 1.
408	Khair Ahmad v. Mir Ahmad Ullah ...	s. c. 52 P. W. R. 1912.
409	Raja v. Jannat Bibi ...	s. c. 79 P. W. R. 1912; 40 P. R. 1912.
414	Narsingh Narain v. Jahi Mistry ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 3.
416	Kashmire v. Ramsaran ...	*
417	Blanchett v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 173.
420	Hardey Narain v. Mrs. Powell ...	*
421	Dasaundhi v. Chanda Singh ...	s. c. 85 P. W. R. 1912; 45 P. R. 1912.
423	Atul Chandra Dutt v. Eson Ali ...	*
424	Kutubullah Sarkar v. Durga Charan ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 396.
425	Madan Mohan v. Manmatha Nath Bose ...	*
427	Naba v. Piara Mal ...	s. c. 70 P. W. R. 1912; 44 P. R. 1912.
428	Lal Hussain v. Hassa Khan ...	s. c. 68 P. W. R. 1912.
429	Matigara Coal Co. Ltd. v. Shragers, Ltd. ...	s. c. 38 C. 824.

Pages of Vol. XIII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
430	Shahbaz Khan v. Fazal Din. ...	s. c. 74 P. W. R. 1912; 43 P. R. 1912.
433	Sharkey v. Jerry Allard ...	s. c. 78 P. W. R. 1912.
434	Mahomed Farid v. Mahomed Abdul Gafur ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 14.
436	Ram Prasad v. Bedo ...	*
440	Ram Narain Singh v. Odindra Nath ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 17
444	Sundar Singh v. Har Kaur ...	s. c. 75 P. W. R. 1912; 77 P. L. R. 1912.
445	Jan Khan v. Ahmad ...	s. c. 24 P. W. R. 1912.
447	Heta Ram v. Chandan ...	s. c. 49 P. W. R. 1912.
448	Kuri v. Des Raj ...	s. c. 57 P. W. R. 1912.
449	Raj Kumar Sarkar v. Rajani Kanta Chakravarti ...	*
450	Nallasawmi Pillai v. Ramasawmi Pillay ...	*
451	Sharashi Mohan Roy v. Ramesh Charan Roy ...	*
453	Albrecht v. Bathee Jellamma ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 53; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 53; 22 M. L. J. 247.
455	Narak Lal v. Thagoo Lal ...	*
457	Hari Narayan Chatterje v. Iswar Chandra Chatterjee ...	*
458	Anantanarayana Iyer v. Savitri Ammal ...	(1912) 1. M. W. N. 59; 11 M. L. T. 63; 22 M. L. J. 231.
462	Rudra Pratab Sahi v. Gajadhar Singh ...	s. c. 14 O. C. 287.
463	Venkatesa Iyengar v. Kamalammal ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 65; 11 M. L. T. 84; 22 M. L. J. 212.
466	Bhagannah v. Chandi Singh ...	s. c. 14 O. C. 295.
467	Malla Veeranna v. Malla Chelamayya ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 68.
468	Jesa Ram v. Thakar Das ...	s. c. 197 P. W. R. 1911.
469	Maddaniah v. Bhimappa ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 72.
470	Krishna Das v. Land Acquisition Collector, Pabna ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 327.
471	Govinda Naicken v. Apathshaya Iyer ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 87; 11 M. L. T. 87; 22 M. L. J. 257.
473	Banke Behari Lal v. Ahlad Singh ...	*
475	Pugalia Vettorammal v. Vettor Goundan ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 89; 11 M. L. T. 103.
481	Somaruddi Mollah v. Port Canning and Land Improvement Co., Ltd. ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 225.
482	Tek Chand v. Gopal Devi ...	s. c. 46 P. R. 1912.
486	Tadikonda Venkaya v. Kodali Venkatasubbamma ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 49.
487	Nalini Behari Roy v. Fulmani Dasi ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 421; 15 C. L. J. 388.
489	Sankara Ramiah v. Sankara Subbamiah ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 70.
490	Pancham Singh v. Ganga Bakhsh Singh ...	*
491	Arnold v. Arnold ...	s. c. 38 C. 907.
493	Jagan Nath v. Debi Sahay ...	*
495	Dibakar Nag v. Mrittunjoy Bhatacharya ...	*
495	Bhagan v. Munnu ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 122.
498	Raziuddin Hussain v. Taharat Hussain ...	*
500	Raghubir Singh v. Umrao Singh ...	*
504	Jafri Begam v. Ghasu Khan ...	*
506	Birjnath Sarain v. Byrne ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 253.
508	Maharani v. Ram Adhar ...	*
509	Janki Das v. Bengal Nagpur Railway Company ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 211; 16 C. W. N. 356.
511	Ganpat Rai v. Sardara ...	s. c. 67 P. W. R. 1912.
512	Dukhimoni Dasi v. Tulsi Charan ...	*
513	Birendra Kishore v. Akram Ali ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 304; 15 C. L. J. 194; 39 C.
517	Birendra Kishore v. Dillwar Ali ...	*
518	Birendra Kishore v. Roshan Khan ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 203; 39 C. 453.
519	Asalat Khan v. Birendra Kishore ...	*
520	Badruddin Hasan v. Amir Begam ...	s. c. 14 O. C. 308.
526	Zenab v. Shah Nawaz Khan ...	s. c. 47 P. R. 1912.
529	Bengal Nagpur Railway Co. Ld. v. Ram Protap Ghaneswam Das ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 360; 15 C. L. J. 215
530	Champa Lal v. Sham Sundar Mali ...	*
531	Ramchandra Das v. Farzand Ali Khan ...	s. c. 9 A L. J. 188; 34 A. 253.

Pages of Vol. XIII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
332	Upendra Nath Ghosh v Chairman of the Calcutta Corporation ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 116.
335	Weston v. Peary Mohan Das ...	s c. 16 C. W. N. 119.
336	Lazarannessa Bibi v. Mahomed Jaffar ...	*
336	Lakhi Kant Das v. Balabhadra Prosad Das ...	*
337	Pran Singh v. Janardan Singh ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 541.
343	Tulsi v. Madho Ram ...	s. c. 30 P. R. 1912; 133 P. W. R. 1912.
344	Muhammad Umar Khan v. Muhammad Niazuddin Khan ...	s. c. 6 P. W. R. 1912; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 77; 11 M. L. T. 76; 9 A. L. J. 137; 15 C. L. J. 172; 12 P. L. R. 1912; 22 M. L. J. 240; 14 Bom. L. R. 182; 16 C. W. N. 458; 39 C. 418.
348	Devta Jamlu v. Hari Das ...	s. c. 39 P. L. R. 1912; 47 P. W. R. 1912.
349	Ramdeo Prosad Singh v. Gopi Koeri ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 383; 15 C. L. J. 256.
350	Abdullah Beg v. Abdul Hasan ...	*
351	Janki Koeri v. Basdeo Ojha ...	*
353	Mahammad Mehdi Hassan Khan v. Sheoshankar Prasad Singh ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 552; 39 C. 353.
363	Ghisu v. Ram Ballabh ...	*
364	Abdul Karim v. Abdul Rahman ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 618; 15 C. L. J. 672.
365	Raghubar Dayal Sukul v. Jadu Nandan Missir ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 89; 16 C. W. N. 736.
370	Mcinerny v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 38 C. 797.
373	Mg Po Thwe v. Ma Baw ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 272.
374	Jasoda Dassi v. Rameswari Dassi ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 603.
375	Nga Paw v. Nga Lu Gale ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 265.
376	Nagendra Kumar Nath v. Hara Chandra Poddar ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 646.
377	Hedlot Khasia v. Ka Ran Khasiani ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 241.
384	Mutsadi Lal v. Mule Mal ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 95; 34 A. 205.
385	Nga Pyan v. Emperor ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 267; 13 Cr. L. J. 49.
386	Nga Po Yon v. Mohr Brothers and Co. Ld. ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 279; 6 L. B. R. 38; 13 Cr.L.J.50.
388	Madar Sahib v. Emperor ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 259; 13 Cr. L. J. 52.
389	Mi Hla So v. Nga Than ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 268; 13 Cr. L J. 53.
390	Nga Po Chein v. Emperor ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 261; 13 Cr. L. J. 54.
391	Dragon v. Emelie Mi Taik Dragon ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 269. 13 Cr. L. J. 55.
392	Nga Lu Pe v. Emperor ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T 262; 13 Cr. L. J. 56.
394	Emperor v. Nga Sit Cho ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 271; 13 Cr. L. J. 58.
395	Nga Po Shat v. Emperor ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 263; 13 Cr. L. J. 59.
397	Rudra Prosad, In re ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 606; 13 Cr. L. J. 61.
398	Emperor v. Nga Po Sin ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 270; 13 Cr. L. J 62.
398	Jang Bahadur Lal v. Emperor ...	s. c. 14 C. L. J. 652; 13 Cr. L. J. 62.
401	Nathmal Das v. Dalip Singh ...	*
401	Rukman Devi v. Sain Das ...	s. c. 45 P. W. R. 1912.
403	Gangadhar Das v. Bhikari Charan Das ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 227.
404	Sarvai Begam v. Haider Shah ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 12.
405	Sawan Singh v. Jafar Khan ...	s. c. 7 P. W. R. 1912; 13 P. L. R. 1912; 39 P. R. 1912.
407	Koilash Chandra v. Gajendra Nath ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 1.
408	Khair Ahmad v. Mir Ahmad Ullah ...	s. c. 52 P. W. R. 1912.
409	Raja v. Jannat Bibi ...	s. c. 79 P. W. R. 1912; 40 P. R. 1912.
414	Narsingh Narain v. Jahi Mistry ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 3.
416	Kashmire v. Ramsaran ...	*
417	Blanchett v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 173.
420	Hardey Narain v. Mrs. Powell ...	*
421	Dasaundhi v. Chanda Singh ...	s. c. 85 P. W. R. 1912; 45 P. R. 1912.
423	Atul Chandra Dutt v. Eson Ali ...	*
424	Kutubullah Sarkar v. Durga Charan ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 396.
425	Madan Mohan v. Manmatha Nath Bose ...	*
427	Naba v. Piara Mal ...	s. c. 70 P. W. R. 1912; 44 P. R. 1912.
428	Lal Hussain v. Hassa Khan ...	s. c. 68 P. W. R. 1912.
429	Matigara Coal Co. Ltd. v. Shragers, Ltd. ...	s. c. 38 C. 824.

Pages of Vol. XIII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
430	Shahbaz Khan v. Fazal Din. ...	s. c. 74 P. W. R. 1912; 43 P. R. 1912.
433	Sharkey v. Jerry Allard ...	s. c. 78 P. W. R. 1912.
434	Mahomed Farid v. Mahomed Abdul Gafur ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 14.
436	Ram Prasad v. Bedo ...	*
440	Ram Narain Singh v. Odindra Nath ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 17
444	Sundar Singh v. Har Kaur ...	s. c. 75 P. W. R. 1912; 77 P. L. R. 1912.
445	Jan Khan v. Ahmad ...	s. c. 24 P. W. R. 1912.
447	Heta Ram v. Chandan ...	s. c. 49 P. W. R. 1912.
448	Kuri v. Des Raj ...	s. c. 57 P. W. R. 1912.
449	Raj Kumar Sarkar v. Rajani Kanta Chakravarti ...	*
450	Nallasawmi Pillai v. Ramasawmi Pillay ...	*
451	Sharashi Mohan Roy v. Ramesh Charan Roy ...	*
453	Albrecht v. Bathee Jellamma ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 53; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 53; 22 M. L. J. 247.
455	Narak Lal v. Thagoo Lal ...	*
457	Hari Narayan Chatterje v. Iswar Chandra Chatterjee ...	*
458	Anantanarayana Iyer v. Savitri Ammal ...	(1912) 1. M. W. N. 59; 11 M. L. T. 63; 22 M. L. J. 231.
462	Rudra Pratab Sahi v. Gajadhar Singh ...	s. c. 14 O. C. 287.
463	Venkatesa Iyengar v. Kamalammal ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 65; 11 M. L. T. 84; 22 M. L. J. 212.
466	Bhagannah v. Chandi Singh ...	s. c. 14 O. C. 295.
467	Malla Veeranna v. Malla Chelamayya ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 68.
468	Jesa Ram v. Thakar Das ...	s. c. 197 P. W. R. 1911.
469	Maddaniah v. Bhimappa ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 72.
470	Krishna Das v. Land Acquisition Collector, Pabna ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 327.
471	Govinda Naicken v. Apathshaya Iyer ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 87; 11 M. L. T. 87; 22 M. L. J. 257.
473	Banke Behari Lal v. Ahlad Singh ...	*
475	Pugalia Vettorammal v. Vettor Goundan ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 89; 11 M. L. T. 103.
481	Somaruddi Mollah v. Port Canning and Land Improvement Co., Ltd. ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 225.
482	Tek Chand v. Gopal Devi ...	s. c. 46 P. R. 1912.
486	Tadikonda Venkaya v. Kodali Venkatasubbamma ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 49.
487	Nalini Behari Roy v. Fulmani Dasi ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 421; 15 C. L. J. 388.
489	Sankara Ramiah v. Sankara Subbamiah ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 70.
490	Pancham Singh v. Ganga Bakhsh Singh ...	*
491	Arnold v. Arnold ...	s. c. 38 C. 907.
493	Jagan Nath v. Debi Sahay ...	*
495	Dibakar Nag v. Mrittunjoy Bhatacharya ...	*
495	Bhagan v. Munnu ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 122.
498	Raziuddin Hussain v. Taharat Hussain ...	*
500	Raghubir Singh v. Umrao Singh ...	*
504	Jafri Begam v. Ghasu Khan ...	*
506	Birjnath Sarain v. Byrne ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 253.
508	Maharani v. Ram Adhar ...	*
509	Janki Das v. Bengal Nagpur Railway Company ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 211; 16 C. W. N. 356.
511	Ganpat Rai v. Sardara ...	s. c. 67 P. W. R. 1912.
512	Dukhimoni Dasi v. Tulsi Charan ...	*
513	Birendra Kishore v. Akram Ali ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 304; 15 C. L. J. 194; 39 C.
517	Birendra Kishore v. Dillwar Ali ...	*
518	Birendra Kishore v. Roshan Khan ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 203; 39 C. 453.
519	Asalat Khan v. Birendra Kishore ...	*
520	Badruddin Hasan v. Amir Begam ...	s. c. 14 O. C. 308.
526	Zenab v. Shah Nawaz Khan ...	s. c. 47 P. R. 1912.
529	Bengal Nagpur Railway Co. Ld. v. Ram Protap Ghaneswam Das ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 360; 15 C. L. J. 215
530	Champa Lal v. Sham Sundar Mali ...	*
531	Ramchandra Das v. Farzand Ali Khan ...	s. c. 9 A L. J. 188; 34 A. 253.

Pages Vol. XIII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
535	Kishori Lal v. Todar Singh ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 244.
539	Ahmad Khan v. Ratan Chand ...	s. c. 53 P. W. R. 1912; 50 P. R. 1912.
541	Jnan Chandra Nag Das v. Lochh Mohan ...	*
542	Hewa Mal v. Karunamoy Gupta ...	*
544	Durga Shankar v. Ram Ratan ...	*
547	Binda Prasad v. Gaya Prasad Singh ...	*
549	Jiwan v. Dit ...	s. c. 103 P. W. R. 1912; 49 P. R. 1912.
550	Nihal Kaur v. Secretary of State ...	*
554	Raghunandan Singh v. Jarao ...	*
556	Miran Bakhsh v. Goude Ram ...	s. c. 89 P. W. R. 1912.
559	Kiman v. Sultani Mal ...	s. c. 82 P. W. R. 1912.
561	Fatteh Chand v. Kirpa Singh ...	s. c. 76 P. W. R. 1912; 48 P. R. 1912.
563	Nihal Chand v. Abdullah ...	*
564	Nihal Devi v. Kishore Chand ...	s. c. 51 P. R. 1912.
566	Lalu Ram v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 117.
568	Ram Narain v. Durga Dat ...	*
571	Ram Chand v. Dewan Chand ..	*
573	Rashik Lal v. Ram Narain ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 198; 34 A. 273.
577	Gopessuar Dutt v. Bissessur Dutt ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 265; 39 C. 245.
594	Karim Khan v. Salamuddi ...	*
595	Manikka Mudeliar v. Devasi Kamoni Pillai ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 158.
596	Satya Sri Ghoshal v. Kartik Chandra Das ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 227; 16 C. W. N. 418.
597	Ashutosh Chatterjee v. Sudhindra Chandra Moulick	*
598	Sheonandan Singh v. Deo Saran Singh ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 647.
599	Ambalam Pakkiya Udayan v. J. M. Bathe ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. M. 152.
603	Ram Pal Singh v. Nandlal Marwari ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 346.
604	Rashmohini Dasi v. Debendra Nath Singh ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 604.
605	Chag Mull v. Jai Narain ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 239.
606	Mohoram Sheikh Chaprasi v. Telamuddin Khan ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 220; 16 C. W. N. 567.
609	Jafar Husain v. Husan Ara Begam ...	*
613	Wazir Mohammad v. Har Prasad ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 67.
617	H. W. G. v. Mrs. H. W. G. ...	*
618	Chellammal v. Krishnasawmy Iyer ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 166.
619	Jogal Kishore v. Ram Narain ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 226; 34 A. 268.
621	Bakhtawari v. Shibban Lal ...	s. c. 69 P. W. R. 1912; 121 P. L. R. 1912.
624	Muna v. Mansa Ram ...	*
625	Gopi Narain v. Kunj Behari Lal ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 311.
629	Indar Dawan Singh v. Deputy Commissioner, Fyzabad ...	*
631	Ram Gopal v. Jagmohan Singh ...	*
632	Raja Dei v. Umed Singh ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 158; 34 A. 207.
634	Chhotey Lal v. Har Narain. ...	*
636	Mehdi Lal v. Grant ...	*
637	Janki Pershad v. Yahia Hossain ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 211; 16 C. W. N. 356.
640	Velappa Gownden, In re ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 196.
641	Kolpati Kuar v. Rajdhari Lal ...	*
642	Abhai Charan Chakrawati v. Kesho Das ...	*
642	Sanka Aiyar v. Subbiah Iyer ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 361.
643	Jainath Pathak v. Kalka Upadhya ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 238; 34 A. 285.
644	Maghli v. Ladli ...	*
645	Sat Narain v. Badri Nath ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 211.
646	Oudh Bihari Pande v. Mahadeo Sahi ...	*
647	Deo Raj v. Govind Parshad ...	s. c. 55 P. W. R. 1912.
648	Krishnasawmi Doss, In re ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 167; 11 M. L. T. 182.
649	Akilandam Pillai v. Chinnasawmi Moopan ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 172; 11 M. L. T. 201.
650	Karam Chand v. Sultan ...	s. c. 72 P. W. R. 1912.
651	Pitchuvier v. Perumal Konan ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 160; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 163.
653	Jadunandan Prosad Singha v. Koer Kallyar Singh	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 61; 16 C. W. N. 612.
657	Baij Nath v. Jang Bahadur ...	*
659	Thiruvengadam Pillai v. Doridla Subbiah ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 144; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 176.

Pages of Vol. XIII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
660	Veerappa Chettyar, In re ...	*
661	Ganda Singh v. Nathu Ram ...	s. c. 77 P. W. R. 1912.
662	Sheru v. Jawahir Singh ...	*
665	Chajju Mal v. Telu Mal ...	s.c. 61 P. W. R. 1912; 10 P. L. R. 1912; 53 P. R. 1912.
667	Megha Ram v. Makhan Lal ...	*
670	Tota Singh v. Partap Singh ...	*
671	Jagat Chandra Majumdar v. Munsef Ali Sarkar ...	*
673	Lal Gopal Datta Chowdhury v. Khorooriah Majozilla Zemindary Syndicate, Ld. ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 297.
678	Imambandi v. Matasuddi ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 621.
686	Prahlad Chandra v. Behari Lal Mookerjee ...	*
688	Annada Prosad v. Sham Sundar ...	*
689	Moula Bux v. Ajahar Molla ...	*
690	Kalimuddin v. Mahurni ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 382; 16 C. W. N. 662.
691	Bhagabati Koer v. Sohodra Koer ...	*
694	Atal Bajadar v. Madan Dai ...	*
694	Gul Mahomed v. Abdul Jubbar ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 498; 15 C. L. J. 683.
695	Ibrahim Ali Khan v. Mahammad Ahsan Ullah ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 225; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 316; 50 P. W. R. 1912; 15 C. L. J. 352; 9 A. L. J. 390; 14 Bom. L. R. 270; 22 M. L. J. 478; 16 C. W. N. 625.
698	Radha Kant Chakravarti v. Ramananda Shaha ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 475; 15 C. L. J. 369.
702	Chandra Kumar v. Ram Din ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 251; 16 C. W. N. 496.
705	Angulia & Co. v. Sassoon & Co. ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 593.
708	Adhari Duboin v. Sheodihal Pande ...	*
709	Fakir Chand v. Ram Chand ...	s. c. 62 P. W. R. 1912.
711	Harnamon v. Santa Singh ...	s. c. 98 P. W. R. 1912.
714	Lal Singh v. Pala Singh ...	s. c. 66 P. W. R. 1912.
716	Hansraj v. Narain Chand ...	s. c. 86 P. R. 1911.
717	Ramadhar v. Sheo Narain ...	*
719	Hari Singh v. Bholi ...	s. c. 69 P. W. R. 1912; 119 P. L. R. 1912.
720	Abdul Rahman v. Bhagwan Das ...	s. c. 59 P. W. R. 1912; 120 P. L. R. 1912.
721	Peary Mohan Das v. Weston ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 145; 13 Cr. L. J. 65.
776	Amodini Dassee v. Darson Ghose ...	s. c. 38 C. 828; 13 Cr. L. J. 120.
777	Aiya Chalamaya v. Emperor ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 50; 13 Cr. L. J. 121.
778	Nga Pu v. Emperor ...	s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 270; 13 Cr. L. J. 122.
778	Balmakund v. Emperor ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 97; 34 A. 192; 13 Cr. L. J. 122.
780	Emperor v. Arumukham Pillai ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 69; 13 Cr. L. J. 124.
781	Sandyal v. Kunjeswar Misra ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 143; 13 Cr. L. J. 125.
781	Manni Ghasi v. Emperor ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 49; 13 Cr. L. J. 125.
782	Dewat Singh v. Emperor ...	s. c. 11 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 4 P. R. 1912 Cr.; 13 Cr. L J. 126.
782	Kamini Mohan Das v. Harendra Kumar ...	s. c. 38 C. 876; 13 Cr. L. J. 126.
783	Piamullah v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 238, 13 Cr. L. J. 127.
785	Banbihari Kapur v. Khetra Pal Singh Roy ...	s. c. 38 C. 923; 16 C. W. N. 259.
788	Tej Mal v. Jagapilla Papayamma ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 25; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 50; 22 M. L. J. 225.
790	Fateh Din v. Nikka ...	s. c. 81 P. R. 1911.
791	Cheria Imbichi Bibee v. Syed Ali ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 45.
792	Shah Muhammad v. Piara Mal ...	s. c. 84 P. R. 1911.
795	Adusupatti Venkata Rao v. Swami Pillai ...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 27; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 56; 22 M. L. J. 228.
796	Dan Singh v. Phangan Singh ...	s. c. 83 P. R. 1911.
799	Ramaswami Ayengar v. Muthuswami Aiyer ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 42.
800	Umar Ali v. Nasib-un-nissa ...	s. c. 82 P. R. 1911.
802	Seeni Ammal v. Angamuttu Nadar ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 99.
802	Pathana v. Naba ...	s. c. 87 P. R. 1911.
803	Brij Mohan Lal v. Munni Bibi ...	s. c. 14 O. C. 343.
808	Aman-ullah v. Abdul Ghafur ...	s. c. 85 P. R. 1911.
809	Parmeshar Dat v. Mohammad Abul Hasan Khan ...	s. c. 14 O. C. 335.

Pages of Vol. XIII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.		Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
812	Karm Ilahi v. Sultan Alam	...	s. c. 79 P. R. 1911.
813	Ajodhya Prasad v. Jagdish Singh	...	s. c. 14 O. C. 321.
815	Bahawal v. Nurkhan	...	s. c. 1 P. W. R. 1912, Rev.
816	Mahbub Bakhsh v. Abdul Rahman	...	s. c. 4 P. W. R. 1912; 84 P. L. R. 1912.
817	Perumal Naicken, In re	...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 193; 13 Cr. L. J. 129.
819	Chockalingam Pillai, In re	...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 162; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 119; 13 Cr. L. J. 131.
824	Isa v. Ranon	...	s. c. 1 P. W. R. 1912 Cr; 83 P. L. R. 1912; 13 Cr. L. J. 136.
825	Emperor v. Balwant Kondo Patole	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 41; 13 Cr. L. J. 137.
826	Deputy Superintendent v. Chulhan Ahir	...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 263; 13 Cr. L. J. 138.
827	Emperor v. Hari Govind Limaye	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 40; 13 Cr. L. J. 139.
828	Gorle Kandungadu, In re	...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 97; 13 Cr. L. J. 140.
829	Abdul Ghafoor v. Raza Husain	...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 231; 34 A. 267; 13 Cr. L. J. 141.
829	Bansi v. Emperor	...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 162; 34 A. 210; 13 Cr. L. J. 141.
830	Baisnab Charan Manjhi v. Gati Nath Munshi	...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 384; 39 C. 469; 13 Cr. L. J. 142.
831	Gurusawmy Nadan v. Emperor	...	s c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 47; 11 M. L. T. 32; 22 M. L. J. 251; 13 Cr. L. J. 143.
832	Kolli Appiah, In re	...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 191; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 400; 13 Cr. L. J. 144.
832	Emperor v. Andiasivaloo Naidoo	...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 84; 13 Cr. L. J. 144.
833	Public Prosecutor v. Mushunooru Suryanarayanamoorty	...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 136; 11 M. L. T. 127; 13 Cr. L. J. 145.
844	Alia Rai v. Jhingur Tewari	...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 426; 15 C. L. J. 403, 39 C. 476; 13 Cr. L. J. 156.
847	Musai v. Emperor		s. c. 13 Cr. L J. 159.
849	Govind Baba Gujar v. Shrimant Jijibai Saheb	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 9: 36 B. 189.
850	Sarkhara v. Nawab	...	s. c. 11 P. W. R. 1912.
851	Gopal Ghela v. Rajaram Amtha	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 14.
852	Lehna Singh v. Santa Singh	...	s. c. 9 P. W. R. 1912.
853	Velchand Chhaganlal v. Lieut. A. Flagg	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 18; 36 B. 164.
855	Ramji Das v. Shankar Das	...	s. c. 10 P. W. R. 1912.
855	Pandurang Bhiwaji v. Ganga Ram Ganu	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 22; 36 B. 203.
857	Duni v. Ali Mohammad	...	s. c. 8 P. W. R. 1912.
858	Abdul Kayam v. Bahadur Vithoba	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 26.
859	Nihal Chand v. Chanda Singh	...	s. c. 3 P. W. R. 1912; 82 P. L. R. 1912.
860	Sreenivasier v. Balakrishna Devai	...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 150; 11 M. L. T. 156; 22 M. L. J. 187.
861	Khannu v. Fateh Khan	...	s. c. 5 P. W. R. 1912.
862	Bhaosingh v. Hazari	...	s. c. 7 N. L. R. 179.
863	Sundar Singh v. Deva Singh	...	s. c. 2 P. W. R. 1912; 85 P. L. R. 1912.
864	Devidas v. Ramlal	...	s. c. 7 N. L. R. 190
865	Lahri v. Shiv Nath	...	s. c. 2 P.W. R. 1912, Rev.
866	Gadiyam Narayudu v. Mallavarapu Venkamma	...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 121; 22 M. L. J. 265.
868	N. C. Sircar v. Baraboni Coal Concern, Ld.	...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 289.
870	Allareddi Subbamma v. Nallapareddi	...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 124; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 178; 22 M. L. J. 260.
873	Badri Das v. Santa Singh	...	s. c. 3 P. R. 1912; 44 P. W. R. 1912.
874	Nga Paw E v. Nga Sin	...	s. c. U. B. R. (1911) I, 92.
877	Chet Singh v. Allahditta	...	s. c. 31 P. W. R. 1912; 47 P. L. R. 1912.
879	Kedar Nath v. Manu Bibi	...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 247.
882	Mohammad Hashim Ali Khan v. Sadiq Husain Khan		s. c. 14 O. C. 356.
898	Subhadra Koer v. Dhajadhari Gossain	...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 142; 16 C. W. N. 444.
900	Gopal Lal v. Bahorni	...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 120.
902	Saroop Chand v. Tularam	...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 17.
903	Chalasamy Ramiah v. Chalasamy Ramaswami	...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 155; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 199.
904	Shrikison v. Chatarsingh	...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 18.
906	Valliammai Achi v. Nataraja Pillay	...	s. c. 11 M. L. T. 157; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 198.
907	Gouri Dutt v. Amar Chand	...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 49.
909	Ganeshdas v. Shankar	...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 22.
912	Ali Mohammad v. Nayan Rajah Bhuiya	...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 122; 16 C. W. N. 620 note.

Pages of Vol. XIII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
913	Satish Chandra Sarkar v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 499; 15 C. L. J. 396; 39 C. 454; 13 Cr. L. J. 161.
914	Me Tha v. Nga San E ...	s. c. U. B. R. (1911), I, 90; 13 Cr. L. J. 162.
916	Vithoo v. Emperor ...	s. c. 7 N. L. R. 185; 13 Cr. L. J. 164.
919	Waris Ali v. Emperor ...	s. c. 7 N. L. R. 180; 13 Cr. L. J. 167.
921	Emperor v. Ram Naresh Singh ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 51; 34 A. 118; 13 Cr. L. J. 169.
922	Emperor v. Murli Singh ...	s. c. 33 A. 775; 13 Cr. L. J. 170.
924	Emperor v. Sadapur ...	s. c. 1 P. R. 1912 Cr.; 15 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 37 P. L. R. 1912; 13 Cr. L. J. 172.
925	Tunoo Mia v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 502; 15 C. L. J. 399; 39 C. 348; 13 Cr. L. J. 173.
927	Bhoja Ram v. Emperor ...	s. c. 21 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 115 P. L. R. 1912; 13 Cr. L. J. 175.
927	Rasoolkhan Saheb v. Emperor ...	s. c. (1912) 1 M. W. N. 85; 13 Cr. L. J. 175.
928	Balmokand v. Nanak Chand ...	s. c. 3 P. W. R 1912 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 176.
929	Mewa Lal v. Ahmad Ali ...	s. c. 9 A L. J. 17.
930	Fatma v. Imtiazi Jan ...	s. c. 1 P. R. 1912; 33 P. W. R. 1912.
939	Kanhai Lal v. Hulas Singh ...	s c. 9 A. L. J. 29.
941	Mohadeo Pershad v. Pachkari ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 322.
943	Balmakund v. Kundan Lal ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 15.
943	Bhuttacharya & Co. v. Cawnpore Woolen Mills Co. Ld. ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 325.
944	Sohni v. Mohan Kuer ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 23.
944	Bajrang Behari Lal v. Lachmi Narain ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 88.
945	Dirg Bijai Singh v. Bhan Partab Shah Singh ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 63.
947	Abdul Karim v. Sahib Jan ...	s. c. 13 P. W. R. 1912.
951	Baldeo Singh v. Hira Lal ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 67.
953	Fars Ram v. Muhammad Yasin Khan ...	s. c. 14 P. W. R. 1912.
954	Fakhran Bibi v. Nageshar Ram ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 84.
955	Tulsi Ram v. Karm Chand ...	s. c. 25 P. W. R. 1912; 36 P. L. R. 1912.
956	Kanhaya Lal v. Girdhari Lal ...	s. c 9 A. L. J. 103.
957	Bhagtu v. Bua Ditta ...	s. c. 26 P. W. R. 1912; 34 P. L. R. 1912.
958	Jackson v. Jackson ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 108; 34 A. 203.
959	Ganga Pershad Sahu v. Irshad Ali Khan ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 54.
960	Bhola v. Brij Lal ...	s. c. 27 P. W. R. 1912; 32 P. L. R. 1912.
961	Wilaiti Begam v. Fazal Husain Khan ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 148.
963	Thakar Das v. Perma Nand ...	s. c. 95 P. R. 1911.
963	Habeebullah v. Abdul Hamid ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 131; 34 A. 261.
965	Bir Bikram Deo v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 362; 9 A. L. J. 585; 15 C. L. J. 633.
975	Ahmad Said Khan v. Masi-ullah Khan ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 152; 34 A. 250.
976	Mata Din v. Ahmad Ali ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 338; 11 M. L. T. 145; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 183; 9 A. L. J. 215; 15 C. L. J. 270; 14 Bom. L. R. 192; 15 O. C. 49; 34 A. 213.
979	Tajammul Husain v. Raunak Ali ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 25.
982	Bapu v. Temsa ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 29.
984	Waliullah v. Ejez Ali ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 22.
985	Venkadam Narayana Iyer v. Siva Subramania Iyer	s. c. 22 M. L. J. 49.
986	Nazir Ahmad v. Raghubar Dayal ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 7.
992	Narshing Das v. Shamas Din ...	s. c. 207 P. L. R. 1911.
993	Khircde Chunder Roy Chowdhury v. Emperor ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 151; 39 C. 377; 13 Cr. L. J. 177.
998	Lad Khan v. Emperor ...	s. c. 19 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 11 P. L. R. 1912; 13 Cr. L. J. 182.
999	Bharosa Patak v. Emperor ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 355; 13 Cr. L. J. 183.
1000	Ambika Prosad Singh v. Gur Sahai Singh ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 184.
1001	Emperor v. Sohan Singh ...	s. c. 18 P. R. 1911 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 185.
1002	Gurameah v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 336; 39 C. 403; 13 Cr. L. J. 186.
1004	Gajendra Ghorai v. Emperor ...	s. c. 15 C. L. J. 80; 13 Cr. L. J. 188.
1004	Emperor v. Dilsukh ...	s. c. 19 P. R. 1911 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 188.
1005	Emperor v. Lekria ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 20; 13 Cr. L. J. 189.
006	Gauri Shankar Lal v. Emperor ...	s. c. 9 A. L. J. 156; 13 Cr. L. J. 190.
1007	Ram Charan Chandra v. Tirupulla Sheikh ...	s. c. 16 C W. N. 645; 13 Cr. L. J. 191.

TABLE
OF
Cases Cited in Volume XIII of Indian Cases, 1912.

A

Page.

Abbakke v. Kinhiamma 29 M. 491 ... 16, 474
Abdul Aziz Molla v. Ebrahim Molla, 31 C. 965 ... 122
Abdul Ghani v. Muhammad Fasih, 28 A. 95; 2 A. L J. 667; A. W. N. (1905) 200 ... 654
Abdul Ghani v. Nand Lal, 30 C. 15 ... 625
Abdul Karim v. Sahib Jan, 5 P. R. 1908; 29 P. W. R. 1908; 99 P. L. R. 1908 ... 317
Abdul Kashem v. Benode Lal Dhone, 12 C. W. N. 757 ... 341
Abdul Razzaq v. Mumtaz Husain, 25 A. 334 ... 708
Abdul Rehman v. Cassum Ebrahim, 13 Bom. L. R. 583; 11 Ind. Cas. 726 ... 232, 267
Abdul Wahid Khan v. Nuran Bibi, 121. A. 91; 11 C. 597 ... 270
Abdul Wahid Khan v. Shaluka Bibi, 21 C. 496; 21 I. A. 26 ... 146, 509
Abdulla v. Kunja Behari Lal, 12 Ind. Cas. 149; 14 C. L. J. 467 ... 122
Abhiram Dass v. Gopal Dass, 17 C. 48 ... 690
Abinash Chandra Mazumdar v. Harinath Shaha, 32 C. 62 ... 633
Abraham Pillai v. Donald Smith, 29 M. 324 ... 128
Achal Ram v. Kazim Hussain Khan, 27 A. 271; 9 C. W. N. 477; 8 O. C. 155; 15 M. L. J. 197 ... 687
Achamma v. Basappa, 8 M. L. J. 1 ... 92
Achha Mian v. Durga Churn, 25 C. 146; 2 C. W. N. 137 ... 362
Achutan Unni v. Vasunni, 20 M. L. J. 344; 7 M. L. T. 102; 5 Ind. Cas. 774 ... 789
Adams v. Great North of Scotland Railway Company, (1891) App. Cas. 31 ... 119
Adhibai v. Cursandas, 11 B. 199 ... 137
Adivi Suryapraksa Rao v. Nidamurty Gangaraju, 33 M. 228; 4 Ind. Cas. 386; 7 M. L. T. 236 ... 10
Administrator-General of Bengal v. The Land Acquisition Deputy Collector, 24-Pergannahs, 12 C. W. N. 241 ... 470
Afar Morole v. Surja Komar Ghose, 12 C. L. J. 649; 15 C. W. N. 249; 7 Ind. Cas. 842 ... 424
Afatolla Sardar v. Dwarka Nath Moitry, 4 C. 814 ... 1004
Agarjan Bibi v. Panaulla, 6 Ind. Cas. 452; 14 C. W. N. 779; 12 C. L. J. 169; 37 C. 687 ... 699
Ahmad Ali v. Amir Shah, 35 P. R. 1898 ... 21
Ahmad Ali v. Waris Husain, 15 A. 123 ... 793
Ahmad Bakhsh v. Seth Raghubar Dayal, 28 A. 1; 15 M. L. J. 407; 10 C. W. N. 115; 2 A. L. J. 813; 2 C. L. J. 413; 7 Bom. L. R. 912; 9 O. C. 7; 32 I. A. 229 ... 986
Ahmad Hoosein v. Khadija, 10 W. R. 369 ... 75
Ahmad Khan v. Gulam Bibi, 36 P. R. 1891 ... 412
Ahmad Yar Khan v. Secretary of State, 28 C. 693; 28 I. A. 211 (P. C.) ... 514

A—contd.

Page.

Ahsanullah v. Dakhini Din, 27 A. 575; A. W. N. (1905) 108; 2 A. L. J. 287 ... 142, 704
Airey v. Borham, 29 Beav. 620; 4 L. T. 391 ... 26
Aiyavu Mooppan v. Vellayya Nadan, 34 M. 55; 7 A. L. J. 567; 6 Ind. Cas. 15; 8 M. L. T. 6; (1910) M. W. N. 229 ... 789
Ajab v. Mangal, 6 N. L. R. 152; 8 Ind. Cas. 1119 ... 902
Akbar Zaman Khan v. Sukhdeo Pandey, 10 Ind. Cas. 51; 13 C. L. J. 467 ... 368
Akhil Chandra De v. Queen-Empress, 22 C. 1004 ... 212
Akhoy Kumar v. Bejoy Chand, 29 C. 813 at p. 818 ... 146, 787
Akkanna v. Venkayya, 25 M 351 ... 692
Ala Bakhsh v. Emperor, 92 P. L. R. 1902 ... 220
Alfred Lindsay, In re, 4 M. 121 ... 1001
Ali Bakhsh v. Chuhar Singh, 8 Ind. Cas. 1157; 41 P. L. R. 1911; 101 P. R. 1910 ... 855
Ali Mahomed Bipari v. Nyan Raja Bhuyan, S. A. No. 906 of 1900 ... 365
Alickjan Bibi v. Rambaran Shah, 12 C. L. J. 357 at p 360; 7 Ind. Cas. 166 ... 130
Aligiriswami v. Emperor, 33 M. 514; 5 Ind. Cas. 831; 7 M. L. T. 121; (1910) M. W. N. 5 ... 274
Alipore Bomb case, 14 C. W. N. 1114; 11 Cr. L. J. 453; 7 Ind. Cas. 359; 37 C. 467 ... 726
Allah Bakhsh v. Buta, 79 P. R. 1891 ... 181
Altaf Ali v. Lalta Prasad, 19 A. 496 ... 720
Amar Chand v. Sebak Chand, 34 C. 642; 11 C. W. N. 593; 5 C. L. J. 491; 2 M. L. T. 207 ... 671
Ambabai v. Govind, 23 B. 257 ... 492
Ambica Pershad v. Sardhari Lal, 10 C. 851 ... 190
Ambaika Prasad v. Emperor, 35 C. 820; 8 Cr. L. J. 398 ... 99, 211
Amir Hussain Khan v. Nanak Chand, 6 Ind. Cas. 424; 14 C. W. N. 882; 12 C. L. J. 62 ... 367
Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh, 11 C. 6; 11 I. A. 237 ... 658
Amirthathammal v. Periasami, 32 M. 325; 5 M. L. T. 255; 4 Ind. Cas. 507 ... 655
Amulya v. Preonath, 7 Ind. Cas. 886 ... 141
Anand Kunwar v. Court of Wards, 8 I. A. 14; 6 C. 764; 8 C. L. R. 381 ... 638
Ananda Das v. Ratnakar, 7 C. W. N. 572 ... 192
Ananda Kishore Chowdhury v. Daij Thakurain, 1 Ind. Cas. 549; 36 C. 726; 10 C. L. J. 189 ... 125, 362
Ananda Mohan Roy v. Hara Sundari, 23 C. 196 ... 190
Anantayya, v. Padmayya, 16 M. 278 ... 44
Andrews v. Askey, 8 Car. & P. 7 ... 685
Andrews v. Salomen. (1888) W. N. 102 ... 602
Anivilla Sundararamayya v. Cherla Sitamma, 2 M. W. N. 422; 10 Ind. Cas. 56; 9 M. L. T. 469; 21 M. L. J. 695 ... 476
Anning v. Hartley, 27 L. J. Ex. 145 ... 165
Antaji, In re, 18 B. 670 ... 971
Anund Chundra v. Nilmony Jourdar, 9 C. 758; 12 C. L. R. 352 ... 692

A—concld.

Page.

Anundomoyee v. Dhondro Chunder, 14 M. I. A. 101 at p. 111; 16 W. R. 19 (P. C.); 8 B. L. R. 122 ... 702
Anwar Hasan v. Umatul Karim; 145 P. R. 1906; 109 P. L. R. 1907 ... 670
Anwar Jan v. Azmut Ali, 15 W. R. 26 ... 654
Appasami v. Ramasami, 9 M. 279 ... 461
Appaswami v. Scott, 9 M. 5 ... 92
Appaya Shetti v. Kunhati Beari, 30 M. 214; 17 M. L. J. 127 ... 135
Appovier v. Rama Subba Aiyar, 11 M. I. A. 75; 8 W. R. 1 (P. C.) ... 53
Ardesar v. Secretray of State, 9 B. H. C. R. 177 166
Ariavudra v. Dorasami, 11 M. 413 ... 670
Arruth Misser v. Juggurnath, 18 W. R. 439 ... 687
Arumuga Goundan v. Chinnammal, 10 M. L. T. 214; 21 M. L. J. 918; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 524; 12 Ind. Cas 185 ... 206
Arunachalam Chetti v. Ayyavayyam, 21 M. 476 336
Arunachella Reddi v. Perumal Reddi, 9 M. L. T. 90; 21 M. L. J. 635; 9 Ind. Cas. 285 ... 182
Arunachellam v. Arunachellam, 15 I. A. 171; 12 M. 19 ... 342
Arur Singh v. Lachmi, 75 P. R. 1898 ... 181
Asalat Khan v. Birendra Kishore Manikya Bahadur, 13 Ind. Cas 519 513, 518, 519
Asimuddi Sheikh v. King-Emperor, 11 C. W. N. 838; 5 Cr. L. J. 351; 5 C. L. J. 454 ... 288
Asimuddi Sheikh v. Sundari Bibee, 10 Ind. Cas. 345; 38 C. 339; 15 C. W. N. 844; 14 C. L. J. 224 ... 368
Asumatunessa Khatun v. Harendra Lal, 12 C. W. N. 721; 8 C. L. J. 29 ... 701
Assistant Sessions Judge, North Arcot v. Rammmal, 10 M. L. T. 563; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 3; 13 Ind. Cas. 275 ... 287
Atma Singh v. Kalu, 93 P. R. 1905; 162 P. L. R. 1905 ... 528
Attorney-General v. Siddon, (1830) 1 C. & J. 220; 1 Tyr. 41 ; 9 L. J. (o s.) Ex. 7 ... 101
Attorney-General v. Theobala, (1890) 24 Q. B. D. 557; 62 L. T. 768; 38 W. R 527 ... 266
Atul Krishna Sircar v. Sanyasi Churan Sircar, 32 C. 1051; 9 C. W. N. 784; 2 C. L. J. 50 ... 528
Aulad Husain v. Zainab-un-nissa, 10 O. C. 225 491
Australian Steam Navigation Co. v. W. Howard Smith and Sons, 14 App. Cas. 318; 61 L. T. 134 ... 130

B

Babbon Sheikh v. Emperor, 37 C. 340; 5 Ind. Cas. 365; 14 C. W. N. 422; 11 C. L. J. 335; 11 Cr. L. J 121 ... 875
Babujan v. The Secretary of State, 4 C. L. J. 256 ... 552
Baburam Roy v. Mohendra Nath Samanta, 8 C. W. N. 454 ... 365
Bachoo v. Mankorebai, 31 B. 373; 11 C. W. N. 769; 6 C. L. J. 1; 9 Bom. L. R. 646; 17 M. L. J. 343; 2 M. L. T. 295 ... 479
Bachoo v. Mankorebai, 29 B. 51 9, 479
Badhawa v. Dewa Singh, 141 P. R 1893 ... 714
Badri Prasad v. Murlidhar, 2 A. 593; 7 I. A. 51 965
Bagha Singh v. Gurmukh Singh, 93 P. R. 1902 432

B—contd.

Page.

Bagley v. Maple & Co., 27 T. L. R. 284 ... 369
Bagot v. Bagot, (1878) 1 L. R. Ir. 308 ... 685
Baid Nath Das v. Shamanand Das, 22 C. 143 ... 625
Baijnath Lohea v. Binoyendranath Palet, 6 C. W. N. 5 ... 92
Baijnath Singh v. Paltu, A. W. N. (1908) 38; 5 A. L. J. 96; 30 A. 125 ... 573
Baikanta Nath v. Aughore Nath, 21 C. 387 ... 141
Baikantha Barik v. Shib Dass, 2 C. L. J. 321 ... 640
Baikunta Nath Dev v. Udoy Chand Maiti, 2 C. L. J. 311 ... 146
Baillie v. Edinburgh Oil Gas-light Company, (1835) Cl. and F. 639 ... 119
Bainta v. Achhar, 188 P. L. R. 1905 ... 291
Bajrang Singh v. Bhagwan Bakhsh Singh, 11 O. C. 301 ... 497
Bajrangi Singh v. Manokarnika Bakhsh Singh, 11 O. C. 78; 3 M. L. T. 1; 12 C. W. N. 74; 9 Bom. L. R. 1348; 6 C. L. J. 766; 5 A. L. J. 1 485, 496
Baker v. Snell, (1908) 2 K. B. 825; 77 L. J. K. B. 1090; 24 T. L. R 811; 99 L. T. 753; 21 Cox. C. C. 716 ... 839
Bakhu v. Jhanda, 145 P. R. 1892 ... 408
Bal Dev Dharup Marwadi v. Ram Chandra Balwant Kulkarni, 19 B. 121 ... 92
Bal Kishen Das v. Simpson, 25 C. 833; 25 I. A. 151; 2 C. W. N. 513 ... 960
Bala Bux v. Rukhmabai, 30 C. 725; 5 Bom. L. R. 469; 7 C. W. N. 642; 30 I. A. 130 ... 53
Balaji Ranchhoddas, In re, 5 B. 680 ... 543
Balaram v. Mangta Dass, 34 C. 941; 6 C. L. J. 237; 11 C. W. N. 959 ... 794
Balgobind v. Ramkumar, 6 A. 431 ... 633
Balgobind Das v. Narain Lal, 15 A. 339; 20 I. A. 116 ... 467
Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain Sahu, 30 C. 738; 30 I. A. 139; 7 C. W. N. 578 54, 231
Balkrishna v. Masuma Bibi, 9 I. A. 182 at p. 196; 13 C. L. R 232; 5 A. 142 ... 544
Balwant v. Secretary of State, 32 B. 432 at p. 437; 10 Bom. L. R. 531 ... 265
Balwant Singh v. Aman Singh, 33 A. 7; 7 Ind. Cas. 112; 7 A. L. J. 852 198, 952
Bamundoss Mookerjee v. Musammat Tarinee, 7 M. I. A. 169 ... 10
Banarsi Das, In re, 18 A. 213 ... 98
Banarsi Prasad v. Fazal Ahmad, 28 A. 298; 3 A. L. J. 25; A. W. N. (1906) 9 ... 140
Bandhu Naik v. Lakhi Kuar, 7 A. 342 .. 543
Bandu v. Nabu, 15 B. 238 at p. 241 ... 241
Baneswar Mukarjee v. Umesh Chandra Chakraverty, 37 C. 626; 7 Ind. Cas. 875 ... 424
Bank of England v. Vagliano, (1891) A. C. 107; 60 L. J. Q B. 145; 64 L. T. 353; 39 W. R. 657; 55 J. P. 676 ... 217
Bantu v. Ganda Singh, 18 P. R. 1909; 1 Ind. Cas. 450; 22 P. W. R 1909 ... 445
Baperam Surma v. Gouri Nath Dutt, 20 C. 474 98, 212
Baraik Kamal Sahai v. Lilhu Christian, 8 C. L. J. 170 ... 455
Barber v. Lesiter,(1859) 7. C. B. (N. S.) 175; 29 L. J. C. P. 161; 6 Jur. (N. S.) 654 ... 774
Barkat Ali v. Ilahi Bakhsh, 2 P. R. 1899, Rev. ... 18

B—contd

Page.

Barrett v. Ring, 2 Sm. Gifford p. 48 ... 473
Barry v. Butlin, (1838) 2 Moore P. C. 480; 4 S. E. C. (o. s.) 175 ... 579
Basaratullah v. Kasirunnessa, 11 C. W. N. 190 ... 365
Bashi Chander v. Enayet Ali, 20 C. 236 ... 702
Bayley v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Railway Co, (1872) L. R. 8 C. P. 148; 42 L. J. C. P. 78; 28 L. T. 366 ... 242
Bayley v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Railway Co., (1871-72) L. R. 7 C. P. 415 ... 241
Bazlur Raheem v. Shams-un-nissa, 11 M. I. A. 551; 8 W. R. 3 (P. C.) ... 610
Beale v. Beale, (1635) Cro. Car. 383 ... 163
Beak v. Heak, Finch 190 ... 25
Bechoo Singh v. Rai Sheo Sahey, 1 N. W. P. H. C. R. P. 56; p. 111 (Ed. of 1873) ... 965
Beckford v. Hood, 7. T. R. 620; 4. R. R. 527 ... 568
Beejraj v. Bhyropersaud, 23 C. 912 ... 150
Beerpertab v Rajendar Pertab, 12 M. I. A. 1; 9 W. R. (P. C.) 15 ... 693
Begam v. Khuda Bakhsh, A. W. N. (1892) 77 ... 613
Behari Chakravarti v. Kalihar Gupta, 10 C. L. J. 479; 3 Ind. Cas. 336 ... 190
Behari Lal v. Parbhu Lal, 79 P. R. 1908; 130 P. W. R. 1908 (F. B.) ... 319
Behari Lal v. Sheo Lal, 3 N. L. R. 114 ... 862
Behary Lal (Pundit v. Kedar Nath Mullik, 18 C. 460 ... 186
Beni Madhab v. Jai Krishna, 7 B. L. R. 152; 12 W. R. 495 ... 608
Beni Madho v Kali Prasad Singh, 16 O. C. 331... 615
Beni Prasad v. Kashi Nath, 6 A. L. J. 401; 2 Ind. Cas. 222 89,929
Beni Pershad Koer v. Dudhnath Roy, 27 C. 156; 26 I. A. 216 ... 515
Bennett v. Potter, 2 C. and J. 622; 1 L. J. Ex. 258 ... 464
Benode Lal Pakrahsi v. Pran Chandra Pakrashi, 14 C. L. J. 143; 11 Ind. Cas 898 ... 165
Bepin Behary Sarnokar v. Kali Dass Chatterjee, 6. C. W. N. 336 ... 146
Berkely Peerage, In re, 4 Camp. 401 at p. 416; 14 R. R. 782 ... 683
Bevan v. Webb, (1901) 2 Ch. 59; 84 L. T. 609; 70 L. J. Ch. 536; 6 W. R. 548 ... 25
Bhagabat Prasad Singh v. King-Emperor, 14 C. L. J. 120; 11 Ind. Cas. 794 ... 121
Bhagabatti Deyi v. Bhola Nath, 7 B. L. R. 93; 15 W. R. 63 ... 692
Bhagbutti Devi v. Bhola Nath Thakoor, 2 I. A. 256; 24 W. R. 168; 1 C. 104 ... 692
Bhagiram Dome v. Abar Dome, 15 C. 388 ... 215
Bhagirath v. Nathmal, 105 P. R. 1907 ... 623
Bhagtu Singh v. Raghu Nath Sahai, 13 C. W. N. 135; 9 C. L. J. 15; 1Ind. Cas. 571 ... 2
Bhagu Jetha v. Malek Bawasaheb, 9 B. 318 ... 89
Bhagwandin v. Debi Prasad, 12 Ind. Cas 630 ... 536
Bhai Bhagat Singh v. Harnam Singh, 49 P. R. 1892 ... 62
Bhaiji Bhimji v. Administrator-General of Bombay, 23 B. 428 ... 766
Bhairon Rai v. Saran Rai, 26 A. 588 ... 79
Bhairon Singh v. Lalman, 7 A 23 ... 563
Bhandi Singh v. Ramadhin Rai, 2 C. L. J. 359... 652
Bhatu v. Lehru, 54 P. R. 1897 ... 413

B

Page.

Bhavanamma v. Ramasami, 4 M. 193 ... 137
Bhawani Koer v. Mathura Prasad, 7 C. L. J. 1 145, 787, 960
Bhikari Misra v. Rani Surja Moni, 6 C. W. N. 48 ... 343
Bhoboosundari v. Makhun Lal Dey, 8 B. L. R. 128 ... 165
Bhogilal v. Amritlal, 17 B. 173 ... 703
Bhola v. Fathu, 15 C. P. L. R. 17 at p. 20 ... 983
Bhola Nath v. Buskin, A. W. N. (1894) 127 ... 90
Bholi v. Kahna, 35 P. R. 1909; 1 Ind. Cas. 695; 32 P. W. R. 1909; 45 P. L. R. 1909 ... 147
Bholi v. Man Singh, 86 P. R. 1908; 146 P. W. R. 1908 ... 317
Bhomshetti v. Uma Bai, 21 B 223 ... 128
Bhoobun Mohun v. Chunder Nath, 17 W. R. 69 32
Bhoobun Moyee Debia v Ram Kishore Acharjee Chowdhry, 10 M. I. A. 279; 3 W. R. (P. C.) 15 10
Bhugwandeen Doobey v. Myna Baee, 11 M. I. A. 487; 9 W. R. (P. C.) 23 ... 321
Bhup Kunwar, In the matter of, 26 A. 249; 1 Cr. L. J. 73; A. W. N. (1904) 15 ... 829
Bhutta v. Khuda Bakhsh, 97 P. R. 1906 ... 485
Bibi Umatal Batul v. Nanji Koer, 11 C. W. N. 705; 6 C. L. J. 427 864, 903
Bibijan Bibi v. Sachi Bewa, 31 C. 863 ... 145
Bidhata Rai v Ram Charitra Rai, 12 C. W. N. 37; 6 C. L. J. 651; 3 M. L. T. 33 ... 185
Bidhumukhi v. Jitendra, 10 C. L. J. 527; 4 Ind. Cas. 442 ... 42
Bidyamoye Debya v. Surja Kanta, 9 C. W. N. 705; 32 C. 875 ... 543
Bihari Lall Paul v. Gopal Lal Seal, 1 C. W. N. 695 ... 908
Bijoy Gopal v. Krishna, 34 C. 329, 9 Bom L. R. 602; 11 C. W. N. 724; 5 C. L. J. 334; 2 M. L. T. 133; 17 M. L. J. 154, 4 A. L. J. 329 ... 984
Binda v. Kaunsilla, 13 A. 126 ... 612
Bindeshri Singh v. Balraj Sahai, 10 O. C. 49 ... 620
Bindeswari Prosad Singh v. Lakpat Nath Singh, 15 C. W. N. 725; 8 Ind. Cas. 26 ... 367
Bindo v. Sham Lal, 29 A. 210; A. W. N. (1907) 24; 4 A. L. J. 22 ... 17
Bindu Bashini Dassi v. Harendra Lal Roy, 25 C. 305; 2 C. W. N. 150 ... 146
Binode Lal Pakrashi v. Kalu Pramanick, 20 C. 708 ... 195
Bipin Bihari Hati v. Amrita Lal, 9 C. L. J. 76; 3 Ind. Cas. 685 ... 365
Bir Chunder Manickya v. Rajmohun Goswami, 16 C. 449 ... 515
Biram Ali Sheikh v. Gopi Kanta Shaha, 1 C. W. N. 396; 24 C. 355 ... 700
Birbul Khatifa v. Emperor, 30 C. 97 at p. 100 ... 239
Birendra Kishore Manikya Bahadur v. Akram Ali, 13 Ind. Cas. 513 518,519,520
Birendra Kishore Manikya Bahadur v. Dilwar Ali, 13 Ind Cas. 517 ... 519
Birendra Kishore Manikya Bahadur v. Roshan Khan, 13 Ind. Cas. 518 ... 518
Biru Mahata v. Shyama Charan Khawas, 22 C. 483 ... 134
Bishen Chand v. Asmaida Koer, 6 A. 560; 11 I. A. 164 ... 894
Bishen Singh v. Paro, 19 P. R. 1905; 78 P. L. R. 1905 ... 670

B—concld.

Page.

Bisheswar v. Harbans, 6 C. L. J. 659; 3 M. L. T. 38 ... 122
Bishop Mellus v. The Vicar Apostolic of Malabar, 2 M. 295 ... 600
Bishun Churn v Jogendra Nath; 26 C. 114 654, 906
Bisram Mahton v. Sahib-un-nissa, 3 A. 333 ... 464
Bisu Haldar v. Probhat Chander, 6 C. L. J. 127; 11 C. W. N. 836; 6 Cr. L. J. 38 ... 1003
Bogha Singh v. Gurmukh Singh, 93 P. R. 1902 ... 647
Bonai v. The King-Emperor, 15 C. W. N. 461; 38 C. 408; 9 Ind. Cas. 555; 12 Cr. L. J. 97 ... 282
Booth v. Parke, Beaty 444 ... 27
Boulting v. Boulting, 33 L. J. Mat. 33; 10 Jur. (N. S.) 182; 9 L. T. 779; 12 W. R. 389; 3 Sw. & Tr. 329 ... 617
Bradshaw's Arbitration, (1842) 12 Q. B. 562; 76 R. R. 349; 17 L. J. Q. B. 362; 12 Jur. 998 ... 119
Brahmadeo Narayan v. Harjan Singh, 25 C. 778 497
Brajeshware v. Budhanudi, 6 C. 268; 7 C. L. R. 6 ... 122
Brij Bhukhan Das v Samiuddin Ahmad Khan, 25 A. 169 .. 473
Brij Indar Bahadur v. Ranee Jankee Koer, 5 I. A. 1; 1 C. L. R. 318 ... 692
Brindabun Chandra v. Sureswar Shaha, 10 C. L. J. 263; 3 Ind. Cas. 178 ... 433
Brinsmead v. Harrison, (1872) L. R. 7 C. P. 547; 41 L. J. C. P. 190; 27 L. T. 99; 20 W. R. 784 ... 849
Brinsmead v. Harrison, (1871) L. R. 6 C. P. 584; 40 L. J. C. P. 281; 21 L. T. 798; 19 W. R. 956 ... 849
Brojo Nath Pal v. Dasmony, 2 C. L. R. 589 ... 690
Brojonath Surma v. Iswar Chundra Dutt, 19 C. 482 ... 79
British South Africa Company v. The Companhia De Mozambique, (1893) L. R. A. C. 602; 6 R. I; 69 L. T. 604; 36 L. J. Q. B 70 ... 569
British Steam Navigation Co. v. Secretary of State for India, 8 Ind. Cas. 107; 12 C. L. J. 505; 15 C. W. N. 87; 38 C. 230 ... 470
Buccleuch, Duke of v. Metropolitan Board of Works, (1872) L. R. 5 H. L. 418; 5 Exch. 221; 41 L. J. Ex. 137; 27 L. T. 1 119, 522
Budree Das Mukin v. Chooni Lal Johwry, 33 C. 789; 10 C. W. N. 581 ... 232
Bukharia v. Jugal Kishore, 2 C. P. L. R. 6 ... 983
Buli v. Gianchand, (1897) Sind S. C. R. 1 ... 235
Bunarsee Doss v. Gholam Hossein, 13 M. I. A. 358; 13 W. R. (P. C.) 29 ... 257
Bunwari Jha v. Rumjee Thakur, 7 C. W. N. 11 at pp. 18, 19 ... 300
Bunwari Lal v. Daya Shankar, 13 C. W. N. 815; 1 Ind. Cas. 670 ... 466
Burbha Mandari v. Megh Nath, 2 C. L. J. 4 n. ... 122
Burnaby v. Baillie, 42 Ch. D. 282 at p. 290; 58 L. J. Ch. 842; 61 L. T. 634; 38 W. R. 125 ... 685
Buta Shah v. Kalu, 46 P. R. 1894 (F. B.) ... 540
Butler v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Railway Co., (1888) 21 Q. B. D 207 at p. 211; 57 L. J. Q. B. 564; 60 L. T. 89; 36 W. R. 726; 52 J. P. 611 ... 241
Buz-lul-Raheem v. Shams un-nissa, 11 M. I. A. 551; 8 W. R. (P. C.) 3. ... 439

C

Page.

Campbell, v. Campbell, 1 H. L. (Sc.) 182 at p. 199 ... 683
Carr v. London and North-Western Railway Company, 10 C. P. 307; 44 L. J. C. P. 109; 31 L. T. 785; 23 W. R. 747 ... 486
Caspersz v. Kedar Nath Sarbadhikari, 5 C. W. N. 858 ... 608
Caston v. Caston, 22 A. 270 ... 570
Chajmal Das v. Brij Bhukan, 17 A. 511; 22 I A. 199 ... 150
Chakrapani Asari v. Narasinga Rau, 19 M. 56 ... 904
Challa Papi Reddi v. Challa Koti Reddi, 7 M. H. C. R. 25 ... 872
Chamanbu Javji Mahomed Ali, v. Multan Chand Sita Ram, 20 B. 562 ... 502
Chamru Sao v. Tulsidin Singh, 17 C. P. L. R. 49 910
Chand Kaur v. Mela Ram, 8 P. R. 1897 ... 564
Chandara Kant Ghose, In the matter of, 3 C. W. N. 3. ... 98
Chandra v. Gojar Abai 14 B. 463 ... 10
Chandra Pradhan v. Gopi Mogun, 14 C. 385 ... 141
Chandradeo Singh v. Mata Prasad, 31 A. 176; 1 Ind. Cas. 479; 2 A. L. J. 263 5, 401
Chandramathi Ammal v. Narayanasami Iyer, 33 M. 241; 5 Ind. Cas. 23; 19 M. L. J. 760; 7 M. L. T. 369 ... 789
Channu Lal v. Asharfi Lal, 4 A. L. J. 535 ... 44
Chaudhri Mehdi Hasan v. Muhammad Hasan, 28 A. 439; 10 C. W. N. 706; 3 A. L. J. 405; 8 Bom. L. R. 387; 9 O. C. 106; 1 M. L. T. 106; 4 C. L. J. 295 ... 989
Chlikani Venkatagopala Rayon Garu v. Narayanasami Reddi, 27 M. 210 ... 176
Chhitar Mal v. Jagan Nath Prasad, 29 A. 213; A. W. N. (1907) 125; 4 A. L. J. 24 ... 677
Chingachamvital Sankarannair v. Chingachamvital Gopalamenon, 30 M. 18; 1 M. L. T. 412 408
Chinku v. Utamchand, 2 S. L. R. 59 Civil 265
Chinnammal v. Madarsa Rowther, 27 M. 480 ... 903
Chinnammal v. Varadrayulu, 15 M. 307 ... 948
Chinnasami Pillai v. Karuppa Udayan, 21 M. 234 903
Chinnayya Asari v. Mooniappa Mudali, 7 M. L. T. 264; 5 Ind. Cas. 41 ... 322
Chinto Joshi v. Krishnaji Narayan, 3 B. 214 ... 852
Chiragh Bibi v. Hassan, 19 P. R. 1906; 70 P. L. R. 1906 296, 528
Chokhey Singh v. Jote Singh, 6 A. L. J. 100; 11 Bom. L. R. 69; 13 C. W. N. 274; 9 C. L. J. 151; 5 M. L. T. 167; 31 A. 73; 19 M. L. J. 123; 12 O. C. 288; 1 Ind. Cas. 166 ... 438
Cholawadi Kotiah v. Polori Alamelamah, 31 M. 71; 3 M. L. T. 328; 18 M. L. J. 46 ... 160
Chota Sadoo Peadah v. Bhoobun Chuckerbutty, 9 W. R. 3 Cr. ... 829
Chote Lal v. Ramadhin, 13 O. C. 70; 5 Ind. Cas. 945 ... 536
Chowakaran Makki v. Vayyaprath Kunikutti Ali, 29 M. 173 .. 552
Chundi Charan Mandal v. Banke Behary Lal Mandal, 23 C. 449; 3 C. W. N. 283 ... 367
Churaman Sahu v. Gopi Sahu, 37 C. 1; 13 C. W. N. 994; 10 C. L. J. 545; 1 Ind. Cas. 945 ... 478
Churchill v. Hunt, (1819) 1 Chit. 480; 2 B. & A. 685; 22 R. R. 807 ... 508
Churchward v. Ford, 2 H. and N. 446; 115 R. R. 631; 26 L. J. Ex. 354; 5 W. R. 831 ... 31

C—concld.

Page.

Clancarty v. Latouche, (1810) 1 Ball and B. 420 ... 24
Clarapede v. Commercial Union, (1884) 32 W. R. 151 at p. 162 ... 130
Clark v. Adie, 2 A. C. 423; 46 L. J. Ch. 598; 37 L. T. 1; 25 W. R. 45 ... 512
Collector of Madura v. Mutu Ramalinga Sathupathy, 12 M. I. A. 397; 10 W. R. (P. C.) 17 ... 15
Collector of Ratnagiri v. Vyankatrav, 8 B. H. C. R. A. C. J. 1 (1871) ... 972
Collen v. Wright, 8 El. & Bl. 647; 27 L. J. Q. B. 215; 4 Jur. (N. S.) 357; 6 W. R. 123 ... 95
Cook v. Collingridge, Jocob 697; 23 R. R. 155, 767: 1 L. J. Ch. (o. s.) 74 ... 25
Cook v. Sprigg, 68 L. J. (P. C.) 144; (1899) A. C. 572; 81 L. T. 281; 15 T. L. R. 515 ... 968
Cox v. Lee, L. R. 4 Ex. 284; 21 L. T. 178; 38 L. J. Ex. 219 ... 507
Cracknol v. Janson, (1879) 11 Ch. D. 1; 40 L. T. 640; 27 W. R. 851; 48 L. J. Ch. 168 ... 656
Craven v. Craven, 7 Taunt 644; 1 Moor, 403; 18 R. R. 623 ... 165
Crop v. Tilney, 3 Salk. 226 ... 507

D

Dadaji Bhikaji v Rukmabai, 10 B. 301 ... 611
Dagdu v. Totaram, 33 B. 658; 11 Bom. L. R. 1074; 4 Ind. Cas. 242 ... 903
Daji Vithal v. Moreshwar Venkatesh, 1 N. L. R. 112 ... 910
Dalmir Puri v. Khodadad Khan, 36 C. 923; 14 C. W. N. 178; 4 Ind. Cas. 415; 10 Cr. L. J. 579 ... 1001
Dammar Singh v. Pirbhu Singh, 29 A. 290; 4 A. L. J. 155; A. W. N. (1907) 70 ... 415
Damodhar Gordhan v. Deo Ram Kanji, 1 B. 367; 25 W. R. 261; 3 I. A. 102 ... 922
Damoodur Misser v. Senabutty Misrain, 8 C. 537 ... 480
Dandekar v. Dandekar, 6 B. 663 ... 120
Darbo v. Kesho Rai, 2 A. 356 ... 154
Dasimoni Dasi v. Srinath Ghose, 3 B. L. R. App. 11 ... 120
Dattu v. Kasai, 8 B. 535 ... 793
Daulat Singh v. Raghubir Singh, A. W. N. (1894) 141 ... 20
Dayaram Jagjiwan v. Gordhan Das, 31 B. 73; 8 Bom. L. R. 885 ... 903
Dayaram v. Shaligram, 16 C. P. L. R. 135 ... 910
Daya Ram v. Sohel Singh, 110 P. R. 1906; 31 P. L. R. 1907 ... 713
De Thoren v. Attorney-General, (1876) 1 A. C. 686 ... 683
Debendar Kumar Manda v. Rup Lal Dass, 12 C. 546 ... 92
Debendra v. Khirode, 5 Ind. Cas. 272 ... 186
Debi Prasad v. Jamna Das, 23 A. 56 ... 606
Debi Prasad Pandit v. Mohammad Unis Arabi, 14 O. C. 33; 9 Ind Cas. 745 ... 135
Debi Singh v. Jia Ram, 25 A. 214 ... 953
Defholts v. Peters, 14 C. 631 ... 564
Delver v. Barnes, (1807) 1 Taunt 48; 9 R. R. 707 ... 119

D—contd.

Page.

Deoki Nandan v. Bansi Singh, 14 C. L. J. 35; 16 C. W. N. 124; 10 Ind. Cas. 371 ... 341
Deparu Kalappa Reddi v. Akkhappa Narayanim, 8 M. L. T. 297; 2 M. W. N. 75; 8 Ind. Cas. 392 81
Deputy Commissioner, Gonda v. Bhagwan, 12 O. C. 124; 2 Ind. Cas. 297 ... 810
Devalapallia Kameswara Sastry v. Viracharlu, (1910) 1 M. W. N. 649; 8 Ind. Cas. 195; 20 M. L. J. 855; 9 M. L. T. 26; 34 M. 422 ... 479
Devi Chand v. Gurcharn Singh, 127 P. L. R. 1906 ... 798
Devi Dial v. Utam Devi, 37 P. R. 1907; 120 P. L. R. 1907 ... 485
Devi Ditta v. Saudagar Singh, 65 P. R. 1900 ... 58
Dhanjibhoy Raghoo v. Meherally Moraj, 9 Bom. L. R. 901 ... 233
Dhanna Singh v. Gurbakhsh Singh, 91 P. R. 1909 (F. B.); 4 Ind. Cas 337; 161 P. W. R. 1909; 148 P. L. R. 1909 ... 668
Dharam Raj Kunwar v. Sumeram Singh, 21 A. 386 ... 556
Dharma v. Balmakund, 18 A. 458 ... 703
Dhenai Sardar v. Tarak Nath Chowdhuri, 12 C. L. J. 53; 5 Ind. Cas. 525 ... 379
Dhunpat Singh v. Gooman Singh, 11 M. I. A. 433; 9 W. R. (P. C.) 3 ... 608
Dhurm Das Pandey v. Shama Soondri Debiah, 3 M. I. A. 229; 6 W. R. 43 ... 485
Dijendra Narain v. Purnendu Narain, 11 C. L. J. 189; 5 Ind. Cas. 171 ... 377
Dina Nath Roy v. Krishna Bijoy Saha, 9 C. W. N. 379 ... 942
Dinendra Narain Roy v. Tituram Mukerjee, 30 C. 801 ... 608
Dinendra Nath Sannial v. Ram Coomar, 8 I. A. 65; 7 C. 107; 10 C. L. R. 281 ... 702
Dip Narain Singh v. Hira Singh, 19 A. 527 ... 940
Diwali v. Apaji Ganesh, 10 B. 342 ... 153
Docker v. Somes, 2 Myl. and K. 655; 3 L. J. Ch. 200 ... 27
Doe v. Stone, 3 C. B. 176; 15 L. J. C. P. 234; 10 Jur. 480. 71 R R. 311 ... 702
Doe v. Vickers, 4 Ad. & E. 782; 6 N. & M. 437; 6 L. J. K. B. 266 ... 702
Doed Devine v. Wilson, 10 Moore P. C. 502 at p. 531 (1855) ... 580
Doedem Foster v. The Earl of Derby, (1834) 1 Ad. & E. 783 at p. 790; 3 N. & M. 782; 3 L. J. (N. S.) K. B. 191; 40 R. R. 423 ... 850
Doolubdass v. Ramloll, 5 M. I A. 109 at p. 126 967
Doorga Pershad v. Kundan Koowar, 13 B. L. R. 235; 21 W. R. 214; 1 I. A. 551 53, 230
Doorganath v. Ram Chandara, 4 I. A. 52; 2 C. 341 ... 86
Dorab Ally Khan v. Abdaol Azeez, 5 I. A. 116; 2 C. L. R. 539; 3 C. 806 ... 806
Doraisami Tewar v. Lakshmanan Chetty, 14 M. L. J. 285 ... 203
Dowlat Koer v. Rampal Dass, 25 C. 459; 25 I. A. 21; 2 C. W. N. 177 ... 589
Dowlat Koer v. Siva Pershad Pandit, 10 Ind. Cas. 615; 12 Cr. L. J. 319; 15 C. L. J. 267 1001
Dowlat Ram v. Emperor, 32 C. 431; 2 Cr. L. J. 326 ... 982
Douglas Peerage, In re, 2 Hargrave Col. Jur. 402 ... 685

D—concld.

Page.

Drake v. Mitchell, 3 East 251; 7 R. R. 449 ... 145
Duff v. Fisher, 8 B. L. R. App. 10 ... 247
Dula Singh v. Wazir Singh, 69 P. R. 1887 ... 180
Dulal v. Ram Narain, 31 C. 1057 ... 544
Dulhin Golab Koer v. Balla Kurmi, 25 C. 744; 2 C. W. N. 580 ... 608
Dulhin Mothura Koer v. Bansidhar Singh, 10 Ind. Cas. 880; 15 C. L. J. 83 ... 368
Dunne v. Nobo Krishna Mookerjee, 17 C. 144 ... 608
Durga Charan v Dookhi Ram, 26 C. 925 ... 73
Durga Chowdhrani v. Jawahir Singh, 18 C. 23; 17 I. A. 122 ... 687
Durga Dass Hazra v. Samash Akon, 4 C. W. N. 606 ... 452
Durga Das Rukhil v. Queen-Empress, 27 C. 820 98
Durga Mohan Das v. Rakhal Chandra Roy, 5 C. W. N. 801 ... 608
Durga Prasad Banerjee v. Lalit Mohan Singh Roy, 25 C. 86 ... 205
Durga Prashad v. Hazari Singh, 8 A. L. J. 1025; 33 A. 799; 11 Ind. Cas. 116 ... 976
Durgozi Row v. Fakeer Sahib, 30 M. 197; 1 M. L. T. 433; 17 M. L. J. 9 ... 615
Dwarka Nath Sen v. Kishori Lal Goswami, 11 C. L. J. 426; 14 C. W. N. 703; 6 Ind. Cas. 549 ... 658
Dwarka Nath v. Tarini Sankar, 11 C. W. N. 513; 5 C. L. J. 294; 34 C. 199 ... 193
Dwarka Nath Roy v. Chand Aich, 26 C. 428; 3 C. W. N. 266 ... 42
Dwarka Prasad Raghubir v. Jamna Das Gordhan Das, 13 Bom. L. R. 133; 9 Ind. Cas. 948 ... 208

E

Eads v. Williams, 24 L. J. Ch. 531; 4 De G. M. & G. 674; 1 Jur. (N. S.) 193; 5 W. R. 98 ... 166
Easin Sarkar v. Barada Kishore, 11 C. L. J. 43; 5 Ind. Cas. 186 ... 934
East India Company v. Odit Churn Pal, 5 M. I. A. 43 at p. 69 ... 91
Edalji Shaporji v. Talsidas Sunderdas, 2 Bom. H. C. R. 270 at p. 275 ... 236
Ekabbar Sheikh v. Hara Bewah, 15 C. W. N. 335; 8 Ind. Cas. 660; 13 C. L. J. 1 42,688
Elson v. Rolfe, (1805) 2 Smith 459 ... 163
Emperor v. Bakaullah Mallik, 31 C. 411; 8 C. W. N. 367; 1 Cr. L. J. 140 ... 982
——— v. Bheleka Aham, 29 C. 498 ... 918
——— v. Bisheshar, 32 A. 635; 7 A. L. J. 749; 7 Ind. Cas. 291; 11 Cr. L. J. 447 ... 223
——— v. Budh Singh, 2 A. 101 ... 219
——— v. Ganga Prasad, 29 A. 685; A. W. N. (1907) 235; 4 A. L. J. 605; 6 Cr. L. J. 197 ... 217
——— v. Hari Singh, 28 A. 100; A. W. N. (1905) 203; 2 Cr. L. J. 520 ... 994
——— v. Harka, A. W. N. (1906) 193; 4 Cr. L. J. 88 ... 917
——— v. Jethalal Harlochand, 29 B. 449; 7 Bom. L. R. 527; 2 Cr. L. J. 480 ... 396
——— v. Kampu Kuki, 11 C. W. N. 554 at p. 556; 6 Cr. L. J. 86 ... 745
——— v. Katay Kisan, 17 C. P. L. R. 113 ... 918
——— v. Krishnarao, 4 Bom. L. R. 53 ... 216

E—concld.

Page.

Emperor v. Mohan Lal, 27 A. 25 ... 222
——— v. Nageshwar, 28 A. 404; 3 Cr. L. J. 322; A. W. N. (1906) 61 ... 282
——— v. Noni Gopal Gupta, 15 C. W. N 593; 38 C. 559; 10 Ind. Cas. 582; 12 Cr. L J. 286 ... 281
——— v. Santosh Chunder Dass, 13 C. W. N. 861; 9 C. L. J. 663; 2 Ind. Cas. 681; 10 Cr. L. J. 125 ... 722
——— v. Serhmal, A. W. N. (1908) 102; 5 A. L J. 247; 3 M. L. T. 377; 7 Cr. L. J. 389; 30 A. 243 ... 1008
——— v. Shekih Ariff, 35 C. 437; 12 C. W. N. 534; 7 Cr. L. J. 367 ... 821
——— v. Tirupura Sankar Sircar, 37 C. 618; 14 C. W. N. 767; 6 Ind. Cas. 476; 11 Cr. L. J. 360 ... 393
——— v. Tula Khan, 30 A. 334; A. W. N. (1908) 133; 5 A. L. J. 318; 7 Cr L. J. 427; 4 M. L. T. 41 ... 1006
Empress v. Asghar Ali; 2 A. 260 ... 275
——— v. Badhawa, 64 P. R. 1887 Cr. ... 782
——— v. Indarman, 3 A. 837 at p. 843 ... 994
——— v. Kure, (1886) A. W. N. 65 at p. 66 ... 281
——— v. Riasat Ali, 7 C. 352; 8 C. L. R. 572 ... 100
——— v. Sahae Rae, 3 C. 623; 2 C. L. R. 304 841
Eranjoli Illath Vishnu v. Eranjoli Illath Krishnan, 7 M. 3 ... 485
Ethel Georgina Ker v. Clara B. Ruxton, 4 C. L. J. 510 ... 442
Evans v. Coventry, 8 De G. M. and G. 835; 26 L. J. Ch. 400; 3 Jur. (N. S.) 1225; 5 W. R. 436 ... 26
Evans v. Evans, 1 Hagg Con. Rep. 37 .. 612
Exton v. Scott, (1833) 6 Simon 31; 38 R. R. 72 ... 656

F

Faiz Ahmad v. Badar Din, 11 Ind. Cas. 315; 137 P. W. R. 1911; 50 P. R. 1911; 210 P. L. R. 1911 ... 855
Faiz-ud-din v. Wajib-un-nissa, 71 P. R. 1892 ... 714
Fazaldad Khan v. Sawan Singh, 37 P. R. 1908; 30 P. W. R. 1908; 39 P. L. R. 1908 ... 563
Farman Ali v. Iman Din, 77 P. R. 1904 ... 348
Farr v. Price, 1 East 55; 5 R. R. 515 ... 139
Fateh Bibi v. Allah Bakhsh, 84 P. R. 1900; P. L. R. 1900 p. 536 ... 484
Fatteh Singh v. Kallu, 107 P. R. 1888 ... 448
Faujdar v. Bhamma, 91 P. R. 1883 ... 412
Ferens v. O'Brien, 52 L. J. M C. 70; 11 Q. B. D. 21; 31 W. R. 643; 5 Cox. C. C. 332; 47 J. P. 472 ... 821
Ficholtz v. Bannister, 17 C. B. (N S.) 708; 34 L. J. C. P. 105; 11 Jur. (N. S.) 15; 12 L. T. 76; 13 W. R. 96 ... 804
Fischer v. Secretary of State, 26 I. A. 16; 22 M. 270; 3 C. W N. 161 ... 362
Foster v. Hodgson, 19 Ves. 183 ... 25
Framji Besamji Dustur v. Hormasji Pestanji Framji, 2 B. 258 ... 805
Fuller v. Fenwick, (1846) 3 C. B. 705; 16 L. J. C. P. 78; 10 Jur. 1057 ... 119
Futteh Singh v. Gango, 4 W. R. 4 ... 166
Futtehma Begum v. Mohamed Ausur, 9 C. 309 ... 630

G

Page.

Gadadhar Panda v. Shyam Churn Naik, 12 C. W. N. 485 ... 65
Gajadhar Dasaundi v. Gokul Dasaundhi, Select Decision No. 2 of 1909 ... 644
Gajadhar Prasad v. Lachmin, 5 O. C. 384 ... 985
Gajapathi Nilamani v. Gajapathi Radhamani, 1 M. 290; 1 C. L. R. 97; 4 I. A. 212 ... 321
Galvin v. Thomson, (1836) 13 Maine 367 ... 120
Gamu v. Karim Khan, 33 P. R. 1908; 83 P. W. R. 1908; 171 P. L. R. 1908 ... 812
Ganapa Sanna v. Subbi Sanna, 32 B. 577; 10 Bom. L. R. 927 ... 484
Ganapathy v. Chenga, 29 M. 312 ... 65
Ganesh Das-Pana Lal, In re, 32 B. 198; 10 Bom. L. R. 77 ... 570
Ganeshi Lal v. Ajodhia Prasad, 28 A. 345; A. W. N. (1906) 39; 3 A. L. J. 85 ... 644
Ganga Ghulam v. Tapeshri Prasad; 26 A. 606 ... 489
Ganga Pershad Sahu v. The Land Mortgage Bank, 21 C. 366; 21 I. A. 1 ... 940
Ganga Ram v. Abdul Rahman, 28 P. R. 1907 ... 720
Ganga Ram v. Mihin Lal, 28 A. 416; 3 A. L. J. 187; A. W. N. (1906) 73 ... 415
Gangadas Bhattar v. Jogendranath Mita, 5 C. L. J. 315; 11 C. W. N. 403 ... 300
Gannu Singh v. Bhagwati Koeri; 3 Ind. Cas. 234 207
Gaya Din v. Dulari, 6 A. L. J. 693; 2 Ind. Cas. 839 ... 956
Genda Puri v. Chatar Puri, 9 A. 1; 13 I. A. 100 ... 226
Ghasita v. Sultan, 93 P. R. 1911; 11 Ind. Cas. 445; 228 P. L. R. 1911; 151 P. W. R. 1911 ... 720
Ghauhra v. Harbhaj, 16 P. R. 1905; 41 P. L. R. 1905 ... 29
Ghazanfar Ali Khan v. Kaniz Fatima, 13 O. C. 170; 6 Ind. Cas. 674; 14 C. W N. 690; 7 A. L. J. 579; 11 C. L. J. 649; 12 Bom. L. R. 447; 8 M. L. T. 59; 1910 M. W. N. 312; 20 M. L. J. 579; 32 A. 345 ... 897
Ghela v. Haider, 59 P. R. 1906; 68 P. L. R. 1907 ... 550
Ghulam Bhikh v. Masania, 22 P. R. 1893 ... 412
Ghulam Ghaus v. Nabi Bakhsh, 24 P. R. 1903; 35 P. L. R. 1903 ... 557
Ghulam Kadir Khan v. Mustakim Khan, 18 A. 209 ... 198
Ghulam Khan v. Mahommed Hassan, 29 C. 167 ... 235
Gibbons, In the matter of, 14 C. 42 ... 777
Girdhari Ram v. Faizullah Khan, 48 P. R. 1908; 98 P. W. R. 1908; 166 P L. R. 1908 28,316
Girija Sankar Roy v. Binode Sheikh, 5 C. L. J. 222; 5 Cr. L. J. 188 ... 1008
Girish Chandra Chowdhry v. Kedar Chandra Roy, 27 C. 473 ... 337
Girish Chunder Ghose v. Queen-Empress, 20 C. 857 ... 846
Gnanasambanda Pandara Sannadhi v. Velu Pandaram, 23 M. 271; 27 I. A. 69 ... 603
Gobherdhone Pramanick v. Iswar Chunder, 5 C. W. N. 44 ... 927
Gobind Koomar Chowdhry v. Huro Gopal Nag, 11 W. R. 537; 3 B. L. R. Ap. 72 ... 464
Gobinda Kumar Roy v. Debendra Kumar Roy Chowdhury, 12 C. W. N. 98 ... 426

G—contd.

Page.

Gobind Lal Roy v. Hemendra Narain Roy Chowdhury, 17 C. 686 ... 382
Gebind Lal Roy v. Ramjanam Misser, 21 C. 70; 20 I. A. 165 ... 403
Gokal Chand v. Rahman, 59 P. R. 1907 560,575
Gokal Das Gopal Das v. Puran Mal Premsukhdas, 10 C. 1035; 11 I. A. 126 ... 940
Gokibai v. Lakhmi Das Khimji, 14 B. 490 ... 137
Golab Chand v. Bahuria Rammurat Koer, 10 Ind. Cas. 268; 13 C. L. J. 432 ... 368
Golab Koer v. Badshah Bahadur, 13 C. W. N. 1197; 2 Ind Cas. 129 ... 81
Golab Sao v. Madho Lal, 2 C. L. J. 384; 9 C. W. N. 956 171,362
Goodson v. Richardson, L. R. 9 Ch. 221; 43 L. J. Ch. 790; 30 L. T. 142; 22 W. R. 337 ... 862
Gooper v. Salde, 6 H. L. Cas. 746 (1858); 27 L. J. Q. B. 449; 4 Jur. (N. s.) 791; 6 W. R. 461 ... 580
Gopal v. Govind, 13 C. P. L. R. 113 ... 984
Gopal v. Pirthi Singh, 24 A. 429; 29 I. A. 118; 4 Bom. L. R. 827; 6 C. W. N. 889 ... 182
Gopal Das v. Gopi Nath, 12 C. L. R. 38 ... 43
Gopal Das v. Hari Singh, 88 P. R. 1909; 3 Ind. Cas. 619; 137 P. W. R. 1909 ... 622
Gopal Jayachand v. Hargovind, 5 B. H. C. R. A. C. J. 83 ... 369
Gopal Lall v. Tilluck Chand, 10 M. I A. 183 at p. 191; 3 W. R. (P. C.) 1 ... 608
Gopal Singh v. Ghulam Husain, A. W. N. (1894) 58 ... 955
Gopaldai v. Chunni Lal, 8 A. 67 ... 908
Gopessur Dutt, In the goods of, 16 C. W. N. 265; 13 Ind. Cas. 576 ... 773
Gossami Sri Girdhariji v. Raman Lalji Gosami, 17 C. 3; 16 I. A. 137 ... 603
Gour Chunder Bhuttacharjee v. Sodoy Chunder, 17 W. R. 30 ... 166
Gour Sunder v. Hem Chunder, 16 C. 355 at p. 360 ... 702
Gouree Sunkar Tribedee v. Aman Ali Chowdury, 21 W. R. 309 ... 82
Govind v. Vithal, 20 B. 753 ... 630
Govind Prasad v. Suraj Bakhsh, Selected Decision No. 4 of 1903 ... 980
Govinda Chundra v. Ayinuddin, 11 C. L. R. 281 ... 608
Grazebrook v. Davis, 5 B. & C. 534; 4 L. J. (o. s.) K. B. 321; 8 D. & R. 295 ... 165
Great Northern Railway Company v. Harrison, (1854) 23 L. J. Exch. 308 at p. 310; 10 Ex. 376; 2 C. L. R. 1133; 2 W. R. 626 ... 241
Greedharee Doss v. Nundo Kessore Das, 11 M. I. A. 405 at p. 428; 8 W. R. 25 (P. C.) ... 226
Greesh Chunder v. Pran Kishen, 7 W. R. 157 ... 380
Gudri Koer v. Bhubneswari, 19 C. 19 ... 150
Gujar v. Sham Das, 107 P. R. 1887 ... 180
Gul Ahmed v. Sahibzada, 45 P. R. 1881 ... 412
Gulam Muhammad v. Muhammad Amin, 86 P. R. 1882 ... 412
Gulbai and Lilbai Re, 32 B. 50; 9 Bom. L. R. 923 ... 17
Gunga Gobind Gooptoo v. Makhun Lal Hattee, 9 W. R. 362 ... 369

G—concld.

Page.

Gungadhar Shikdar v. Ayinuddin Shah Biswas, 8 C. 960 ... 608
Gur Sobhraj v. Gur Chandiram, (1890) 1 S. C. Sel D. 353 ... 226
Gurdas Singh v. Chandrikah Singh and Chandraikah Singh v. Rashbehary Singh, 36 C. 193; 5 C. L. J. 611; 1 Ind. Cas. 913 ... 254
Gurdeo v. Chandrikah Singh, 5 C. L. J. 611; 36 C. 193, 1 Ind. Cas. 913 362, 544
Gurditta v Jai Singh, 72 P. R 1907; 108 P. L. R. 1908 ... 713
Gurudas Pyne v. Ram Narain Sahu, 10 C. 860; 11 I. A. 59 ... 936
Gurusami Sastrial v. Ganapathia Pillai, 5 M. 337 ... 640
Guruvajamma v. Venkatakrishnama Chetti, 24 M. 34 ... 903
Guruvayya Gonda v. Dattatraya Anant, 28 B. 11 ... 199
Gyan Parkash v. Hazura Singh, 3 P. R. 1899 ... 62

H

Habibur Rahman v. Munshi Khodabux, 11 C. W. N. 195; 5 C. L. J. 219; 6 Cr. L. J. 29 ... 1008
Hafizuddin Choudhri v. Abdul Aziz, 20 C. 755... 79
Haidar v. Iswar Das, 22 P. R. 1906; 115 P. L. R. 1906 ... 169
Haidri Begum v. Nathu, 17 A. 45 ... 324
Hameedoolah v. Mohamed Asghur Hossein, 6 C. 499; 7 C. L. R. 471 ... 249
Hamijuddi Mondal v. Damodar Ghosh, 10 C. W. N. 1026; 4 Cr. L. J. 168 ... 1008
Hamira v. Ram Singh, 134 P. R. 1907; 74 P. L. R. 1908; 85 P. W. R. 1907 444, 713
Hanmantappa v. Jivabai, 24 B. 547 ... 479
Hanooman Persaud Panday v. Musammat Babooee Munraj Koonwaree, 6 M. I. A. 393 at p. 419; 18 W. R. 81 14, 86, 685, 894, 947
Hanuman Pandat v. Jota Kunwar, A. W. N. (1908) 207 ... 633
Hanuman Prasad v. Muhammad Ishaq, 28 A. 137; 2 A. L. J. 615; A. W. N. (1905) 229 ... 415
Hanuman Rai v. Udit Narain Rai, 7 A. 917 ... 708
Har Charan Mukerjee v. King-Emperor, 1 C. L. J. 161; 2 Cr. L. J. 110; 32 C. 367; 9 C. W. N. 346 ... 112
Har Lal v. Sundar, 11 A. 399 ... 438
Hara Chandra Bairagi v. Bipin Behary Dass, 6 Ind. Cas. 860; 13 C. L. J. 38 ... 42
Hara Coomar Sircar v. Doorga Moni, 21 C. 195 172
Haradhan Dutt v. Radhanath Shaha, 10 W. R. 398; 2 B. L. R. (s N.) 14 ... 166
Harakrishna Mitter v. Ram Gopal Mitter, 6 Ind. Cas. 170; 14 C. W. N. 759 ... 166
Hardas Singh v. Buta, 94 P. L. R. 1903 ... 181
Harek Chand Babu v. Bejoy Chund Mahtab, 9 C. W. N. 795; 2 C. L. J. 87 ... 10
Hari Das v. Panchkowri, 9 Ind. Cas. 615 ... 147
Hari Dass Bairagi v. Udoy Chandra Das, 8 C. L. J. 261; 12 C. W. N. 1086 ... 437
Hari Lal Sinha v. Bengal-Nagpur Railway Company, 13 C. L J. 150; 15 C. W. N. 195, 9 Ind. Cas 331 ... 529
Hari Mohun v. Naimuddin, 20 C. 41 ... 380

H—contd.

Page.

Hari Narain Ghose v. Administrator-General, 3 C. L. R. 446 .. 934
Hari Pandurang v. The Secretary of State for India, 27 B. 424 .. 856
Hari Ram v. Kashi Ram, 122 P. R. 1908 ... 569
Hari Sanker Dutt v. Kali Kumar Patra, 32 C. 734; 9 C. W. N. 690 ... 903
Hari Singh v Nika Singh, 42 P. R. 1907 ... 408
Hari Sundari v. Shasi bala, 1 C. W. N. 195 ... 908
Harish Chandra Chatterjee v. Bhoba Tarini Debi, 8 C. W. N. 321 ... 652
Harkhoo Singh v Bansidhar Singh, 25 C. 876; 2 C. W. N. 360 ... 960
Harnam Chander v. Muhammad Yar Khan, 27 A. 485; 2 A. L. J. 169; A. W. N. (1905) 63 ... 134
Harpal Singh v. Lekhraj Kunwar, 30 A. 406; 5 A. L. J. 405; A. W. N. (1908) 165 ... 269
Harrison v. Delhi and London Bank, 4 A. 437 ... 25
Harvey v. Shelton, 7 Beav. 455 at p. 462; 13 L. J. Ch. 466 ... 164
Haryallu Mall v. Nathu Ram, 51 P. R. 1907; 38 P. L. R. 1907 ... 169
Hawkesley v. Bradshaw, (1880) 5 Q. B. D. 302; 49 L. J. Q B. 333; 42 L. T. 285; 28 W. R. 557; 44 J. P. 473 ... 130
Haza Ram v. Badri Ram, 1 C W. N. 279 ... 135
Hazari Lal v. Tilok Chand, 136 P. R. 1898 ... 46
Hellier v. Silcox, 19 L. J. Q B. 295; 14 Jur. 573 ... 31
Higgins v. Willes, (1828) 3 M. & R. 382 ... 163
Himat Ram v. Khushal Jethi Ram, 18 B. 98 ... 564
Hingu Miya v. Heramba Chandra Chakravarti, 13 C. L. J. 139; 8 Ind. Cas. 81 ... 680
Hira v Karam Kaur, 23 P. R. 1907 ... 181
Hira v. Wazira 9 P. R. 1892, Rev. ... 18
Hira Singh v. Bhana, 9 P. R 1894 ... 855
Hira Singh v. Jiwan Singh, 14 P. R. 1880, Rev. ... 18
Hiramony Biswas v. Musa Khan, 7 Ind. Cas. 625 ... 65
Hirdei v. Parag Tewari, 14 O. C. 144; 11 Ind. Cas. 527 ... 615
Hodson v. Walker (1872 L. R. 7 Ex. 55; 41 L. J. Ex. 51; 25 C. T. 937; 20 W. R. 489 ... 850
Hood Barrs v. Cathcart, (1894) 3 Ch. 376 at p. 380; 63 L. J. Ch 793 ... 852
Hood Barrs v Heriot, (1897) A. C. 177; 66 L. J. Q. B 356; 76 L. T. 299; 45 W. R. 507 ... 852
Hopcraft v. Hickman, (1824) 2 S. & S. 130; 3 L. J. Ch. (o. s.) 43 ... 163
Hopkinson v. Rolt, (1861) 9 H. L. C. 514; 34 L. J. Ch. 468; 7 Jur. (N. S) 1209; 5 L. T. 90; 9 W. R. 900 ... 656
Hopper, In re, 2 Q. B. 367 at p. 376; 36 L. J. Q. B. 97; 8 B. & S. 100; 15 L. T. 566; 15 W. R. 443 ... 166
Horrocks v. Bigby, 9 Ch. D. 180; 47 L. J. Ch. 800; 38 L. T. 782; 26 W. R 714 ... 880
Howard's case, (1700) 2 Salk 625; 1 Ld. Raymond 480 ... 901
Huddersfield Banking Company, Limited v. Henry Lister and Son, Limited, (1895) 2 Ch. 273; 64 L. J. Ch. 523; 12 R 331; 72 L. T. 703; 43 W. R. 567 ... 80
Hughes v Howard, 25 Beav. 575; 53 Eng Rep. 756 .. 702

H—concld.

Page.

Hukam Singh v. Raghubir Saran, 27 A. 700 ... 564
Hulodhur Sen v. Gooroodass Roy, 20 W. R. 126 ... 694
Hurro Nath Rai Chowdhuri v. Randhir Singh, 18 C 311; 18 I. A. 1. ... 6
Husain Ali v. Hafizali, 3. A. 600 ... 143
Husain Khan v. Nateri Srinivasa, 6 M. H. C. R. 356 ... 972
Huseni Begam v. Muhammad Rustam Ali Khan, 29 A. 222; 4 A. L. J. 60; A. W. N. (1907) 27 ... 613
Husrutoollah v. Aboo Mahamed, 6 W. R. 39 ... 381
Hutchson v. Smith, 5 Ir. Eq. 117 ... 26
Hyde Park Place Charity, In re, (1911) 1 Ch. 678 at p. 685; 80 L. J. Ch. 593 ... 232

I

Imam Ali v. Baijnath, 33 C. 613; 10 C. W. N. 551; 3 C. L. J. 576 ... 199
Imam Bakhsh v. Karim Shah, 16 P. R. 1895 ... 73
Imdad Husain v. Aziz-un-nissa, 23 C. 483; 23 I. A. 8 ... 989
Imperator v. Durga Bahirav Tiwari, C. R. No. 33 of 1904 ... 1006
Imperator v. Jaro, 5 S. L. R. 54; 12 Ind. Cas. 646 ... 221
Indu Meah v. Dar Baksh Bhuiyan, 14 C. L. J. 42; 15 C. W. N. 798; 10 Ind Cas. 275 ... 380
Intizam Begam v. Waziran, 47 P. R. 1899 ... 73
Ishan Chander v. Shamacharan Dutt, 10 C. 41; 12 C. L. R. 414 ... 33
Ishan Chandra Mitter v. Raja Ram Ranjan Chakrabutty, 2 C. L. J. 125 197,515
Ishan Chunder Sirkar v. Beni Madhab Sirkar, 24 C. 62; 1 C. W. N. 36 ... 487
Ishar Kuar v. Raja Singh, 9 Ind. Cas. 608; 29 P. R. 1911; 94 P. L. R. 1911; 124 P. W. R. 1911... 177
Ishri Prasad v. Baij Nath, 28 A. 707; A. W. N. (1906) 195; 3 A. L. J. 373 ... 534
Ishwar Das v. Duni Chand, 27 P. R. 1907 ... 169
Ishwar Narain v. Janki, 15 A. 132 ... 633
Isle of Wight Railway Co. v. Tahourdin, 25 Ch. D. 320; 53 L J. Ch. 353; 50 L. T. 132; 32 W. R. 297 ... 870
Ismail Mussajee Mookerdum v. Hafiz Boo, 10 C. W. N. 570; 3 A. L. J. 353; 3 C. L. J. 484; 8 Bom. L. R. 279; 16 M. L. J. 166; 1 M. L. T. 137; 33 C. 773 ... 450
Isri Dut v. Hansbutti Koerain, 10 I. A. 150; 10 C. 324; 13 C. L. R. 418 ... 692
Isuri Prasad Singh v. Umrao Sing, 22 A. 234 ... 217
Iswar Chunder Santra v. Satish Chunder Giri, 30 C. 207 ... 630

J

J'Anson v. Sturat, (1787) 1 T. R. 748; 1 R. R. 392 ... 507
Jacobs v. Benson, 63 Am. Dec. 609; 39 Maine 132 ... 95
Jaddo Kuer v. Sheo Shankar, 7 A. L. J. 945; 7 Ind. Cas. 902 ... 198

J—contd

Page.

Jadow v. Chhagon, 5 B. 306 ... 414
Jadunadan Prasad v. Brij Bhukan, 5 O. C. 70 ... 980
Jadunandan Prasad Singh v. Koer Kallyan Singh, 15 C. L. J. 61; 13 Ind. Cas. 653 ... 906
Jadunath v. Jagdish Chandra Deb, 7 C. W. N. 423 ... 111
Jadunath v. Roop Lal, 33 C. 967 at p. 984; 4 C. L. J 22; 10 C. W. N. 650 ... 457
Jagannath Prasad v. Badri Prasad, 9 A. L. J. 48; 11 Ind. Cas. 768 ... 538
Jagannath Prasad v. Tori, 29 A. 18; 3 A. L. J. 610; A. W. N. (1906) 253 ... 463
Jagatjit Singh v. Sarabjit Singh, 19 C. 159 ... 83
Jagdish v. Man Singh, 100 P. R 1895 ... 669
Jaggesswar Dutt v. Bhuban Mohan Mitra, 33 C. 425; 3 C. L. J. 205 ... 699
Jagodanund v. Amritalal Sircar, 22 C. 767 at p. 781 ... 267
Jahnnovi Chowdhurani v. Secretary of State, 7 C. W. N. 377 ... 404
Jai Mangal Singh, In re, 11 W. R. 433; 3 B. L. R. A. C. 82 ... 165
Jai Mangal Singh v. Mohanram Marwari, 12 W. R. 397; 8 B. L. R. 319 n ... 15
Jaipal Kunwar v. Indar Bahadur, 31 I. A. 67; 26 A. 238 ... 639
Jalla v. Gehna, 60 P. R. 1907; 76 P. W. R. 1907 (F. B.) 408, 573
Jamuna Parshad v. Ganga Parshad Singh, 19 C. 401 ... 466
Janaki Nath Chowdhury v. Kali Narain Roy Chowdhury, 7 Ind. Cas. 881; 37 C. 662; 15 C. W. N. 45 ... 125
Janokey Dass v. Brindabun Doss, 3 M. I. A. 175 375
Jarratt v. Aldam, (1870) L. R. 9. Eq. 463; 39 L. J. Ch. 349; 22 L. T. 192; 18 W. R. 51 ... 514
Jasodha Devi v. Lachman Das, 37 P. R. 1892 ... 860
Jaun Beebee v. Sheikh Moonshee Beparee, 3 W. R. 93 ... 613
Javanmal v. Muktabai, 14 B. 516 at p. 525 ... 967
Jawadal Huq v. Ram Das Saha, 24 C. 143; 1 C. W. N. 166 ... 337
Jawala v. Hira Singh, 55 P. R. 1903; 117 P. L. R. 1903 ... 714
Jawala Sahai v. Ram Singh, 67 P. R. 1909; 98 P. W. R. 1909; 2 Ind. Cas. 954; 133 P. L. R. 1909 ... 527
Jessup, In the matter of, 81 Calf. 508; 6 L. R. A. 594 ... 685
Jethalal Hirachand v. Lalbhai Dalpatbhai, 6 Bom L. R. 86; 28 B. 298 ... 862
Jhanda Singh v. Kesar Singh, 37 P. R. 1910; 6 Ind. Cas. 712; 62 P. W. R. 1910 ... 550
Jibunti Nath Khan v. Shib Nath Chukerbutty, 8 C. 819; 10 C. L. R 537 ... 154
Jindwadi v. Hassan Shah, 41 P. R. 1895 ... 414
Jiwan v. Wazir, 39 P. R. 1887 ... 413
Jogendra Mohan v. Uma Nath, 35 C. 636; 8 C. L. J. 41; 12 C. W. N. 646 ... 960
Jogeshur v. Ghanasham Dass, 5. C. W. N. 356 ... 150
Jogeshuri Chowdhrain v. Mahomed Ebrahim, 14 C. 33 ... 672
Jogeshwar Narain v. Moorlidhar, 7 C. L. J. 270 ... 415
Jogeswar Narain v. Ram Chandra, 23 C. 670; 23 I. A. 37 ... 4

J—concld.

Page.

Jogeswar Sarma v. Dinaram Sarma, 3 C. L. J. 140 ... 508
Joghi Kannigan v. Emperor, 31 M. 515; 4 M. L. T. 223; 8 Cr. L. J. 402 ... 1006
Jones v. Noy, 2 Myl. and K. 125; 39 R. R. 160; 3 L. J. Ch. 14 ... 25
Jotindra Mohan Tagore v. Durga Dobe, 10 C. W. N. 438 ... 328
Joy Coomar v. Bundoo Lal, 9 C. 363; 12 C. L. R. 490 ... 845
Joyanti Kumar Mookerjee v. Middleton, 27 C. 785; 4 C. W. N. 562 ... 215
Joytara v. Pran Krishna Seal, 7 Ind. Cas. 769; 15 C. L. J. 257; 15 C. W. N. 512 ... 367
Jugdeo Narain Singh v. Raja Singh, 15 C. 656 ... 146
Jugal Mohini Dasi v. Srinath Chatterjee, 12 C. L. J. 609; 7 Ind. Cas. 477 329, 488
Jugdeo Singh v. Habibulla, 12 C. W. N. 107; 6 C. L. J. 612 ... 300
Jaggun Lal, In the matter of, 7 C. L. R. 356 123, 680
Juhooree Lall v. Dear, 23 W. R. 399 ... 608
Junmajoy Mullick v. Dwarka Nath Maytee, 5 C. 287; 4 C. L. R. 574 ... 333

K

K. S. Bonnerjee v. Ramchandra Dutt, 5 Ind. Cas. 577; 14 C. W. N. 784; 37 C. 552; 11 C. L. J. 577 41
Kabilaso Koer v. Raghunath Saran, 18 C. 481 ... 368
Kadar Hussain v. Hussain Sahib, 20 M. 118 ... 806
Kadambini Baijee v. Madan Mohan Basack, 3 C. W. N. 247 ... 861
Kadar Khan v. Juggeswar Prasad Singh, 35 C. 1023 ... 374
Kade Mandal v. Ahadali Molla, 14 C. W. N. 629; 6 Ind. Cas. 594 ... 30
Kadir Bakhsh v. Gulam, 74 P. R. 1897 ... 169
Kairajmal v. Daim, 1 C. L. J. 584; 32 C. 296 ... 415
Kalachand Kyal v. Shib Chunder Roy, 19 C. 392 625
Kalanand Singh v. Sarafat Hassein, 12 C. W. N. 528 ... 960
Kali Krishna Tagore v. Izzatunnissa Khatun, 24 C. 557 ... 30
Kali Prosanna Bose v. Lal Mohan Guha, 2 C. W. N. 219; 25 C. 258 ... 142
Kali Shankar Sahai v. Maharaja Pratab Udai Nath, 6 C. L. J. 36 ... 415
Kalka Singh v. Paras Ram, 22 I. A. 68; 22 C. 434 442
Kallu v. Manni, 23 A. 93 ... 654
Kalupnath Singh v. Lala Ramdein Lal, 16 C. 117 125
Kamarnddin Ahmed v. Jawahir Lal, 27 A. 334; 1 C. L. J. 381; 7 Bom. L. R. 433; 15 M. L. J. 258; 9 C. W. N. 601; 2 A. L J. 397 ... 160
Kameswar Prasad v. Run Bahadur Singh, 6 C. 843; 8 C. L. R. 361; 8 I. A. 8 ... 6
Kamini Debi v. Khetter Mohan, 15 C. W. N. 681; 11 Ind. Cas. 382 ... 46
Kamini Debi Dasi v. Aghore Nath Mookerjee, 11 C. L. J. 91; 14 C. W. N. 357; 4 Ind. Cas. 402 ... 65
Kanai Lal v. Nitai Chand, 12 C. L. J. 612; 7 Ind. Cas. 492 ... 31
Kanakasabai v. Muttu, 13 M. 445 ... 662
Kangaya Gurukal v. Kalimuthu Annavi, 27 M. 526 ... 336

K—contd.

Page.

Kanhai Lal v. Chhadammi Lal, 31 A. 48; 6 A. L. J. 1; A. W. N. (1908) 290; 5 M. L. T. 55; 9 Cr. L. J. 63; 1 Ind. Cas. 5 ... 1008
Kannan v. Krishnan, 13 M. 324 ... 639
Kanumantamma v. Rami Reddi, 4 M. 272 ... 872
Karam Singh v. Mohammad Din, 11 P. R. 1909; 1 Ind. Cas. 397; 51 P. L. R. 1909; 12 P. W. R. 1909 ... 344
Karim Baksh v. Jehandad Khan, 74 P. R. 1906; 137 P. L. R 1906 ... 27
Karim-un-nissa v. Phul Chand, 15 A. 134 ... 91
Kashi Prasad v. Indar Kunwar, 5 A. L. J. 590; A. W. N. (1908) 222 ... 546
Kashi Ram v. Amri, 32 A. 189; 7 A. L. J. 153; 5 Ind. Cas 207 ... 644
Kashi Ram v. Harman Das, 47 P. R. 1887 ... 671
Kashiram v. Behari, 4 C. P. L. R. 49 ... 984
Kashmiri Mal v. Girdhari Lal, 74 P. R. 1908; 57 P. W. R. 1907 ... 319
Kasi Viswanathan v. Emperor, 30 M. 328; 5 Cr. L. J. 341; 2 M. L. T. 177; 17 M. L. J. 141 ... 214
Kasim Hasan Khan v. Batul Bibi, 13 O. C. 255; 7 Ind. Cas. 1019 ... 897
Kasinath Das v. Sadasiv Patnaick, 20 C. 805 ... 92
Kasiswar v. Mohendra, 25 C. 136 ... 42
Kastuarbai v. Shivajiram 3 B. 372 ... 137
Kathaperumal v. Venkabai, 2 M. 194 ... 321
Kattamma Nachiar v. Bothagurusami Thovar, 6 M. H C. R. 293 ... 134
Kedar Singh v. Sumer Singh, 10 Ind. Cas. 196 ... 814
Kedarnath v. Prodyot Kumar, 11 Ind. Cas. 48; 14 C. L. J. 610 ... 141
Keech v. Sanford, Select Cas. Ch. 61; 2 Eq. Cas. Abr 741 ... 546
Kesar v. Sundar Singh, 27 P. R. 1909; 46 P. L. R. 1909; 33 P. W. R. 1909; 1 Ind. Cas. 888 ... 798
Kesar Singh v. Nihal Singh, 45 P. R. 1891 ... 447
Kessowji Issur v. G. I. P. Railway Company, 31 B. 381 at p. 390; 11 C. W. N. 721; 6 C. L. J. 5; 4 A. L. J. 461; 2 M. L. T. 435; 9 Bom. L. R. 671; 17 M. L. J. 347 ... 132
Khaira v. Maula, 49 P. R. 1911; 11 Ind. Cas. 191; 136 P. W. R. 1911; 212 P. L. R. 1911 ... 558
Khairunnessa Bibi v. Lokenath Pal, 27 C. 276 ... 677
Khater Mistri v. Sadrudi Khan, 34 C. 922 ... 688
Khankar Abdur Rahman v. Ali Hafez, 28 C. 256 ... 450
Khazan Singh v. Relu, 35 P. R. 1906 ... 181
Khellat Chunder Ghose v. Nusseb-un-nissa, 16 W. R. 477 ... 381
Khelut Chunder Ghose v. Tara Chand Koondoo, 6 W. R. 269 ... 164
Khetramani Das v. Kashi Nath Das, 2 B. L. R. A. C. 15; 10 W. R. (F. B.) 89 ... 136
Khettramoni Dasi v. Shyama Churn, 21 C. 539 172, 433,
Khettur Mohan Chuttopadhya v. Ishur Chunder Surma, 11 W. R. 271 ... 369
Khoobhun v. Wooma Churn Singh, 3 C. L. R. 453 125
Khuda Bakhsh v. Alim-un-nissa, 27 A. 313 ... 157
Khunni Lal v. Govind Krishna Narain, 38 I. A. 87; 15 C. W. N. 545; 8 A. L. J. 552; 13 C. L. J. 575; 13 Bom. L. R. 427; 10 M. L. T. 25; 2 M. W. N. 432; 21 M. L. J. 645; 33 A. 356; 10 Ind. Cas. 477 ... 270
Khurshed Ali v. Rashid Husain, 9 O. C. 331 ... 509

K—contd.

Page.

Khushal Singh v. Arjan Singh, 41 P. R. 1894 ... 33
King Emperor v. Datto Hanmant Shahapurkar, 30 B. 49; 7 Bom. L. R. 633; 2 Cr. L. J. 578 ... 296
——— v Po Chon, 2 L. B. R. 311; 1 Cr. L. J. 1118 ... 389
——— v. Shwe Daung, U. B. R. 1897. 1901, 1, 119 ... 398
——— v. Thammana Reddi, 25 M. 667 ... 222
——— v. Tirumal Reddi, 24 M. 523 ... 281
Kirpa Ram v. Bhagana, 106 P. R. 1889 ... 623
Kirpa Ram v. Ude Ram, 77 P. R. 1896 ... 949
Kirpal Singh v. Kesree, 67 P. R. 1869 ... 406
Kisan Kunbi v. Raghunath, 2 N. L. R. 101 ... 983
Kisandas Rupchand v. Rachappa Nithoba, 33 B. 644 at p. 651; 11 Bom. L. R. 1042 ... 268
Kishen Parshad v. Har Narain Singh, 38 I. A. 45; 15 C. W. N. 321; 13 C. L. J. 345; 9 Ind. Cas. 739; 8 A. L. J. 256; 9 M. L. T. 343; 21 M. L. J. 378; 13 Bom. L. R. 359; 33 A. 272; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 395 208, 307, 874, 946
Kishnaji Narayan Parkhi v. Rajmal Manikchand Marwari, 24 B. 360 ... 140
Kishori Mohan Sett v. Gul Mahomed, 15 C. 177 543
Kishun Pershad Chowdhry v. Tipan Pershad Singh, 34 C. 735; 11 C. W. N. 613; 5 C. L. J. 569 ... 349
Kissen Gopal Sadaney v. Kali Prosonno Sett, 33 C. 633 .. 880
Kissori Mohan Roy v. Harsukh Das, 17 C. 436; 17 I. A. 17 ... 805
Knox v. Simmonds, (1791) 3 Bro. C. C. 358; 1 Ves J. 369 ... 119
Ko Shoay Doon v. Shoay Gan, 6 B. L. R. 196, 14 W. R. 331 ... 247
Ko Tho v. Ma Hnin, 14 C. L. J. 241; 15 C. W. N. 862; 2 M. W. N. 449; 13 Bom. L. R. 694; 38 C. 717; 8 A. L. J. 1117; 6 L. B. R. 26; 4 Bur. L. T. 257; 11 Ind. Cas. 545 ... 341
Kondura Ranga Reddi v. Subbiah Setty, 28 M. 394 ... 160
Kosuri Ramaraju v. Mury Ramalingam, 26 M. 74 ... 472
Kotagiri Venkatasubbamma Roy v. Vellanki Venkatarama Row, 24 M. 1 ... 205
Koylash Chandra Dutt v. Goluk Chunder Peddar, 2 C. W. N. 61 ... 41
Krishna Chandra Dutta v. Miran Bajania, 10 C. W. N. 499, 3 C. L. J. 222 ... 941
Krishna Lall Saha v. Bhairab Chandra Rohat, 9 C. W. N., CCXLVIII ... 700
Krishna Pershad Singh v. Gosta Behari Kundu, 5 C. L. J. 434 ... 415
Krishna Ramaya Naik v. Vasudev Vankatesh Pai, 21 B. 808 at p. 815 ... 38
Krishnaji Janardan v. Murarry Rao, 12 B. 48 ... 313
Krishnasami v. Kesava, 14 M. 63 ... 44
Krishnaswamy Chetty v. Cottah Mangamah, (1911) M W. N. 365; 10 Ind. Cas. 283 ... 17
Krishnier v. Sarvothama Royar, (1910) M. W. N. 610; 8 Ind. Cas. 366 ... 789
Kristo Komal Singh v. Huree Sirdar, 13 W. R. 44 F. B.) ... 90
Kuddutamma v. Narasimha Charyulu, 17 M. L. J. 528 ... 479

K—concld.

Page.

Kumud Nath Roy Chowdhry v. Jatindra Nath Chowdhry, 13 C. L. J. 221; 38 C. 394; 9 Ind. Cas. 189; 15 C. W. N. 399 ... 380
Khundukuri Mahlakshmamma v. Secretary of State, 34 M. 295; 1 M. W. N. 595; 8 M. L. T. 389; 20 M. L. J. 823; 8 Ind. Cas. 67 ... 821
Kunjo Behari Singh v Madhab Chundra Ghose, 23 C. 884 ... 30

L

Labhu v. Nihali, 7 P. R. 1905; 66 P. L. R. 1905 ... 484
Labrador Company v. Queen, A. C. 104 at p. 122; 67 L. T. 730 ... 517
Lachman Prosad v. Halas Mahton, 11 W. R. 151; 2. B. L. R. 27 App. ... 31
Luchmeshar Singh v. Dookh Mochan Jha, 24 C. 677 ... 326
Lachmi v. Tota, 16 P. R 1888 ... 123
Lachmi Narain v. Kunji Lal, 16 A. 449 ... 670
Ladhu v. Daulti, 126 P. R. 1890 ... 27
Ladoo v. Mahumdee, 49 P. R. 1867 ... 75
Lady Dela Pole v. Dick, (1885) 29 Ch. D. 351; 54 L. J. Ch 940; 52 L. T 457; 33 W. R. 585 ... 369
Lahori v. Radho, 72 P. R. 1906 ... 527
Laikhram v. Ghumne, 3 Agra H. C. R. 298 ... 498
Laird v. Briggs, (1880) 16 Ch. D. 440 at p. 446; 43 L. T. 632; 29 W. R. 197; 50 L. J. Ch. 260 ... 130
Lakshmana v. Sukiya Bai, 7 M. 400 ... 82
Lala Mobarak Lal v. Secretary of State, 11 C. 200 ... 403
Lala Parbhu Lal v. Mylne, 14 C. 401 ... 702
Lalit Chandra Neogi v. Tarini Persad Gupta, 5 C. W. N. 335 ... 1001
Lallji, In re, 19 A. 302 ... 845
Lalun Monee v. Sona Manee Dabee, 22 W. R. 334 786
Lampleigh v. Brathwait, 1 Smith L. C. 11th Ed. 160 ... 147
Lane v. Esdaile, (1891) A. C. 210; 60 L. J. Ch. 644; 64 L. T. 666; 40 W. R. 65 ... 171
Ledgard v. Bull, 13 I. A. 134; 9 A. 191 254, 277, 362, 900
Lester v. Garland, (1808) 15 Ves. 248 at p. 254; 10 R. R. 68 ... 901
Letter No. 151, dated the 9th February 1870, 13 W. R. Cr., Letters 2 ... 835
Liquidation Estates Purchase Company v. Willoughby, (1898) A. C. 321; 67 L. J. Ch. 251; 78 L. T. 329; 14 T. L. R. 295; 46 W. R. 589 ... 620
Little v. Newton, 9 Dowling 437; 10 L. J. C. P. 88; 5 Jur. 246; 2 Man & G. 351; 2 Scott. N. R. 165 ... 166
Loknath v. Bissessarnath, 27 C. 103 at p. 114; 26 I. A. 268 ... 968
London Association of Shipowners v London and Indian Docks (1863) 3 Ch. 242; 2 R. 23; 67 L. T. 238; 7 Asp. M. C. 195 ... 241
Lord Advocate v. Young, (1883) 12 A. C. 544 at p. 556 ... 820
Lyman v Arnus (1827) 5 Pickering 213 ... 123

M

Page.

Ma The v. Tha E, U. B. R. 1897-1901, 1, 104 ... 392
Macpherson's case, Dean & Bell 202 ... 100
Madappa v. Rama Krishna, 13 Bom. L. R. 698; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 1; 15 C. W. N. 962; 14 C. L. J. 245; 35 B. 327; 12 Ind. Cas. 42 ... 175
Madari v. Malki, 6 A. 428 ... 633
Madhab Chandra Bara v. Srimatee Rani Sarat Kumari Debi, 15 C. W. N. 126; 6 Ind. Cas. 26 426
Madhabmoni Dasi v. Pamela Lambert, 37 C. 796; 6 Ind. Cas. 537 ... 160
Madhavrav v. Gungabai, 2 B. 639 ... 137
Madho Parshad v. Mehrban Singh, 18 C. 157 at p. 161 (P.C.); 17 I. A. 194 ... 467
Madho Prasad v. Ram Ratan, 15 C. W. N. 838; 14 C. L. J. 264; 11 Ind. Cas. 507; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 66; 13 Bom. L. R. 780; 21 M. L. J. 938; 10 M. L. T. 481 ... 87
Madhopersad v. Gajudhar, 11 C. 111 at p. 117; 11 I. A. 186 ... 624
Madhub v. Novodeep, 16 C. 126 ... 66
Madhub Nath Surma v. Myarani Medhi, 17 C. 819 ... 383
Madras Railway Company v. Zemindar of Carvetinagaram, 1 I. A. 364; 14 B. L. R. 209; 22 W. R. 279 ... 513
Mafuzul Hosain v. Basid Sheikh, 4 C. L. J. 485; 34 C. 36; 11 C. W. N. 71 ... 635
Magniram v. Mehdi Hossein, 31 C. 95 ... 83
Mahabir Parshad v. Ramyad Singh, 12 B. L. R. 90; 20 W. R. 192 ... 466
Mahadeo Prasad v. Gajadhar, 10 C. W. N. 12 ... 543
Maharaja Birendra Kishore Manikya Bahadur v. Dilwar Ali, 13 Ind. Cas. 517 ... 513
Maharaja Birendra Kishore Manikya Bahadur v. Roshan Khan, 13 Ind. Cas 518 ... 513
Maharaja Manindra Chander Nandy Bahadur v. Jamaher Kumari Bibi, 2 C. W. N. 670; 32 C. 643 ... 457
Mahendra Ghoshal v. Bhuban Mardana, 12 C. L. J. 566; 6 Ind. Cas. 810; 38 C. 1; 14 C. W. N. 945 ... 147
Mahla v. Shah Muhammad, 134 P. R. 1894 ... 410
Mahmud Baksh v. Hussan Bakhsh, 7 P. R. 1912; 11 Ind. Cas. 708 ... 665
Mahomad Afzal Khan v. Nand Lal, 16 P. R. 1908; 146 P. L. R. 1908; 73 P. W. R. 1907 ... 312
Mahomed Jan v. Ganga Bishen Singh, 13 C. L. J. 525; 15 C. W. N. 443; 9 M. L. T. 446; 8 A. L. J. 480; 13 Bom. L. R. 413; 38 C. 537; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 277; 21 M. L. J. 1148; 10 Ind. Cas. 272 ... 960
Mahomed Shamsoolhuda v. Sewakram, 22 W. R. 409; 12 I. A. 7; 14 B. L. R. 226 ... 191
Mahomed Taqi v. Choa Lal, 13 C. L. J. 499; 7 Ind. Cas. 750 ... 942
Mahommed Mozaffer Hossein v. Kishori Mohan Roy, 22 C. 909; 22 I. A. 129 ... 702
Mailathi v. Subbaraya, 24 M. 650 ... 692
Mairam Pillai v. Bishop of Mylapore, 17 M. 447 ... 602
Mana Vikrama v. Mallichery, 3 M. 68 ... 120
Mancharam v. Pranshankar, 6 B. 298 ... 226
Mangal v. Chetu, 20 P. R. 1890 ... 181
Mangal Khan v. Salimullah Khan, 16 A. 26 ... 79
Manik Borai v. Bani Charain Mandal, 13 C. L. J. 649; 10 Ind. Cas. 469 ... 365

M—contd.

Page.

Manikya Mala Bose v. Nandukumar Bose, 33 C. 1306; 4 C. L. J. 357; 11 C. W. N. 12 ... 10
Manilal v. Vammaladas, 29 B. 621; 7 Bom. L. R. 644 (F. B.) ... 247
Manindra Chunder Nundy v. Jawaher Kumari Bibi, 9 C. W. N. 670 ... 146
Mannu Lall v. Mohammed Ismail, 7 O. C. 284... 491
Manohar Singh v. Sumrita Kuar, 17 A. 428 ... 122
Mansab Ali v. Gulab Chand, 10 A. 85 ... 150
Maqsud-ul-nissa v. Kaniz Zohra, 135 P. R. 1908 296
Mariam Bibi v. Sakina, 14 A. 8 ... 439
Mathura Das, In the matter of, 16 A. 80 ... 111
Mathura Singh v. Bhawani Singh, 22 A. 248 at p. 253 ... 260
Matichand v. Bajrang Sahai, S. A. No. 1878 of 1909 ... 147
Mayaram Surma v. Nichula Kantani, 15 C. 402 ... 278
Maynard v. Fredrick, (1851) 7 Cushing 247 ... 166
Megh Lal v. Girdhari Singh, 5 C. L. J. 208 ... 969
Mehr v. Chennu, 7 P. R. 1891, Rev. ... 957
Mendai Lal v. Bhujja Singh, A. W. N. (1895) 140 369
Meymott v. Meymott, 31 Beav. 445; 32 L. J. Ch. 218; 9 Jur. (N. S.) 426 ... 26
Middleton v. Weeks, (1613) Cro. Jac. 200 ... 163
Midnapur Zamindari Company, Limitted v. Gobinda Mahto, 8 C. L. J. 31 415, 595
Miller v. Race, 1. S. L. C. 468 ... 213
Minakshi v. Subramanya, 14 I. A. 160; 11 M. 26 171, 362
Minakshisundram Pillai v. Ayyathorai, 18 M. 136 ... 579
Mir Ahwad Hossein v. Mahommed Askari, 29 C. 726 (F. B.) ... 776
Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakharuddin Mahommed Chawdhury, 34 C. 163; 11 C. W. N. 207; 4 C. L. J. 431; 1 M. L. T. 360 ... 677
Miran Bakhsh v. Ahmad, 145 P. R. 1907 ... 344
Mirza Shamsher Bahadur v. Kunj Behari Lall, 7 C. L. J. 414; 12 C. W. N. 273; 3 M. L. T. 212 ... 311
Mitchell v. Mathura Das, 12 I. A. 150; 8 A. 6 ... 456
Mitta Kanth Audhicarry v. Meerunjun Audhicarry, 14 B. L. R. 166; 22 W. R. 437 ... 692
Mitta Kunth Audicharry v. Neerunjun Audhicarry, 14 B. L. R 166; 22 W. R. 437 ... 226
Modhoo Dossia v. Nobin Chunder Roy, 16 W. R. 25 .. 369
Moganalal v. Doshi Mulji, 25 B. 631 ... 426
Mohabir v. King-Emperor, 8 A. L. J. 630; 33 A. 578; 11 Ind. Cas. 585; 12 Cr. L. J. 401 ... 922
Mohamad Raza Khan v. Dalip, A. W. N. (1892) 103 ... 555
Mohammad Ewaz v. Brij Lal, 4 I. A. 166; 1 A. 465 ... 533
Mohammad Imamali Khan v. Hussain Khan, 26 C. 81; 25 I. A. 161; 2 C. W. N. 737 ... 438
Mohan Lal v. Bilaso, 14 A. 512 ... 154
Mohan Lal v. Niru Punja, 12 B. 169 ... 245
Mohanund Sahai v. Said-un-nissa, 8 C. L. J. 525; 12 C. W. N 154 ... 183
Moharaja of Bobbili v. Raja Kaminayani Bangaru, 21 M. L. J. 593; 9 M. L. T. 155; 2 M. W. N. 101 ... 14
Moharanee Dasya v. Harindra Lal Ray, 1 C. W. N. 458 ... 146

M – contd.

Page.

Mohendra Ghoshal v. Bhuban Mardana, 38 C. 1; 14 C. W. N. 945; 12 C. L. J. 565; 6 Ind. Cas. 810 ... 457
Moher Sheikh v. Queen-Empress, 21 C. 392 ... 926
Mohesh Lal v. Bawan Dass, 9 C. 951; 13 C. L R. 221; 10 I. A. 62 ... 630
Mohima Chandra Koondoo v. Noorooddin, 11 W. R. 422 ... 456
Mohima Chandra Shaha v Hazuri Pramanik, 17 C. 45 ... 196
Mohin Mohan Patra v. Ram Narain Patra, 14 C. L. J. 445; 12 Ind. Cas. 780 ... 360
Mohomed Ali Hossein v. Nazar Ali, 28 C. 289 ... 450
Mohunt Jumna Doss v. Gawsee Meah, 3 W. R. 124 ... 31
Mohunt Padmalav Ramanuja Das v. Lukshmi Rani, 12 C. W. N. 8 194, 311
Mohunt Ram Sundar Das v. Barhamdeo Narain, 14 C. W. N 552; 2 Ind. Cas. 986 ... 456
Mokhoda Dasee v. Nundo Lal Halder, 5 C. W. N. 297 ... 137
Mokood Lal Singh v. Nobodip Chunder Singh, 25 C. 881; 2 C. W. N. 379 ... 454
Mokund Lal v. Chotay Lal, 10 C. 1061 ... 880
Moll Schutts & Co v. Luchmi Chand, 25 C. 505; 2 C. W. N. 283 ... 707
Moni Ram Seth v. Seth Rupchand, 33 C. 1047 at p. 1058; 4 C. L J. 94; 8 Bom. L. R. 501; 10 C. W. N. 874; 1 M. L. T 199; 3 A. L. J. 525; 16 M L. J. 300; 2 N. L R. 130 ... 604
Monmohun Karmakar v. Dwarkanath Karmakar, 12 C. L. J. 312; 7 Ind Cas. 55 65, 425
Monmotha Nath Das v. Harish Chandra Das, 33 C. 905; 10 C. W. N. 867 ... 232
Moore v. Butlin, (1847) 7 A. & E 595. 2 N. and P. 436; W. W. and D. 638; 7 L. J. Q B 20 ... 119
Moosabhai Mahommed Sajan v. Yacoobbhai Mahommed Sajan, 29 B. 267; 7 Bom. L. R. 45 ... 892
Moro Raghunath v. Balaji Trimbak, 13 D. 45 ... 461
Morris v Davies, (1837) 5 Cl. & F. 163; 1 Jur. 911; 3 Car. & P. 215 ... 683
Moti v. Ramohari, 24 C. 699; 1 C. W. N. 437 ... 150
Moti Lal Ghosh v. Girsh Chandra Ghosh, 12 C. L. J. 345; 6 Ind. Cas. 109 ... 165
Moula Dad v Hayat, 14 P. R. 1886, Rev. ... 18
Mouladad v. Ram Gopal, 22 P. R. 1900; P. L. R. 1900 p. 186 ... 527
Mouladan v. Raghunandan, 27 C. 7 ... 655
Moyna Bibi v. Banku Behari Biswas, 29 C. 473 ... 685
Mufat Ali v. Emperor, 10 C. W. N. 222; 3 Cr. L. J. 112; 2 C. L. J. 619 ... 98
Muhammad v. Jahan Khan, 119 P. R. 1883 ... 180
Muhammad Abdul Rahman v. Taslim-un-nissa, 2 A. L. J. 608 ... 611
Muhammad Ayub Khan v. Kure Khan, 95 P. R. 1901; 125 P. R. 1901 ... 667
Muhammad Din v. Shah Din, 90 P. R. 1907 169, 428
Muhammad Esuph Ravutan v. Pattamsa Ammal, 23 M. 70 ... 689
Muhammad Nawaz v. Babo Sahib, 44 P. R. 1903; 75 P. L. R. 1903 ... 719
Muhammad Saddiq Ahmed v. Panna Lal, 26 A. 220 ... 774

M – concld.

Page.

Muhammad Umar v. Kirpa Siegh, 78 P. R. 1904 ... 670
Muhammad Wazir Beg v. Fatima Begum, 7 P. R. 1881 ... 76
Mujibunnissa v. Abdur Rahim, 23 A. 233; 23 I. A. 15 ... 533
Mukh Ram v. Not Ram, 100 P. R. 1906; 101 P. L. R. 1907 423, 550
Mula v. Nihal Chand, 78 P. R. 1881 ... 563
Malai Singh v. Rajwant Singh, A. W. N. (1903) 68; 3 A. L. J. 842 ... 643
Mulkah Do Alum Nawab Tajdar v. Mirza Jehan Kudr, 10 M I. A. 252; 2 W. R. (P. C.) 55 ... 75
Muila Vettil Seethi Kutti v. Korambath Painthuti Achutan Nair, 21 M. L. J. 475; 10 Ind. Cas. 218 ... 268
Mullick Amanutali v. Ukloo Pasee, 25 W. R. 140 ... 31
Munna v. Ram Prasad, 11 O C. 207 ... 625
Muniappa Naick v. Subramanya Iyer, 18 M. 437 92
Munisani Naidu v. Ammani Ammal, 15 M. L. J. 7 ... 153
Munni v. Umrao Singh, 39 P. R 1909; 55 P. W. R. 1909; 59 P. L. R. 1909; 1 Ind. Cas 720 ... 553
Munshi Bajrangi Sahai v. Udit Narain Singh; 10 C. W. N. 932 ... 573
Murari Vithoji v. Mukund Shivaji, 15 B. 201 ... 228
Mustafa v Phulja, 27 A. 526; A. W. N. (1905) 86; 2 A. L J. 416 ... 120
Muthukutti Nayakan v. Acha Nayakan, 18 M. 22 ... 165
Muthuswami Sastry v Narayana Sastry, 21 M. L. J. 195; 8 Ind Cas. 393; 8 M. L. T. 300; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 36 ... 17
Muttalagiri v Muttayar, 6 M. 357 ... 543
Mutteeram Kuwar v. Gupaul Sahoo, 11 B. L. R. 416 at p. 422; 20 W R. 187 ... 451
Mutu Swami Mudali v. Veeni Chetti, 30 M. 382; 17 M. L. J. 266; 2 M. L. T. 239; 6 Cr. L. J. 102 ... 1008

N

Nabab Mir Sayad Alam Khan v. Yasin Khan, 17 B. 755 ... 853
Nabakumari Debi v. Behari Lal Sen, 34 C. 602; 6 C. L. J. 122; 11 C. W. N. 865; 4 A. L. J. 570; 9 Bom. L. R. 846; 17 M L. J. 397; 2 M. L. T. 433 ... 608
Nabi Bakhsh v. Fakir Muhammad, 25 P. R. 1903; 74 P. L. R. 1903 ... 793
Nabogopal v. Amritmoyee, 24 W. R. 428 ... 137
Nabu Mondul v. Cholim, 28 C. 893 ... 608
Nagalla Kottayya v. Nagalla Mallaya, (1910) M. W. N. 719; 8 Ind. Cas 337; 9 M. L. T 39 ... 789
Nagendra Chandra Dey v. Amar Chandra Kundu, 7 C. W. N. 725 ... 33
Nanak v. Gurditta, 63 P. R. 1902 ... 408
Nand Kishore Lal v. Kanee Ram Tewary, 29 C. 355 ... 497
Nand Ram v Bhupal Singh, 8 A. L. J. 1294; 13 Ind. Cas. 5 ... 401

N—contd.

Page.

Nanda Kumar Saha v. Gobinda Mohan Das, 13 C. L. J. 312; 6 Ind. Cas. 135 ... 342
Nandram v. Fakir Chand, 7 A. 523 ... 164
Nannu v. Raman, 16 M 335 ... 460
Naranbhai Vaghjibhai v. Ranchod Premchand, 26 B. 141 ... 694
Narasimha Naidu v. Ramasami, 18 M. 478 ... 806
Narasimha Row v. Ganga Ram, 18 M. L. J. 590; 4 M. L. T. 271 ... 96
Narasimha Row v. Rama Row, 5 M. L. J. 79 ... 652
Narayan Venku v. Sakha Ram Nagu, 11 B. 519 ... 568
Narayana v Chengalamma, 10 M. 1 ... 546
Narayana Ayyar v. Venkata Ramma Ayyar, 25 M. 220 ... 704
Narayana Row v. Dharama Char, 26 M. 514 ... 40
Narbadabai v. Mahadev, 5 B. 99 ... 137
Narendranath Barari v. Abhoy Charan Chottopadhya, 34 C. 51; 4 C. L. J. 437; 11 C. W. N. 20; 1 M. L. T. 364 ... 130
Narotam Das v. Sheo Pargash Singh, 11 I. A. 83; 10 C. 740 ... 442
Narsingh v. Yadavdas, (1882) Bom. P. J. 345... 137
Narsingh Narain Singh v. Dharam Thakur, 9 C. W. N. 144 ... 455
Nasib-ul-nissa v. Mansur Ali, 120 P. W. R. 1909; 4 Ind. Cas. 965 ... 714
Nassarvanji v Kharsedji, 22 B. 773 ... 543
Nataraja Desikar v. Palaniappa Chetty, 20 M. L. J. 969; 9 M. L. T. 83; 9 Ind. Cas 251 ... 87
Natha Singh v Mohan Singh, 93 P. R. 1906; 163 P. L. R. 1906 181,296
Nathu v. Amir Chand, 147 P. R. 1907 ... 671
Nawab Begum v. Rustum Khan, 2 Agr. H. C. R. 149 ... 498
Nawab Khan v. Kalu Khan, 39 P. R. 1905; 16 P. L. R. 1905 ... 413
Nawab Sir Syed Hossein Ali Khan v. Mohant Bhagwan Das, 11 C. W. N. 261; 34 C. 249; 6 C. L. J. 442 ... 86
Nawab-ud-din v. Kami, 12 P. R. 1901; 77 P. L. R. 1901 178,528
Nazir Mahomed Sirkar v. Girish Chunder Chowdhuri, 2 C. W. N. 251 ... 787
Nga Nyo Gyi v King-Emperor, U. B. R. 1907-09 Cr. P C. p. 5; 14 Bur. L. R. 38; 6. Cr. L. J. 28 396
Nga Ta Pu v. King-Emperor, 2 L. B. R. 19 ... 396
Niaz-ullah Khan v. Nazir Begam, 15 A. 108 ... 850
Nicholson v. Nicholson, 3 P. & D. 53; 29 L. T. 108 ... 617
Nihal Devi v. Kishore Chand, 142 P. W. R. 1910; 97 P. R. 1910; 11 P. L. R. 1911; 8 Ind. Cas. 999 ... 565
Nihal Singh v. Bhana, 2 P. R. 1883, Rev. ... 18
Nihal Singh v. Rajan, 11 P. R. 1885 ... 484
Nil Ratan Mandal v. Ismail Khan Mahomed, 32 C. 51; 8 C. W. N. 895 .. 608
Nilmadhub Gopal, In re, 19 W. R. Cr. 1 ... 223
Nilmony Chuckerbutti v. Baikant Nath Bera, 17 C. 466 ... 2
Nimaye Churn Puteetundee v. Jogendranath Banerjee, 21 W. R. 365 ... 426
Ningawa v. Bharmappa, 23 B. 63 ... 122
Niranjan v. Gajadhar, 5 A. L. J. 71; A. W. N. (1906) 45; 30 A. 133 ... 635

N—concld.

Page.

Nistarini Dasi v. Kazim Ali, 12 C. L. J. 65; 7 Ind. Cas. 258 ... 65
Nityanunda Sarkar v. Ram Narain Das, 6 C. W. N. 66 ... 42
Nobin Chunder Dey v. Secretary of State, 1 C. 11 ... 371
Nobocoomar v. Siru Mullick, 6 C. 94 .. 443
Norendra Nath v. Kamal Basini, 23 C. 563; 23 I. A. 18 217, 235
North, In re, Hasluck, Ex parte, (1895) 2 Q. B. 264 at p. 270; 64 L. J. Q. B. 694; 14 R. 436; 72 L. T. 854; 2 Manson 326; 59 J. P. 724 ... 901
Nowbut Singh v. Chutterdharee Singh, 19 W. R. 222 ... 208
Nubodoorga v. Dwarka Nath, 24 W. R. 301 ... 608
Nundo Kishore v. Ramsookhee, 5 C. 215 ... 859
Nunhoo Shahee v. Ram Pershad, 21 W. R. 38 ... 355
Nunn & Co. v. Tyson, (1901) 2 K. B. 487; 70 L. J. K B. 854; 85 L. T. 123; 50 W. R. 16; 17 T. L. R. 624 ... 852
Nurendro Narain Roy v. Ishan Chunder Sen, 13 B. L. R. 274; 22 W. R. 22 ... 942
Nur Muhammad v. Ghulam Habib, 106 P. R. 1892 ... 27
Nurul Huqq, In re, 3 C. 757 ... 223
Nur-ul-nissa v. Gauhar-ul-nissa, 61 P. R. 1905... 296

O

Official Assignee Bombay v. Registrar Small Cause Court, 45 P. R. 1910; 14 C. W. N. 579; 7 A. L. J. 357; (1910) M. W. N. 177; 11 C. L. J. 443; 68 P. W. R 1910; 7 M. L. T. 417; 37 C. 418; 20 M. L. J. 432; 6 Ind. Cas. 273; 12 Bom. L. R. 395 ... 570
Olpherts v. Mahabir Pershad, 10 I. A. 25; 11 C. L. R. 494 ... 342
Omar Ali Majhi v. Bassiruddin Ahmad, 7 C. L. J. 282 ... 488

P

P. & O. S. N. Co. v. Secretary of State, 5 B. H. C. R. App. 1 ... 371
Padam Lal v. Tek Chand, 29 A. 217 .. 528
Padmakumari Debia Chowdhrani v. Court of Wards, 8 C. 302; 8 I. A. 229 ... 15
Pahalwan Singh v. Narain Das, 22 A. 401 ... 188
Palanippa Chettiyar v. Sayari Naidoo, 18 M. L. J. 548; 4 M. L. T. 233 ... 205
Palaniappa Mudaliar v. Tevan, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 123; 9 M. L. T. 319; 9 Ind. Cas. 729 ... 313
Palanisami v Thondama, 26 M. 595 ... 543
Pampapati Sastri v. Subba Sastri, 23 M. 210 ... 112
Panchu Chakar v. Nagendra Nath Pal, 12 C. L. J. 480; 8 Ind. Cas. 96 ... 32
Panchu Mandal v. Chandra Kant Saha, 10 C. L. J. 82; 12 Ind. Cas. 9; 14 C. L. J. 220 ... 42
Pandit Jai Ram v. Sheo Shankar Baksh, 9 Ind. Cas. 406 ... 473
Papa Sastrial v. Anuntarama, 3 M. 98 at p. 101 967
Paramshook Das v. Rood Dowlah Bahadur, 7 M. H. C. R. 285 ... 644
Parbati v. Jagadis, 29 I. A 82; 29 C. 433; 6 C. W. N. 490; 4 Bom. L. R. 365 ... 692
Parbati Charan v. Gobinda Chandra, 4 C. L. J. 246 ... 442

P—contd.

Page.

Parbati v. Naunihal Singh, 31 A. 412; 3 Ind. Cas. 195; 11 Bom. L. R. 878; 10 C. L. J. 121; 13 C. W. N. 983; 5 M. L. T. 427; 6 A. L. J. 597 ... 54
Paresh Nath Singha v. Nobo Gopal Chattopadhaya, 29 C. 1 ... 145
Parma Nand v. Airapat Ram, 20 P. R. 1899 ... 669
Parsotam Narain v. Taley Singh, 26 A. 178 ... 140
Partab Bahadur Singh v. Gajadar Bakhsh Singh, 24 A. 521; 29 I. A. 148 ... 157
Parvata v. Digambar, 15 B. 307 ... 78
Pascoe v. Pascoe, (1837) 3 Bing (N. C.) 898; 5 Scott 117; 3 Hadges 188; 6 L. J. C. P. 322 ... 119
Pasupati Nath Bose v. Nanda Lal Bose, 5 C. W. N. 67 ... 1001
Patan Maria v. Bhabiram, 24 C. 239; 1 C. W. N. 94 ... 383
Patcha v. Mohidin, 15 M. 57 ... 792
Pattakara v. Rangasami Chetti, 6 M. 365 ... 89
Patti Narayanamurthy Iyer v. Marimuthu Pillay, 26 M. 322 ... 203
Peary Mohan Mondal v. Radhika Mohan, 8 C. W. N. 315 at p. 319 ... 195
Peary Mohan Mondal v. Radhika Mohan, 5 C. L. J. 9 ... 195
Peck v. Peck, 21 L. T. 670; 18 W. R. 295 ... 592
Perera v. Perera, (1901) A. C. 354; 84 L. T. 371; 70 L. J. P. C. 46 ... 581
Periatambi v. Vallaya, 21 M. 409 ... 65
Periasami v. Periasami, 5 I. A. 61; 1 M. 312 270
Perumalla Satyanarayana v. Perumalla Venkata, 27 M. 112 ... 166
Petman v. King-Emperor, 23 P. R. 1905 Cr.; 168 P. L. R. 1905; 3 Cr. L. J. 301 ... 209
Phani Singh v. Nawab Singh, 28 A. 161; A. W. N. (1905) 233 ... 79
Piers v. Piers, (1849) 2 H. L. C. 331; 13 Jur. 569 ... 683
Pin Ye v. Queen-Empress, U. B. R. 1892-1896, I, 139 ... 778
Pir Bakhsh v. Mangal, 16 P. R. 1892 (F. B.) ... 853
Pirthi Singh v. Raj Koer, 12 B. L. R. 238; 20 W. R. 21; I. A. Sup. Vol. 203 ... 137
Pisani v. Attorny-General of Gibraltar, L. R. 5 P.C. 516; 30 L. T. 729; 22 W. R. 900 171,253
Plimmer v. Mayor, Councillors, and Citizens of the City of Wellington, (1884) 9 App. Cas. 699; 53 L. J. C. P. 104; 51 L. T. 475; 49 J. P. 116 ... 514
Po Han v. Thaleni, U. B. R. 1897-1901, I, 91 ... 390
Ponakar Subarani Reddy v. Vadlamudi Seshachalam Chetty, 33 M. 359; 7 M. L. T. 137; 20 M. L. J. 328; 5 Ind. Cas. 79 ... 472
Poromanand Khasnabish v. Khepoo Pramanick, 10 C. 354 ... 66
Poulton v. The London and South Western Railway Co, (1866-67) 2 Q. B. 534; 8 B. and S. 616; 36 L. J, Q. B. 294; 17 L. T. 11; 16 W. R. 309 ... 242
Pramatha Nath Sandal v. Dwarka Nath Dey, 23 C. 851 ... 139
Pratab Daji v. Bombay Baroda and Central India Railway, 1 B. 52 at p. 56 ... 241
Preonath Mukerjee v. Bishnath Prasad, 29 A. 256; A. W. N. (1907) 41; 4 A. L. J. 85 ... 461
Preonath Shaha v Madhu Sudan Bhuiya, 25 C. 603; 2 C. W. N. 562 ... 450

P—concld.

Page.

Price v. Popkin, (1839) 10 A. & E. 139; 2 P. & D. 304; 8 L. J. Q. B. 198; 3 Jur. 433 ... 119
Prosonnomoyi Dassi v. Sreenauth Roy, 21 C. 809 908
Prosser v. Gorringe, (1811) 3 Taunt 426 ... 119
Prosuno v. Rattan, 3 C. 696; 1 C. L. R. 577 ... 608
Prosunno Kumar Middar v. Bama Charan Mondol, 13 C. W. N. 652; 3 Ind. Cas 461 ... 487
Prosunno Kumari v. Golab Chand, 2 I. A. 145; 14 B. L. R. 450; 23 W. R. 253 ... 86
Protap Narain v. Ronghuram, 6 C. W. N. 185 ... 630
Protar Narain Mukerjee v. Sarat Kumari Debi, 5 C. W. N. 386 ... 206
Public Prosecutor v. Bonigiri Pottigadu, 32 M. 179; 5 M. L. T. 100; 9 Cr. L. J. 567; 5 Ind. Cas. 307 ... 280
Puranchand v. Roy Radhakishen, 19 C. 132 ... 186
Purshotamdas Maneklal v. Bai Mani, 21 B. 610 612
Purshotamdas v. Mahant Suraj Bharthi, 6 B. 588 ... 908
Pyari Mohun Mukhopadhya v. Gopal Paik, 25 C. 531; 2 C. W. N. 375 ... 449

Q

Queen v. Alagu, 16 M. 421 ... 275
——— v. Brown, 24 Q. B. D. 257 ... 100
——— v. Cooke, 40 L. J. M. C. 62 ... 109
——— v. Hamilton Thompson, 32 L. J. M. C. 57 109
——— v. Latimer, 17 Q B. D. 359 ... 840
——— v. Lee, (1882) 9 Q. B. D. 394; 50 W. R. 750; 47 J. P. 118 ... 223
——— v Millege, (1879) 4 Q B. D. 332; 48 L. J. M. C. 139; 40 L. T. 748; 27 W. R. 659 ... 223
——— v. Mooktaram Sirdar, 23 W. R. Cr. 18 ... 281
——— v. Nanni, 22 A. 115 ... 275
——— v. Nujum Ali, 6 W. R. 41 Cr. ... 212
——— v. Ram Sahoy Bhur, (1864) W. R. Cr. 24 ... 920
——— v. Rana Sami, 24 M. 321 ... 274
——— v Sheikh Adam, 10 B. 139 ... 214
——— v. Williams, (1893) I Q. B. 320 ... 100
——— v. Zulfukar Khan, 8 B. L. R. App. 21; 16 W. R. Cr. 36 ... 920
Queen-Empress v. Abbi Reddi; 17 M. 402 ... 277
——— ——— v. Anant Ram, 4 A. 293 .. 216
——— ——— v. Bankatram, 28 B. 533 ... 216
——— ——— v. Bapuji Dayaram, 10 B. 288 ... 66
——— ——— v. Bharma, 11 B. 702 ... 275
——— ——— v. Diwan Chand, 14 P. R. 1895 Cr. ... 1006
——— ——— v. Fox, 10 B. 176 ... 777
——— ——— v. Gobinda, 17 A. 576 220, 784
——— ——— v. Gopal Das, 3 M. 271 ... 926
——— ——— v. Grees Chunder Banerjee, 10 C. 1024 123, 680
——— ——— v. Hori, 21 A. 291 ... 284
——— ——— v. James Ingle, 16 B. 200 ... 277
——— ——— v. Kotha Subba Chetti, 6 M. 252 216
——— ——— v. Lakhshman Dagdu, 10 B. 512 918
——— ——— v. Lala Ojha, 3 C. W. N. 653 ... 99
——— ——— v. Lalit Tiwari, 21 A. 177 ... 777
——— ——— v. Madho, 15 A. 25 ... 681
——— ——— v. Mannu, 19 A. 390 .. 746
——— ——— v. Matabadal, 15 A. 392 ... 829
——— ——— v. Maharaj, 16 W. R. Cr. 47 ... 216
——— ——— v. Murarji Gokuldas, 13 B. 389... 216

Q—concld.

Page.

Queen-Empress v. Mutthu Ramon, 4 M. 325 ... 66
——— v. Nathu Sheikh, 10 C. 405 ... 216
——— v. Parashram, 20 B. 193 ... 994
——— v Pillala, 9 M. 101 ... 66
——— v. Ram Dei, 18 A. 350 ... 278
——— v. Roshun Lall, 4 A. H. C. R. 123 ... 915
——— v. Sakharam, 14 B. 564 ... 917
——— v. Sangam Lal, 15 A. 129 ... 754
——— v. Seshadri Ayyangar, 20 M. 383 ... 112
——— v. Shaik Adam, 10 B. 193 ... 278
——— v. Sheikh Beari, 10 M. 232 ... 112
——— v. Thaku, 8 B. 312 ... 277
——— v. Tulja, 12 B. 36 ... 277
——— v. Tyab Alli, 24 B. 423 ... 101
——— v. Venkatasami, 12 M. 459 ... 918
Quinn v. Leathem, (1901) A. C. 495; 70 L. J. P. C. 76; 65 J. P. 708; 50 W. R. 139; 85 L. T. 289; 17 T. L. R. 749 .. 773

R

Radha Bai v. Kamod Singh, 30 A. 38; A. W. N. (1907) 276; 4 A. L. J. 696 ... 467
Radha Madhub Holdar v. Monohur Mookerji, 15 C. 756; 15 I. A. 97 ... 42
Radha Prasad v. Munna, L. P. A. No. 38 of 1910 955
Radha Prasad Mallick v. Ranee Moni Dossee, 33 C. 947; 3 C. L. J. 502; 10 C. W. N. 695 528, 553
Radha Prosad Singh v. Sundar Lal, 9 C. 644 ... 189
Radhibai v. Kundanmal, 1 S. L. R. 155 ... 265
Radhika Nath Sarkar v. Rakhal Raj Gayen, 13 C. W. N. 1175; 10 C. L. J. 473; 3 Ind. Cas. 835 ... 329
Raghubans v. Phool Kumari, 32 C. 1130; 1 C. L. J. 542 ... 774
Raghubar Mahto v. H. Manners, 13 C. L. J. 568; 11 Ind. Cas. 389 599, 636
Raghunandun Pershad v. Bhugoo Lall, 17 C. 268 142
Raghunath v. Sriram, 28 A. 764; (1906) A. W. N. 235; 3 A. L. J. 579 (F. B.); 1 M. L. T. 242 ... 44
Raghunath v. Varjiwandas, 30 B. 578; 8 Bom. L. R. 525 ... 439
Raghunath Prasad v. Gobind Prasad, 8 A. 76 ... 480
Ragnath Sahai v Man Raj, 80 P. R. 1895 ... 319
Rahamat Chaudhri v. Salamat Chaudri, A. W. N. (1901) 48 ... 79
Rahimbhoy v. Turner, 18 I. A. 6; 15 B. 155 ... 375
Rahimuddi Munshi v. Nalini Kanta Lahiri, 13 C. W. N. 407; 1 Ind. Cas. 81 ... 960
Rai Banomali Roy Bahadur v. Jagat Chandra Bhowmick, 32 I. A. 80; 15 M. L. J. 267; 32 C. 669; 1 C. L. J. 319; 2 A. L. J. 794; 9 C. W. N. 673 ... 8
Rai Mohan Saha v. Sasanka Mohan Roy, 12 C. L. J. 407; 8 Ind. Cas. 786 ... 363
Rai Shamkissen v. Damar Kumari, 11 C. W. N. 440 ... 89
Raj Bahadur v. Birmha Singh, 3 A. 85 ... 555
Raj Mal v. Sandhi, 41 P. R. 1909; 1 Ind. Cas. 728; 57 P. W. R. 1909 ... 713
Raja Burdakanth Roy v. Aluk Munjoore Dasiah, 4 M. I. A. 321 ... 382
Raja of Vizianagram v. Dantivada Chelliah, 28 M. 84 ... 322
Raja Tasadduq Rasul Khan v. Janki Saran, 9 O. C. 211 ... 490

R—contd.

Page.

Rajah of Kalahasti v. Achigadu, 30 M. 454; 17 M. L. J. 367 ... 9
Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Isakapalli Subbiah, 26 M. 410 ... 215
Rajah Promoda Nath Roy v. Rameni Kanta Roy, 35 C. 331; 12 C. W. N. 249; 10 Bom. L R. 66; 7 C. L. J. 139; 3 M. L. T. 151; 18 M. L. J. 43... 83
Rajaram v. Ganesh, 23 B. 131 ... 226
Rajendro Nath Haldar v. Jogendro Nath Banerjee, 14 M. I. A. 67; 15 W. R. 41 (P. C.); 7 B. L. R. 216 ... 896
Rajeshwar Mullick v. Gopeshwar Mullick, 34 C. 828 at p. 833; 11 C. W. N. 782 ... 228
Rajgir v. Ishwardhari, Ishwardhari v. Rajgir, 5 Ind. Cas. 660: 11 C. L. J. 243 ... 369
Rajkrishna v. Muktaram Das, 7 Ind. Cas. 700; 12 C. L. J. 605 ... 126
Rajo v. Karam Bakhsh, 11 P. R. 1908; 92 P. L. R. 1908; 13 P. W. R. 1908 178, 713
Rakhaldas Majumdar v. Jogendra Narayan Majumdar, 3 Ind. Cas. 391; 10 C. L. J. 467 ... 142
Rakhmabai v. Govind Moreshwar, 6 Bom. L. R. 421 ... 206
Ralla v. Budha, 50 P. R. 1893 ... 181
Ram Bharos v. Lal Achal Ram Singh, S. D. No. 30 of 1891 ... 811
Ram Chand v. Billa Mal, 64 P. R. 1911; 12 Ind. Cas. 867 ... 808
Ram Chand v Gholu Shah, 87 P. R. 1887 ... 671
Ram Chandra Shankarbava Dravid v. Kashi Nath Narayan Dravid, 19 B. 271 ... 687
Ram Charan Sanyal v. Anukul Chandra Acharya, 4 C. L. J. 578; 34 C. 65; 11 C. W. N. 160 ... 685
Ram Charan Singh v. Emperor, 5 C. L. J. 233; 5 Cr. L. J. 199 ... 927
Ram Coomar v. Dwarkanath, 5 W. R. 207 ... 381
Ram Coomar v. Rajah Gopal Singh, 17 W. R. 54 Cr. ... 782
Ram Chunder Dutt v. Jugheeh Chander Dutt, 12 B. L. R. 229; 19 W. R. 353 ... 608
Ram Chunder Sao v. Bunseedhar Nath, 9 C. 741 ... 333
Ram Das v. Amir Shah, 113 P. R. 1901 ... 174
Ram Das Chakarbati v. The Official Liquidator, Cotton Ginning Company, Limited, Cawnpore, 9 A. 366 ... 465
Ram Gopal v. Shams Khatoo, 20 C. 93; 19 I. A. 228 ... 608
Ram Kalee v. Court of Wards, 18 W. R. 474 ... 137
Ram Kirpal Singh v. Rup Kuari, 11 I. A. 37; 6 A. 269 ... 83
Ram Kishen v. Fakir Ali, 185 P. L. R. 1905 ... 563
Ram Lal v. Ladha Singh, 62 P. R. 1886 ... 808
Ram Lal Sett v. Kanai Lal Sett, 12 C. 663 ... 894
Ram Mohan Pal v. Sheikh Kachhu, 32 C. 386; 1 C. L. J. 1; 9 C. W. N. 249 337, 636
Ram Narain Roy v. Baij Nath Malla, 29 C. 36 ... 235
Ram Narain Singh v. Sewak Ram, 21 P. R. 1906; 110 P. L. R. 1906 ... 169
Ram Nath v. Bindraban, 18 A. 369 ... 456
Ram Nidh v. Lal Achal Ram Singh, S. D. No. 32 of 1891 ... 811
Ram Nirunjan Singh v. Prayag Singh, 8 C. 138; 10 C. L. R. 66 ... 497
Ram Nundun v. Janki Koer, 29 C. 828; 7 C. W. N. 57; 4 Bom. L. R. 664 ... 693

R—contd.

Page.

Ram Pershad Singh v. Lakhpati Koer, 30 C. 231 at p. 247; 7 C. W. N. 162; 5 Bom. L. R. 103; 30 I. A. 1 ... 123, 207, 680
Ram Prasad v. Man Mohan, 30 A. 256; A. W. N. (1908) 106; 5 A. L. J. 267 ... 952
Ram Prosad Malla v. Raghubar Mallan, 13 C. W. N. 1038; 4 Ind. Cas. 6; 37 C. 13; 10 Cr. L. J. 454 ... 1008
Ram Ratan v. Mohant Sahu, 6 C. L. J. 74; 11 C. W. N. 732 ... 381
Ram Ratan Shah v. Kirpa Ram, 8 Ind. Cas. 246; 86 P. L. R. 1910 ... 562
Ram Sarup v. Bela, 6 A. 312; 11 I. A. 44 ... 972
Ram Tahul Singh v. Beseswar Lall Sahoo, 2 I. A. 131; 15 B. L. R. 208; 23 W. R. 305 ... 457
Rama v. Kunji, 9 M. 375 ... 44
Rama Aiyar v. Sankara Aiyar, 31 M. 89 at p. 93; 17 M. L. J. 573; 3 M. L. T. 73 ... 903
Ramachandram Pillai v. Kalimuthu Chetti, 21 M. L. J. 246; 2 M. W. N. 238; 9 M. L. T. 389; 9 Ind. Cas. 596 ... 11
Ramakrishna v. Tripurabai, 33 B. 88; 10 Bom. L. R. 1029 ... 9
Ramakrishnamma v. Bhagamma, 13 M. 56 ... 903
Ramalinga v. Ayyadorai, 28 M. 124; 14 M. L. J. 493 ... 655
Ramanathan v. Murugappa, 27 M. 192 ... 234
Ramanuj Sewak Singh v. Hingu Lal, 3 A. 517 ... 313
Ramasami v. Queen-Empress, 4 M. H. C. R. 152 391
Ramasami Ayyar v. Vengidusami Ayyar, 22 M. 113 ... 478
Ramasamy Pillai v. Muthoo Chetty, (1910) M. W. N. 4; 7 M. L. T. 125; 5 Ind. Cas. 834 ... 325
Ramasukh Das v. Fazal-ud-Din, 19 P. R. 1898 ... 664
Ramayya v. Venkataratnam, 17 M. 122 ... 670
Ramayyar v. Ramayyar, 21 M. 356 ... 65
Ramayyar v. Vendachalla, 14 M. 441 ... 568
Ramchander v. Sagunbai, 1879 Bom. P. J. 450 137
Ramdhan Rakhit v. Panchanan Chuckerbutty, 10 W. R. 141; 1 B. L. R. (s. N.) 9 ... 369
Rameswar Prasad v. Rai Sham Kishen, 29 C. 43 625
Ramjas v. Nihala, 13 P. R. 1892, Rev. ... 18
Ramji v. Syed Nur, 4 N. L. R. 45 ... 984
Ramji Ram v. Salig Ram, 14 C. L. J. 188; 11 Ind. Cas. 481 ... 167
Rampher Singh v. Ram Khelawan Singh, 2 O. C. 252 ... 614
Ramrup Mahto v. H. Manners, 4 C. L. J. 209 598, 636
Ramsden v. Dyson, (1866) L. R. 1 H. L. 129; 12 Jur. (N. S.) 506; 14 W. R. 926 ... 514
Ramsing v. Kirkbride, Sel. D. Sind Sadar Court Vol. I page 83 ... 247
Ramyad v. Bindeswari, 6 C. L. J. 102 ... 381
Rangiah Chetty v. Subramania Chetty, 21 M. L. J. 21; (1910) 1 M. W. N. 755; 9 M. L. T. 3; 8 Ind. Cas. 512 ... 903
Rani Sartaj Kuari v. Ram Deoraj Kuari, 15 I. A. 51; 10 A. 272 ... 269
Ranji Khan v. Kamun, 179 P. R. 1889 ... 950
Ranjit Singh v. Baldeo Singh, A. W. N. (1908) 162; 5 A. L. J. 516; 30 A. 390 ... 952
Rao Girraj Singh v. Ram Raghubir, 31 A. 429; 2 Ind. Cas. 118 ... 936
Rashid-un-nissa v. Muhammad Ismail Khan, 10 C. L. J. 318; 13 C. W. N. 1182; 3 Ind. Cas. 864; 6 A. L. J. 822; 11 Bom. L. R. 1225; 6 M. L. T. 279; 31 A. 572 ... 415

R—concld.

Page.

Rasik Lall Dutt v. Bidhumukhi Dasi, 10 C. W. N. 719; 4 C. L. J. 306; 33 C. 1094 ... 941
Rassul Haji Cassum, In re, 13 Bom. L. R. 13; 9 Ind. Cas. 344 ... 570
Rathna Mudaliar v. Raghunadha Bhattar, 8 M. L. J. 173 ... 15
Ratnlal Rangildass v. Vrijbhukanram, 17 B. 684 330
Raunak Bakhsh Khan v. Roshan Zaman Khan, 9 O. C. 246 ... 897
Raziuddin v. Karim Baksh, 12 A. 169 ... 44
Re Mill's Estate, 34 Ch. D. 24; 55 L. T. 465; 35 W. R. 65; 51 J. P. 151; 56 L. J. Ch. 60 ... 247
Rees v. Waters, (1847) 16 M. & W. 263; 4 D. & L. 567 ... 163
Reference under section 39 of Madras Forest Act, 12 M. 203 ... 39
Reg. v. Chaseman, Lewis & Cavres, 145 ... 100
—— v. Davis, 14 Cox. C. C. 563 ... 917
—— v. Hanmanta, 1 B. 610 ... 275
—— v. Hicklin, 3 Q. B. 360; 37 L. J. M. C. 89; 18 L. T. 395; 16 W. R. 801; 11 Cox. C. C. 19 ... 993
—— v. Cruse, 8 Car. and P. 541 at p. 546; 2 M. C. C. 53 ... 920
—— v. Gamlen, 1 F. and F. 90 ... 920
—— v. Michael, 9 Car. & P. 356; 2 M. C. C. 120 ... 841
Regulla Jogayya v. N. Vencatarathnamma, 33 M. 492; 5 Ind. Cas. 271; 7 M. L. T. 112; 20 M. L. J. 412 ... 486
Reid v. So Hlaing, 5 L. B. R. 241; 3 Bur. L. T. 124; 8 Ind. Cas. 952; 11 Cr. L. J. 738 ... 387
Reoti v. Lachman, A. W. N. (1900) 90 ... 185
Rex v. John Thomas, 7 Car. and P. 817 ... 920
—— v. Meakin, 7 Car. and P. 297 ... 920
—— v. Pearson, 2 Lewin C. C. 144 ... 920
—— v. Plummer, (1902) 2 K. B. 339; 71 L. J. K. B. 805; 68 L. T. 836; 51 W. R. 137; 66 J. P. 647; 20 Cox. C. C. 269 ... 281
Richardson, In re, (1911) 2 K. B. 705; 80 L. J. K. B. 1232 ... 203
Richardson v. Younge, 6 Ch. 478; 40 L. J. Ch. 338; 25 L. T. 230; 19 W. R. 612 ... 703
Right v. Cuthell, 7 R. R. 752 at p. 754; 5 East 491; 2 Marsh 83; 5 Esp. 149 ... 983
Rivett Carnac v. Jivibai, 10 B. 478 ... 693
Robert Skinner v. Shankar Lal, 31 A. 10 (n.); 5 A. L. T. 638 n.; 1 Ind. Cas. 556 ... 96
Robinson v. Anderson, 20 Beav. 98; 7 De G. M. and G. 239 ... 26
Robinson v. Robinson, (1859) 1 Sw. & Tr. 362; 27 L. J. Mat. 91; 5 Jur. (N. S.) 392 ... 493
Rochester v. Pierce, (1808) 1 Campbell 466 ... 31
Roda v. Harnam, 18 P. R. 1895 ... 344
Roshun Lall v. Ram Lall, 30 C. 262 ... 908
Ross v. Linder, (1881) 17 South Car. 593 ... 119
Roshan Din v. Khuda Bakhsh, 99 P. R. 1910; 8 Ind. Cas. 1155; 42 P. L. R. 1911 ... 563
Rudranund v. Pirthi Chand, 14 C. L. J. 346; 11 Ind. Cas. 438 ... 341
Rudrappa v. Narsing Rao, 29 B. 213; 7 Bom. L. R. 12 ... 659
Rukka Bai v. Ganda Bai, 1 A. 594 ... 137
Rukun Din v. Mariam, 68 P. R. 1898 ... 550
Rulla Mal v. Dulo Mal, 7 P. R. 1876 ... 562
Rustam Khan v. Jio, 139 P. R. 1892 ... 950
Rustomji Burjorji v. Kessowji Naik, 8 B. 287 ... 852
Ruttun Chand v. Goojnee, 53 P. R. 1868 ... 720

S

Page.

Saadatmand Khan v. Phool Koer, 25 I. A. 146; 20 A. 412; 2 C. W. N. 550 ... 341
Sadabart Prasad Sahu v. Foolbash Koer, 3 B. L. R. 31 (F. B.); 12 W. R. 1 (F. B.) ... 548
Sadashiv Ganpatrao v. Vithaldas Nanchand, 20 B. 198 ... 369
Sadasiva Pillai v. Rama Lingh Pillai, 2 I. A. 219 pp. 232, 233; 15 B. L. R. 383; 24 W. R. 193 82, 171, 253
Sadhu Charan Pal v. Radhika Mohan Roy, 8 C. W. N. 695 ... 452
Safdar Ali v. Kishun Lal, 7 Ind Cas 241; 12 C. L. J. 6 ... 860
Safiur Rahman v. Maharamunnessa Bibi, 24 C. 832 ... 316
Sagurmull v. Manraj, 4 C. W. N. ccvii (short note) 123, 680
Sahadeb Dhali v. Ram Rudra, 10 C. W. N. 820 ... 42
Sahib Dad v. Rahmat, 88 P. L. R. 1904; 90 P. R. 1904 ... 344
Sahib Jan v. Karm Bakhsh, 80 P. R. 1875 ... 950
Sahibzadi Begam v. Said-un-Nisa Begam, 123 P. R. 1880 ... 75
Saiyed Zahid Ali v. Rudra Singh, First Civil Appeal No. 26 of 1909 ... 473
Sajibullah Sirkar v. Hazi Khosh Mahomed Sirkar, 13 C. 264 ... 84
Sakharam v. Padmakar, 30 B. 623; 8 Bom. L. R. 757 ... 128
Sakharam Krishnaji v. Madan Krishnaji, 5 B. 232 ... 502
Sakina v. Gauri, 24 A. 302 ... 128
Samanda v. Nur Bibi, 36 P. R. 1905; 37 P. L. R. 1905 ... 948
Samar Ali v. Karimullah, 8 A. 402 ... 964
Sami Aiyar, P. S. v. Ayilam Gramon Vythi Pattar, 19 M. L. J. 68; 4 M. L. T. 455; 4 Ind. Cas. 617 ... 606
Sami Iyer v. Krishna Sami, 10 M. 169 ... 92
Sami Roy v. Eliavatha Rao, 16 M. L. J. 357 ... 17
Samiya Mavali v. Minammal, 23 M. 490 ... 903
Samman v. Ala Bakhsh, 106 P. R. 1901 ... 412
Sangira v. Ramappa, 34 B. 59; 4 Ind. Cas. 257; 11 Bom. L. R. 1130 ... 841
Sankaralinga v. Ratna Sabhapati, 21 M. 324 ... 128
Sankaranarayana Vadhyar v. Sankaranarayana Ayyar, 25 M. 343 ... 474
Sanwal Das v. Bismillah Begam, 19 A. 480 ... 564
Sarat Chandra Dey v Gopal Chunder Laha, 19 I. A. 203; 20 C. 296 ... 485
Sarat Chunder Roy Chowdhry v. Chundra Kant Roy, 25 C. 805 ... 44
Sarat Chandra Roy Chowdhry v. Chandi Charan Mitra, 7 C. W. N. 800 ... 46
Sarbesh Chandra Basu v. Hari Dayal Singh, 14 C. W. N. 451; 5 Ind Cas. 236; 11 C. L. J. 345 81
Sardar Mal v. Aranvayal Sabhapathy, 21 B. 205 570
Sadar Singji v. Ganpat Singji, 17 B. 56 ... 408
Sarnomoyee v Denonath Gir Sunnyasee, 9 C. 908; 13 C. L. R. 69 ... 786
Sarsuti v. Kunj Behari Lal, 5 A. 345 ... 154
Sartaj Kuari v. Deoraj Kuari, 10 A. 272; 15 I. A. 51 9
Sarup Ganjan Singh v. Robert Watson & Co, 6 C. W. N. 735 ... 142
Sastry Velaider Aronegary v. Sembecutty Vaigalie, 6 A. C. 364; 44 L. T. 895; 50 L. J. P. C. 28 ... 683

S—contd.

Page.

Satya Saran Gohsal v. Mohesh Chandra Mitter, 12 M. I. A. 263; 2 B. L. R. (P. C.) 23; 11 W. R. (P. C.) 10 ... 608
Sawan v. Harnama, 162 P. L. R. 1901 ... 181
Sawan v. Sahib Khatun, 44 P. R. 1909; 2 Ind. Cas. 71; 69 P. W. R. 1909; 67 P. L. R. 1909 ... 714
Sayad Hussein v. Collector of Karia, 21 B. 257 ... 266
Scott v. Milne, 5 Beav. 215, on Appeal 7 Jurist. 709 ... 24
Scott v. Scott, 34 L. J. P. & M. 23 ... 613
Secretary of State v. Ambavana Pandarasanadhi, 24 M. 366; 9 M. L. T. 47; 2 M. W. N. 119; 8 Ind. Cas 357 ... 822
Secretary of State v. Hari Bhanji, 5 M. 273 ... 372
Secretary of State v. Kamachee, 7 M. I. A. 476; 4 W. R. (P. C.) 42 ... 968
Sesha Ayyar v. Krishna Iyengar, 24 M. 96 ... 469
Seshachalam Chetti v. Rajam Chetty, 8 M. L. J. 203 ... 89
Sessions Judge of Tinnevelly Division v. Sivan Chetty, 32 M. 258; 5 M. L. T. 269 (F. B.) 9 Cr. L. J. 170; 1 Ind. Cas 187 ... 222
Seth Chand Mal v. Kalian Mal, 96 P. R. 1886 ... 936
Sew Bux Bogla v. Shib Chunder Sen, 13 C. 225 908
Shabiuddin v. Deomoorat Koer, 30 C. 655 ... 654
Shafi-un nissa v. Fazalrab, 7 A. L. J. 787; 7 Ind. Cas. 293 ... 965
Shafiq-un-nissa v Shaban Ali Khan, 26 A. 581 at p. 586; 9 C. W. N. 105 ... 122
Shah Bodhraj v. Sundar Singh, 100 P. R. 1885 563
Shah Muhammad v. Diwan Baksh, 12 P. R. 1892, Rev. ... 18
Shah Nazam-ud-din Ahmad v. Bibi Husaini, 4 W. R. 110 ... 75
Shahunshan Begum v. Fergusson, 7 C. 499 ... 774
Shaikh Bahadur v. Eradatullah Mallick, 6 Ind. Cas. 801; 37 C. 642; 14 C. W. N. 799; 12 C. L. J. 45 ... 111
Shaikh Kamaruddin v. Jowahir Lal, 1 C. L. J. 381; 27 A. 334; 15 M. L. J. 258; 9 C. W. N. 601; 2 A L. J. 397; 7 Bom. L. R 433 ... 141
Sham Chand v. Kally Kanth, (1863) 2 Hay 314 381
Sham Lall v. Anantee Lall, 24 W. R. 312 ... 681
Sham Lal v. Emperor, 6 A. L. J. 487; 2 Ind. Cas. 225; 9 Cr. L. J. 528 ... 102
Sham Singh v. Karm, 185 P. R. 1889 ... 624
Shama Charan Kundu v. Khettromoni Dasi, 27 I. A. 10; 4 C. W. N. 501; 27 C. 521 433, 591
Shamboeti v. Jago Bibi, 29 C. 749 ... 439
Shankar Balkrishna v. Emperor, 32 C. 73; 8 C. W. N. 645; 1 Cr. L. J. 634 ... 841
Shanmugam Pillai v. Syed Ghulam Ghose, 27 M. 116 ... 461
Sharofan v. Muhamed Habibubdin, 10 Ind. Cas. 148; 13 C. L. J. 535; 15 C. W. N. 685 ... 367
Sheikh Akbar v. Sheikh Khan, 7 C. 256 ... 139
Sheikh Muhammed Aga v. Jadunandan Jha, 10 C. W. N. 137; 2 C. L. J. 325 ... 404
Sheikh Miadhar v. Rajani Kunto Roy, 14 C. W. N. 339; 5 Ind. Cas. 708 ... 688
Sheikh Muhammad v. Habib Khan, 67 P. R. 1905; 113 P. L. R. 1905 ... 812
Sheo Charan v. Busunt Singh, 3 N. W. P. H. C. R. 282, Agra (F. B.) Ed. 1874, 258 ... 555
Sheo Golam Lall v. Beni Prosad, 5 C. 27; 4 C. L. R. 29 82, 205

S—contd.

Page.
Sheo Narain v. Darbari, 2 C. W. N. 207 ... 655
Sheo Pershad Singh v. Sahib Lal, 20 C. 453 ... 38
Sheo Prasad v. Indar Bahadur, 30 A. 179; 5 A. L. J. 258; A. W. N. (1908) 74 ... 190
Sheo Ruttan Singh v. Net Loll Sahu, 30 C. 1 ... 404
Sheo Shankar Gir v. Ram Shewak, 24 C. 77 ... 86
Sheo Singh v. Raghubans Kunwar, 27 A. 634; 15 M. L. J. 352; 9 C. W. N. 1009; 2 C. L. J. 194; 8 O. C. 317 ... 971
Sheolochun v. Sahib Singh, 14 I. A. 63; 14 C. 387 ... 692
Sheonath v. Ramnath, 10 M. I. A. 413 at p. 426; 5 W. R. (P. C.) 21; 1 Ind. Jur. (N. S.) 161 ... 162
Sheoraji v. Ramjas Pandey, 33 A. 430; 9 Ind. Cas. 501; 8 A. L. J. 454 .. 489
Sheoram Tiwari v. Thakur Prasad, 30 A. 136; 3 M. L. T. 211; 5 A. L. J. 106; A. W. N. (1908) 43 465
Sher Bahadur Sahu v. M. H. Mackenzie, 7 C. W. N. 400 ... 3
Sher Muhammad Khan v. Muhammad Khan, 5 P. R. 1895 ... 296
Sher Singh v. Sidhu, 11 P. R. 1907; 9 P. W. R. 1907; 30 P. L. R. 1907 ... 527
Sher Singh v. Subha, 10 P. R. 1892, Rev. ... 18
Sheran v. Sharman, 117 P. R. 1901; 182 P. L. R. 1901 ... 714
Shibessuree Debia v. Mothooranath Acharjee, 13 M. I. A. 270 at p. 275; 13 W. R. 18 (P. C.) ... 596
Shivabhajan v. Secretary of State, 28 B. 314 ... 371
Shivadurga v. Raj Mohan, 15 C. W. N. 577; 10 Ind. Cas. 475 ... 341
Shivagunga, In re, 9 M. I. A. 530; 2 W. R. 31 (P. C.) ... 270
Shoma Mehta v. Rajani Biswas, 1 C. W. N. 55 ... 30
Shoobhagee Koeri v. Bekhori Ram, 4 C. L. J. 390 ... 508
Shorten v. Judd, 56 Kan 43; 54 Am. St. Re. 587 ... 695
Shuppu Ammal v. Subramaniam, 33 M. 238; 19 M. L. J. 739; 4 Ind. Cas. 1083 ... 206
Shyam Kumari v. Rameswar Singh, 31 I. A. 176; 32 C. 27; 8 C. W. N. 786 ... 960
Siddessury Dassee v. Jonardan Sarkar, 5 C. W. N. 549; 29 C. 557 ... 137
Sidebotham v. Holland, (1895) 1 Q. B. 378; 64 L. J. Q. B. 200; 14 R. 135; 72 L. T. 62; 43 W. R. 228 ... 901
Sidharath Rai v. Anantram, 8 Bom. L. R. 567 ... 658
Singam Marwari v. Barhmadeo Prasad, 1 C. L. J. 331 at p. 348 ... 182
Sirdar Nuran Khan v. Nawab Imam Bakhsh Khan, 6 P. R. 1883 Rev. ... 957
Siri Dhar v. Amar Nath, 146 P. R 1908; 34 P. W. R. 1904; 61 P. L. R. 1908 ... 801
Sita Nath Midda v. Basudeb Midda, 2 C. L. J. 540 672
Sita Ram v. Raja Ram, 12 P. R. 1892 (F. B.) ... 411
Sital Rai v. Nanda Lal, 1 Ind. Cas. 304; 13 C. W. N. 591; 11 C. L. J. 202 ... 367
Sitaram Bhat v. Sitaram Ganesh, 6 B. H. C. R. 250 ... 226
Sitharama v. Vythilinga, 12 M. 472 ... 603
Sm. Mobin Kally Dabee v. Ambica Churn Bamerjee, 5 C. W. N. 813 ... 235
Smith v. Dinonath, 12 C. 213 ... 146
Smith v. General Motor Calcutta Company, (1911) A. C. 188; 80 L. J. K. B 830; 9 S. E. C. (N. S.) 163 ... 608

S—contd.

Page.
Soadamini v. The Administrator-General of Bengal, 20 I. A. 12; 20 C. 433 ... 692
Sohna v. Mosam, 23 P. R. 1895 ... 412
Siru Padmanabh Rangappa v. Narayan Rao, 18 B. 520 ... 38
Soobah Pirthee Lal Jha v. Shoobah Doorgah Lal Jha, 7 W. R. 73 ... 454
Soorjeemoney v. Denobundoo, 9 M. I. A. 123 ... 692
Sreenath v. Raj Chunder, 8 W. R 171 ... 164
Sreenath Dutt v. Dwary Dhallie, 2 W. R. S. C. C. Ref. 2. ... 30
Sreeram v. Puddom, 9 W. R. 152 ... 137
Sreeramudhu Yarranna v. Donhira Kannamma, (1911) 2 M. W N. 354; 21 M. L. J. 962; 10 M. L. T. 561; 12 Ind. Cas. 457 ... 190
Sreeramulu v Krishtamma, 26 M. 143 ... 8
Sri Narain Chuckerburty v. A. B Miller, 15 W. R. (O. C.) 7 ... 456
Sri Nath Das v. Ungud Singh, 7 A. L. J. 459; 6 Ind. Cas. 126 ... 140
Sri Nilmony Singh Deo v. Bhowani Churn Panda, 1 Marsh 327 ... 464
Sri Raja Rao Venkata v. The Court of Wards, 22 M. 383; 26 I. A. 83; 3 C. W. N. 415 ... 9
Sri Virada Pratapa Raghunada Deo v. Sri Brozo Kishoro Patta Deo, 1 M. 69; 25 W. R. 291; 3 I. A. 154 ... 9
Srihari Banerjee v. Khitishchandra Rai Bahadur, 24 C. 569 at p. 574; 1 C. W. N. 509 ... 300
Srimati Mallika Dassi v. Makhan Lal Chowdhry, 9 C. W. N. 928 ... 688
Srimati Nissa Bibi v. Radha Kishore Manikya, 11 C W. N. 312 ... 487
Srinath Das v. Khetter Mohun Singh, 16 C. 693; 16 I. A. 85 ... 505
Srinath Patra v. Kaloda Prosad Banerjee, 2 C. L. J. 592 ... 122
Srinivasa Reddi v Sivarama Reddi, 32 M. 320; 4 Ind. Cas. 506 ... 472
Sriram v. Hari Narain, 33 C. 54; 3 C. L. J. 59; 10 C. W. N. 425 ... 969
Srirangammal v Sandammal, 23 M. 216 ... 795
Stalworth v Inns, 13 M. & W. 466; 2 D. & L. 428; 14 L. J. Ex. 81; 9 Jur. 285 ... 166
Steele v. Brannan, L. R. 7 C. P. 261; 41 L. J. M. C. 85; 26 L. T. 509; 20 W. R. 607 ... 994
Steele v. M'Kinlay, 5 App. Cas. 574; 43 L. T. 358; 29 W. R. 17 ... 266
Stevens v Cook, 5 Jur. (N. S.) 1415. ... 26
Strong v Strong, (1853) 9 Cushing 560 ... 163
Subbu Narayana Vathiayar v. Ramaswami Iyer, 30 M. 83; 1 M. L. T. 377; 16 M. L. J. 503 ... 96
Subbu Pillai v. Rama Sawmi Ayyar, 27 M. 512 ... 44
Subba Rau v. Devur Shetti, 18 M. 126 ... 573
Subba Reddi v. Munsoor Ali Sahib, 24 M. 81 ... 278
Subbayya v. Krishna, 14 M. 183 at p. 209 ... 232
Subbayya Chetti v. Ayaswami Aiyer, 32 M. 86; 5 M. L. T. 80; 1 Ind. Cas. 749 ... 40
Subbaraya Rowthu Minda Nainar v. Kuppusamy Iyengar, 5 M. L. T. 273; 1 Ind. Cas. 535 ... 325
Subramania Ayyar v. King-Emperor, 25 M. 61; 28 I. A. 257 ... 395
Subramania Iyer's case, 25 M. 61 214, 216
Subramania Pillai v. Subramania Ayyar, 21 M. 419 ... 128
Subramanian Chetti v. Arunachellam, 28 M. 1 ... 692

S—concld.

Page.
Suchet Singh, v. Basant Singh, 11 P. R. 1892, Rev. ... 18
Sudarshan Das Shastri v. Ram Prasad, 7 A. L. J. 963; 33 A. 97; 7 Ind. Cas. 385 ... 964
Sudhisht Lal v. Sheobarat Koer, 7 C. 245; 8 I. A. 39 ... 638
Sugra Bibi v. Masuma Bibi, 2 A. 573 75, 859
Sukhlal v. Biharilal, (1902) 2 S. C. Sel. D. 413... 228
Sukhnandan v. Sadaram Seth, 13 C. P. L. R. 43 905
Suleman Kadr. v. Mehdi Begam, 21 C. 135; 20 I. A. 144 ... 75
Sums-ud-din v. Abdul Husain, 31 B. 165; 8 Bom. L. R. 781 ... 497
Sundar Singh v. Bholu, 20 A. 322 ... 461
Sundararaja Ayyangar v. Pattanathusamy, 17 M. 306 ... 44
Sunder Koer v. Rai Sham Krishen, 34 C. 150; 4 A. L. J. 109; 11 C. W. N. 249; 5 C. L. J. 106; 17 M. L. J. 43; 9 Bom. L. R. 304; 2 M. L. T. 75... 16
Sunkur Pershad v. Goury Pershad, 5 C. 321 ... 38
Suppa Tevan v. Emperor, 29 M. 89; 3 Cr. L. J. 370 ... 275
Surajmani v. Ribi Nath Ojha, 35 I. A. 17; 18 M. L. J. 7; 12 C. W. N. 231; 10 Bom. L. R. 59; 5 A. L. J. 67; 7 C. L. J. 131; 3 M. L. T. 144 (P. C.) ... 269
Surampalli Bangarama v. Surampalli Bramhazee, 31 M. 338; 3 M. L. T. 266; 18 M. L J. 254 ... 137
Surja Prasad v. Mohabir Prasad Tribedy, 11 C. W. N. 887; 6 Cr. L. J. 151 ... 928
Surja Pershad Narain Singh v. Reid, 29 C. 622... 186
Surjiram Marwari v. Barhamdeo, 2 C. L. J. 202 ... 145
Surno Moyee Debi v. Dakhina Ranjan, 24 C. 291 343
Surnomoyee Dasi v. Sri Nath Das, 12 C. 614 ... 505
Sutyabhama Dassee v. Kreshna Chandra, 6 C. 55; 6 C. L. R. 375 ... 33
Swainson v. North East Railway Company, 3 Ex. Dn. 341; 47 L. J. Ex. 372; 38 L T. 201; 26 W. R. 4 ... 419
Syedun v. Vilayat, 17 W. R. 238 ... 685

T

Tajuddin Khan v. Ram Pershad Bhaghat, 1 A. 217 ... 31
Takhuroodeen v Kurimbux, 3 W. R. 20 ... 381
Tamijuddi v. Ajgar, 36 C. 256; 13 C. W. N. 183; 1 Ind. Cas. 942 ... 365
Tani Shah v. Bolahi, 14 C. W. N. 479; 5 Ind. Cas 879 ... 277
Tara Chand v. Baldeo, 117 P. R. 1890 (F. B.) ... 669
Tarukpodo v. Shyama Churn, 8 C. L. R. 50 ... 108
Tarwadi Bholanath v. Bai Kashi, 26 B. 305 92, 325
Tasadduk Rasul Khan v. Ahmad Husain, 21 C. 66; 20 I. A. 176 (P. C.) ... 403
Tatia v. Bhabaji, 22 B. 175 ... 575
Taylor v. Shuttlewoth, (1840) 6 Bing. (N. S) 277; 8 Scott 565; 8 D. P. C. 280; 9 L. J. C. P. 138 ... 120
Tej Chand v. Sreekanth Ghose, 3 M. I. A. 261; 6 W. R. 48 (P. C.) ... 382
Thakar Sheo Narain v. Sheo Dat Singh, 7 O. C. 129 ... 491
Thakoor Dyal v. Sarju Pershad Misser, 20 C. 22 ... 205
Thakur Prasad v. Fakirullah, 17 A. 106; 22 I. A. 44 369, 543

T—concld.

Page.
Thakur Ram v. Katwareo Ram, 22 A. 358 ... 189
Thakurmani Singh v. Dai Rani Koeri, 33 C. 1079 at p. 1093 ... 199
Thakur Tirbuwan Bahadur Singh v. Rameshar Bakhsh Singh, 33 I. A 156; 10 C. W. N. 1065; 8 Bom. L. R. 722; 16 M. L. J. 440; 3 A. L. J. 695; 4 C. L. J. 4[illegible]5; 1 M. L. T. 265; 9 O. C. 377; 28 A. 727 ... 345
Thiruvengada Thiengar v. Vaidinath, 29 M. 303 120
Thammiraju v. Bapiraju, 12 M. 113 ... 164
Thayammal v. Venkatarama, 10 M. 205 ... 15
Thievu Pandithan v. Secretary of State for India, 21 M. 433 ... 39
Thomas Barclay v. Syed Hossein Ali Khan, 6 C. L. J. 601 ... 488
Thomas Robert Doucett v. Josiah Patrick Wise, 4 W. R. Mis. 7 ... 861
Thompson v. Williamson, 7 Bilgh (N. S.) 432 ... 26
Thorley v. Lord Kerry, 4 Taunt. 355; 13 R. R. 626 ... 507
Thornton v. Proctor, 1 Austr. 94; 3 R. R. 558 ... 24
Thorp v. Cole, 2 C. M. & R. 367; 4 Daul 437; 5 L. J. Ex. 24 ... 164
Thuchakovil Unni Koya v. Aropayil Pathuti Umma, 2 M. W. N. 187; 9 Ind. Cas. 786; 9 M. L. T. 312; 21 M. L. J. 577 ... 179
Tildesley v. Harper, (1778) 10 Ch. D. 393; 39 L. T. 552; 27 W. R. 249; 48 L. J. Ch. 495 ... 130
Tirumal Rao v. Dastaghiri Miyah, 22 M. 286 ... 369
Tituram Mukerjee v. Cohen, 32 I. A. 185; 33 C. 203; 2 C. L. J. 408; 9 C. W. N. 1073; 15 M. L. J. 379; 7 Bom. L. R, 920; 3 A. L. J. 59 ... 862
Toree Mahomed v. Mahomed Mabood, 9 C. 730; 13 C. L. R. 91 ... 190
Tota v. Abdulla Khan, 66 P. R. 1897 ... 527
Tota Ram v. Ram Charan, 33 A. 222; 7 A. L. J. 1149; 8 Ind. Cas. 785 ... 17
Trailokia v. Shurno, 11 C. 539 ... 122
Tricumdass v. Khimji, 16 B. 626 ... 266
Trimbak Ramkishna Ranade v. Hari Laxman Ranade, 34 B. 575; 12 Bom. L. R. 686; 7 Ind. Cas. 940 ... 65
Trimbak v. Lakshman, 20 B. 495 ... 228
Trustees of Clyde Navigation v. Laird, (1882-83) 8 App. Cases 658 at p. 673 ... 247
Tuam (Archbishop) v. Robeson, 5 Bing. 17; 2 M. & P. 32; 6 L. J. (o. s.) C P. 199; 30 R. R. 530 507
Tulsi Ram v. Jhandu, 186 P. R. 1888 ... 33
Tulsi Ram v. Lal Achal Ram Singh, S. D. No. 31 of 1891 ... 811
Tulsidas v. Virbussapa, 4 B. 624 ... 223
Tyrrell v. Painton, (1894) P. 151 at p. 159; 6 R. 540; 70 L. T. 453; 42 W. R. 343 ... 579

U

Ubilock Rai v. Dallial Rai, 3 C. 557 ... 607
Udit Upadhia v. Imam Bandi Bibi, 24 A. 402 ... 84
Uggrakant Chowdhuri v. Harro Chunder Shickdar, 6 C. 209 ... 607
Uma Charan Das v. Mukta Keshi Das, 28 C. 149 ... 690
Umed Dholchand v. Pir Saheb Jiva Miya, 7 B. 134. ... 460
Ummi Begam v. Kesho, 30 A. 462; 5 A. L. J. 474; A. W. N. (1908) 220 ... 685
Ununtoram Chatterjee v. Protab Chunder Shiromonee, 16 W. R31 ...2. 464

U—concld.

Page.

Upendra Narain Bhattacharaya v. Protab Chandra Pardhan, 8 C. W. N. 320 at p. 321 ... 195
Upendra Chandra Mitter v. Tara Prosanna Mukerjee, 30 C. 794 ... 146
Upendra Krishna Mandul v. Ismail Khan Mahomed, 32 C. 41; 8 C. W. N. 889 ... 608

V

Valasubramania Pillai v. Ramanathan Chettiar, 32 M. 421; 2 Ind. Cas. 309; 5 M. L. T. 102 ... 704
Vankayya v. Raghava Charlu, 22 M. 320 ... 89
Vasudeva Mudaliar v. Srinivasa Pillai, 30 M. 426; 17 M. L. J. 444; 11 C. W. N. 1005; 4 A. L. J. 625; 6 C. L. J. 255; 2 M. L. T. 333; 9 Bom. L. R. 1104 ... 506
Velagaleti Ramakrishnayya v. Suramani Bapayya Appa Row, 27 M. 430 ... 176
Velu Goundan v. Kumaravelu Goundan, 20 M. 289 ... 903
Venkata N. Naidu v. Bhashyakarlu Naidu, 25 M. 367; 4 Bom. L. R. 543 (P. C.) ... 794
Venkata Narasimha Appa Row v. Lakhshmi Venkayamma Row, 7 M. L. T. 296; 5 Ind. Cas. 102 ... 739
Venkata Ram Chetty v. King-Emperor, U. B. R. 1907-1909, 3rd Qr., Excise I; 4 Ind. Cas. 898; 11 Cr. L. J. 77 ... 778
Venkatagiri Iyer v. Sodagopa Chariar, 14 M. L. J. 359 ... 204
Venkatasubbaraya v. Zemindar of Karvetenagar, 20 M. 159 ... 343
Vibudhapriya Tirthaswami v. Yusuf Sahib, 28 M. 380; 15 M. L. J. 202 ... 908
Vijiaragharvalu Naidu v. Srinivasalu Naidu, 28 M. 399 ... 189
Vilanki Venkata Krishna Rao v. Venkata Rama Lakhshmi, 1 M. 174; 4 I. A. 1; 26 W. R. 21 ... 9
Villiers v. Mousley, 2 Wills. 403 ... 507
Vira Pillai v. Rangasami Pillai, 22 M. 149 ... 32
Virbhadrapa v. Bhimaji Baloji Saroff, 28 B. 432 140
Visalatchi v. Siva Sankara, 4 M. 292 ... 89
Vithal Krishna Joshi v. Anant Ram Chandra, 11 B. H. C. R. 6 ... 229
Vithu v. Bhimba, 15 B 145 ... 566

W

Wade v. Dowling, 4 Ellis & Bl. 44; 2 C. L. R. 1642; 23 L. J. Q. B. 302; 18 Jur. 728; 2 W. R. 567 ... 165
Wadhava Mal v. Wadhawa, 8 P. R. 1903; 144 P. L. R. 1906; 33 P. W. R. 1908 ... 797
Wahed Ali v. Jumaee, 11 B. L. R 149; 18 W. R. 185 ... 671
Waliullah v. Durga Prasad, 28 A. 340; 3 A. L. J. 181; A. W. N. (1906) 38 ... 185
Walker v. Olding, 1 H. & C. 621; 32 L J. Ex. 142; 9 Jur. 9 (N. S.) 53; 7 L. T. 633 11 W. R. 186 ... 805
Walker v. Simpson, (1888) 80 Maine 143; 13 Attentie 580 ... 119
Warner v. Jacob, (1882) 51 L. J Ch. 642; 20 Ch. D. 220; 46 L. T. 656; 30 W. R. 721 .. 264

W—concld.

Page.

Warter v. Warter, (1890) 15 P. D. 152; 59 L. J. P. 87; 63 L. T. 250; 54 J. P. 631 ... 958
Watson and Company v. Ram Chand Dutt, 18 C. 10; 17 I. A. 110 ... 80
Wazeera v. Haku, 31 P. R. 1867 ... 950
Wazir Begam v. Piyari Begam, 50 P. R. 1898 ... 94
Wazir Muhammad v. Hub Lal, 6 A. L. J. 231; 9 Cr. L. J. 504; 31 A. 313; 2 Ind. Cas. 182 ... 286
Waziran v. Babu Lal, 26 A. 391 ... 662
Wazir-ullah v. Crown, 1 P. R. 1906 Cr; 48 P. L. R. 1906; 3 Cr. L. J. 43 ... 209
Webster v. Bray, 7 Hare 159 ... 26
Wegg Prosser v. Evans, (1895) 1 Q. B. 108; 63 L. J. Q. B. 1 ... 849
Weldon v. Neal, (1887) 19 Q. B. D. 394; 56 L. J. Q. B. 621; 35 W. R. 820 130, 268
West v. Williams, (1899) 1 Ch 132; 79 L. T. 575; 47 W. R. 308; 68 L. J. Ch. 127 ... 656
Wigram, v. Buckley, (1894) 3 Ch. 483; 63 L. J. Ch. 689; 7 R. 469, 71 L. T. 287; 43 W. R. 147 ... 850
Wilkins v. McGinity, (1907) 2 Ir. R. 660 ... 901
William Grant v. Mrs. Robinson, 11 C. W. N. 242; 5 C. L. J. 178 ... 608
Wills v. Barrett, 2 Starke's Rep. 29 ... 95
Winterscale v. Sarat Chandra Banerjee, 8 C. W. N. 155 ... 608
Wise v. Sunduloonissa, 7 W. R. (P. C) 13; 11 M. I. A. 177 ... 684
Wood v. Lidbitter, (1845) 13 M. N. W. 838; 14 L. J. Ex. 161; 9 Jur. 187 ... 241
Woods v. Mehr Ali, 13 C. W. N. 24; 4 M. L. T. 427; 2 Ind. Cas. 107 ... 298
Wright v. Graham, 3 Exch 131; 18 L. J. Ex. 29 ... 165
Wright v. Hicks, 15 Georgia 160; 60 Am. Dec. 687 ... 685
Wright v. Vanderplank, (1855) 2 K. and J. 1; 25 L J. Ch. 753; 2 Jur. (N. S) 599; 4 W. R. 410 514
Wyman v. Hamword, (1868) 55 Maine 534 ... 119

X

Xenos v Whickham, (1867) 2 H. L. 296 at pp. 309, 312, 320, 323; 36 L. J. C. P. 313; 16 L. T. 800; 16 W. R. 38 ... 656

Y

Yates Finn, 13 Ch. D. 839; 28 W. R. 387; 49 L. J. Ch. 188 ... 27
Ydun, In re, (1899) B. 236 ... 267
Yogambal Boyee v. Naina Pillai, 33 M. 15; 3 Ind. Cas. 110; 6 M. L. T. 162; 19 M. L. J. 489 146

Z

Zahrun v. Gowri Sunkar, 15 C. 198 ... 125
Zamiran v. Fateh Ali, 32 C. 146 ... 659
Zamindar of Karvetnagar v. Trustee of Tirumalai Tirupati, 32 M. 429; 19 M. L. J. 491; 2 Ind. Cas. 18 9 81

INDIAN CASES.

1912.

VOLUME XIII.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 900 OF 1909.
July 30, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.
AKHJU SINGH—DEFENDANT No. 1—APPELLANT
versus
Rai Kumar JAGANNATH PRASAD SINGH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 120, sub-s. (2)—"Any other evidence"—Zerait land—Admission by tenant in previous deposition—Assertions of witnesses that land is cultivated by landlord—Mere execution of kabulyat.

The policy of the Legislature is that a zemindar should not be at liberty to add to his stock of private lands, that is, to absorb the raiyati lands of the estate and convert them into his private lands. Only those lands can be treated as private lands which were originally set up by the zemindar as such.

Under section 120, sub-section (2), of the Bengal Tenancy Act, an admission by a tenant defendant in his previous deposition is admissible as "any other evidence."

Nilmoney Chuckerbutti v. Baikanta Nath Bera, 17 C. 466, referred to.

Assertions of witnesses to the effect that the land was cultivated by the landlord as his zerait land for a number of years, are also admissible in evidence.

The mere execution of a kabulyat is no evidence that the land was zerait, although the fact may be taken into consideration along with other evidence.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Gaya, dated February 20th, 1909, reversing that of the Munsif of Aurangabad, dated September 22, 1908.

Babus Mohendra Nath Roy and Anilendra Nath Roy, for the Appellant.

Babu Ram Charan Mittra, Senior Government Pleader, and Babu Sarish Chandra Chowdhury, Junior Government Pleader, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal on behalf of the first defendant in an action in ejectment. The plaintiff-respondent commenced this suit on the ground that the land in the occupation of the appellant was zerait and that the defendant had no right to continue in occupation thereof after the expiry of the term of a lease granted to him on the 13th May, 1902. The defendant resisted the claim on the ground that the land was not zerait, that it constituted an occupancy holding and that he was not liable to be evicted. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit. Upon appeal, the District Judge has decreed the claim. On behalf of the defendant, this decision has been assailed substantially on three grounds, namely, first that the conclusion that the land in zerait is based upon evidence which is not admissible in law; secondly, that the Judge has not considered whether the defendant was protected from ejectment under section 116 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, even if it was conceded that the case fell within section 120 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and, thirdly, that the Judge ought not to have held that if the land was not zerait, the defendant was liable to be ejected under clause (c) of section 44 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

In so far as the last ground is concerned, it is, in our opinion, clearly well founded. Section 44 provides in clause (c) that a non-occupancy raiyat shall be liable to ejectment where he has been admitted to occupation of the land under a registered lease, on the ground that the term of the lease has expired. If it is assumed for a moment that the land is not zerait and that the defendant was an occupancy raiyat who was let into occupation on the 13th May 1902, it follows that under section 44, he would be liable to be ejected after the expiry of the lease on the 13th May 1905. But section 45 provides that a suit for ejectment on the ground of expiration of the term of a lease shall not be instituted against a non-occupancy raiyat unless notice to quit has been served on the raiyat not less than six months before the expiration of the term of the lease and shall not be instituted after six months from the expiration of the term. This section was repealed by section 2 of Act I of 1907 (B. C.); but it was in force when the term of the lease of the 13th May 1902 expired in 1905. The liability of the defendant to be ejected under clause (c) of section 44 accrued at that time. It is not suggested that the landlord has complied with the requirements of section 45, that is, that he has served notice on the raiyat not less than six months before the expiration of the term. Nor has he instituted a suit for ejectment within six months from the expiration of the term. The right of the landlord, therefore, to eject the defendant as a non-occupancy raiyat under clause (c) of section 44 read with section 45, has never become enforceable. The subsequent repeal of section 45 in 1907 cannot clearly revive the right of the landlord. We must take it, therefore, that if the land is not zerait and if the possession of the defendant is that of a non-occupancy raiyat under the lease of the 13th May 1902, he is not liable to be ejected.

It is now necessary to consider the first two grounds urged in support of the appeal. The learned District Judge has held that under sections 120 and 103 (B) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, there is a presumption in favour of the tenant that the land in suit is not zerait. But he has also held that the landlord has sufficiently rebutted that presumption by the oral testimony of witnesses who support the case by the certified copy of a former deposition of the defendant dated the 1st July 1904 in which he admitted that on his application he had obtained the zerait land from the Manager, and by the evidence of the kabulyat itself the execution of which was not denied by the defendant. With reference to this analysis of the evidence on the record, it has been argued by the learned Vakil for the appellant that the evidence which is made the foundation of the judgment of the District Judge is irrelevant. He has contended, first, that under section 120 of the Bengal Tenancy Act an admission by the defendant in his previous deposition recorded on the 1st July 1904 is not admissible under sub-section (2) of section 120; secondly, that the mere assertion of a witness that the land is zerait is not admissible; and thirdly, that the mere execution of a kabulyat in 1902 is no evidence that the land was zerait. In support of these propositions, the learned Vakil for the appellant has placed reliance upon the case of Nilmoney Chuckerbutti v. Baikant Nath Bera (1) and has suggested that the contrary view taken in the case of Bhagtu Singh v. Raghu Nath Sahai (2) does not give effect to the true intention of the Legislature. In order to determine the validity of this contention it is necessary to consider the terms of section 120 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Section 120, it will be observed, does not furnish any definition of what constitutes a proprietor's private land. But it is plain that the intention of the Legislature was that no new proprietor's private lands should be created after the Bengal Tenancy Act had come into force. In fact, the view cannot be successfully contested that what is proprietor's private land now must have been the proprietor's private land at the time of the creation of the zemindari, in other words, such lands only can be treated as private lands which were originally set up by the zemindar as his private land. The policy of the Legislature is that a zemindar should not be at liberty to add to the stock of his private lands, that is, to absorb the raiyati lands of the estate and convert them into his private lands. The policy of the Legislature has been to discourage the prevention of acquisition of special rights by tenants in lands originally treated by the zemindar, not as his private land but as part of the stock of the raiyati land of his estate. Starting with this principle in view, it is clear that the Legislature intended in section 120 to impose the conditions under which a particular land might be proved to be the proprietor's private land. Sub-section (1) lays down that the Revenue Officer shall record a parcel of land as a proprietor's private land when one of two elements is established. If it is proved that the land has been cultivated as khamar

(1) 17 C. 466.
(2) 13 C. W. N. 135; 9 C. L. J. 15; 1 Ind. Cas. 571.

AKHJU SINGH v. JAGANNATH PRASAD SINGH.

zerait niz jote or kamat by the proprietor himself with his own stock or by his own servants or by hired labour for twelve continuous years immediately before the passing of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the land must be recorded as the proprietor's private land. Similarly, if it is proved that the cultivated land is recognised by village usage as proprietor's khamar zerait, niz jote or kamat, it is to be recorded as proprietor's private land. In other words, if one of these two elements is established the inference irresistibly follows that the land is the proprietor's private land. The Legislature, however, does not stop here, and proceeds to provide in sub-section (2) for cases not comprised in clauses (a) and (b) of sub-section (1). But though sub-section (2) has a wider scope, the landlord, as will be presently seen, is in a position of considerable disadvantage, it starts with the presumption against him that the land is not his private land and the burden is cast upon him to establish to the satisfaction of the Revenue Officer or the Civil Court under sub-section (3) that the land is of the character which he attributes to it. Sub-section (2) provides that in determining whether any land ought to be recorded as a proprietor's private land, the Officer shall have regard to local custom and to the question whether the land was, before the second day of March 1883, specifically let as proprietor's private land and to any other evidence that may be produced, but shall presume that the land is not a proprietor's private land until the contrary is shown. With regard to this sub-section it has been argued by the learned Vakil for the appellant, upon the authority of the decision in Nilmoney Chuckerbutti v. Baikant Nath Bera (1), that the phrase "any other evidence that may be produced" ought to be interpreted in a narrow sense, namely, as any other evidence that may be produced to show the assertion of any title on the part of the proprietor and communicated to the tenant before the 2nd March 1883. In our opinion, the restricted interpretation suggested is not borne out by the language used by the Legislature; and if the case before us were precisely of the same description as the one considered by the learned Judges, it would have been necessary for us to refer the question to a Full Bench. The case before us, however, is distinguishable and stands on an entirely different footing, and must be decided in accordance with what appears to us to be the plain meaning of sub-section (2) of section 120. As we interpret that sub-section, the Legislature directs that the Revenue Officer shall have regard to local custom and to the question whether the land was, before the second day of March 1883, specifically let as proprietor's private land and to any other evidence that may be produced for the purpose of establishing that the land was proprietor's private land. It may be conceded that the use of the expression whether the land was, before the second day of March 1883, specifically let as proprietor's private land, by implication excludes evidence to show that the land had after that date been specifically let as proprietor's private land The Legislature, for obvious reasons, may have intended that the fact that the landlord had after that date specifically let the land as his private land, would not be allowed to weigh in his favour. But it does not follow that "any other evidence" to which reference is made must necessarily be evidence to show that the landlord had before the second day of March 1883 made an assertion of title and communicated it to the tenant. We have not been able to discover that the view taken in Nilmoney Chuckerbutti v. Baikant Nath Bera (1) has been adopted in any other case, and possibly the principle laid down in that case was intended by the learned Judges to be taken only as referring to the particular kind of evidence then sought to be adduced. In that case, it was attempted to be shown that in 1883 and 1886, the landlord had asserted, in certain proceedings under the Bengal Tenancy Act, that the land was zerait and in the litigation which subsequently ensued, the landlord sought to rely upon this assertion as evidence in his favour. With reference to this, the learned Judges observed that the expression "any other evidence" means "any other evidence produced to show the assertion of title on the part of the proprietor and communicated to the tenant before that date." If the learned Judges intended to lay down broadly that evidence of other descriptions would not, under any circumstance, be admissible, we are unable to accept such conclusion as justified by the plain language of the section. The case of Sher Bahadur Sahu v. M. H. Mackenzie (3) does not militate against the view we take. The evidence excluded in that case was evidence to show that the land had after the 2nd March 1883 been specifically let out as proprietor's private land; as we have just indicated, it may be a reasonable view of sub-section (2) to hold that evidence of this description was intended to be excluded by the Legislature. On the other hand, the case of Bhagtu Singh v. Raghunath Sahai (2) supports the interpretation we have adopted, although we must add that we are not prepared to distinguish the earlier cases on the ground suggested by the learned Judges, namely, that they were cases decided by a Revenue Officer, whereas the case then before the Court was tried as a civil suit. Sub-section 3 makes it patent that the two classes of cases stand on the same footing. In the light of these principles, let us examine whether the evidence to which exception has been taken is really irrelevant. In so far as the certified copies of the former deposition of the defendant recorded in the 1st July 1904 is concerned, it is clear that the identity of the land must first be established. If the identity is so established we are of opinion that the evidence would be admissible, and would fall within the description of 'any other evidence', in sub-section (2) of section 120. In so far as the oral testimony of witnesses is concerned, the question arises whether a bare assertion by a witness that the land is zerait is relevant. It may be pointed out that whether the land is zerait within the meaning of section 120, is not a simple question of fact. It is, as the learned Vakil for the respondent has suggested, a mixed question of fact and law. It would, therefore, be ordinarily necessary for the witness to state the ground for his conclusion; in other words, unless he had special means of knowledge, one would expect him to state facts which would show that the case fell within either clause (a) or (b) of sub-section (1) or within sub-section (2) of section 120. As we understand the evidence, the substance of which has been stated to us, the statements by the witnesses are not bare assertions of this kind. They have generally stated that the land was cultivated by the landlord as his zerait land for a number of years. That, undoubtedly, would be admissible in evidence and, if believed, might justify a finding in favour of the landlord.

(3) 7 C. W. N. 400.

As regards the third class of evidence, namely, the factum of the execution of the kabulyat, we are unable to regard it as any evidence that the land is zerait. Possibly what the learned Judge intended was that it was unlikely that if the defendant had really the status of an occupancy raiyat, he should execute a fresh kabulyat in favour of the landlord. That, no doubt, is a circumstance which, along with the other evidence on the record, may be taken into consideration. But, as the District Judge himself has pointed out, the kabulyat does not contain any admission on the part of the tenant that the land leased was zerait. If it did contain any such admission, as the kabulyat was executed after the 2nd March 1883, it would be of no assistance to the landlord, because it would be evidence that the land had, after that date, been specifically let out as the proprietor's private land. It is impossible for us, however, upon the judgment as it stands to decide this case finally. We are not satisfied that the District Judge has examined the evidence as a whole with specific reference to the elements mentioned in the various clauses of section 120. It is, therefore, necessary in the interest of justice that the case should be re-considered from this point of view. If the District Judge, upon an examination of the whole evidence from the point of view suggested, comes to the conclusions that the land is zerait within the meaning of section 120, the next question will be, whether the defendant is liable to be evicted under section 116, which provides that nothing in Chapter V shall confer a right of occupancy in, and nothing in Chapter VI shall apply to, a proprietor's private land where any such land is held under a lease for a term of years or under a lease from year to year. Before, therefore, the landlord succeeds, he must prove the conditions under which the defendant was let into occupation. It is important to observe that the case for the defence was that, although the kabulyat was executed in 1902, the defendant has, as a matter of fact, been in occupation from an earlier period, and the judgment of the original Court indicates that the Munsif was prepared to accept this theory. But the District Judge does not appear to have considered this point in detail. It will, therefore, be necessary for him, if he finds in favour of the landlord under section 120, to consider whether a case for ejectment has been made out under section 116.

The result is that this appeal is allowed, the decree of the District Judge set aside and the case remitted to him in order that the appeal may be re-heard. The costs of this appeal will abide the result.

Appeal allowed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1351 OF 1910.

November 7, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Richards, K. C., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

NAND RAM—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BHUPAL SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Mortgage by father—Interest—High rate of interest—Necessity to borrow money at high rate—Burden of proof on plaintiff—Suit against son—Discretion to reduce interest.

Where a suit against descendants is brought to enforce a mortgage executed by their ancestor in which there is a stipulation for payment of a high rate of interest, it lies on the plaintiff to prove that there was necessity not only for borrowing the money but for borrowing it at the exorbitant rate mentioned in the deed.

The principle which governs the case of a mortgage by a Hindu widow or by the guardian of a minor should be applied to the case of a Hindu minor.

Chandra Deo Singh v. Mata Prasad, 1 Ind. Cas. 479; 6 A. L. J. 263; 31 A. 176; Huro Nath Roy Chowdhuri v. Randhir Singh, 18 C. 311; 18 I. A. 1; Kameswar Prasad v. Ranbahadur Singh, 6 C. 843; 8 C. L. R. 361; 8 I. A. 8, followed.

Where no necessity for borrowing at an exorbitant rate is proved, a Court would be justified in reducing the stipulated rate of interest to a reasonable rate as well as in refusing to allow compound interest especially where the plaintiff has made a long delay in instituting his suit.

Second appeal from the decision of the Assistant Sessions Judge of Moradabad, dated 20th November 1910.

Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru, for the Appellant.

Mr. Hamilton, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff-appellant to enforce a mortgage, dated the 8th of February 1888, for Rs. 80 executed by Bahadur Singh, ancestor of the defendants Nos. 1—5. The rate of interest stipulated for in the mortgage-deed is Rs. 2-4 per cent. per mensem compound interest with half yearly rests. The plaintiff alleged that in accordance with the terms of the mortgage, the total amount due to him exceeded Rs. 17,000 but he claimed to recover Rs. 2,500 only.

The Court of first instance was of opinion that the mortgage was made for the payment of Government revenue, but that it had not been established that there was any necessity for borrowing money at the high rate provided for in the mortgage-deed. That Court made a decree for simple interest at the rate of Rs. 18 per cent. per annum and the total amount decreed by it was Rs. 432-1-0, that is, more than five times the principal amount borrowed.

The plaintiff appealed and the defendants filed objections under Order XLI, rule 22, of the Code of Civil Procedure. The lower Appellate Court, in a somewhat sketchy judgment, came to the conclusion that no undue influence had been exercised on the mortgagor and varied the decree of the Court of first instance and allowed simple interest at the rate of Rs. 2-4 per cent. per mensem, that is Rs. 27 per annum.

This was an inconsistent judgment because the Court should either have allowed compound interest at Rs. 27 per cent. per annum which was the contract rate of interest, or, if it considered that it was competent to interfere with the contract of the parties and reduce the rate, it ought to have set forth reasons for interfering with the decision of the Court below.

The plaintiff, however, was not satisfied with the decree of the lower Appellate Court and preferred this appeal claiming compound interest as stipulated in the mortgage-deed. The defendants have preferred the connected Appeal No. 1364 of 1910, in which they urge that the Court below ought not to have raised the rate of interest allowed by the Court of first instance. We are of opinion that the plaintiff's appeal must fail. It has been held by a Full Bench of this Court in Chandradeo Singh v. Mata Prasad (1) that where a plaintiff seeks to enforce a mortgage made by the father or manager of a joint Hindu family as against the joint family property, it lies on the plaintiff to show that the loan was contracted for the necessities of the family. We are bound to follow this Full Bench ruling and, therefore, it lay on the plaintiff to prove that there was necessity not only for borrowing the money but for borrowing it at the exorbitant rate mentioned in the mortgage deed. In the case of Hurro Nath Rai Chowdhuri v. Randhir Singh (2) their Lordships of the Privy Council held in a case in which money had been advanced to a Hindu widow for the payment of Government revenue that the plaintiff ought to have proved that there was a necessity to borrow the money at the high rate of interest agreed upon in the mortgage-deed. This was, no doubt, the case of a widow acting as guardian of an infant but in the view of the Full Bench ruling of this Court to which we have referred and also of the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Kameswar Prasad v. Run Bahadur Singh (3), the principle which governs the case of a guardian of a minor and of a Hindu widow should be applied to the case of the father of a Hindu family. In this case the Court of first instance found that the property mortgaged was of such value as to make the borrowing of money at such a high rate of interest unnecessary. It was also of opinion that it had not been established that there was any necessity for borrowing at such high rate of interest. This finding was never seriously attacked nor do we see how it could have been. We must, therefore, hold that although there was necessity for borrowing the money, there was no necessity for borrowing at the high rate contracted for in the mortgage-deed and we are of opinion that in view of the long delay which the plaintiff has made in instituting his suit, the Court of first instance was justified in reducing the rate of interest claimed, to simple interest at the rate of Rs. 18 per cent. per annum. The result is, that we must dismiss this appeal with costs, and we order accordingly. The costs will include in this Court fees on the higher scale.

(1) 31 A. 176; 1 Ind. Cas. 479; 2 A. L. J. 263.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 18 C. 311; 18 I. A. 1.
(3) 6 C. 843; 8 C. L. R. 361; 8 I. A. 8.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 2441 OF 1911.

November 11, 1911.

Present:—Sir Arthur Reid, KT., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Rattigan.

O'BRIEN, M. W.—DEFENDANT—PETITIONER

versus

Haji ABDUL RAHMAN AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 24 (3) —Transfer of case—Power of District Judge to transfer to Additional District Judge—Revision—Material irregularity—Failure to consider important evidence—Misunderstanding position of parties—False assumption—Punjab Courts Act (XVIII of 1884), s. 70 (1) (a) and (b).

A District Judge has the power under section 24 (3) of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, to transfer a case pending before him to the Court of the Additional District Judge.

Where in dealing with a possessory suit under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, the Court entirely misunderstood the position of the plaintiffs, ignored material and important evidence, misconstrued a material document and failed to apply its mind to the distinction between possession and use or occupation:

Held, that the Court acted with material irregularity within the terms of section 70 (1) of the Punjab Courts Act and that a re-trial of the suit was necessary.

Petition, under section 70 (a) and (b) of Act XVIII of 1884 as amended by Act XXV of 1899, for revision of the order of the District Judge, Delhi, dated the 18th October 1911, decreeing plaintiff's claim.

Mr. Beechey, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Petman, and Lala Piare Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application by the defendant under section 70 of the Courts Act for revision of decree in a possessory suit under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act. The premises in suit consist of a building in the compound of the Woodland Hotel, Delhi. This hotel was leased by the plaintiffs-respondents to the petitioner on the 28th March 1903. On the 2nd April 1909, the terms of this lease were modified by the addition of a clause binding the petitioner to pay Rs. 100 per mensem additional rent in the event of the premises now in suit being completed by the respondents according to specification. On the 8th January 1910, the respondents filed a suit of ejectment against the petitioner on the ground that he rendered himself liable to ejectment by failure to pay rent fixed by a lease of the

SINNACHAMI v. RAMASAMY CHETTIAR.

2nd April 1909 and for arrears of rent. The property in suit was described as being bounded on the east by the house of the heirs of Muhammad Ibrahim, on the west by a public road and shops newly built by the plaintiffs, on the south by a public road known as Church Road and on the north by the same road and by Court land, being the compound of the District Courts. The lease or modifications of the 2nd April 1909 provided that if the respondents desired to construct any building on the north-west part of the land leased, the petitioner would not prevent him provided that if any sheds or stables then standing were demolished, the respondents would re-build them at another spot at their own expense. It is admitted that nothing was done by the respondents towards the completion of the premises now in suit subsequently to the date of institution of the previous suit, and the Court below has recited that the parties were agreed before it that the premises in suit were not complete according to specification. That Court has decreed the suit on the ground that the respondents were in possession of the premises in suit and were ousted by the petitioner on the 23rd April 1911 within six months of suit.

The first plea urged for the petitioner for our disposal is that the Additional District Judge, who passed the decree, had no jurisdiction, the District Judge who recorded the evidence not being empowered to transfer the case to the Additional District Judge, the Court being of co-ordinate jurisdiction. In our opinion section 24 (3) of the Code of Civil Procedure disposes of this objection which must be overruled. The main ground urged by Counsel for the petitioner was that the Court below entirely misunderstood the position of the petitioner and omitted consideration of important points and evidence. The previous suit, above referred to, was for possession of the land within the boundaries referred to and the buildings standing thereon, including the premises now in suit. The suit was dismissed on the ground that there had been no breach of contract by the petitioner and that no rent in excess of what had been tendered was due at the date of suit. In deciding the present case the Additional District Judge appears to have entirely misunderstood the position of the respondents; to have ignored the Municipal record dealing with an application by the respondents to build certain chambers for legal practitioners on a part of the compound of the hotel bordering on the Court compound, although the record contains a note of the 29th August 1911 that Counsel on both sides having referred to this record. It should be summoned, and a note of the 12th September 1911 that the record had been received: to have consequently assumed that clause (b) of the lease or modification cited by him referred to the premises now in suit, to have failed to apply his mind to the distinction between possession and use or occupation to have acted with material irregularity in the disposal of the case, and to have failed to consider whether the premises in suit were built on land to which clause (b) above referred to could apply. These omissions and assumptions constitute, in our opinion, material irregularity within the terms of section 70 (1) of the Courts Act and, without expressing any opinion on the merits, we are satisfied that this suit was not properly tried and that a re-trial is necessary.

We allow the application, set aside the decree of the Additional District Judge, and under section 70 (1) of the Courts Act, remand this suit to the Court of the Divisional Judge of Delhi for re-trial. Inasmuch as it has not been alleged on either side that all available evidence was not tendered and recorded or brought on to the record, the re-trial will be on the record as it stands unless either party satisfies the Divisional Judge that further evidence is necessary.

Any proceedings in execution now pending go with the decree and are dismissed. Costs of this Court will be costs in the cause. Counsel's fee rupees one hundred.

Case remanded.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL No. 170 OF 1906.

September 13, 1911.

Present:—Sir Arnold White, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Phillips.

SINNACHAMI alias KUMARETTU SERVAIGAR, MINOR, THROUGH HIS GUARDIAN SIVAGANAM SERVAIGAR—APPELLANT

versus

U. A. R. RAMASAMY CHETTIAR AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Impartible estate—Alienation—Custom

SINNACHAMI v. RAMASAMY CHETTIAR.

—Adoption—Date from which adopted son's rights begin—Alienation by full owner prior to adoption cannot be defeated—Necessity—Duty of lender—Recitals—Presumption—Adoption by widow—Consent of sapindas —Adoption not to the last male holder, validity of.

The holder for the time being of an impartible estate, although the line of succession is governed by same rules as if the property were joint family property, has unrestricted power to deal with the estate.

The rights of an adopted son do not relate back to a period earlier than the date of his adoption. Therefore, an adopted son cannot defeat an alienation made before his adoption by a full male owner of the estate.

Per Phillips, J.—When a lender is dealing with a borrower (member of a joint Hindu family) who is not absolute owner of the estate mortgaged as security for the loan, it is incumbent on the lender to satisfy himself by reasonable inquiry that the loan is for the benefit or necessity of the estate, for otherwise his charge on the estate in the hands of the next holder is liable to be defeated, but if he inquires fairly and honestly, the real existence of an alleged and reasonably credited necessity is not a condition precedent to the validity of the charge and he is not bound to see to the application of his money.

The recitals in the bond and representations of the borrower are in themselves prima facie evidence of necessity, and if a large portion of the loan is for the benefit of the family, it may be presumed that the balance also was borrowed for the same purpose.

The assent of the sapindas to an adoption by a widow validates it, from whatever motive the consent was given.

When an estate is divested by an adoption not made to the last male holder but to a prior male holder of the estate, the adoption is not valid and does not divest the existing holder of the estate.

Thayyammal v. Venka Rama, 10 M. 205 and Padma Kumari Debi v. Court of Wards, 8 C. 302; 8 I. A. 229, referred to.

Inalienability of a partible estate must be proved by custom.

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge's Court of Tuticorin, in Original Suit No. 32 of 1904.

Mr. K. Srinivasa Iyengar, for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. S. Sivaswami Aiyar, (Advocate-General), for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

WHITE, C. J.—This is an appeal by the 2nd defendant against a decree on a mortgage, dated the 11th October 1892, executed by the father of defendants Nos. 1 and 2 on his own behalf and on behalf of the defendants in favour of the plaintiffs' predecessor-in-title. For the purposes of the appeal the material dates are these. In January 1897 Kumarettu, No. 14 in the pedigree, died. In October 1892, the mortgage in question was executed by Sivathaiya, No. 18 in the pedigree. In 1896, No. 18 died and his estate devolved upon defendants Nos. 1 and 2. In December 1904, the present suit was instituted. In January 1905 the widows of No. 14 adopted the 1st defendant. It seems clear (in fact the appellant did not seriously contend otherwise) that the exercise of the power to adopt was the counter-move on the part of the widows and the 2nd defendant to the suit on the mortgage. For the purpose of the appeal, I assume that a valid power to adopt was given, and that this power was duly exercised by the widows of Kumarettu (No. 14 in the pedigree).

The questions for consideration are:

(1) In whom was the estate in the property comprised in the mortgage vested at the date of the adoption?

(2) What was the nature of this estate?

(3) Did the exercise of the power to adopt divest the estate?

(4) If it did, does the adopted son take the property subject to the mortgage which had been executed by the holder of the estate before the power to adopt was exercised?

As to (1), the appellant has contended that No. 18 took no estate at all (though he was entitled to possession during the life-time of the widows by an arrangement with them), and that at the date of the adoption a widow's estate was vested in the widows of No. 14.

Their case is that at the time of his death No. 14 held the property in question as his separate estate, and that a widow's estate therein devolved on his widows at his death.

Even in this view, the widows being still alive, on the authority of Sreeramulu v. Kristamma (1), the plaintiffs would be in the position of mortgagees of an interest which would be a subsisting interest during the life-time of the widows.

In Sreeramulu v. Kristamma (1), it was held that when a Hindu widow alienates part of the immoveable property belonging to her husband's estate and then adopts a son, the son cannot sue to recover possession of the property until the termination of her widowhood. It was urged that this decision was wrong. It is, no doubt, inconsistent with the view expressed by Mr. Mayne. See section 197 of his book (Edition No. 7). It does not seem to be reconcilable with the decision of the Privy Council in Rai Banomali Roy Bahadur v. Jagat Chandra Bhowmick (2) and it was expressly dissented from in Ramakrishna v. Tripurabai (3). I do not propose to discuss the question whether the decision in Sreeramulu v. Kristamma (1) is good law. The Subordinate Judge finds against division between the branches represented by No. 14 and No. 18 and I am not prepared to differ from his conclusion. In the view that No. 14 did not hold the property as separate estate, the question considered in Sreeramulu v. Kristamma (1) does not arise for determination in this case.

(1) 26 M. 143.

(2) 32 I. A. 80; 15 M. L. J. 267; 32 C. 669; 1 C. L. J. 319; 2 A. L. J. 794; 9 C. W. N. 673.

I am of opinion that on the death of No. 14 subject to the widow's right to maintenance the estate vested in No. 18. It is clear that this was the view taken by the widows (See Exhibit X). The case sought to be made in the Court below that this document was procured by coercion was not pressed on appeal. On the death of No. 18, before the adoption, the estate vested in defendants Nos. 1 and 2 as sons of No. 18, and at the time of the adoption the estate vested in them.

As regards the second question, the Subordinate Judge found that the property was impartible and that on the death of No. 14 it devolved as an impartible estate on No. 18. See paragraphs 56 to 91 of his judgment. I agree with this finding. In certain litigation in 1864 (see Exhibits N and N1) this Court held that the property was impartible and the view that it is impartible is strongly supported by the terms of Exhibit X. I need not refer to the other evidence on the question.

It was urged that, as there was no specific allegation in the pleadings as to the impartibility of the estate, the Judge was wrong in allowing the plaintiffs to raise the question at the trial. The Judge deals with the point in paragraphs 93 to 95 of his judgment.

I am not prepared to say the Judge was wrong in allowing this question to be raised, or in declining to allow the defendant to recall two of his witnesses after his case had been closed, (see the Subordinate Judge's order of October 17th, 1905) or in admitting the documents referred to in the Subordinate Judge's order of November 21st, 1905.

If the property was impartible, although the line of succession is governed by the same rules as if the property were joint family property, No. 18 had unrestricted powers to deal with it. See Sartaj Kuari v. Deoraj Kuari (4) and Sri Raja Rao Venkata Surya Mahipati Rama Krishna Rao Bahadur v. The Court of Wards (5), Rajah of Kalahasti v. Achigadu (6) and Zemindar of Karvetnagar v. Trustee of Tirumalai Tirupati &c., Devastanams (7). His sons could not question an alienation made by him and, if the estate divested, it could only divest subject to any alienations which had been made by the holder of the estate for the time being. No question as to the purpose for which the alienations had been made would arise.

If the estate is partible, the estate which devolved upon No. 18 on the death of No. 14, was the ordinary estate by survivorship in a joint Hindu family.

As to the 3rd question, the question whether the adoption of the 2nd defendant had the effect of divesting the estate which was vested in No. 18 when the adoption took place, was elaborately argued. Here the adoption did not take place until after the death of No. 18, i. e., after the interest which No. 18 took whether he took it by survivorship or as the successor to an impartible estate, had passed from him. It may be said to be now settled law that an adoption made to the last male holder of the interest claimed by the adopted son would divest an already vested interest whether the estate was partible [See Sri Virada Pratapa Raghunada Deo v. Sri Brozo Kishoro Patta Deo (8)] or impartible. [See Bachoo v. Mankorebai (9) . But I think I am right in saying it has never been held that an adoption, [except where the property has reverted to the adopting mother herself, see Villanki Venkata Krishna Rao v. Venkata Rama Lakshmi (10)] which was not made to the last male holder of the interest claimed by the adopted son, operates so as to divest an estate already vested when the adoption was made; or, in other words, it has never been held that where the interest claimed by the adopted son had, at the time of the adoption, passed from the person on

(3) 33 B. 88; 10 Bom. L. R. 1029.

(4) 10 A. 272; 15 I. A. 51.
(5) 22 M. 383; 26 I. A. 83; 3 C. W. N. 415.
(6) 30 M. 454; 17 M. L. J. 367.
(7) 32 M. 429; 2 Ind. Cas. 18; 19 M. L. J. 401.
(8) 1 M. 69; 25 W. R. 291; 3 I. A. 154.
(9) 29 B. 51.
(10) 1 M. 174; 4 I. A 1; 26 W. R. 21.

whom it had devolved from the original owner to some other person, that person would be ousted by the adoption. Here the adoption was made to No. 14 and at the time it was made, the last male holder of the interest claimed by the adopted son was No. 18. At the time of the adoption the interest claimed by the adopted son had passed from the person on whom it had devolved from the original owner.

It may be that the language of the judgment in Musammat Bhoobun Moyee Debia v. Ram Kishore Acharje Chowdhry (11) is not altogether appropriate to a case where the party whose estate is said to be divested has taken by survivorship as a member of an undivided family, but there is no authority to show that the principle of that decision does not apply in the case of a joint Hindu family. [In fact, the authorities would seem to be all the other way. See, for instance, Chandra v. Gojarabai (12)].

In that case their Lordships observe that an adopted son as such takes by inheritance and not by devise and they point out (page 311) that the rule of Hindu Law is that in the case of inheritance the person to succeed must be the heir of the last full owner. In the present case, at the time of the adoption, the last full owner was No. 18, but the 2nd defendant claims to succeed as 'the heir' of No. 14.

The tendency of recent decisions would seem to be in the direction of limiting rather than extending the conditions in which an adoption can be made which has the effect of divesting estate or interests already vested when the adoption is made. In Manikya Mala Bose v. Nandakumar Bose (13) the rule that, where the widow of an adopted son is alive, the widow of the original owner cannot make an adoption which would oust the adopted son's widow, was extended to a case where the widow of the adopted son had died when the adoption was made by the widow of the original owner and the estate had become vested in her. The same view was taken by this Court in Adivi Suryaprakasa Rao v. Nidamurty Ganraju (14).

As regards this question, the view which I should be disposed to take is that, in the case before us the adoption of the 2nd defendant did not operate so as to divest the estate which had vested in defendants Nos. 1 and 2 at the date of the adoption. It is not necessary, however, to decide this point because, assuming the estate was divested by the adoption, I think there can be no doubt that the adopted son would take the property subject to the mortgage. The rights of an adopted son do not relate back to a period earlier than the date of his adoption [Ramundoss Mookerjee v. Musammat Tarinee (15) and Harek Chand Babu v. Bejoy Chand Mahtab (16)]. As Mr. Mayne points out, (section 197, Hindu Law, 7th Edition) "till he was adopted it might happen that he never would be adopted; and when he was adopted, his fictitious birth into his new family could not be antedated." Mr. Mayne goes on to observe that an adopted son would not necessarily have to acquiesce in all the dealings with the estate between the death of his adoptive father and his own adoption. He points out that when the estate has been held by a female the estate is limited by the usual restrictions which fetter an estate so held, and that, if she has created any incumbrances or made any alienations which go beyond her legal powers, the adopted son can set them aside.

The question of the effect of an alienation by a man holding a full estate with reference to a subsequent divesting as the result of a subsequent adoption does not seem to have been considered in any reported case.

It is obvious that the restrictions which are incidental to the estate of a widow are not incidental to the full estate of a male. With reference to the estate of a full owner, Mr. Mayne observes (section 198, Hindu Law, 7th Edition) "until adoption has taken place he is lawfully in possession, holding an estate which gives him the ordinary powers of alienation of a Hindu proprietor. No doubt, he is liable to be superseded but, on the other hand, he never may be superseded. It would be intolerable that he should be prevented from dealing with his own on account of a contingency which may never happen. When the contingency has happened, it would be most inequitable that the purchaser should be deprived of rights which he obtained from one who, at the time, was per-

(11) 10 M. I. A. 279; 3 W. R. (P. C.) 15.
(12) 14 B. 463.
(13) 33 C. 1306; 4 C. L. J. 357; 11 C. W. N. 12.
(14) 33 M. 228; 4 Ind. Cas. 386; 7 M. L. T. 236.
(15) 7 M. I. A. 169.
(16) 9 C. W. N. 795; 2 C. L. J. 87.

fectly competent to grant them." The decision in the Berhampore case, Sri Varada Pratapa Raghunada Deo v. Sri Brozo Kishoro Patta Deo (8), that the brother who was ousted by the adoption to the last holder is not accountable for mesne profits between the date when he took possession and the date of the suit, supports the view that in the case of a male owner he is not, as Mr. Mayne put it, "prevented from dealing with his own on account of a contingency which may never happen." The decision of the Full Bench of this Court in Ramachandram Pillai v. Kalimuthu Chetti (17) that the quantum of the interest taken by the alienee of an undivided co-parcener is to be determined with reference to the number of co-parceners at the date of the alienation, may also be referred to.

If the quantum of the interest is not affected by the birth of a natural son, it would not be affected by a fictitious birth by adoption, and, if the interest of the alienee is not affected as regards the quantum, it is difficult to see on what principle it can be contended that he is liable to be deprived of the property altogether.

I am, therefore, of opinion that, in the present case, the adopted son takes subject to the mortgage. Assume I am wrong in the view I have indicated, and that it is necessary for the plaintiffs to show that the mortgage-debt was contracted for purposes which were binding on the estate, I agree with the conclusion at which my learned brother has arrived, for the reasons stated by him in the judgment which he is about to deliver, that the evidence establishes that the debt was binding on the estate.

I am also of opinion, for the reasons stated by my learned brother, that, as between the 2nd defendant and his natural father, the 2nd defendant has failed to show that the money was borrowed for immoral or illegal purposes.

As regards the question of penalty, I agree with the Court below that the provisions as to interest were not of a penal character. I think that this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

PHILLIPS, J.—This is an appeal by the 2nd defendant against a mortgage decree passed by the Tuticorin Subordinate Judge in favour of the plaintiffs (respondents Nos. 1 to 7) on a mortgage bond, dated the 11th October 1892, executed by the father of defendants Nos. 1 and 2 in favour of the plaintiff's predecessors-in-interest.

2. A very large number of questions both of fact and of law have been raised in the lower Court and in appeal, and, as the law points depend very largely upon the facts, it will be as well to begin by recording findings upon the facts, as such findings may do away with the necessity for dealing with some of the points of law raised in the case.

3. The plaint bond (Exhibit A) was executed by the father of defendants Nos. 1 and 2, one Sivathiya, in favour of two Chettis who traded under the designations of R. M. A. R. A. R. and U. A. R., respectively, for Rs. 12,000 and the consideration is made up of 7 items, (1) Rs. 4,250 to discharge a prior bond in favour of Vakil Subbusami Aiyar, (2) Rs. 2,930-6-4 for payment of cist due to the Ettiyapuram zemindari, (3) Rs. 1,000 due on a pro-note executed to R. M. A. R. A. R. alone, (4) Rs. 65 for stamp and registration expenses, (5) Rs. 2,000 for a hundi for house-hold expenses and (7) Rs. 254-9-8 paid in cash before the Sub-Registrar. The appellant contends, that with the exception of item (1), the consideration was borrowed by Sivathaiya for immoral purposes and has adduced evidence in support of his contention.

4. As regards item (2), there is no evidence as to its application for immoral purposes, but it is contended that the plaintiffs have not proved that the sum of Rs. 2,930-6-4 was actually paid for cist. We have, however, Exhibit J, an irasulnama or chellan, which shows that Rs. 2,930-6-4 was paid to one Subramania Aiyar. This chellan bears an endorsement "credited," which is signed by some illegible initials, but this endorsement has not been proved. No doubt Subramania Aiyar was an employee of the mortgagees' firm, but in Exhibit J he is described as the "Kattalankulam Kattuguthagaidar's man" i. e., the mortgagor's man and the 1st plaintiff as the plaintiffs' witness No. 8 proves his signature. The accounts, Exhibits E and K, also show the payment of this sum. Although there is no direct evidence that the money was actually paid into the Zemin treasury, it is proved that the money was paid to the mortgagor's man and that formal chellan for payment into the treasury was filled up. The mortgagees have, therefore, every right to conclude that the money was paid for the purposes for which it was borrowed.

(17) 21 M. L. J. 246; 2 M. W. N. 238; 9 M. L. T. 389; 9 Ind. Cas. 596.

5. Item (3) is Rs. 1,000 borrowed by Sivathaiya on a pro-note executed to R. M. A. R. A. R. on the 8th October 1892 (Exhibit B).

The pro-note recites no purpose, but the defendants' witnesses Nos. 14, 15, and 16 say that the money was borrowed in Madura and that it was paid over by Sivathaiya to one Subbammal in the presence of the lender, Adappa Chetti. This Subbammal is admittedly a dancing woman who was kept by Sivathaiya. The evidence of these witnesses is not satisfactory, for they are interested in defendants Nos. 1 and 2 and the defendants' witnesses Nos. 14 and 15 cannot explain why they accompanied Sivathaiya to Madura. The plaintiffs' witnesses Nos. 5 and 7 say that the money was paid in the Chettis' shop, whereas the defendants' witnesses say it was paid in Saptur bungalow, where Sivathaiya and Subbammal were staying. Item (5) is a hundi for Rs. 2,000 for the expenses of a suit. The defendants' witnesses Nos. 7, 14, 15, 18 and 19 all say that this hundi was handed over to Subbammal, but there are many discrepancies in their evidence. Exhibit A shows that the hundi was drawn upon one Vairavan Chetti of the firm of R. M. M. of Tinnevelley, and that he was to pay the expenses of the contemplated suit. His accounts, Exhibits E and E1, show clearly that payments were made by him to Vakils and for the expenses of Original Suit No. 50 of 1894 on behalf of the Kattalangulam Kattuguthagaidar, i. e., the mortgagor. These payments, together with an excess payment of Rs. 382 due to Vakil Subbusami Aiyar make up the Rs. 2,000 due on the hundi. These accounts, together with the oral evidence of the plaintiffs' witnesses Nos. 3, 4 and 6, completely falsify the evidence of the defendants' witnesses as to the payment to Subbammal, for they are unable to show, that Vairavan Chetti had any other funds belonging to Sivathaiya from which the payments in the accounts could have been made. Sivathaya's accounts have not been produced by the defendants, although it might be expected that they would give useful information. As regards item (6), we also have oral evidence that the money was paid to Subbammal. These same witnesses have given false evidence about item (5), and there is no reason why they should be believed as regards items (3) and (6). No doubt, the money was borrowed in October, 1892, and Original Suit No. 50 of 1894 was not filed until July 1894 but the delay has been satisfactorily explained. The Subordinate Judge has given additional reasons for disbelieving the defence evidence in regard to these items and there is no reason to differ from his opinion. The letters Exhibits XVI and XVII series, which tend to show that Sivathaiya wanted to give Rs. 4,500 to Subbammal, cannot have much weight in this case, for they were produced in a former suit Original Suit No. 68 of 1897 to show that the money lent by another Chetti in March 1893 was borrowed by Sivathaiya to give to Subbammal, and in that suit the plea was upheld (Exhibits XLI and XLI*a*). If, therefore, the Rs. 4,500 referred to in Exhibit XVII (j) was obtained from the lender in the former suit it cannot have been borrowed under Exhibit A. Further, Exhibit XVII (j) is undated, and the recital in it is consistent with the circumstances attending the execution of Exhibit A. Exhibits XXVI and XXVII are not shown to be in any way connected with the plaint transaction. As regards the last item (7), there is no evidence except that of the defendants' witnesses that it was paid into Subbammal's hands. The Subordinate Judge's finding that the defendants have failed to prove that the money borrowed under Exhibit A was for immoral purposes, must be upheld.

6. Under Exhibit A, seven villages are mortgaged and these are "Kattuguthagai" villages held in perpetuity at a low rent, and it will now be necessary to determine, (1) the nature of Sivathaiya's estate in these villages, and (2) whether they are partible or impartible property. Up to 1873, the villages were held by one Kumaretu, and he died leaving two widows (defendants Nos. 6 and 7) and no sons. He is No. 14 in the pedigree (Exhibit XXXI). He was succeeded by the mortgagor Sivathaiya (No. 18) who was his paternal uncle's son, their respective fathers being Nos. 7 and 8 in the pedigree. The appellant sets up a division between the ancestor of Nos. 7 and 8 (i.e., No. 2) and his brother No. 3, and a subsequent division between Nos. 7 and 8. No document is available to prove either partition, and the appellant relies on documents (Exhibits II, V, XII, XIII, XIV and XLII) which show that the junior members of the family dealt with certain lands as their ancestral property and an attempt has been made to show by oral evidence that the lands dealt with by the respective branches are equal in value. It is suggested that in the division between Nos. 7 and 8, the former took the Kattuguthagai villages, and the latter, an equivalent extent of other ancestral property. The finding of the Subordinate Judge, that the Kattuguthagai villages are impartible, is not seriously controverted in appeal, and it is supported by ample documentary evidence dating back to 1857 (vide paragraphs 58 to 66). It is, however, urged that the defendants were not allowed an opportunity of meeting the plaintiffs' evidence as to the impartible nature of the state. The B diary and Civil Miscellaneous Petition No. 399 show that the question was raised before the defence closed, and although no specific issue was framed on the point it is clear that the question was present to the minds of the parties. As the Kattuguthagai villages are impartible and held by only one member of the family at a time (this latter fact is not disputed), it is most improbable that one branch would take only the impartible property and leave all the partible property to the other branch. The oral evidence by which it is sought to prove that property in possession of the members of No. 8's branch is equal in value to the impartible property belonging to No. 7's branch must be rejected, for the valuation given by the witnesses is very materially opposed to the valuation given in several documents (Exhibits II, XIIa and XLII). The separate possession of the junior members is easily explained when we consider that the family held a valuable impartible estate, the holder of which would have to make allotments for maintenance. The non-execution of a partition-deed in the case of a family holding such large properties partible and impartible is so improbable that very good extraneous evidence would be required to prove partition, and such evidence is not available. The presumption, therefore, that Nos. 14 and 18 were undivided must prevail, and this is also supported by the admission of No. 14's widows (defendants Nos. 6 and 7) in Exhibit X that No. 18 was the rightful heir of No. 14. The lower Court's findings that the estate was impartible and that Nos. 14 and 18 were undivided must, therefore, be upheld.

7. After this suit was filed, and after issue but not service of notice on the defendants, the 2nd defendant was adopted by the 6th defendant with the consent of the sapindas as expressed is Exhibit I, and it is in virtue of this adoption that the 2nd defendant, the appellant, seeks to evade the plaintiff's claim. The adoption is said to have been made not only with the consent of the sapindas but also with the authority of the deceased Kumarettu (No. 14) to whom the adoption was made. The point is not of great importance in this case, but the authority of Kumarettu is not proved. There is only oral evidence to prove the authority, which must have been given 25 years before the trial of this suit. No such authority was set up before the date of this suit, and the recital in Exhibit I goes to show that the sapindas who authorised the adoption did not believe that any authority had been given by the husband. It must, therefore, be held that the adoption was made with the consent of the sapindas. The question of whether this adoption is or is not valid has been the one most hotly contested in appeal but before proceeding to decide that question it will be advisable to see whether the appellant can succeed, even if the validity of his adoption be accepted. If his adoption be valid and effective, he would be entitled to succeed to his father's estate, but inasmuch as his adoption only took place in January 1905 the estate of his father did not vest in him until that date, and he would be bound by any legitimate alienations made by the intermediate holders of the estate, and he would be bound by the plaint alienation, if Sivathaiya had authority to make it. Taking the lowest view of the case, Sivathaiya would be entitled to make the plaint alienation in order to satisfy valid antecedent debts "for family necessity." Items (1) and (3) are antecedent debts; although the latter was only incurred 3 days before the execution of Exhibit A, it cannot be considered part of one and the same transaction, for in the prior loan, the lender was only one of the lenders concerned in the plaint transaction. Item (2) was applied to the payment of cist due to Ettiyapuram. No doubt a careful man ought to have been able to pay the cist out of his current revenue, but Sivathaiya was not a careful man and incurred many debts, and a lender need be guided not by what ought to be the necessity of a borrower if he were a prudent Manager, but what were his necessities at the time of the loan. The recital in Exhibit A and the appropriation of the money towards the cist are, therefore, sufficient to discharge the burden on the lender of proving the necessity. The Rs. 65 for stamp and registration, item (4), were also for the family necessity as well as item (5), the hundi for Rs. 2,000. The fact that the suit for which the Rs. 2,000 was required was dismissed, cannot affect the case. Even if the suit was based on a false claim, the creditors were not in a position to know the fact. That the claim was not patently false is shown by the fact that defendants Nos. 1 and 2 continued the litigation after their father's death. The only other items are Nos. (6) and (7), and of the application of these there is no evidence adduced by the plaintiffs. As regards the item of Rs. 1,500 (6), the bond Exhibit A recites that it was borrowed for "household expenses;" but as to item (7), Rs. 254-9-8 paid in cash, there is no recital at all. When a lender is dealing with a borrower who is not absolute owner of the estate mortgaged as security for the loan, it is, no doubt, incumbent on the lender to satisfy himself by reasonable inquiry that the loan is for the benefit or the necessity of the estate, for, otherwise, his charge on the estate in the hands of the next holder is liable to be defeated, but it has been remarked by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Hanooman-persaud Panday v. Musammat Babooee Munraj Koonwaree (18): "Their Lordships think that the question on whom does the onus of proof lie in such suits as the present is one not capable of a general and inflexible answer," and later on, "the representations by the Manager accompanying a loan as part of the res gesæt and as the contemporaneous declarations of an agent have been held to be evidence against the heir and as their Lordships are informed that such prima facie proof has been generally required..... .....they think it reasonable and right that it should be required..... .....It is obvious, however, that it might be unreasonable to require such proof from one not an original party after a lapse of time and enjoyment and apparent acquiescence." Later on, in the same judgment, their Lordships lay down the principles which should govern the case, and remark that the lender is bound to inquire into the necessities for the loan..... .....but they [i. e., their Lordships] think that, if he does so inquire and acts honestly, the real existence of an alleged and reasonably credited necessity is not a condition precedent to the validity of his charge..... .....and he is not bound to see to the application of his money. The case under consideration by their Lordships was one of a charge created by a mere Manager or de facto owner of an estate, and their remarks would apply, with even greater force, to the present case where the borrower was full owner of the estate charged and only liable to be divested of his estate by an adoption. It is clear that the representations of the borrower are evidence of the necessity for the loan and may in certain cases be treated as prima facie proof as between the lender and the heir. The question was recently considered by Abdur Rahim and Krishnaswami Aiyar, JJ., in Maharaja of Bobbili v. Raja Kaminayami Bangaru (19) and they remarked that the representations of the borrower "may in particular circumstances be sufficient to shift the onus from the lender to the person impeaching the alienation." This view certainly appears to be warranted by the dictum of the Privy Council in Hanooman Persaud's case (18). In the present case, the plaintiffs are not the actual lenders but merely their heirs, and some 12 years have elapsed between the execution of the bond and this suit. The recitals in the bond are, in themselves, evidence as to the necessity for the loan, and the plaintiffs have been able to show that a large portion of the loan was borrowed for the family necessity and, therefore, so far as the remainder is concerned, I think it may fairly be held in this case that the proved or admitted facts throw the onus of proof on the defendants. A large proportion of the loan was borrowed for purposes binding on the family, and it would, therefore, be only reasonable to presume that the balance was also borrowed for the same purpose on the strength of the recitals in the mortgage-deed and the absence of satisfactory evidence to the contrary. Even if I am wrong in this view, I agree with the conclusion of the learned Chief Justice that an adopted son cannot defeat an alienation made before his adoption by a full male owner of the estate. The further plea taken for the plaintiffs that, as Sivathaiya was the holder of an impartible estate, his alienations cannot be questioned by the 2nd defendant, must also be upheld in view of the decision of the Privy Council in Sartaj Kuari v. Deoraj Kuari (4), which was affirmed in the Pittapur case (5), in both of which cases it was held that inalienability of a partible estate must be proved by custom. No such custom has been proved in the present case and not much weight can be attached to the appellant's Vakil's objection that this point was not taken in the lower Court. The question of impartibility was raised in the lower Court, and consequently all legal incidents attaching to the tenure set up must be held to have been in issue. The appellant must be presumed to have been aware of the law laid down in regard to impartible estates, and cannot now plead his ignorance on the point.

(18) 6 M. I. A. 393; 18 W. R. 81.

(19) 21 M. L. J. 593; 9 M. L. T. 155; 2 M. W. N. 101.

The validity of the 2nd defendant's adoption is impeached (a) because the consent of the sapindas as given in Exhibit I was not a valid consent as the motive for the adoption was corrupt, and (b) because the adoption was not to the last male holder.

The first objection cannot be supported, as it has repeatedly been laid down that so long as the assent of the kinsmen is valid, the adoption is valid. The Collector of Madura v. Mutu Ramalinga Sathupathy (20), and Sri Varada Pratapa Raghunada Deo v. Sri Brozo Kishoro Patta Deo (8) and Vellanki Venkata Krishna v. Venkato Rama Lakshmi (10), respectively. In this case it is not contended that the assent was given from corrupt motives.

The second objection is the more important one. It was held by the Privy Council in Bhoobun Moyee's case (11) that the adoption by a widow after her husband's estate had vested successively in his son and in his son's widow, was invalid.

(20) 12 M.I.A. 397; 10 W.R.(P.C.) 17.

As explained in the subsequent cases, Thayammal v. Venkatarama (21), and Padmakumari Debia Chowdhrani v. Court of Wards (22), not only is such an adoption invalid but the widow's power to adopt is determined on the happening of certain events. The rule to be deduced from these cases appears to be that, when an estate is divested by an adoption not made to the last male holder but to a prior male holder of the estate, the adoption is not valid and does not divest the existing holder of the estate. This rule has been applied by the Privy Council in cases where the parties were governed by Dayabhaga Law and in cases under the Mitakshara Law where the property was separate property and not joint undivided property, but it has not been laid down that it is inapplicable to joint family property under Mitakshara Law and the Advocate-General contends that it should also be applied in such a case. It was so applied by this Court in Rathna Mudaliar v. Raghunadha Bhattar (23) and in Adivi Suryaprakasa Rao v. Nidamurty Gangaraju (14), but in the latter case the property had vested at the date of the adoption in the widow of the last male member of the family and was no longer joint family property. In this case, however, the finding that the estate was impartible somewhat alters the case. The succession to an impartible estate is not by survivorship; for it has been held that a coparcener in an undivided family has no interest is an impartible estate until the holder's death. Although the successor must be sought amongst the survivors of the undivided family, the succession is not by survivorship but by inheritance. I think, therefore, that the rule in Bhoobun Moyee's case (11) would clearly be applicable here, for the effect of the adoption to No. 14, if it were effective, would be to divest the present holder (1st defendant) who has succeeded by inheritance to No. 18, Sivathaiya, who himself succeeded No. 14. In this view I am inclined to hold that the adoption would be invalid, but I agree with the learned Chief Justice that the question need not be decided in this case.

In view of my finding that the family of Nos. 14 and 18 was undivided, it is unnecessary to consider what would result, if the estate had vested in defendants Nos. 6 and 7

(21) 10 M. 205.
(22) 8 C. 302; 8 I. A. 229.
(23) 8 M. L. J. 173.

on No. 14's death and had been transferred by them to No. 18.

The only remaining point for consideration is the question of interest. The plaint bond stipulates for an enhancement of the rate of interest from 12 to 15 per cent. from date of default and also for compound interest with yearly rests. In Abbake Heggadthi v. Kinhiamma Shetty (24), a very similar stipulation was held not to be by way of penalty, and the Privy Council ruling in Sunder Koer v. Rai Sham Krishen (25), lays down no rule to the contrary. The Subordinate Judge has found as a fact that the stipulation here was not by way of penalty, and I see no reason to differ from his finding. I, therefore, agree that the appeal should be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(24) 29 M. 491.

(25) 34 C. 150; 4 A. L. J. 109; 11 C. W. N. 249; 5 C. L. J. 106; 17 M. L. J. 43; 9 Bom. L. R. 304; 2 M. L. T. 75.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL No. 32 OF 1911.

October 20, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Spencer.

T. N. MUTHUVEERAPPA CHETTI alias T. N. BATCHA CHETTI AND ANOTHER —APPELLANTS

versus

T. R. PONNUSWAMI CHETTY—RESPONDENT.

Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890*), ss.* 7, 17 —Guardianship of minor—Right to minor's custody—Welfare of the minor to be considered—Legal rights.

In an application for appointment as guardian of the person of a minor, the welfare of the child is the paramount consideration, although regard must also be had to the recognised rights of guardianship under the law.

Re Gulbai and Lilbai, 32 B. 50; 9 Bom. L. R. 923; Bindo v. Sham Lal, 29 A. 210; A. W. N. (1907) 24; 4 A. L. J. 22; Tota Ram v. Ram Charan, 33 A. 222; 7 A. L. J. 1149; 8 Ind. Cas. 785; Krishnaswamy Chethi v. Cottah Mangammal, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 365; 10 Ind. Cas. 283; Muthusammy Sastri v. Narayana Sastri, 21 M. L. J. 195; 8 Ind. Cas. 393; 8 M. L. T. 300; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 36; Sami Row v. Elianatha Row, 16 M. L. J. 357, followed.

The question whether there is any misconduct on the part of an applicant disqualifying him from being the guardian of a minor is only subsidiary to the question whether it is in the best interests of the minor that he should be appointed guardian.

The claims of persons recognized as having preferential rights of guardianship should be discarded where the Court comes to the conclusion that the best interest of the child will not be secured by their being declared or appointed guardians.

In this case, the High Court refused to appoint as guardian a person who resided outside the limits of its ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction.

Appeal from the order of the Hon. Mr. Justice Bakewell, dated the 27th September 1911, in the ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of the High Court.

Mr. T. Ethiraja Mudaliar, for the Appellants.

Mr. M. N. Doraiswami Aiyengar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal against the order of Bakewell, J., in an application by the respondent to be declared the guardian of his minor girl aged about five years. The petitioner is living in the Civil and Military Station, Bangalore, and the child at the time of the application was and now is in custody of her deceased mother's mother and father living in Madras. The learned Judge bases his order on the only ground that nothing was shown "disqualifying the respondent either in his conduct or in his opinion from having the custody of his child."

It would appear that the learned Judge treated the application as one to enforce the petitioner's legal right to the custody of his child and as similar to an action to recover the child from the appellants. The appellants, the child's maternal grandfather and maternal grandmother, alleged in their affidavits that the petitioner and his wife (now deceased) had not been getting on well for sometime before her death, that she had been living with her husband, the respondent at Bangalore till May 1906, that she then came over to Madras apparently for her confinement, and while she was here the respondent instituted a suit against her for restitution of conjugal rights and another against her parents for the recovery of his wife. There were also criminal proceedings in which he charged his wife and her parents with theft. The child was born in September 1906. After the death of the wife the petitioner demanded the restoration of the child by a lawyer's notice; but the appellants sent no reply to it. This was in December 1907. The present application for being declared guardian of the minor was in May 1911. The respondent stated in his affidavit that he made one or two attempts to see his wife and child but the appellants would not allow him to see them.

We may at once say that we agree with the learned Judge that no serious misconduct is proved against the respondent. But the question we have to decide is whether it is for the welfare of the minor that the respondent should be declared or appointed her guardian. Recent decisions of the High Court have established the principle, that in an application of the kind in question, the welfare of the child is the paramount consideration although 'regard must also be had to the recognised rights of guardianship under the law.' As a matter of fact, the texts of the Hindu Law do not recognize any absolute rights of guardianship in any one, the Sovereign being entrusted with the guardianship of all minors and entitled to appoint the person as guardian in their interest. Re Gulbai and Lilbai (1); Bindo v. Sham Lal (2) and Tota Ram v. Ram Charan (3) all recognised the principle that the welfare of the minor is the first consideration to be borne in mind. It has also been affirmed in the decisions of this Court in Krishnaswamy Chetty v. Cottah Mangammah (4); Muthusawmi Sastry v. Narayana Sastry (5) and Sami Row v. Eliavatha Rao (6). The case in Bindo v. Sham Lal (2) is very similar in its facts to the present case. Mr. Justice Bakewell distinguishes these cases on the ground that it was possible in some of them to consult the wishes of the minor and that the Court acted in accordance with the minor's wishes, but that it is not possible to do so in this case as the minor is only five years old. But we do not think that this would enhance the rights of the respondent. It would make it the duty of the Court to come to its own conclusion as to what would best promote the minor's interests. It does not appear that, excepting the respondent's wife, there is any female relation living with him competent to take proper care of the child. It would be hardly safe to presume that his wife, the child's step-mother, would be willing to do so. On the other hand, the grandmother, with whom the child has been living till now, might be trusted to take good care of her. The maternal grandfather's father has made a gift of a house in favour of the child's mother to which the child has now succeeded. There is good reason for believing that the maternal relations have strong affection for the child. We cannot also ignore the fact that the respondent who, as a fact, has never seen the child, was not during the last years of his wife's life on the best terms with her. It was also urged for the appellants that the respondent would be the next heir to the child's property but we should not attach much importance to this fact in the case of a father applying to be declared the guardian of his child. It also appears that the respondent is not a person possessed of ample means, though we do not suggest that he would not be able to bring up the child properly.

The claims of persons recognized as having preferential rights of guardianship have not been recognised in several of the cases referred to above where the Court came to the conclusion that the best interests of the child did not lie in their being declared or appointed guardians. The petitioner himself is residing beyond the limits of the jurisdiction of this Court and it would not be very easy for the Court to control his conduct as guardian. The application is one which the Court is not bound to grant, unless it is satisfied that it is for the welfare of the child that an order should be made.

In all the circumstances of the case, we are of opinion that the application of the respondent should not have been granted. We, therefore, reverse the order of the learned Judge and dismiss the application with costs both here and before the learned Judge.

Application dismissed.

(1) 32 B. 50; 9 Bom. L. R. 923.
(2) 29 A. 210; A. W. N. (1907) 24; 4 A. L. J. 22.
(3) 8 Ind. Cas. 785; 33 A. 222; 7 A. L. J. 1149.
(4) 10 Ind. Cas. 283; (1911) M. W. N. 365.
(5) 8 Ind. Cas. 393; 21 M. L. J. 195; 8 M. L. T. 300; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 36.
(6) 16 M. L. J. 357.

NURA v. NASIR DIN.

FINANCIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT, PUNJAB.

CIVIL APPEAL No. 101 OF 1910-11.

March 13, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Meredith, F. C.

NURA—APPELLANT

versus

NASIR DIN alias NASIRA—RESPONDENT.

Custom—Succession—Lambardar, office of—Adopted son a collateral—Muhammadan Chauhan Rajputs of Madh, District Hissar.

Among Muhammadan Chauhan Rajputs of Mauza Madh, in the Hissar District, the adopted son of a deceased Lambardar, who is also a distant agnatic relation of the deceased, is entitled to succeed his adoptive father as Lambardar in the presence of a first cousin of the deceased.

Hira Singh v. Jiwan Singh, 14 P. R. 1880, Rev.; Nihal Singh v. Bhana, 2 P. R. 1883 Rev.; Maula Dad v. Hayat, 14 P. R. 1886 Rev.; Shah Muhammad v. Diwan Bakhsh, 12 P. R. 1892, Rev.; Ramjas v. Nihala, 13 P. R. 1892, Rev., relied upon.

Barkat Ali v. Illahi Bakhsh, 2 P. R. 1899 Rev.; Hira v. Wazira, 9 P. R. 1892, Rev.; Sher Singh v. Subha, 10 P. R. 1892, Rev.; Suchet Singh v. Basant Singh, 11 P. R. 1892, Rev., distinguished.

Appeal against the order of the Commissioner, Delhi Division, dated 13th May 1911, reversing that of the Settlement Collector, Hissar, dated 18th October 1910.

ORDER.—Lakhwera, Lambardar of Madh, in the Fatehabad Tahsil of the Hissar District, has died childless. There are two claimants for the vacant post; Nura, his uncle's son, and Nasir, his uncle's daughter's son, who was adopted by him in 1903. Nasir is sister's son of Nura, and is also a distant collateral of the 10th or 12th degree.

The following pedigree-table shows the relationship:—

The Collector appointed Nura who has acted as sarbarah of the Lambardar for the last six years. The Commissioner reversed this order on appeal, on the ground that an adopted son ordinarily has all the rights and privileges of a real son. Neither Court referred to the previous decisions on this point of the succession of an adopted son to the post of Lambardar, which were summed up in Sir Louis Tupper's judgment in the case of Barkat Ali v. Ilahi Bakhsh (1). It was taken as settled that an adopted son, being also a daughter's son, is not entitled to succeed to the office of Lambardar in the presence of near collaterals, if he is not of the same got as the deceased, Hira v. Wazira (2), and Sher Singh v. Subha (3) and Suchet Singh v. Basant Singh (4). In the present case the parties are Muhammadan Rajputs of the Chauhan got. It was also held to be decided that an adopted son, being a near agnate of the deceased Lambardar and of the same got with him, is entitled to succeed if his succession is not opposed to custom or to the general feeling in the village on the matter, Hira Singh v. Jiwan Singh (5), Nihal Singh v. Bhana (6), Moula Dad v. Hayat (7) and Shah Muhammad v. Diwan Bakhsh (8) and Ramjas v. Nihal (9). There is no reference in the wajib-ul-arz to any such custom, nor is such alleged to exist. There is no feeling in the village about the matter at all. In the case whether an adopted son who is a distant agnatic kinsman of the deceased is entitled to exclude a collateral as near as a brother's son. Sir Louis Tupper was of opinion that it was not advisable to lay down any hard and fast rule as to the degree of relationship which would support or bar the claim and that the whole circumstances of each particular case must be considered. In the present case, Nasir is a distant agnatic relation of the deceased, he was adopted by him in 1903, since when he has been managing half his land. A registered agreement was executed on 19th March 1903 to this effect, Nura himself being a witness. He is the sister's son of Nura and I agree with the Commissioner that he is entitled to succeed

(1) 2 P. R. 1899, Rev.
(2) 9 P. R. 1892, Rev.
(3) 10 P. R. 1892, Rev.
(4) 11 P. R 1892, Rev.
(5) 14 P. R. 1880, Rev.
(6) 2 P. R. 1883, Rev.
(7) 14 P. R. 1886, Rev.
(8) 12 P. R. 1892, Rev.
(9) 13 P. R. 1892, Rev.

Lakhwera, his adoptive father, as Lambardar in the presence of Nura, who is only the first cousin of the deceased.

Appeal rejected with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 363 OF 1911.
November 10, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Karamat Husain and Mr. Justice Chamier.
SHANKAR LAL AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus
SARUPLAL AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 22—Cross-objections by respondent—Appeal not maintainable, whether cross-objections sustainable.

A respondent is entitled to file cross-objections even where the appeal filed by appellant is not maintainable at all.

Second appeal from the decision of the Additional Judge, Saharanpur, dated the 21st of March 1911.

Mr. Nihal Chand, for the Appellants.

The Hon'ble Dr. Sundar Lal (with him Mr. Durga Charan Banerjee), for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Roshan Lal, the owner of certain property in the Saharanpur District, died of plague in May 1907. After his death his step-mother applied for a succession certificate, and thereupon the defendants to this suit produced a Will in their favour which they alleged had been executed by Roshan Lal. The plaintiff in this suit and his brother, who is the father of one of the defendants, appear to be the heirs of Roshan Lal. Mansa Debi, the step-mother, is admittedly not an heir. But she is in possession of the property. The plaintiff asks for a decree declaring that the Will is a forgery and void against him and that it should be delivered up and cancelled. The first Court found that the Will was not proved to have been executed by Roshan Lal. But it dismissed the suit on the ground that it was governed by section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, and that the claim for a declaration was not maintainable as the plaintiff was entitled to claim possession of the property. In the decree of the first Court dismissing the suit the finding that it was not proved that Roshan Lal had executed the Will is distinctly set out. The defendants fearing, apparently, that this finding would prejudice them hereafter filed an appeal. The plaintiff filed an objection under Order XLI, rule 22, to the effect that the suit was not one for a declaration of title under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, but was a suit under section 39 of the same Act. The Additional Judge dismissed the defendants' appeal, and on the plaintiffs' objections held that the suit was one under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, and that the plaintiff was not under the necessity of claiming any relief other than the cancellation of the Will. He, therefore, allowed the cross-objections and decreed the plaintiffs' claim. This is a second appeal by the defendants. The first question for consideration is, whether the lower Appellate Court had power to set aside the decree of the first Court on the cross-objections filed by the plaintiff. According to the decisions of this Court, the defendants were not entitled to file an appeal against the decree of the first Court for that decree was entirely in their favour. A question was raised as to whether a respondent is entitled to file cross-objections where the appellants' appeal is not maintainable at all. We are of opinion that a respondent is entitled to do so in such a case as this. The respondent in the lower Appellate Court had a right to appeal, and we think that he did not lose his right to file cross-objections merely because his opponents filed an appeal which was found to be not maintainable. On the question on which the Courts below have differed, namely, whether the suit is governed by section 39 or section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, we think there can be no doubt that the suit is governed by section 39. The plaintiff nowhere seeks a declaration of his title. He asks only that the Will may be declared void and delivered up to be cancelled. The language used in the prayer for relief leaves no doubt that the plaintiff intended to rest his claim upon section 39. That section provides that any person against whom a written instrument is void..... may sue to have it adjudged void..... and the Court may in its discretion so adjudge it and order it to be delivered up and cancelled. It seems to us that, ordinarily, where a plaintiff is out of possession and he is in a position to claim a decree for possession, he should not be permitted to obtain merely a decree for the cancellation of an instrument according to which, if genuine, he has no title to the land, ordinarily a Court would, we think, exercise its discretion wisely if it declined to adjudge such an instrument void, and will do well to leave the plaintiff to a suit for possession. The result of allowing a suit to be maintained under section 39 and another suit for possession to be brought immediately afterwards is, that the defendant is put to unnecessary expense. In the present case though the Additional Judge does not say very much about it, we think we must hold that he has exercised his discretion, and inasmuch as he has decided that the document is void, and both the lower Courts agree that the Will has not been proved, we do not feel called upon to set aside his decree. The appeal is dismissed with costs which, in this Court, will include fees on the higher scale.

75382

Appeal dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 137 OF 1911.

November 11, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis.

MOHAMMAD—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SUKHA SINGH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 13—Res judicata—Alienation by grandfather—Vendee suing minor grandson for possession—Guardian ad litem confessing judgment—Subsequent suit for possession by minor not barred—Inquiry into consideration and necessity—Negligence of guardian.

Negligence on the part of a guardian ad litem, even apart from fraud or collusion, is sufficient to prevent the quondam minor from being bound by the decree passed in the suit.

Daulat Singh v. Raghubir Singh, A. W. N. (1894) 141, dissented from.

Ahmad Ali v. Amir Shah, 35 P. R. 1898, followed.

A.'s grandfather alienated certain ancestral property. The vendee obtained possession of the property by a suit in which A., then a minor, was a defendant and was represented by his mother as his guardian. In that suit, the mother confessed judgment. Subsequently, A. brought the present suit for possession of the property on the ground that the alienation was not for consideration and necessity. The lower Courts held the suit barred as res judicata:

Held, that the former suit did not bar the present suit and that, in the interests of justice, A. was entitled to claim an inquiry into the present suit. If on inquiry it should be found that the alienation was for consideration and necessity, then the suit would fail on the merits. If, however, it was not for necessity and consideration, the mother was negligent in not defending the suit and the decree in the previous suit was not binding on A.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Jhelum Division, dated 15th July 1909, confirming the order of the Munsif, 1st class, Gujrat, dated 29th January 1909, dismissing plaintiff's suit.

Mr. B. C. Chatterjee, for the Appellant.

Lala Amar Nath Chopra, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Plaintiff sues for possession of certain land. The defence is that the land was sold by plaintiff's grandfather Aladitta and by Hyat Bibi, daughter of a first cousin of Aladitta; that as regards Hyat Bibi's land plaintiff cannot sue in the presence of her son Khushi Muhammad, and that as regards Aladitta's land the sale was for consideration and necessity. The suit is time-barred and is also barred by the law of res judicata, the vendee having obtained possession by a suit in which the present plaintiff, then a minor, was represented by his mother.

The first Court dismissed the suit. The learned Divisional Judge on appeal held that the suit was barred as res judicata as regards Aladitta's land and that as regards Hyat Bibi's land plaintiff could not sue in the presence of her son. So the appeal was dismissed.

Plaintiff appeals to this Court. As regards Hyat Bibi's land Counsel states that plaintiff now prefers no claim, so it is only the land alienated by Aladitta which is now in question.

As regards this land, the Divisional Judge has disposed of the case simply on the question of res judicata. For plaintiff it is urged that his mother having confessed judgment and not having properly defended the case, the former decision is no bar to the present suit, neither fraud nor collusion is alleged, only neglect. For defendant it is urged that mere negligence, however, gross on the part of guardian ad litem, will not prevent the decree in the former case being a bar to the present suit.

I cannot agree with the contention advanced for the defendant. It is true that in Daulat Singh v. Raghubir Singh (1) it is laid down that mere negligence on the part of a guardian ad litem, will not prevent a decree being binding on the minor, but I prefer to follow the rulings of the Chief Court of this Province. In Ahmad Ali v. Amir Shah (2) it was held that omission to appeal, notwithstanding that there were excellent grounds both on law and on facts for an appeal, amounted to gross negligence on the part of the guardian, and that the quondam plaintiff was not, in such circumstances, bound by the decree. I hold, therefore, that negligence on the part of a guardian ad litem, even apart from fraud or collusion, is sufficient to prevent the quondam minor from being bound by the decree passed in the former suit.

(1) A. W. N. (1894) 141.

Now, if the alienation in question was really for necessity and consideration then the mother was right in confessing judgment; if, however, it was not for necessity and consideration, the mother was negligent in not defending the suit. It follows, therefore, that if the mother's action was not negligent but well advised, the present suit must fail on the merits. So that it may be assumed, without doing any injustice to the defendant, that the mother was negligent and that the former suit is no bar. If on inquiry it should be found that the alienation was for necessity and consideration, then the decision as to the mother having been negligent may be incorrect but the suit will fail on the merits. In the interests of justice, plaintiff is entitled to claim an inquiry into the present suit.

Counsel for defendant has also raised questions of limitation and estoppel, but these have not been decided by the Divisional Judge.

I accept this appeal and set aside the decision of the learned Divisional Judge, and send the case back for re-decision in accordance with the above remarks.

Stamp on appeal to be refunded. Other costs of this appeal to follow the event.

Case remanded.

(2) 35 P. R. 1898.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 1 OF 1911.

November 14, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball.

JANKI PRASHAD—DECREE-HOLDER—APPLLICANT

versus

THAKUR DAS MUKHERJEE AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 2 (3)—Uncertified payment—Court cannot allow it to be proved in execution—Revision—Error of law—Substantial justice not done.

In execution of a decree, the Court should not allow the judgment-debtor to prove those payments which had not been certified under Order XXI, rule 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, within the prescribed period.

The High Court will interfere in revision where the lower Court has been guilty of an error of law and substantial justice has not been done in the case.

Revision against the decree of the Small Cause Court Judge of Agra, dated the 13th of April 1910.

Mr. A. P. Dube, for the Appellant.

Mr. J. N. Choudhri, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for revision under section 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. It rises out of the following circumstances:—In 1902, the applicant advanced a sum of Rs. 50 to the opposite parties on a promissory-note at the rate of Rs. 37½ per cent. interest per annum. In February 1903, he sued to recover his money plus interest. His claim was for Rs. 54 odd, a payment of Rs. 5 having been already made. He obtained a decree and put it into execution several times without success. Finally, in January 1909, when one of the judgment-debtors, who is a Railway servant, had been transferred to Allahabad, he put his decree into execution. He allowed certain payments as having been made. One of the judgment-debtors came to Court and filed an objection to the effect that he paid off the whole amount of the decree. He produced some nine receipts, six of these covered sums which the decree-holder had allowed in his application as having been paid. In the case of one receipt, the decree-holder admitted having received a sum of Rs. 5 and urged that the figure 1 had been inserted and the receipt altered. In the case of the other two receipts, the decree-holder totally denied that he either received the money or granted the receipt.

JANKI PRASHAD v. THAKUR DAS.

The Court called on the judgment-debtors to prove the three disputed receipts, overlooking the terms of clause (3) of Order XXI, rule 2, of the Code of Civil Procedure. The receipts related to payments which had not been certified and recorded according to the terms of Order XXI, rule 2. The Court ought to have refused to go into the question of these payments, leaving it to the judgment-debtor to recover the money, if paid, from the decree-holder by a separate suit. The Court, however, called on the judgment-debtor to prove the payments covered by these three receipts. On the 3rd of March 1910, it ordered the judgment-debtor to secure an expert for examination of the receipts. This apparently was not done. On the 2nd of April 1910, an order was passed postponing the case to the 9th of April for the purpose of examining the judgment-debtor himself in proof of the receipts. On the 8th of April, the decree-holder, who personally conducted his case without the assistance of a legal adviser, wrote to the presiding officer of the Court stating that he was ill and that he would be unable to attend the Court on the 9th and asking for one week's postponement. On the 13th of April 1910, the judgment-debtor was examined in the absence of the decree-holder. He made a brief bald statement supporting the receipts. On the 9th of April, the Court had ordered an account to be prepared and the case to be put up on Monday the 13th April, on which date it held, accepting the evidence of the judgment-debtor, that the decree had been satisfied and dismissed the decree-holder's application for execution with costs. On the 11th of May, the decree-holder applied for restoration and rehearing of the application. This was rejected on the 15th of August 1910, on the ground that the decree-holder had not deposited the amount of costs decreed against him. He made a second application on the 2nd of September 1910 with a deposit. This was rejected on the 26th of September as being barred by limitation. He has now come on revision to this Court. It is quite clear that the lower Court has committed an error in making inquiry as to the payment or non-payment of the amount disputed. The terms of Order XXI, rule 2, clause (3), are very plain and unmistakeable. At the same time, the lower Court did make some sort of inquiry, and if I could say with certainty that substantial justice had been done, I should have refused to entertain the revision. The receipts produced by the judgment-debtors are on the record and I have compared the disputed ones with the admitted ones. There is a distinct difference in the hand-writing, although not such as to enable a non-expert to say with any degree of certainty that the disputed receipts are forgeries. There are certain other features, too, which go to create a certain amount of suspicion in the matter. These disputed receipts are supported by a very meagre bare ex parte statement of the judgment-debtor himself and by no other evidence. He was not even cross-examined as the decree-holder was absent. Without describing these disputed receipts as forgeries, still, I think, the circumstances of the case are such that the lower Court was not justified in holding that the receipts were proved, and it would be certainly advisable that these receipts, the burden of proving which was on the judgment-debtor, should be established, if the latter deems fit to do so, by a regular suit rather be accepted in the present proceedings after a very meagre inquiry. I am far from satisfied that material justice has been done in the case. The lower Court has been guilty of an error of law and I think I can do justice to both parties by allowing the decree to be executed, leaving it to the judgment-debtors to establish by a regular suit the genuineness of their receipts and thereby recovering their money. I, therefore, admit this application, and set aside the order of the lower Court dated the 13th of April 1910. The application for execution will be granted and the lower Court will proceed to execute the decree according to law. The decree-holder applicant will have his costs in the lower Court. So far as costs in this Court are concerned, each party will bear his own costs.

Appeal allowed.

P. N. Dar
Advocate High Court
Jammu & Kashmir
Srinagar.

GOKUL KRISHNA DAS v. SHASHI MUKHI DASI.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1645 OF 1910.

August 26, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Teunon.

GOKUL KRISHNA DAS AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

SHASHI MUKHI DASI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Partnership—Death of one partner—Dissolution—Continuation of partnership—Contract Act (IX of 1872) s. 253, cl. 10—Account stated or settled—Long acquiescence—Limitation—Account to be taken from commencement unless account settled subsequently—Ordinary items not to be challenged in absence of fraud—Salary of partner when may be charged—Sums over-drawn by partner—Liability to pay interest.

A partnership was commenced in 1883 between the husband of the plaintiff, and the defendants. The husband of the plaintiff died in 1887. Since his death, the business was conducted on the assumption that the plaintiff was a partner:

Held, that the original partnership must be held to have been continued by common consent, with this difference that the plaintiff re-placed her husband, and this condition of things could be explained only on the hypothesis that the contract between the founders of the partnership was that it was not to be dissolved by the death of any of the partners.

The mere balancing of an account in a book of accounts does not of itself constitute an account-stated, much less does it constitute an account-settled such as the parties would not be entitled to re-open except on special grounds.

But where an account has been rendered and has long been acquiesced in, unless fraud be proved, a Court will not re-open it, although the account may be shown to be erroneous and although no final settlement was ever made.

Clancarty v. Latouche, (1810) 1 Ball and B. 420 and Scott v. Milne, 5 Beav. 215, on Appeal 7 Jur. 709, referred to.

So long as a partnership continues, the statute of limitation does not apply between the partners as to a claim for account; and the time from which the account is to begin, in a general account of partnership dealings and transactions, is the commencement of the partnership, unless some account has since that time been settled by the partners, in which case the last settled account will be the point of departure.

Foster v. Hodgson, 19 Ves. 183 and Cook v. Collingridge, Jacob 607; 23 R. R. 155, 767; 1 L. J. Ch. (o. s.) 74, referred to.

Unless fraud is establishd, the ordinary items relating to purchases and sales in respect of the business are not to be challenged.

In the absence of any agreement to that effect, one partner cannot charge his co-partners with any sums in the shape of salary, commission or otherwise. But where a pardanashin lady is a partner and the responsibility for the conduct of the partnership business is thrown upon the other partners, it is just and equitable that some allowance should be made in favour of the other partners.

Where some of the partners have over-drawn sums of money from the partnership-business and applied them to establish other firms from which they have earned large profits, they must, when the partnership accounts are taken, not only account for the money but also pay interest on the same.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of 24-Perganahs, dated March 18th, 1910, modifying that of the Sub-Judge of 24-Perganahs, dated July 19th, 1909.

Babus Bipin Bihari Ghosh (Junior) and Mohini Mohan Chatterjee, for the Appellants.

Babus Tarakishore Chowdhury, Brojo Lal Chakravarti and Satish Chundra Mukherjee, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against the preliminary decree in a suit for dissolution of a partnership-business, for adjustment of accounts, and for incidental reliefs. The claim of the plaintiff related to four firms, in respect of which she alleged that her husband, and after his death, she herself was partner with the defendants. In the original Court, the suit was dismissed on the ground that all the partners had not been joined as defendants. The District Judge, on appeal, reversed that decision, and gave the plaintiff an opportunity for the proper constitution of the suit. Upon remand, the Subordinate Judge held that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for dissolution and gave directions as to the mode in which the business was to be dissolved and account taken. Upon appeal, the learned District Judge has affirmed this decision with two important variations, namely, first, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for dissolution in respect of one of the firms only from the income of which the other firms appear to have been established by the defendants, and secondly, that the plaintiff was not entitled to interest on sums over-drawn by the defendants. The defendants have appealed to this Court, and on their behalf, the decree of the District Judge has been assailed, substantially on two grounds, namely, first, that the direction as to the mode in which the accounts are to be taken are unjust and erroneous, and secondly, that the defendants are entitled to remuneration on account of their services in the management of the firm. The plaintiff has contested the validity of these arguments, and has further urged that she is entitled to claim interest on amounts over-drawn by the defendants. We may add that when the appeal was first called on for hearing, it was argued on behalf of the defendants-appellants, that the suit was not properly constituted as parties interested in the partnership had not been served with notice, either in the primary Court or in the Court of Appeal below. We thereupon directed notices to be issued upon such persons. But they have not entered appearance in response to the notice; in other words, in spite of the best efforts of the plaintiff, no one has come forward to claim an interest in the partnership transactions. We are satisfied that there is no substance whatever in the contention that the suit as framed, is open to the objection on the ground of defect of parties. We shall, therefore, proceed to consider the objections urged against the decree of the District Judge.

GOKUL KRISHNA DAS v. SHASHI MUKHI DASI.

The first point taken on behalf of the defendants is, that the District Judge has not given proper directions as to the manner in which the accounts are to be taken. It has been suggested that the plaintiff is not entitled to claim any account at all by reason of her laches. The partnership was commenced on the 19th November 1883, between the husband of the plaintiff and the defendants. The husband of the plaintiff died in 1887. It has been found that, since his death, the business has been conducted on the assumption that the plaintiff was a partner. Consequently, no question arises, whether the partnership was or was not dissolved in 1887, under clause (10) of section 253 of the Indian Contract Act. That section provides that, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, the relations of partners are determined by the death of any partner. There is no direct evidence to show what was the contract between the parties in this respect at the inception of the partnership: but the Subordinate Judge has held, and his view does not appear to have been contested before the District Judge, that the conduct of the parties since 1887 shows that there must have been a contract between the original parties, that the partnership would not be dissolved by the death of any partner. There is no room for the theory that, after the death of the husband of the plaintiff, a new partnership was constituted between herself and the surviving partners. The true view is that the original partnership was continued by common consent with this difference that the plaintiff re-placed her husband, and this condition of things can be explained only on the hypothesis that the contract between the founders of the partnership was that it was not to be dissolved by the death of any of the partners. The position since 1887 has, consequently, been that the defendants have managed the business and kept the accounts; the plaintiff, as a parda-nashin Hindu lady, could hardly be expected to take an active interest in the actual management of the trading concern. She might, no doubt, have employed an agent to examine the accounts from time to time. Indeed, the case for the defendants is that the accounts were settled from year to year. This, however, has been negatived by the Courts below, and in, our opinion, very properly. It is well settled that the mere balancing of an account in a book of accounts does not of itself constitute an account-stated, much less does it constitute an account settled such as the parties would not be entitled to re-open except on special grounds. Olancarty v. Latouche (1). The contention of the defendants that there has been a settled account cannot, therefore, be sustained nor can the position be maintained that there has been such acquiescence on the part of the plaintiff as to disentitle her to claim an account. No doubt, where an account has been rendered and has long been acquiesced in, unless fraud be proved, a Court will not re-open it, although the account may be shown to be erroneous, and although no final settlement was ever made: Scott v. Milne (2). The same principle is acted on in taking accounts, for charges long improperly made and acquiesced in or long omitted to be made and known so to be, are regarded, in the absence of fraud, as having been made or omitted by agreement: Thornton v. Proctor (3). This principle has obviously no application to the present case. The defendants were fully aware that, as they were in charge of the business and kept the accounts, they were liable to render accounts to the plaintiff who, as a pardanashin Hindu lady, could not herself take part in the management, or control the accounts. As already explained, their case is that such accounts have been rendered. This defence has failed. They cannot now very well turn round and contend that they were

(1) (1810) 1 Ball and B. 420.
(2) 5 Beav. 215, on Appeal 7 Jur. 709.
(3) 1 Austr. 94; 3 R. R. 558.

under the impression that the accounts, as entered by them in the books of the firm, were accepted by the plaintiff. But, although the plaintiff is not disentitled to claim an account, the question may very well arise as to the extent to which the accounts are to be taken. No question of limitation obviously arises. As the partnership had not been dissolved before suit, Article 106 of the Limitation Act, 1877, would have no application, Harrison v. Delhi and London Bank (4), in other words, as put in Foster v. Hodgson (5), so long as a partnership continues, the statute of limitation does not apply at all between the partners. Article 120 would, consequently, govern the present suit. If, therefore, no question of limitation arises, the point requires consideration, what is the period for which the accounts have to be taken. There can be no question that the time from which the account is to begin, in a general account of partnership dealings and transactions, is the commencement of the partnership, unless some account has since that time been settled by the partners, in which case the last settled account will be the point of departure: [Cook v. Collingridge (6).] In the present case, there has been no such settled account; consequently, the accounts must be taken from the inception of the partnership. It is clear also, that the accounts must be taken of all dealings and transactions up to the date of the dissolution: [Beak v. Heak (7), Jones v. Noy (8).] It has been contended, however, with considerable force by the learned Vakil for the defendants-appellants, that as the plaintiff was entitled to exercise her right of examining the books and accounts of the firm by an agent appointed by her for that purpose [Bevan v. Webb (9)] and as she has never chosen to exercise such a right, it would be a great hardship upon the defendants if they were called upon now to justify the purchases and sales on account of the firm at this distance of time, many years after the transactions have taken place. The learned Vakil for the plaintiff-respondent has appreciated the force of this contention and has stated that the plaintiff is not anxious to require the defendants to justify the ordinary items. Her grievance is that sums have been paid out in an obviously unauthorised manner, and that the defendants ought to be called upon to account for such sums. The payments so made have been classified under four heads, namely, first, sums paid by way of remuneration to the defendants; secondly, sums paid to Mohesh Chandra Dey, the nephew of the husband of the plaintiff, or to creditors of Mohesh; thirdly, sums paid to Bindubashini, the widow of Mohesh Chandra, and fourthly sums paid to the defendants which they have invested in very profitable business. In so far as payments of the first of these four classes are concerned, we shall deal with the matter when we consider the second ground urged by the appellants. In so far as the second and third classes of payments are concerned, the defendants are obviously liable to render an account. Their case throughout has been that Mohesh Chandra Dey was one of the partners of the firm and that after his death, his widow also continued to be a partner. This defence has completely failed. The payments made to Mohesh or his creditors or to his widow cannot, therefore, be justified on the ground that they were payments made to a partner. But it has been suggested on behalf of the defendants that Mohesh had rendered services to the firm, for which he was entitled to remuneration. That is a question which remains to be investigated; if it is established that Mohesh was entitled to remuneration for services rendered, a reasonable amount of remuneration may be set off against the sums paid out to him, his creditor or his widow. The remainder must be deemed as unauthorized payments for which the defendants are bound to render an account. In so far as payments of the fourth class are concerned, it is clear that the defendants are liable to render an account. If it is established that they have withdrawn sums from the partnership business and supplied them for purposes unconnected therewith, they are bound to render an account for the sums so withdrawn. It follows, consequently, that the defendants are liable to render an account from the commencement of the partnership business, that unless fraud is established, the ordinary items relating to purchases and sales in

(4) 4. A. 437.
(5) 19 Ves. 183.
(6) Jacob 607; 23 R. R. 155, 767; 1 L. J. Ch. (o s.) 74.
(7) Finch 190.
(8) 2 Myl. and K. 125; 39 R. R. 160; 3 L. J. Ch. 14.
(9) (1901) 2 Ch. 59; 84 L. T. 609; 70 L. J. Ch. 536; 6 W. R. 548.

respect of the business are not to be challenged, but that the defendants must render an account with regard to the four classes of payments just mentioned.

The second point taken on behalf of the defendants is, that they were entitled to remuneration on account of their services in the management of the firm. We are of opinion that this contention is well-founded. It may be conceded, as put by Lord Wynford in Thompson v. Williamson (10), under ordinary circumstances the contract of partnership excludes any implied contract for payment of services rendered for the firm by any of its members; consequently, in the absence of any agreement to that effect, one partner cannot charge his co-partners with any sums for compensation, whether in the shape of salary, commission or otherwise, on account of his own trouble in conducting the partnership business, and in this respect a managing partner is in no different position from any other partner. [Hutchson v. Smith (11)]. This doctrine has been applied even where the amount of the services rendered by the partners is exceedingly unequal. In such a case, a remuneration to be paid to either partner for personal labour exceeding that contributed by the other is considered as left to the honour of the other, and it has been said that where that principle is wanting a Court of Justice cannot supply it. [Webster v. Bray (12)] where an allowance for trouble was made to the defendant, because it was offered by the plaintiff, [Robinson v. Anderson (13)] where no allowance was offered and none was given by the Court: where, however, it is the duty of each partner to attend to the partnership business and one partner in breach of his duty wilfully leaves the other to carry on the partnership business unaided, the Court may, upon dissolution of partnership, decree an allowance in favour of the partner who had carried on the business alone [Airey v. Borham (14)]. In the case before us, the circumstances are peculiar; the plaintiff is a pardanashin lady and is unable, by reason of her station in life, to take an active interest in the management of the partnership business, the responsibility for the conduct of which has naturally been thrown upon the defendants. In view of these facts we expressed our opinion that it was just and equitable that some allowance should be made in favour of the defendants. The plaintiff thereupon offered remuneration at the rate of Rs. 150 a year. In our opinion, this is reasonable and we direct accordingly, that when the accounts are taken, the defendants be credited with remuneration at the rate of Rs. 150 a year from the time of the death of the husband of the plaintiff. If the defendants have credited themselves with any sum in excess of Rs. 150 a year by way of remuneration, they must account for the difference.

The point urged on behalf of the plaintiff against the decree of the District Judge raises the question whether the defendants are liable to pay interest on sums withdrawn by them from the partnership business. The learned District Judge has disallowed the claim for interest, and the learned Vakil for the defendants has sought to justify this view by reference to the case of Meymott v. Meymott (15). He has argued that, except where there has been fraudulent retention, as in Hutchson v. Smith (11), or an improper application, as in Evans v. Coventry (16), a partner ought not to be charged with interest on money of the firm in his hands, Webster v. Bray (12); Stevens v. Cook (17). It may be conceded that this is a sound rule; but, in our opinion, it is of no assistance to the defendants. The case for the plaintiff is—and her allegation has been accepted by the Courts below—that the defendants have, from time to time, withdrawn large sums of money from the partnership business, and applied them to establish other firms from which they have earned large profits. Under these circumstances, it is difficult to appreciate how the defendants can resist the claim for interest. If the money had been retained and laid out judiciously or applied for the legitimate expansion of the business of the firm, the plaintiff would have been entitled to the additional profit. This is clearly a case where some of the partners have, with-

(10) 7 Bligh (N. s.) 432.
(11) 5 Ir. Eq. 117.
(12) 7 Hare 159.
(13) 20 Beav. 98; 7 De G. M. and G. 239.
(14) 29 Beav. 620; 4 L. T. 391.
(15) 31 Beav. 445; 32 L. J. Ch. 218; 9 Jur. (N. s.) 426.
(16) 8 DeG. and M. and G. 835; 26 L. J. Ch. 400; 3 Jur. (N. s.) 1225; 5 W. R. 436.
(17) 5 Jur. (N. s.) 1415.

out the assent of the other partners, wrongfully used in trade funds which were not their exclusive property. They are clearly liable to restore the property and to make the owner proper compensation. In our opinion, the plaintiff, under these circumstances, would be entitled at her option, either to take interest on the profits made by the use of the funds. Although she claimed the latter alternative in the original Court, she has not put forward any such claim before us; she has contented herself in this Court with a claim for interest. This is clearly unanswerable [Yates v. Finn (18), Booth v. Parke (19), Docker v. Somes (20)]. When the accounts, therefore, come to be taken, not only must the defendants account for all sums over-drawn by them and applied for purposes unconnected with the firm, but also pay interest thereon at 12 per cent. per annum. from the date when the sums were over-drawn to the date of the final decree of the lower Court.

The result is that the appeal and the cross-objections must both be allowed in part; the decree of the District Judge will be varied and the accounts will be taken in the manner explained in this judgment. Subject to the variations indicated, his decree will be affirmed. There will be no order as to the costs in this Court.

Appeal and cross-objections allowed in part.

(18) 13 Ch. D. 839; 28 W. R. 387; 49 L. J. Ch. 187.
(19) Beaty 444.
(20) 2 Myl. and K. 655; 3 L. J. Ch. 200.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 920 OF 1910.
November 11, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Robertson.

MUHAMMAD AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat BAKKO AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Succession—Collaterals—Degree of relationship—Method of calculation—General rule—Mianwali Tahsil—Presumption.

The general rule in the Punjab for calculating the degree of relationship of collaterals is that the calculation must be made from the deceased to the common ancestor of the claimant, the deceased and the ancestor being each counted as one.

Ladhu v. Daulti, 126 P. R. 1890; Nur Muhammad v. Gulam Habib, 106 P. R. 1892; Karim Bakhsh v. Jehandad Khan, 74 P. R. 1906; 137 P. L. R. 1906, followed.

Mianwali Tahsil must be presumed to be governed by the general Punjab rule. The rule prevailing in the Bannu Tahsil, viz., that the calculation must be made from the collaterals claiming to the common ancestor, each counting as one, cannot be applied to the Mianwali Tahsil.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Attock Division, dated 16th June 1910, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st class, Mianwali, dated 12th January 1910, decreeing the plaintiff's claim.

Mr. Nand Lal, for the Appellants.

Mr. Nanak Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs in this case sue as reversioners of one Dauran Khan for possession of his estate to which defendant, daughter of Dauran Khan, was also a claimant. It appears that Dauran Khan was not, as a matter of fact, the last male owner, but his son, Khan Beg, actually came into possession before his death. The lower Court has dismissed the claim on the ground that in Tahsil Mianwali daughters and sisters can only be excluded from inheritance of their fathers or brothers by collaterals not more remote than the sixth degree, and that the plaintiffs are not in fact related to the last male owner, Khan Beg, within the 6th degree.

This contention is practically accepted by both sides and I see no reason to doubt its correctness.

The sole question which is left for my decision is, how is the relationship of the collaterals of the deceased Khan Beg to be calculated? There can be no doubt that the general rule throughout the Punjab for such calculation must be held to be that laid down in various judgments of this Court, inter alia Ladhu v. Daulti (1), Nur Muhammad v. Ghulam Habib (2), Karim Bakhsh v. Jehandad Khan (3). No doubt, it is possible that this rule is not quite universal as has been supposed, but that it is general there can be little doubt, and the presumption in every case must be in favour of it. If that rule be applied, which is that the calculation must be made from the deceased to the common ancestor of the claimants, the deceased and the ancestor, being each counted as one, then the plaintiffs' suit must fail; as this would show the colla-terals as only related in the seventh degree. The collaterals, however, claim that the proper method of calculation in the Mianwali Tahsil is the same as that laid down in the Riwaj-i-am of the Bannu Tahsil, i. e., the calculation must be made from the collaterals claiming to the common ancestor, each counting as one, and not from the deceased to the common ancestor. If that were so, the plaintiffs' suit will succeed, as they will then be shown within the sixth degree. Plaintiffs rely mainly upon a Division Bench judgment of this Court, reported as Girdhari Ram v. Faizullah Khan (4). That, undoubtedly, lays down that, under the provisions of the Riwaj-i-am of the Bannu Tahsil, which they considered might be also applied to the Isa Khel Tahsil, the method of calculation put forward by the plaintiffs is correct. But this judgment deals with a special part of the country and lays down a rule on the strength of a special entry in the Riwaj-i-am of that tract. The question, therefore, is, are we to apply to Mianwali the general rule obtaining throughout the Punjab or the rule found to obtain in Isa Khel and Bannu? The actual evidence that the rule is as laid down by the plaintiffs is not of any particular value and may be neglected. After full consideration, I consider that Mianwali, being a Cis-Indus Tahsil, separated by the river Indus from the Tahsils of Isa Khel and Bannu and differing very materially from those Tahsils in character and population, must be presumed to be governed by the general rule of the Punjab. This presumption has not, to my mind, been rebutted and there is nothing in the Riwaj-i-am of the Mianwali Tahsil to support the contention of the plaintiffs. I am, therefore, unable to see any sufficient reason for accepting the appeal. It is accordingly rejected with costs.

(1) 126 P. R. 1890.
(2) 106 P. R. 1892.
(3) 74 P. R. 1906; 137 P. L. R. 1906.

Appeal dismissed.

(4) 48 P. R. 1908; 98 P. W. R. 1908; 166 P. L. R. 1908.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 92 OF 1911.

November 7, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis.

AMAR SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

HUSAINA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Punjab Pre-emption Act (II of 1905), ss. 2 (2), 12—Occupancy rights under section 6 of the Tenancy Act —Sale to landlord by joint tenant—Right of other tenant to pre-empt—Landlord's right to defeat pre-emption —Remedy of landlord in case of such sale to third person—Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887*)*, ss. 5, 6, 53, 56, 60.

Where one of two joint occupancy tenants under section 6 of the Punjab Tenancy Act has sold his occupancy rights to the landlord, the other tenant is entitled to pre-empt.

There is nothing in the Punjab Tenancy Act or in the Pre-emption Act which gives a landlord any right of pre-emption, or right to defeat a claim to pre-empt in the case of a sale of a right of occupancy under any section other than section 5.

Ghauhra v. Harbhaj, 16 P. R. 1905; 41 P. L. R. 1905, explained and distinguished.

In the case of such a sale to the landlord himself, he is estopped, by reason of being a party to the sale, from suing to avoid the sale under section 60 of the Tenancy Act. If the sale is to a third person and the landlord has not given his previous consent in writing, he can sue to avoid the sale.

Second appeal from the order of the Additional Divisional Judge, Amritsar, at Jullundur, dated the 18th August 1910, confirming that of the Munsif, 1st class, Amritsar, dated the 31st January 1910, decreeing plaintiff's claim.

Pandit Rambhaj Datta, for the Appellants.

Chowdhuri Nabi Bakhsh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a pre-emption case in which one of two joint occupancy tenants has sold his occupancy rights to the landlord and the other tenant sues to pre-empt. The occupancy rights in question are rights under section 6 of the Tenancy Act. The first Court gave the plaintiff a decree, which the Divisional Judge upheld on appeal. The only question is whether such a sale is subject to pre-emption.

For the landlord appellant it is urged that a landlord is given the first right of pre-emption even in cases of a sale of occupancy rights held under section 5, and that the landlord's position should be even stronger in a case, where the occupancy tenure is held under section 6.

LALJI PANDEY v. BERHAMDEO PANDEY.

In section 2 (2) of the Pre-emption Act, it is laid down that nothing in the Act shall affect the provisions of section 53 of the Tenancy Act. Section 53 lays down that a tenant having a right of occupancy under section 5 must, if he wishes to alienate his occupancy rights, give notice to his landlord through the Revenue Officer, and that the landlord may then within one month buy the rights at a price to be fixed by that officer. This is, of course, a kind of pre-emption. In Ghauhra v. Harbhai (1), it is laid down, when dealing with the case of a sale by a mukarraridar to the landlords, that the proprietors "have a statutory right of purchase under Chapter V of the Tenancy Act," and so it is held that the co-sharer in the tenancy cannot pre-empt from the landlord. But the mukarraridar is a person whose status is higher than that of an occupancy tenant; so apparently it was considered that in such a case the landlord was entitled to the full benefits of section 53. And the ruling was one under the old law, i.e., the Punjab Laws Act. But we have in the present case nothing to do with section 53 of the Tenancy Act, as the occupancy rights in question are not rights held under section 5. It is sections 56 and 60, if any, which can benefit the landlord in the present case. Section 56 lays down that a right of occupancy under any section other than section 5 shall not be transferred by private contract without the previous consent in writing of the landlord. (I omit the other words of the section, as there is no question here of attachment or sale in execution of a decree or order of Court; what has occurred has been a transfer by private contract.) Section 60 lays down that any transfer in contravention of the foregoing provisions shall be voidable at the instance of the landlord. But this is not a case of a landlord seeking to avoid the transfer; on the contrary, the landlord seeks to maintain the transfer, which is in his favour, and to defend it against a pre-emptor. So I fail to see how sections 56 and 60 can help the landlord in this case. The plaintiff is clearly entitled to pre-empt, according to the provisions of section 12 of the Pre-emption Act, and, granting, for the purposes of argument, that section 2 (2) of the Pre-emption Act, combined with section 53 of the Tenancy Act, debars any one from pre-empting from a landlord in the case of a sale by a tenant holding under section 5 of the Tenancy Act in favour of the landlord, still I am quite unable to find any thing, either in the Tenancy Act or in the Pre-emption Act, which gives a landlord any right of pre-emption or right to defeat a claim to pre-empt in the case of a sale of a right of occupancy under any section other than section 5. What the landlord can do is, to withhold his consent to the transfer in the first place, but if the transfer once takes place, then the landlord's position seems to me to be as follows. If the sale is in favour of a third person and the landlord has not consented, he can sue to avoid the sale under the provisions of section 60. But if the landlord has given his previous consent in writing, or if he is estopped by reason of being himself a party to the sale, then he cannot avail himself of the provisions of section 60, and the sale remains an accomplished fact, not liable to attack by the landlord under the provisions of section 60 of the Tenancy Act but subject to the peremptory claim of any body who can prove his claim to pre-empt under the provisions of the Pre-emption Act.

I uphold the decision of the lower Courts, and dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 16 P. R. 1905; 41 P. L. R. 1905.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REFERENCE No. 2 OF 1911.

June 26, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

LALJI PANDEY—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER

versus

BERHAMDEO PANDEY—DEFENDANT—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Landlord and tenant—Damages—Rent—True test—Wilful omission by defendant to cultivate land according to agreement—Suit for compensation whether suit for rent—Money value of crops—Small Cause Court—Jurisdiction.

Whether a suit is one for damages or for rent must depend upon the nature of the claim put forward. If what the plaintiffs claim is the money value of the crops to be delivered by the tenants to the landlords on account of use and occupation of the land held by them, its true nature is rent.

Panchu Chakar v. Nagendra Nath Pal Chowdhury, 8 Ind. Cas. 96; 12 C. L. J. 480, relied upon.

Where the allegations in the plaint are that the defendants agreed to cultivate the land, but they wilfully omitted to raise any crops and that consequently the plaintiffs were deprived of their share of the crops:

LALJI PANDEY v. BERHAMDEO PANDEY.

Held, that the share of the crops which the defendants are alleged to have undertaken to deliver to the plaintiff was rent, and the suit was not triable by a Small Cause Court.

Reference by the District Judge of Mozafferpore, dated May 1st, 1911, in Suit No. 13 of the Court of the first Munsif of that place.

Babu Hira Lal Chakravarti, for the Petitioner.

Mr. M. M. Mustafa Khan, as Amicus Curiæ.

JUDGMENT.—This is a reference under rule 7 of Order XLVI of the Code of 1908 by the District Judge of Mozafferpore and raises questions of considerable nicety and importance. It appears that on the 30th January 1911, Lalji Pandey and others, as plaintiffs, instituted a suit in the Court of the Small Cause Court Judge of Mozafferpore against the defendants, Burhamdeo Pandey and others, for recovery of what was described as damages for use and occupation of certain land. The substance of the case for the plaintiffs was that they were the superior landlords of the disputed land; that the defendants were in occupation and were bound to cultivate the lands; that they had omitted wilfully to raise any crops, and that consequently during the years 1315 to 1318, the plaintiffs were deprived of their share of the crops. The plaintiffs, therefore, sought to recover Rs. 29-10-3 as the money value of what would have been their share of the produce which might have been grown in the land. The defendants entered appearance and on their objection on the 22nd March 1911, the Small Cause Court Judge held that the suit was not triable as a Small Cause Court suit: he, therefore, returned the plaint to the plaintiffs for presentation to the proper Court. The plaintiffs thereupon applied to the District Judge for revision of this order on the ground that the nature of the suit had been misunderstood by the Small Cause Court Judge and that it was, as a matter of law, cognizable by that Court. The learned Judge has made a reference to this Court, and has expressed an opinion that upon the decision in Kunjo Behari Singh v. Madhab Chundra Ghose (1) and Kali Krishna Tagore v. Izzatunnissa Khatun (2), the view taken by the Small Cause Court Judge would not be supported.

At the hearing of the reference the authorities on the subject have been clearly analysed and placed before us with great care by the learned Vakil for the plaintiff, while the case for the defendants (who have not entered appearance) has been presented by Moulvi Muhammad Mustafa Khan, who at the request of the Court undertook to argue the case as amicus curiæ, and we are indebted to him for the very full and able argument that he has addressed to us.

The question for decision is, whether the suit is excluded from the cognizance of the Small Cause Court by reason of Article 8 of the Second Schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act of 1887. That Article provides that a Small Cause Court shall not take cognizance of a suit for recovery of rent other than house rent. On behalf of the plaintiff it has been contended that the suit is for the recovery of damages and is consequently cognisable in a Court of Small Causes; on behalf of the defendants, the contrary view has been presented that if the plaintiffs are entitled to recover any sum, that sum is in the nature of rent, and a claim in respect thereof must be enforced in the ordinary Civil Court.

In a case of this description the essential point to be ascertained is the status of the defendants. If the defendants are servants or labourers employed by the plaintiffs, the suit must be treated as one for damages. On the other hand, if the defendants are tenants; it is conceivable that the claim may be one for rent. This fundamental distinction was pointed out by this Court in Sreenath Dutt v. Dwary Dhallie (3). (Sutherland References from the Mofussil Small Cause Courts, p. 113.) In that case, it was ruled that where the cultivator is a mere servant of the landlord, a suit for damages will lie against him in a Small Cause Court; but if the cultivator is a tenant to whom the landlord has sub-let the land, a suit for non-fulfilment of the contract by the tenant will lie under the Rent Act. This principle appears to have been recognised in the case of Kade Mandal v. Ahadali Molla (4), and if the distinction is borne in mind it is not difficult to reconcile the cases mentioned in Shoma Metha v. Rajani Biswas (5). In this case it was pointed out that a suit for produce rent or its money value is a suit for rent under the Bengal Tenancy Act and not a suit for damages for breach of contract and is, there-

(1) 23 C. 884.
(2) 24 C. 557.
(3) 2 W. R. S. C. C. Ref. 2.
(4) 6 Ind. Cas. 594; 14 C. W. N. 629.
(5) 1 C. W. N. 55.

fore, not cognizable by a Small Cause Court. The learned Judges observed that this view was in accord with that taken by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in the case of Tajuddin Khan v. Ram Parshad Bhagat(6) and that the previous decisions of this Court in the cases of Lachman Prosad v. Halas Mahtoon(7); Mullick Amanutali v. Ukloo Pasee (8); Mohunt Jumna Doss v. Gowsee Meah (9) did not militate against this view. We, therefore, start with the position that the status of the defendants has first to be determined, because if they are not tenants, the claim against them cannot possibly be for rent, although it does not follow that if they are tenants, the claim must necessarily be for rent.

In the case before us the plaint, taken as a whole, indicates, we think, that the plaintiffs have treated the defendants as tenants. No doubt, they stated that they called upon the defendants to quit the land when they found that they omitted to cultivate it in due course and that the defendants neither quitted the land nor brought it under cultivation. But it is to be observed that the claim has been laid in respect of the crops for four years and it has further been restricted to the one-half share of the whole produce which is explicitly described as the malik's share. These circumstances indicate that the plaintiffs have treated the defendants as tenants. If their case was that the tenancy had been terminated, the suit ought to have been brought for recovery of the value of the entire crop on the footing that the defendants were trespassers in occupation, and in that event the claim for any period in excess of three years would at once have been met by the plea of limitation. If, then, the defendants are tenants, the question arises whether the suit is one for rent.

It has been suggested by the learned Vakil for the plaintiffs that the suit is one for damages for use and occupation. In our opinion, that view cannot be supported. A suit for damages for use and occupation can be maintained against a tenant who has occupied the premises by the permission or sufferance of the landlord, though the terms of the tenancy have not been settled with precision. [Rochester v. Pierce (10); Konai Lall v. Nitai Chand (11)]. In these circumstances, the law implies a contract or promise by the tenant to pay to the landlord a reasonable sum for such use and occupation. [Hellier v. Sillcox (12) and Churchward v. Ford (13)]. In the case before us, if the allegations of the plaintiffs are accepted the terms of the tenancy have been settled with perfect accuracy. Their allegations are that the tenants agreed to cultivate the land and to pay them a half share of the produce that might be raised by due diligence. Consequently, although in the event of the failure of the tenant to deliver one-half share of the produce, the Court may be called upon to investigate the quantity and the money value of the crops, there is no uncertainty as to the terms of the contract between the parties. It follows, therefore, that the suit cannot be treated as one for damages for use and occupation. This clears the way for determination of the question, whether the suit is one for rent. Now, the definition of 'rent' as given in section 3 clause (5) of the Bengal Tenancy Act is, whatever is lawfully payable or deliverable in money or kind by a tenant to his landlord on account of the use and occupation of the land held by the tenant. It is clear, therefore, that the share of the crops which the defendants are alleged to have undertaken to deliver to the plaintiff was rent. They have failed to deliver the crops, and the plaintiffs seek to recover the money value thereof. Is the nature of the relief which the plaintiffs seek altered by the failure of the defendants to perform their part of the contract? In our opinion, the answer ought to be in the negative. The learned Vakil for the plaintiffs did not dispute that if the defendants had grown the crops in due course and had appropriated them for their own purposes, a suit by the landlords to recover the value of their share of the crops could be treated only as a suit for rent. But he urges that the matter is different when the defendants fail to raise the crops. We are unable to accept the suggested distinction as well founded on principle. The position of the landlord is precisely the same whether the failure of the tenants to deliver the crops is

(6) 1 A. 217.
(7) 11 W. R. 151; 2 B. L. R. 27 App.
(8) 25 W. R. 140.
(9) 21 W. R. 124.
(10) (1803) 1 Campbell 466.
(11) 7 Ind. Cas. 492; 12 C. L. J. 612.
(12) 19 L. J. Q. B. 295; 14 Jur. 573.
(13) 2 H. and N. 446; 115 R. R. 631; 26 L. J. Ex. 354; 5 W. R. 831.

due to the fact that they have misappropriated the crops themselves or have failed by reason of want of diligence to raise them at all. In either event, the landlords are entitled to be indemnified and the money which they recover from the tenants represents the compensation paid by the tenants to them on account of the use and occupation of the land held; that is, it is rent. It is not necessary for us to hold that whenever the tenant fails to raise the crops contrary to the terms of his contract, the sole remedy of the landlord is to recover the value of the crops. The landlord may, sometimes, have an additional remedy. For instance, if by reason of the failure of the tenant to cultivate the land, the land itself is deteriorated in value, or if it relapses into jungle, the landlord may well be entitled to claim damages and such damages may, in the contingency mentioned, very well represent the cost of reclamation. The answer to the question, therefore, whether the suit is one for damages or for rent must depend upon the nature of the claim put forward. If what the plaintiffs claim, is the money value of the crops to be delivered by the tenants to the landlords on account of use and occupation of the land held by them, its true nature, in our opinion, is rent. This view is in accord with that taken by this Court in the case of Panchu Chakar v. Nogendra Nath Pal (14), in which it was ruled that the money value of services not performed by the tenant is in the nature of rent and a claim in respect thereof can be enforced only in the ordinary Civil Courts. The learned Vakil for the plaintiffs has placed much reliance upon the case of Vira Pillai v. Rangasami Pillai (15). That case, however, is of no assistance to him. There the defendant had ceased to be a tenant and the suit brought against him was for damages for use and occupation of the land held by him as a trespasser. A suit of that description is obviously cognizable in a Court of Small Causes and a similar principle appears to have been accepted in Bhoobun Mohun v. Chander Nath (16). In the case before us, as we have already explained, the tenancy has not yet been terminated. The defendants are still tenants in occupation and consequently the sum claimed by the plaintiffs, if recoverable at all, is recoverable only as rent and not as damages for use and occupation.

The answer, therefore, which we give to the reference is that the view taken by the Small Cause Court Judge is correct and the plaint has been rightly returned for presentation to the proper Court.

Order accordingly.

(14) 8 Ind. Cas. 96; 12 C. L. J. 480.
(15) 22 M. 149.
(16) 17 W. R. 69.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 229 OF 1910.
June 28, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Rattigan and Mr. Justice Chevis.

MUHAMMAD BADAR KHAN AND OTHERS —PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

CHIRAGH SHAH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—Sanjidar, position of—Denial of owner's right by sanjidar—Repudiation—Acquiescence by landlord—Suit by landlord for ejectment as trespasser—Sanjidar resiling from repudiation—Liability to eviction—Grant of muafi rights by Government—Effect on landlord's suit.

A sanjidar is a person who performs certain services in connection with takyas and in consideration thereof is given certain land to hold as a tenant under the owners.

Although a tenant cannot, by any unilateral act on his part, determine a tenancy that subsists, between him and his landlord, yet if the landlord acquiesces in the tenant's repudiation of that relationship, the landlord is entitled to evict the former tenant as a mere trespasser and to apply to the Civil Court for his eviction as such.

Sutyabhama Dassee v. Krishna Chunder, 6 C. 55; 6 C. L. R. 375; Ishun Chunder v. Shamachurn Dutt, 10 C. 41; 12 C. L. R. 414; Khushal Singh v. Arjan Singh, 41 P. R. 1894; Tulsi Ram v. Jhandu, 186 P. R. 1888, relied upon.

It is not open to the Court to hold that a contractual relationship which is disowned by both parties, still subsists as between them, at all events, so far as those parties concerned.

A sanjidar under the plaintiffs was granted certain muafi rights by Government. In a suit in 1907, the sanjidar filed a written statement, in which he repudiated the relationship of landlord and tenant which plaintiffs alleged to subsist between them and him, and asserted that he himself was the full proprietor of the property held by him. The plaintiffs accepted this repudiation of the relationship and sued to evict the sanjidar as a trespasser. The sanjidar gave up the position adopted by him in the former suit and in the present suit admitted plaintiff's proprietary rights, claiming to be a sanjidar not liable to ejectment:

Held, (1) that the plaintiffs were entitled to eject defendant. The cause of action accrued to the plaintiff upon the denial by defendant of their title as owners and his belated repentance could not put an end to the right which accrued to the plaintiffs on that cause of action.

MUHAMMAD BADAR KHAN v. CHIRAGH SHAH.

(2) That the fact that the defendant was granted muafi rights by Government did not debar the plaintiffs from suing for his eviction, because they were in no way concerned with what occurred between Government and the defendant.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Jullundur Division, dated the 9th August 1909, confirming that of the Sub-Judge, 2nd class, Jullundur, dated the 16th March 1909, dismissing plaintiffs' claim.

The Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shafi, for the Appellant.

Mr. Lakhshmi Narain, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of the case are stated succinctly in the judgment of the learned Divisional Judge and more fully in that of the Sub-Judge. Plaintiffs are admittedly the owners of the property in suit, which comprises 2 takyas and a certain area of land of which part is culturable and part used for purposes of a grave-yard. The defendant, Chiragh Shah, is the son of one Chanan Shah and it is admitted that the latter was a sanjidar and held the property as such under the plaintiffs. Chanan Shah died in 1906 and there is some dispute as to whether Chiragh Shah succeeded his father as sanjidar. Mr. Shafi was not prepared to admit that Chiragh Shah was ever recognised as sanjidar by plaintiffs, but in view of the statements made by the latter in the plaint, which they filed in their suit against Bava Ram Das and others (including defendant) in 1907, we have no hesitation in holding that plaintiffs recognised Chiragh Shah as sanjidar on the death of his father and that they regarded him as such up to the date of their said suit in 1907. It has not been clearly explained to us what the position of sanjidar exactly is, but from what we can gather from the materials on the record and the statements of Counsel before us, he is a person who performs certain services in connection with the takyas and in consideration therefor is given certain land to hold as a tenant under the owners. It is clear that up to the date of the suit in 1907 the defendant was regarded by the plaintiffs as their tenant and as holding the land in suit upon the terms of rendering service as a sanjidar. But in that suit defendant filed a written statement in which he repudiated the relationship of landlord and tenant which plaintiffs alleged to subsist between them and him, and asserted that he himself was the full proprietor of the said property. Plaintiffs were naturally incensed at the attitude thus taken up by defendant and decided to accept the latter's repudiation of the relationship theretofore subsisting between him and them and to treat him as a mere trespasser. They have accordingly brought this suit upon that basis and they now ask the Court to evict defendant on the ground that he is a trespasser. Defendant has thought fit in this case to give up the position which he adopted in the former suit, and he now admits plaintiffs' proprietary rights and claims to be a sanjidar only, though not liable to ejectment, as he has acquired occupancy rights in the land.

Mr. Shafi contends that the defendant's denial in 1907 of plaintiffs' rights as owners gave the latter the right to determine the relationship of landlord and tenant and that when once the plaintiffs had accepted defendant's repudiation of that relationship, the parties no longer occupied the position of landlord and tenant, plaintiffs thereafter being at liberty to treat the defendant as a mere trespasser, and to sue for his eviction in the Civil Courts. The learned Counsel further argued that the mere fact that in this suit defendant had thought it advisable to repent of the position which he defiantly adopted in the former suit could not affect plaintiffs' rights to claim his eviction as a trespasser. After careful consideration of the arguments of Mr. Shafi for the plaintiffs and of Mr. Lakhshmi Narain for the defendant, we are of opinion that there is force in the former's contention. It is true that a tenant cannot, by any unilateral act on his part, determine a tenancy that subsists between him and his landlord, but if the landlord acquiesces in the tenants' repudiation of that relationship he is, we think, entitled to treat the former tenant as a mere trespasser and to apply to the Civil Court for his eviction as such. Sutyabhama Dassee v. Kreshna Chandra (1); Ishan Chander v. Shamacharan Dutt (2); Khushal Singh v. Arjan Singh (3); Tulsi Ram v. Jhandu (4). In such a case both parties

(1) 6 C. 55; 6 C. L. R. 375.
(2) 10 C. 41; 12 C. L. R. 414.
(3) 41 P. R. 1894.
(4) 186 P. R. 1888.

are at one in treating the former relationship as no longer in existence and it cannot be open to the Court to hold that a contractual relationship which is disowned by both parties, still subsists between them, at all events, so far as those parties themselves were concerned. Upon this view of the case, it is clear that plaintiffs, who were the admitted owners of the property must succeed in the present suit as defendant is a mere trespasser with no rights. We cannot agree with the Divisional Judge that because the defendant, as a sanjidar was granted certain muafi rights by Government, plaintiffs are thereby debarred from suing for his eviction. Plaintiffs are in no way concerned with what has occurred between Government and defendant, and so far as affects them, the fact that defendant may hereafter be unable to perform duties in respect of which Government recognised him as a muafidar, is entirely irrelevant.

Nor, again, can the fact that defendant has now seen the error of his ways and is anxious to resile from the position taken up by him in 1907 deprive plaintiffs of their rights to ask for his eviction. Their cause of action accrued upon the denial by defendant of their title as owner and his subsequent belated repentance cannot determine the right which accrued to them upon that cause of action. The case might, perhaps, have been different if defendant had by a bona fide mistake been inadvertently led to dispute plaintiff's title. But in 1907 when he boldly asserted himself to be the owner of the property, he was fully aware of the falsity of his assertion, and he had no possible justification for taking up the position he did. We accordingly hold that plaintiffs are entitled to treat defendant as a mere trespasser and to pray for his eviction as such. We, therefore, accept the appeal and grant plaintiffs the decree prayed for with costs throughout.

Appeal accepted.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 58 OF 1910.

November 8, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Karamat Husain and Mr. Justice Chamier.

Lala GANPAT RAI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

MUNNI LAL AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Joint family business—Manager's power to contract debt—Presumption as to the debt being for benefit of family—Burden of proof—Family necessity.

There is no presumption that a debt contracted by the Manager of a firm or family is contracted for the benefit of the firm or family, and a plaintiff who seeks to bind the other members of the joint family will have to prove that it was a debt contracted for their benefit, or with their consent, or that there was an urgent family necessity therefor.

Soiru Padmonabh Rangappa v. Narain Rao bin Vithal Rao, 18 B. 520; Sunkar Pershad v. Goury Pershad, 5 C. 321; Nagendra Chandra Dey v. Amar Chandra Kundu, 7 C. W. N. 725; Krishna Ramaya Naik v. Vasudev Venkatesh Pai, 21 B. 808 at p. 815, followed.

Sheo Prashad v. Sahib Lal, 20 C. 453, distinguished.

First appeal from the decision of the Additional Judge of Agra, dated 24th November 1909.

The Hon'ble Mr. Moti Lal Nehru, Messrs. Mohan Lal Sandal and S. K. Dar, for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Mr. Sunder Lal, and Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The following pedigree will show the relation of some of the parties to this case:—

The plaintiffs Munni Lal and Chhedi Lal instituted this suit against Ram Prasad, Raghunath Das, Manohar Lal, Keshab Deo, Kashi Nath, Ganpat Rai and Puran Chand on the following allegations: Ram Prasad, defendant No. 1, was the proprietor and Manager of firm styled Gordhan Das-Ram Prasad at Agra. In order to carry on the business of the said firm he borrowed from the plaintiffs Rs. 16,000 by hypothecating the family property known as the Putaria

GANPAT RAI v. MUNNI LAL.

Mahal in the city of Agra under a registered bond dated the 25th of January 1903. Out of the amount of principal and interest due on the mortgage, Rs. 13,170 were paid by Babu Puran Chand defendant No. 6, on the 4th of September 1906. The balance amounting to Rs. 6,585 has not been paid by the defendants. Keshab Deo, after the execution of the mortgage-bond dated the 25th of January 1903, in order to defraud the plaintiff and other creditors, sold a portion of the hypothecated property to Ganpat Rai by a deed dated the 14th of July 1905 alleging himself to be the adopted son of Khairati Lal. Keshab Deo and his representative-in-interest Ganpat Rai are bound to pay the balance due on the mortgage-bond inasmuch as the property of the family was mortgaged for the payment of debts contracted in the ordinary course of the business of the firm and for the benefit of Keshab Deo and his representative Ganpat Rai. The plaintiffs on the above allegations prayed for the recovery of the balance by sale of the property hypothecated. The pleas put forward by Ganpat Rai were to the effect that Keshab Deo was the adopted son of Khairati Lal; that the mortgage-deed dated the 25th of January 1903 was a fraudulent transaction; that no consideration passed for it; that the debts for the payment of which the mortgage-deed was executed were not contracted for any legal necessity nor were they of such a nature as to be binding on Keshab Deo or his representative, that Ram Prasad at the time of the execution of the mortgage-deed was not the Manager of the firm, and that he had no authority to transfer the joint family property nor did he in that capacity execute the mortgage-deed in question. The Court below framed the following issues:—(1) whether Ram Prasad was the Manager and working agent of the firm Gordhan Das-Ram Parsad and whether he in the same capacity executed the mortgage-deed, dated the 25th of January 1903, and whether the said deed was executed for consideration; (2) whether Keshab Deo is an adopted son of Khairati Lal and how far he and his representative Ganpat Rai are bound by the mortgage-deed in suit; (3) whether the plaintiffs are entitled to the interest claimed. Is there any mistake in the calculation of the amount? (4) whether two-thirds of the house purchased by defendant No. 6 are not liable for the plaintiffs' claim; (5) to what reliefs are the plaintiffs entitled. The Court found as a fact that Ram Prasad was the Manager and working agent of the firm Gordhan Das-Ram Prasad; that he executed the mortgage-deed in his capacity of a managing member of the firm; that the deed was executed for consideration; that Keshab Deo was the adopted son of Khairati Lal; that there was no sufficient evidence of the fact that the debts for the payment of which the mortgage deed was executed were gambling debts, and that Ganpat Rai, the representative of Keshab Deo, was bound by the mortgage in suit. On these findings the Court below decreed the plaintiffs' suit. Lala Ganpat Rai, the vendee under the deed of 14th July 1905, has appealed and the plaintiffs have filed objections. The substance of the pleas taken in the memorandum of appeal is that the mortgage-deed was executed without consideration; that it was a fraudulent transaction; that Ram Prasad was not competent to borrow the money; that he was not the Manager of the firm at the time of the execution of the mortgage-deed; that the mortgage-deed was not executed for the benefit of the firm or for legal necessity or for the benefit of Keshab Deo or with his consent, and that the share of Keshab Deo now in the possession of the appellant as a bona fide purchaser was not liable for the payment of the debt contracted by Ram Prasad. The substance of the objections taken by the plaintiffs is that the adoption of Keshab Deo is not proved nor is it proved that Khairati Lal authorized his wife to adopt a son. For the reasons stated by the learned Additional Judge in his judgment, we agree with him that Ram Prasad was the Manager of the firm styled Gordhan Das-Ram Prasad; that the mortgage-deed dated the 25th of January 1903 is not a fraudulent transaction, and that it was executed for consideration. The only points which remain for determination are the following: Is Keshab Deo the adopted son of Khairati Lal? Are the debts for the payment of which the family property in question was mortgaged gambling debts? Is the share of Keshab Deo which was purchased by the appellant Ganpat Rai liable for the payment of the mortgage-debt? The finding of the Court below on the question of adoption is that Keshab Deo is the adopted son of Khairati Lal. The most important piece of documentary evidence on that point is a copy of the arbitration agreement dated the 10th of July 1903 paper No. 46 (c) which is to be found in the paper book of First Appeal No. 302 of 1905. The opening words of that agreement are as follows:—" We, Ram Prasad, son of Gordhan Das, the first party and Keshab Deo, adopted son of Khairati Lal, the second party, caste Bania Agarwal, residents of Belangunj, Agra, declare as follows:—'A reference to this agreement is to be found in the judgment of the High Court dated the 18th of February 1908 in First Appeal No. 35 of 1906.' The learned Judge of this Court in that judgment says 'The suit was instituted on the 2nd of May 1904. Before its institution differences appear to have arisen between the members of the family as regards their interests in the ancestral property of Gordhan Das for we find that on the 10th of July 1903 Ram Prasad the head of the family and Keshab Deo, who claims here to be the adopted son of Khairati Lal, agreed to refer to arbitration all matters in difference relating to the moveable and immoveable property of the family. In that document Keshab Deo is described as the adopted son of Khairati Lal and in it is a recital that the parties to the agreement dealt in merchandise and hundis, in a shop called Lalji Mal-Gordhan Das at Kumer in the Bharatpur State, and another shop at Bharatpur Khas and another at Belangunj in Agra, and that they were equal partners in these shops." Keshab Deo in his statement dated the 26th of February 1909 in respect of the arbitration agreement already referred to says as follows:—"I had a dispute with Ram Prasad. Then we executed an agreement for arbitration. I do not know where that agreement is. The witness looked at the copy of agreement filed with the record of the said case paper No. 46 (c) and stated:—An agreement was executed but I do not remember now the terms thereof. Shankar Lal, Chhote Lal and Khub Chand were the arbitrators. Two agreements for arbitration were executed but only one was registered. The agreement which was registered was executed before the suit was instituted. The other was filed in the suit. This statement of Keshab Deo is, in our opinion, sufficient to prove the agreement and the recital in the agreement that he was the adopted son of Khairati Lal at a time when there was no collusion between the parties is, in our opinion, a very strong piece of evidence in favour of the adoption of Keshab Deo by Khairati Lal. The mere fact that the mortgage-deed which is the basis of the suit, is of a prior date is, in our opinion, no sufficient reason for disregarding the recital in the above-mentioned document. In addition to that piece of evidence we have the entries in the accounts for Sambat 1947 to be found on pages 16 and 23 R. of the paper book in F. A. No. 35 of 1906. The entry on page 16 is as follows:—Debited to the account relating to Tika (marking of forehead) ceremony of Chiranjin Keshab Deo. The entry on page 23 is in the following terms: A detail of the expenses relating to Tika (ceremony) and adoption is given at page 102 of the cash book under date Magsar Badi 5th. The statement of Badri Prasad, a witness for Ganpat Rai, dated 23rd March 1909, proves, that the accounts from which the above entries have been extracted belong to the shop at Kamehar. He says: "My father who is dead was a Munieb of Gordhan Das. He worked at the Kamehar shop. He used to make entries in the account books. I can recognize his handwriting." The witness having seen the writing in Hindi on page 102 of the cash book marked red for Sambat 1946 to 1948 relating to the shop at Kamehar stated:—"This is in my father's handwriting. My father was a Munieb for 12 years." That being the documentary evidence of the adoption of Keshab Deo the oral evidence of Chhote Lal and Kanhaiya Lal which has been believed by the learned Additional Judge is, in our opinion, reliable regarding the adoption of Keshab Deo as the son of Khairati Lal. Taking into consideration the facts that Ganpat Rai is an outsider to the family that the adoption took place about the year 1889 and that for a party in the position of Ganpat Rai it is difficult to produce any direct evidence relating to the adoption of Keshab Deo by Khairati Lal especially when we find that Keshab Deo in the case before us is siding with Ram Prasad we find that Keshab Deo's adoption is proved. Besides, the treatment by the member of the family of Gordhan Das extending over 20 years raises a strong presumption in favour of the adoption of Keshab Deo as the son of Khairati Lal. For the above reasons, we agree with the learned Judge of the Court below that Keshab Deo is the adopted son of Khairati Lal.

GANPAT RAI v. MUNNI LAL.

The next question is as to the nature of the debt for the payment of which the family property in dispute was hypothecated. After a careful consideration of the evidence on the record we have come to the conclusion that the bulk of the debts for which the mortgage was made were gambling debts. The transactions were similar to what is called "betting on difference in England, i. e., betting on the price of a certain commodity or stock on a given date. The entries on pages 13 and 23 of the respondents' book leave no doubt in our mind that they relate to badni or gambling transactions. The entry on page 13 has been translated as follows:—Magh Badi 13th on account of loss in buying and selling Bengal cotton Rs. 7,824-11-0, Chait Badi 12th on account of loss in buying and selling ginned Bharaunch cotton Rs. 4,651-3-0. An expert who was produced on behalf of the respondents read the original of the 2nd entry as follows: Chait Badi baras rui jin Bharaunch ke differes ki. The last word differs is undoubtedly a corruption of the word difference: In substance, it means that on account of the difference in the price of the ginned Bharaunch cotton (so much will be paid), Jeth Sudi 6th on account of loss in the transactions of purchase and sale relating to the month of April. The original of this has been deciphered by the abovementioned expert as follows:—Jeth Badi Chhathrui Jehun April mahina ke differs ki, that on account of the difference in the price of cotton and wheat in the month of April. The entry on page 23 is to the same effect except that the words leni bechni are to be found in the entries of Magh Badi 13th and Chait Badi 12th. The entries on pages 13 and 23 relate to the same transactions. The learned Additional Judge is, however, of opinion that there is no sufficient evidence that the debt was a gambling debt. He remarks as follows: "The next objection is that these debts were gambling debts similar to those which I believe are called differences in England, that is, gambling or betting on the price of a certain commodity or stock on a given day. To my mind, there is no sufficient evidence of this. It is said that the testimony of Goddar Mal and the condition of the firm's books and also of the books of the Bombay firm Khatri Das-Lachhman Narain to whom the debts are alleged to have been due show this. I may remark, however, that if this point was intended to be seriously pressed it seems curious that no question was addressed in cross-examination to Manni Ram the firm's Munieb who was examined on commission about the matter." A reference to the record very clearly shows that interrogatories dealing with the nature of the debts were sent to Bombay at rather a later date and the case was taken up by the Court below for argument before the answers to those interrogatories came back. The learned Vakil for the defendant finding that it was for the plaintiffs to prove that the nature of the debt was such that it was binding upon Keshab Deo and his representatives and also finding that the evidence adduced on behalf of the plaintiffs fell short of proving that thought it was unnecessary to apply for an adjournment in order to get answers to those interrogatories. We find also that when one of the plaintiffs Munni Lal was examined several questions were asked in cross-examination by the Pleader for Ganpat Rai in respect of the so called badni transactions. Manni Lal in his cross-examination says: "I lent the money to Ram Prasad alone and had the house hypothecated by him. During the life-time of Gordhan Das this firm dealt as commission agents for the sale of cotton grain hundis and parchas and made time bargains. I do not know when Gordhan Das died." Further on he states: "There is an agreement as regards silver: The rate is Rs. 63. Profits and losses are taken into account on the due date. Ram Prasad used not to enter into badni contracts. His Gumashta used to do so. I do not know if these losses were sustained on account of badni (time bargains)". This statement very distinctly shows that the Pleader for Ganpat Rai did ask questions relating to badni transactions. We, therefore, disagreeing with the learned Judge of the Court below hold that the debts for the payment of which the mortgage-deed of 25th January 1903, was executed by Ram Prasad were gambling debts. That being so, they cannot be regarded as the debts contracted by Ram Prasad in his capacity of a Manager of the firm in the course of the ordinary business of the firm, and if the statement of Munni Lal that he lent the money to Ram Prasad alone be taken into account it becomes evident that Ram Prasad was not raising funds for the ordinary business of the firm. There is no evidence to show that there was any urgent necessity for raising that money by the mortgage of the family property, nor is there any evidence that Keshab Deo was in any way benefited by that loan or that it was raised with his consent. In these circumstances, it is necessary to see what is the law applicable to the facts of the case. In Soiru Padmanabh Rangappa v. Narayan Rao bin Vithal Rao (1) it is laid down that there is no presumption that a loan contracted by a Manager of a joint Hindu family has been contracted for the family purpose. In Sunkur Pershad v. Goury Pershad (2) it is laid down: "The condition of a Hindu family is prima facie joint and, therefore, property held by the managing member of a Hindu family is prima facie joint; but as there is nothing to prevent an individual managing member from contracting debts on his own account there is no presumption that a debt contracted by him is joint." In Nagendra Chandra Dey v. Amar Chandra Kundu (3) it was held that in order to make the brother of the Manager liable it was necessary to find (1) whether the trading business was a joint family business, (2) whether the note given was for the purposes of the trading business of the family and (3) whether the amount covered by the note was appropriated to the purposes of such trading business. In Krishna Ramaya Naik v. Vasudev Venkatesh Pai (4) it is laid down that there is no presumption that money borrowed by a Manager was borrowed for family purposes. The above cases are authority for the proposition that there is no presumption that a debt contracted by the Manager of the firm or family is contracted for the benefit of the firm or family and the plaintiff who seeks to bind the other members of the joint family will have to prove that it was a debt contracted for their benefit or with their consent or that there was an urgent family necessity therefor. During the course of his argument the learned Advocate for the respondents relied on Sheo Pershad Singh v. Sahib Lal (5). But that case does not touch the points which we have to determine. In that case the debt was incurred in the ordinary course of business and a decree was passed in execution of which the family property in dispute in that case was sold and the plaintiffs as members of a joint Hindu family sued for a declaration that their shares were not liable. The Calcutta High Court, with reference to the facts of the case, came to the conclusion that the plaintiffs were not entitled to the declaration they sought. As, in the case before us, the plaintiffs have failed to prove that there was any real necessity for the loan or that the loan in question was taken with the consent of Keshab Deo or that he in any way was benefited thereby and as there is evidence that the debts for the payment of which the family property was mortgaged were gambling debts we are of opinion that the share of Keshab Deo which was sold to Ganpat Rai is not liable for the payment of those debts.

The result is that we allow the appeal and set aside the decree of the Court below in respect of the property which was sold by Keshab Deo to Ganpat Rai. The objections taken by the respondents are also dismissed with costs. The appellant will have his costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 18 B. 520.
(2) 5 C. 321.
(3) 7 C. W. N. 725.
(4) 21 B. 808 at p. 815.
(5) 20 C. 453.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 246 OF 1911.
November 10, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Karamat Husain and Mr. Justice Chamier.

BALA PROSHAD—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT,
versus
PARTAB SINGH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Limitation—Mortgage suit—Sons of mortgagor not impleaded within limitation—Dismissal of suit even against the mortgagor.

In a suit upon a mortgage the sons of the mortgagor were not made parties to the suit within limitation:

Held, that the suit could not be dismissed against the mortgagor because his sons had not been impleaded in time.

SENGODA GOUNDEN v. VARADAPPAN.

Second appeal from the decision of the Additional Judge of Aligarh, dated the 23rd day of December 1910.

Mr. Gulzari Lal, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—This was a suit for sale upon a mortgage bond. The Court of first instance found that the defendant's sons should have been impleaded, and that as they were not impleaded within time, the suit must be dismissed. There was an appeal to the lower Appellate Court which agreed with the first Court in dismissing the suit. The plaintiff comes here in second appeal. In our opinion the Courts below were wrong in the view they took. The sons of the defendant should have been made parties at the instance of the Court and then the suit should have been tried against them as well as against their father. Even if the Courts below had come to the conclusion that the suit against the sons was barred by time, they could probably have given some sort of decree against the mortgagor alone if the claim against him was not barred by time. We, therefore, set aside the decrees of the Courts below and remand the case to the Court of first instance through the lower Appellate Court for re-admission and disposal according to law in the light of the observations we have made. Costs will abide the event.

Case remanded.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 726 OF 1910.

November 7, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar.

SENGODA GOUNDEN—APPELLANT

versus

VARADAPPAN alias RASA GOUNDAN AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Patta for trees given to one person and that for land to another person—Cancellation of patta for trees, effect of—Right of land pattadar to trees.

Plaintiff held the patta for trees standing on suit land for over 20 years and defendants had the patta for the land. Government having cancelled the trees patta two years before date of suit, defendants interfered with the enjoyment of the trees by the plaintiff. In a suit by plaintiff for recovery of the trees:

Held, (1) that in the absence of evidence as to resumption by Government and grant of trees to defendants, the effect of cancellation of the trees patta was not to vest the ownership of the trees in the defendants.

(2) That plaintiff was entitled to rely on his possession for a preferential claim as against the defendants.

Narayana Row v. Dharma Char, 26 M. 514 and Subaraya Chetti v. Aiyaswami Aiyar, 32 M. 86; 5 M. L. T. 80; 1 Ind. Cas. 749, referred to.

A pattadar for trees has an interest, during the continuance of the patta, in the trees itself and in all that is necessary for the growth of the trees, including the soil in which they grow.

Reference under section 39 of the Madras Forest Act, 12 M. 203 and Thievu Pandithan v. Secretary of State for India, 21 M. 433, referred to.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of Salem, in A. S. No. 188 of 1909, presented against the decree of the District Munsif of Namakal, in Original Suit No. 1192 of 1908.

Mr. T. R. Vencatarama Sastri, for the Appellant.

Mr. V. Visavanatha Sastri, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the plaintiff (appellant) held a patta for certain trees on land in certain survey fields and the defendants (respondents) held the patta for the land. The plaintiff had possession of the trees for more than 20 years prior to 1903. In that year the Revenue authorities cancelled the patta which they had given to the plaintiff. The defendants then interfered with the plaintiff's enjoyment of trees and deprived him of their possession. The plaintiff, therefore, brought this suit to recover possession of the trees and for mesne profits.

The District Munsif gave him a decree but the District Judge reversed it on appeal and dismissed the suit. We think the decree of the District Munsif is right.

The successive standing orders of the Board of Revenue, Madras, in regard to tree pattas are found at pages 5, 6 and 7 of Maclean's Edition of 1878, and at pages 36 and 40 of the Government Editions of 1900 and 1907, respectively.

The respective rights of parties in the position of the plaintiff and defendants who, for the sake of brevity, are called tree pattadar and land pattadars respectively are discussed in the cases reported in Reference under section 39 of Madras Forest Act(1) and Thievu Pandithan v. Secretary of State for India (2). It was

(1) 12 M. 203.
(2) 21 M. 433.

NANJI KOER v. UMATUL BATUL.

there held that the tree pattadar "has an interest during the continuance of his patta in the tree itself and in all that is necessary for the growth of the tree including the soil in which it grows."

The District Judge held that the plaintiff's interest in the tree ceased to exist as soon as the patta was cancelled, and that he could not rely on his possession, because it was not really adverse to the defendants but was rather that of a licensee, and when the tree patta was cancelled the effect was to "complete the land pattadar's natural and usual proprietary rights in his land by cancelling the limitation which the existence of the tree patta imposed on him."

We do not think that this view is correct. So far as appears in this case, the only effect of the cancellation of this tree patta was that Government no longer made any demand on the pattadars for revenue in respect of the tree. It is not shown, or even contended, that Government resumed possession of the trees, or made any grant of them to the defendants. The District Judge, no doubt, states that when both pattas were in existence the land pattadar was credited with whatever revenue was collected from the tree pattadar and that on the cancellation of the tree patta the whole revenue was payable by the land pattadar. But this cannot be taken to evidence a grant of the trees to the land pattadar, and the District Munsif points out that no revised patta was issued to the latter enhancing the revenue payable by him. The Government is no party to the suit, and it is unnecessary to consider so far, if at all, the position of the tree pattadar quoad the Government is affected by the cancellation of the tree patta. For all that appears, the rights of the tree pattadar may have been and probably were in existence before the land patta was granted. Even if it is assumed that Government by cancelling the tree patta could and did resume complete ownership of the trees, there was no grant of them to the defendants and there is no foundation for regarding the defendants as the owners of the trees. The plaintiff was in possession of the trees until dispossessed by the defendant some two years prior to the suit. The defendants having no title as owners were mere trespassers, and the plaintiff was entitled to rely on his possession in a suit to eject them: Narayano Row v. Dharama Char (3) and Subbaraya Chetti v. Aiyaswami Aiyer (4).

On this ground we must set aside the decree of the District Judge and restore that of the District Munsif with costs in this and the lower Appellate Court.

Appeal allowed.

(3) 26 M. 514.
(4) 32 M. 86; 5 M. L. T. 80; 1 Ind. Cas. 749.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1528 OF 1909.
June 26, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

NANJI KOER—DEFENDANT 1ST PARTY—APPELLANT
versus
UMATUL BATUL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Interpleader suit—Suit by tenant to determine who is landlord—Whether suit maintainable—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908)), s. 88—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 42—Previous rent decree—Subsequent suit by tenant for declaration that previous plaintiff is not tenant's landlord—Res judicata.

The present defendant No. 1 sued the present plaintiff for recovery of rent of the disputed property. The plaintiff resisted the claim on the ground that she held the land as tenant not under the then plaintiff but under the present defendant No. 2. The Court found that the present plaintiff held the land under the present defendant No. 1 and a decree was made in favour of the latter. The plaintiff has now brought this suit for a declaration that she was the tenant under defendant No. 2 and not under the defendant No. 1:

Held, that, as the suit was in the nature of an interpleader suit, it was not maintainable.

Koylash Chandra v. Goluk Chunder, 2 C. W. N. 61 and K. S. Bonnerjee v. Raj Chundra Dutt, 5 Ind. Cas. 577; 37 C. 552; 14 C. W. N. 784: 11 C. L. J. 577, followed.

Held, further, that the suit was not maintainable under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, as the defendant No. 1 was not interested to deny that the plaintiff was a tenant in respect of the disputed land, and as the plaintiff did not ask for an injunction to restrain defendant No. 1 from executing the decree she obtained.

Held, also, that the present suit was barred by the rule of res judicata by the decree in the previous suit, as it was not open to the present plaintiff to seek for a declaration that she is not the tenant of defendant No. 1.

Appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge of Mozaffarpur, dated June 1st, 1909, reversing that of the Munsif of that place, dated December 14th, 1908.

Kashmir Univer... Library.
Accession No. 75362

NANJI KOER v. UMATUL BATUL.

Babu Joy Gopal Ghosha, for the Appellant.

Moulvi Shamsul Huda and Babu Tarakeshwar Pal Chowdhury, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal on behalf of the first defendant in an action commenced by the plaintiff-respondent for declaration that she was the tenant of the disputed land, not under the appellant, but under the second defendant. It appears that in 1906 the first defendant sued the plaintiff for recovery of rent of the disputed property. The plaintiff resisted the claim on the ground that she held the land as tenant not under the plaintiff but under the second defendant in the present litigation. That defence failed on the merits, and the Court found that the relationship of landlord and tenant was proved to have existed between the parties to that suit. The result was that a decree for rent was made in favour of the present first defendant. On the 5th October 1907, the plaintiff commenced this action and she joined as parties defendants, the first defendant, the successful plaintiff in the previous litigation, and the second defendant who was alleged by her to be her landlord. There was also a third defendant added to the suit, namely, the transferor of the first defendant. But we are not concerned with the third defendant at all because, so far as we can judge, no relief has been claimed as against him. The appellant defended the suit on the ground that it was not maintainable and that the question raised res judicata. The Court of first instance gave effect to this contention and dismissed the suit upon appeal; the learned Subordinate Judge has reversed that decision.

The first defendant has now appealed to this Court and on her behalf, the decision of the Subordinate Judge has been assailed substantially on two grounds, namely, first that the suit is in its essence an inter-pleader suit and is not maintainable, and secondly, that even if it be conceded that the suit as framed is maintainable the substantial question in controversy between the parties is res judicata and cannot be re-investigated in the present litigation. In our opinion, these contentions are well founded and must prevail.

In support of the first contention, it has been argued that the plain object of the plaintiff is to have it established that not the first defendant but the second defendant is her landlord in respect of the disputed land. In other words, the plaintiff has instituted this suit to have the controversy between these two defendants finally determined. The suit, therefore, is clearly in the nature of an interpleader suit and consequently not maintainable, in view of the decision of this Court in the cases of Koylash Chondra Dutt v. Golak Chunder Poddar (1) and K. S. Bonnerjee v. Rajchandra Dutt (2) See also Maclean on Interpleader, page 24. The learned Pleader for the respondent, however, has contended that the real object of the suit is to obtain a declaration that the first defendant is not the landlord of the plaintiff, and that consequently the suit is one for declaration within the meaning of section 42 of the Specific Relief Act. We are not prepared to accept this contention as well founded. But, even if the suit be taken to have been instituted under section 42, it is fairly clear that it is open to two fatal objections. In the first place, we are not satisfied that a suit of this character is maintainable under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act. That section provides that any person entitled to any legal character or to any right as to any property, may institute a suit against any person denying or interested to deny, his title to such character or right, and the Court may, in its discretion, make therein a declaration that he is so entitled and the plaintiff need not in such suit ask for any further relief. Now, the legal character which the plaintiff claims in the present litigation is that of a tenant in respect of the disputed land. The first defendant is not interested to deny that she is such a tenant. In fact, the case of the defendant is that she is a tenant and has been rightly made liable for rent. Consequently, if the suit be treated as one under section 42 it is clearly one not within the scope of the provisions of the law. In the second place, the suit, even if framed as one for a declaratory decree, is barred under the proviso to section 42 which lays down that no Court shall make any such declaration where the plaintiff, being able to seek further relief than a mere declaration of title, omits to do so. If the contention of the plaintiff is well founded she would be entitled to an injunction to restrain the first defendant from

(1) 2 C. W. N. 61.

(2) 5 Ind. Cas. 577; 14 C. W. N. 784; 37 C. 552; 11 C. L. J. 577.

NANJI KOER v. UMATUL BATUL.

executing the decree she has obtained. Consequently, a suit for a declaratory decree, pure and simple, would not be maintainable. The learned Vakil for the plaintiff-respondent, however, has further contended that the suit cannot be treated as an interpleader suit, because his client does not profess to espouse the cause of the first defendant. She espouses the cause of the second defendant and is confident that the first defendant has improperly obtained a decree for rent against her. On this ground he urges that the plaint ought not to be treated as a plaint in an interpleader suit because the essence of a suit of that description is that the plaintiff professes to be in the position of a stakeholder and merely invites the Court to determine the controversy between the contesting defendants. We are of opinion that there is no substance in this contention. In order to determine the nature of the suit, we must examine its true scope and there can be no room for controversy that the real object of the plaintiff, which is manifest on the face of the plaint, is to have it determined as between the first and the second defendants that the one is not but the other is her landlord. We are of opinion that the suit as framed is not maintainable.

The second objection taken by the learned Vakil for the appellant is that, even if the suit be treated as maintainable, the question in controversy is clearly barred by the doctrine of res judicata. In support of this objection reliance has been placed upon the cases of Ekabbar v. Hara Bewah (3); Hara Chandra Bairagi v. Bipin Behary Das (4) and Panchu Mandal v. Chandra Kant Saha (5). It has been contended, on the other hand, that the question is not res judicata, because the previous suit was one for rent while the present litigation has been instituted for the determination of the question of title, and, therefore, in view of the decision of this Court in the cases of Nityanunda Barkar v. Ram Narain Das (6): Sahadeb Dhali v. Ram Rudra Haldar (7) and Dwarka Nath Roy v. Ram Chand Aich (8), there is no room for the application of the doctrine of res judicata. In our opinion, this argument is obviously fallacious. In the suit for rent, the present plaintiff as defendant contended that the relationship of landlord and tenant had not existed between the parties. She further alleged that she held the land as tenant of the present second defendant. This defence was investigated and overruled on the merits. Upon the evidence, the Court came to the conclusion that the then defendant was the tenant of the disputed land and held under the then plaintiff. That was a decision upon a question directly and substantially in issue between the parties. In fact, that was the only question which required determination in that case. The adjudication was by a Court of competent jurisdiction [Bidhumukhi v. Jitendra (9)]. Under these circumstances, it is difficult to appreciate how upon principle it can be seriously contended that this particular decision is not res judicata between the parties [Kasiswar v. Mohendra (10)]. In the present suit, the plaintiff does not allege that the relationship of landlord and tenant which was found to exist between the parties to that litigation has terminated since judgment was given in that case; consequently, it must be assumed that the relationship continues. It is clearly not open to the plaintiff to seek for a declaration that she is not the tenant of the first defendant. If she obtains such a declaration, its effect would be practically to nullify the decision given in the previous litigation. It may be conceded that there are expressions in the judgment of this Court in the case of Nityanunda Sarkar v. Ram Narain Das (6) which may lend some apparent support to the contention of the respondent. But, as was fully explained by this Court in the case of Panchu Mandal v. Chandra Kant Saha (5), the case of Nityanund Sarkar v. Ram Narain Das (6) must be taken to have been decided upon its special facts and the learned Judges could not have laid down any general proposition of law inconsistent with the principle recognised by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the case of Radha Madhub Holdar v. Monohur Mookerji (11). The case of Sahadeb Dhali v. Ram Rudra Haldar (7) was of an entirely different character, and there is nothing in the judgment of this Court in that case

(3) 8 Ind. Cas. 660; 13 C. L. J. 1; 15 C. W. N. 335.
(4) 6 Ind. Cas. 860; 13 C. L. J. 38.
(5) 12 Ind. Cas. 9; 14 C. L. J. 220.
(6) 6 C. W. N. 66.
(7) 10 C. W. N. 820.
(8) 26 C. 428; 3 C. W. N. 266.
(9) 10 C. L. J. 527; 4 Ind. Cas. 442.
(10) 25 C. 136.
(11) 15 C. 756; 15 I. A. 97.

which lends any support to the contention of the respondent. Much reliance, however, was placed upon the decision of the Full Bench in the case of Dwarka Nath Roy v. Ram Chand Aich (8); there is, in our opinion, nothing in any of the judgments delivered by the learned Judges in that case which tends to support in the slightest degree the contention of the respondent. In that case, the plaintiff had brought a suit for rent against the defendant upon the allegation that he was his tenant. The defendant denied the tenancy and contended that he held the land under another person. This defence was successful and the suit for rent was dismissed. The plaintiff then sued for establishment of his title against the third party (the alleged landlord of the defendant in the suit for rent). He also joined the tenant as defendant and prayed in the alternative that a decree for ejectment might be made against the tenant or a decree for damages for use and occupation under section 157 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The Court held that the decision in the suit for rent did not operate as res judicata as between the plaintiff and the third party set up by the defendant. As between the plaintiff and the tenant who had been sued for rent unsuccessfully, the matter was treated as res judicata. But that was on the ground that as the tenant had successfully proved that he did not hold under the plaintiff he was liable either to be ejected or to pay damages for use and occupation. It is further worthy of note that one of the learned Judges pointed out that, according to the decision of this Court in the case of Gopal Das v. Gopi Nath (12), the matter would be res judicata as between the parties to the suit for rent. It is thus clear upon an examination of the judgments in the case of Dwarka Nath Roy v. Ram Chand Aich (8) that the contention of the present respondent cannot possibly prevail. On the other hand, the cases of Ekabbar Sheikh v. Hara Bewah (3) and Hara Chandra Bairagi v. Bipin Behary (4) conclusively establish that a decision in a suit for rent may operate as res judicata. In fact, if the contrary view were maintained and we found ourselves obliged to accede to the contention of the respondent, every suit for rent in which the defence of the tenant defendant has been overruled, would be followed by an action of the present description, namely, for a declaration that the tenant did not hold under the successful plaintiff but under a stranger to the litigation.

(12) 12 C. L. R. 38.

The result, therefore, is that both the contentions of the appellant must prevail. The decree of the Sub-Judge is discharged and the suit dismissed with costs in all the Courts.

Appeal allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL RULE No. 1944 OF 1910.

June 27, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

KAMINI MONI DEBI—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER

versus

KHETTRA MOHUN GANGULI—DEFENDANT—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879), ss. 27, 28 Pleader and Client—Fee payable by party to his own Pleader—Agreement to pay fee, how to be made—Agreement in contravention of s. 27, if of avail to Pleader either as plaintiff or as defendant.

Section 27 of the Legal Practitioners Act has no reference to the fees payable by a party to his own Advocate, Pleader or Vakil. That payment is regulated by the agreement between the parties concerned. Section 28 deals with those agreements and lays down that they must be in writing signed by the client and filed within a specified period in a proper Court. That section is not restricted in its application to cases where the agreement is for payment of fees in excess of the fees prescribed by section 27.

Rama v. Kunji, 9 M. 375; Krishnasami v. Kesava, 14 M. 63; Anantayya v. Padmayya, 16 M. 278; Sundararja Ayyangar v. Pattanathusami, 17 M. 306; Subba Pillai v. Ramasami Ayyar, 27 M. 512; Razi-ud-din v. Karim Baksh, 12 A. 169; Raghunath v. Sriram, 28 A. 764; (1906) A. W. N. 235; 3 A. L. J. 579; 1 M. L. T. 242 and Channulal v. Asharfi Lal, 4 A. L. J. 535, dissented from.

If an agreement set up by a Pleader is in contravention of section 28 of the Legal Practitioners Act, it is of no avail whether the Pleader seeks to enforce the agreement as plaintiff or relies upon it as defendant in answer to a claim by the client.

Sarat Chandra Roy Chowdhury v. Chandi Charan Mitra, 7 C. W. N. 300, explained and distinguished.

Rule against the decision of the Small Cause Court Judge of Hooghly, dated February 2nd, 1910.

This Rule was heard ex parte on December 6th, 1910, by Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Coxe (See 15 C. W. N. 681, 11 Ind. Cas. 382) and was made absolute. It was heard again, because the opposite party had not been represented at the original hearing for no fault of his learned Vakil.

KAMINI MONI DEBI v. KHETTRA MOHAN.

Babu Probodh Chandra Rai, for the Petitioner.

Babu Shiba Prosanna Bhattacharyya, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This Rule was heard ex parte on the 6th December last and was made absolute. The opposite party, who was the first defendant in the suit, subsequently applied to us to allow him an opportunity to make his submissions on the matter, and we acceded to his request as it transpired that, through no fault of his learned Vakil, he had not been represented at the original hearing. We have now heard the parties at considerable length and examined all the arguments addressed to us.

The petitioner sued to recover from the first defendant a sum of money which the latter had withdrawn from Court where it had been deposited by the plaintiff. He resisted the claim on the ground that he was entitled to retain the sum withdrawn as he had a lien upon the money to the extent of Rs. 100, for fees due under an agreement for professional services rendered. The Court below came to the conclusion that the plaintiff was not entitled to succeed because fees were due from her to the first defendant and the latter was consequently entitled to appropriate the sum withdrawn from the Court in satisfaction of his dues.

This decision has been assailed on behalf of the plaintiff on the ground that the agreement set up by the defendant is in contravention of section 28 of the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879, and is consequently of no avail whether the Pleader seeks to enforce the agreement as plaintiff or relies upon it in answer to the claim by the client. In support of this view, reliance has been placed upon the case of Sarat Chunder Roy Chowdhry v. Chundra Kant Roy (1).

On behalf of the first defendant, it has been argued that section 28 is restricted in it application to cases where the agreement is for payment of fees in excess of the fees prescribed by section 27. It has been pointed out that the first defendant as the Pleader for the plaintiff in a proceeding under the Probate and Administration Act was entitled to receive at least Rs. 170 as fees, and that consequently an agreement to pay Rs. 100 is not within the scope of section 23 of the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879. In support of this position reliance has been placed upon certain observations in the case of Sarat Chandra Chowdhry v. Chandra Kant Roy (1) as also upon the decisions of the Madras High Court in the cases of Rama v. Kunji (2); Krishnasami v. Kesava (3); Anantoyya v. Padmayya (4); Sundararaja Ayyangar v. Pattanathusamy (5) and Subba Pillai v. Rama Sawmi Ayyar (6) and of the Allahabad High Court in the cases of Razi-ud-din v. Karim Baksh (7); Raghunath v. Sriram (8) and Channu Lal v. Ashrafi Lal (9). It may be conceded at once that the observations contained in the decisions of the Madras and Allahabad High Courts upon which reliance has been placed do tend to support the restricted interpretation of section 28 suggested on behalf of the first defendant. We are not bound, however, to accept those decisions as authorities binding upon us, specially in view of the fact that in the most recent decision on the subject [Channu Lal v. Asharfi Lail (9)] the learned Judge who followed the cases of Razi-ud-din v. Karim Baksh (7); Raghunath v. Sriram (8); adopted the view previously taken with considerable reluctance and stated that if the matter were res integra he would have been prepared to take the opposite view. It is, therefore, necessary that we should examine and construe the provisions of the Legal Practitioners Act on the subject.

Chapter VI of the Legal Practitioners Act consists of five sections which deals with the question of remuneration of Pleaders, Mukhtiars and Revenue Agents. The first of these, section 27, authorises the High Court and the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority in any place to fix the fees in Civil and Revenue Proceedings. These are fees payable by any party to his opponent in respect of the fees of the Advocate, Pleader, Vakil, Mukhtiar, Attorney employed by his adversary. It cannot be disputed that section 27 has no reference to the fees payable by a

(1) 25 C. 805.

(2) 9 M. 375.
(3) 14 M. 63.
(4) 16 M. 278.
(5) 17 M. 306.
(6) 27 M. 512.
(7) 12 A. 169.
(8) 28 A. 764; A. W. N. (1906) 235; 3 A. L. J. 579 (F. B.) 1 M. L. T. 242.
(9) 4 A. L. J. 535.

party to his own Advocate, Pleader or Vakil. That payment is necessarily regulated by the agreement between the parties concerned. Section 28 deals with cases of this description, namely, agreements by Pleaders with clients for payment for services rendered. That section provides that no agreement entered into by any Pleader, Mukhtiar or Revenue Agent with any person retaining or employing him, respecting the amount and manner of payment for the whole or any part of any past or future services, fees, charges, or disbursement in respect of business done or to be done by such Pleader, Mukhtiar or Revenue Agent shall be valid, unless, it is made in writing, signed by such person, and is within 15 days from the day on which it is executed, filed in the District Court or in some Court in which some portion of the business in respect of which it has been executed, has been or is to be done. It is obvious, therefore, that an agreement between a Pleader and his client respecting the amount and manner of payment for the whole or any part of services fees in respect of business done or to be done must be embodied in an instrument in writing signed by the client and filed within a specified period in a proper Court. Section 29 then authorises the Court to modify or cancel such an agreement; that is, an agreement between a Pleader and his client as mentioned in section 28. Section 30 provides that an agreement of this description excludes further claims. Section 31 deals with cases of negligence on the part of the Pleaders and need not be considered for our present purposes. Now, it cannot be disputed that section 28 is, by the very generality of its language, comprehensive enough to include every agreement between a Pleader and his client for the payment of fees for professional services. It has been argued, however, that the scope of the section ought to be narrowed and that it ought to be applied only to cases in which the agreement is for the payment of fees in excess of those prescribed under the rules framed under section 27. Two objections, each of them insuperable, may obviously be taken to such a restricted interpretation. In the first place, there is no good reason why we should construe the words "no agreement" in section 28 as equivalent to the expression "no agreement for payment of fees in excess of those prescribed by the rules framed under section 27". If we were to accede to the contention of the first defendant, we would have to insert in the statute words not to be found there. In the second place, whereas section 28 refers not merely to the payment of fees but also to the payment of charges or disbursements in respect of business done, section 27 deals only with the fees payable by a party to his adversary on account of fees due to Pleaders, Advocates or Vakils. Consequently, if section 28 is restricted to the case of fees in the light of the provisions contained in section 27, the same restrictions would have to be placed in the case of payments, charges or disbursements, although section 27 does not deal with those matters at all. In our opinion, section 28 embodies an extremely salutary rule and it would not be right for us to restrict its scope and operation in the manner suggested by the learned Vakil for the first defendant. There is no question of hardship when the terms of the statute are perfectly plain. But we are not satisfied at all that even the most liberal interpretation and stringent application of section 28 would really cause any hardship to an honest professional man. A Pleader can always protect himself by a faithful adherence to the provisions of the law on the subject, which cannot cause him any inconvenience. We may add that section 27 deals only with the question of fees payable by a party to his adversary. Those fees have no relation to the fees actually paid by the adversary to his own Pleader, Vakil or Attorney. It is well known that the fees allowed in conformity with the rules framed under section 27 of the Legal Practitioners Act do not by any means represent the fees which litigants have to pay to their own Pleaders, Vakils or Advocates. They are as a rule very much in excess of what has been described before us as "legal fees" but sometimes they may be less. Unless the Pleader agrees with his client that he would accept whatever may be allowed by the Court as against the adversary, the fee is a matter of agreement between the Pleader and the client and irrespective of the fees allowed by the Court, the Pleader is entitled to claim the fees settled, provided he carries out the terms of section 28 of the Legal Practitioners Act. Under these circumstances, in spite of the contrary view accepted by the learned Judges of the Madras and Allahabad High Courts, we are unable to adopt the restricted interpretation suggested by the learned Vakil for the first defendant.

It has been finally suggested by the learned Vakil for the first defendant that some allowance might possibly be made to his client in the shape of reasonable fees for the services rendered. As was pointed out on a previous occasion, no such claim was put forward in the Court below, possibly on the assumption that a claim in respect of an unascertained sum could not have been urged by way of defence to a suit for recovery of a specified amount. It is, therefore, not necessary for us to consider whether if such a claim had been put forward, the defendant would have been entitled to succeed. The cases of Raghunath v. Sriram (8), Razi-ud-din v. Karim Bakhsh (7), and the decisions of the learned Judges of the Madras High Court to which we have already referred, seem to support the view that, under such circumstances, a Pleader may be entitled to a reasonable remuneration for the services rendered. But it is worthy of note that the contrary view has been maintained by the learned Judges of the Punjab Chief Court. [Hazari Lal v. Tilok Chand (10)].

It is worthy of note that the decision of this Court in the case of Sarat Chandra Roy Chowdury v. Chandi Charan Mitra (11), is not contrary to the view we adopt. In that case, the learned Judges came to the conclusion that there was no agreement for payment of any fees by the client to his Pleader and that, consequently, the only amount which the Pleader could legitimately claim was the amount paid by the adversary of his client in conformity with the rules framed under section 27 of the Legal Practitioners Act; and we may observe that this amount was directed by the Court to be divided equally amongst the four Pleaders who had been employed by the successful litigant. In the case before us, the defence can succeed only upon proof of the alleged agreement for the payment of Rs. 100 as fees by the plaintiff to the first defendant. That agreement is in contravention of the provisions of section 28 and is, therefore, one of which the law will take no notice if it is sought to be enforced by the Pleader or set up in defence to a claim by the client for recovery of her money in the hands of her Pleader. Upon a consideration, then, of the authorities to which our attention has been drawn and upon the true construction of the statute, we are clearly of opinion that the previous judgment, to which one member of this Bench was a party, [Kamini Debi v. Khetter Mohan (12)] is correct, and that decision will consequently stand. The first defendant must pay the plaintiff his costs in this Court. We assess the hearing fee for the two occasions at two gold mohurs.

Rule made absolute.

(10) 136 P. R. 1898.
(11) 7 C. W. N. 300.
(12) 15 C. W. N. 681; 11 Ind. Cas. 382.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 178 OF 1909.
November 9, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Richards, K. C., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

RAMNATH ZUTSHI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 74—Penalty—Breach of contract—Actual loss not proved—Amount of compensation.

Where a contract provided for a penalty in the event of its breach, the party complaining of the breach is entitled to compensation even though he is unable to prove actual loss. The amount of compensation is to be such sum as the Court shall, under the circumstances of the case, think reasonable, limited, of course, to the amount specified in the contract.

First appeal from the decision of the Subordinate Judge of Jhansi, dated the 5th March 1909.

The Hon'ble Mr. Motilal Nehru, for the Appellant.

Mr. Ryves, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff against the Secretary of State on foot of a contract of the 18th of March 1904 for the construction of certain buildings at a place called Mahoba in the Banda District. The buildings were required as the residence and Office of the Survey Officer and are situate in a place somewhat out of the way. According to the terms of the contract, the works were to be completed on or before the 30th of September 1904. As a matter of fact, the contract was not fulfilled until March 1905. The contract provided also that in the event of any part of the work not progressing satisfactorily the Public Works Department were entitled to take away that portion of the work and give it to other contractors. There was also provision for a penalty of Rs. 5 for every day that the work remained uncommenced or unfinished after the proper date, the maximum amount of such penalty being a sum of Rs. 870.

RAMNATH ZUTSHI v. SECRETARY OF STATE.

It is common case that portion of the work was taken away from the plaintiff on the ground of unsatisfactory progress. It is also common case, as stated above, that the work remained uncompleted until the time we have mentioned. The plaintiff claimed the sum of Rs. 8,713-13-10. The defendant admitted the claim to the extent of Rs. 2,555-0-6 after taking credit for Rs. 870 the maximum amount of the fine for the delay.

The Court below gave a decree for Rs. 4,254-7-2, giving against the plaintiff for the penalty mentioned.

The plaintiff not being satisfied with the credit decree has appealed to this Court.

The first item to which our attention was invited was the sum of Rs. 870 the penalty. The learned Advocate on behalf of the appellant claims that under no circumstances should this sum be allowed having regard to the finding of the Court below. The finding he relies upon is that the defendants failed to prove actual loss. It is argued that time was not of the essence of the contract and that the learned Judge so finds. This being so, the plaintiff claims that the defendants having failed to prove loss is entitled to no damages. We do not think that this contention is well founded. The argument neglects to consider the provisions in the contract as to the fine for non-completion. It is quite true that if the contract had no provision as to the payment of a fine in the event of non-completion and if time was not of the essence of the contract and the defendant failed to prove loss he would be entitled to no damages or compensation. However, section 74 of the Contract Act expressly provides that where the contract provides for a penalty in the event of breach, the party complainant of the breach is entitled to compensation even though he is unable to prove actual loss. The amount of compensation is to be such sum as the Court shall, under all the circumstances, think reasonable, limited, of course, to the amount specified in the contract. We think, therefore, that the defendant was entitled to claim compensation.

The next question is as to the amount. The learned Judge, finding that the defendant did not prove actual loss says, "the correspondence on the record shows that the urgency of the work was throughout insisted on". Under these circumstances, we are unable to say that the learned Judge was wrong in awarding the full amount of the penalty.

Before we leave the question of the penalty, we may mention one other matter. The plaintiff contended that the delay (which he has to admit took place) was due to the obstruction he suffered at the hands of the Public Works Department Officials. The learned Judge has found that, even assuming that obstruction was given to the plaintiff, he has entirely failed to show that such obstruction was the cause of the non-completion of the works. This finding has not been seriously controverted and, of course, is a complete answer to this part of the plaintiff's case.

It was further contended that there had been a waiver of the penalty. The only ground for this suggestion was that after the plaintiff had furnished his claim in full the defendants put forward their claim where the only mention of the fine is in pencil. In our opinion there is no evidence whatever of any waiver. The document relied upon by the plaintiff clearly does not in any way show that the fine was waived, in fact rather the contrary. There are two entries relating to the fine, one shows what would be due if the fine was exacted, the other shows the amount if the fine was not exacted. Such entry could not in any way be regarded as a waiver of the claim.

On the general merits of the case it has not been shown to us that the learned Judge has made a mistake, in fact, as to any particular item of the claim of the plaintiff which he disallowed but it was suggested that he made a mistake in law in throwing the onus probandi on the plaintiff. At one period of the argument we were inclined to think that perhaps such a mistake of law had been made. It appears that during the course of the work memoranda were from time to time signed by one of the officials in the Public Works Department, namely a Sub-Overseer of the name of Ram Chander. These memoranda purport on the face of them to give in detail the amount of work done up to date. At the end is a certificate to the effect that the works have been satisfactorily executed and all materials delivered, that the necessary measurements have been made by the Sub-Overseer and are clearly recorded in the measurement-book. These memoranda are useful for two purposes first of all they are sought to be at least a prima facie admission by both sides as to the state of the work on a particular date, and secondly, they enable the contractor to receive payments on account of his contract. It is difficult to understand how claims in respect of contract of such a nature could be satisfactorily adjusted between the parties without such periodic settlements. It must often happen that examination of the earlier work becomes impossible later on as the work proceeds. We were inclined to think that after the production of these memoranda the plaintiff should be absolved from proving any of the items specified in the memoranda and that the onus ought to lie upon the defendants of showing that any such item was incorrectly certified. Under ordinary circumstances, we consider that memoranda of this description ought to be deemed strong prima facie evidence of the completion of the contract as stated therein and that the onus should lie strongly on whichever side disputed the correctness of the entries to prove that they were wrong. We find, however, in the present case that both sides gave the go-by to these memoranda. They were disgracefully kept. The learned Judge says that they were wholly unreliable and incorrectly prepared, that there was great laxity of procedure and that the rules of the Public Works Department were neglected. The plaintiff did not come into Court relying, as he might have done, upon these memoranda as proving prima facie the case which entitled him to succeed unless the defendant proved the contrary. He came into Court on an independent case without any documents of any kind to support it, neither books nor accounts or even slips of paper. The consequence was that the Court below had to take the evidence of both sides and to weigh and consider that evidence as best as it could. As the result the plaintiff failed as to a large part of his case. The defendants were also punished for the laxity and neglect of their official. A large amount of the items claimed by the defendants for materials which were alleged to have been supplied to the plaintiff were disallowed. The learned Judge appears to have given the case great care and consideration and no attempt has been made to show that he has made any mistake upon the evidence. For the reasons we have already stated, and having regard to the way the case was conducted by the parties both on their pleadings and in the Court below we are clearly of opinion that no mistake in law was made.

The result is that the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 197 OF 1909.

November 3, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Richards, K. C., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

JANKI DAS—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

TIKA RAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Arbitration—Award given after a very long time—Notice to revoke submission—Validity of award—Effect of delay.

The plaintiff and defendants entered into an agreement submitting their disputes to arbitration on 29th of September, 1905. Shortly after the reference, the arbitrators met and did something in that connection. Nothing, however, was done after that for a long time. On 16th of August 1906, plaintiff served a notice to revoke the arbitration. After the notice the arbitrators met again on the 20th of August and continued to sit for several days. No one took the least notice of the notice of revocation. The award was given on 24th of August 1906:

Held, that under the circumstances the award was not invalid and could not be set aside.

First appeal from the decision of the Subordinate Judge of Agra, dated the 5th of June 1909.

Mr. Ryves (with him Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru, Messrs. Govind Pershad and Gulzari Lal), for the Appellant.

Mr. Choudhri (with him Hon'ble Dr. Sunder Lal, Hon'ble Mr. Moti Lal Nehru and Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji), for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit to set aside an award dated the 24th of August 1906. Three brothers Janki Das, Tika Ram and Baldeo Das had a dispute about certain property, moveable and immoveable, belonging to their common ancestor. Accordingly, on the 29th of September 1905, they submitted their disputes to arbitration. Two of the brothers joined hands together and Janki Das, the plaintiff in the present suit, was the opposite party. Two arbitrators were appointed for Janki Das and two arbitrators for Tika Ram and Baldeo Das. An Umpire Chandan Lal was also appointed. The award which is sought to be set aside is alleged by the defendant to be the award of these arbitrators and the Umpire. The plaintiff attacks the award on three grounds. He says, first, that there was such gross delay on the part of the arbitrators that he was justified in serving a notice on the 16th of August 1906 withdrawing from the arbitration and that the submission must be taken to have been revoked. His second ground is that, in point of fact, no valid award was made, and that the so-called award was not even signed by the Umpire. There was a third ground, which has not been pressed in the argument, namely, that the award did finally dispose of all the matters in dispute.

JANKI DAS v. TIKA RAM.

The learned Subordinate Judge came to the conclusion on the evidence that the arbitration was a genuine arbitration and that the award was good.

We have come to the same conclusion. With regard to the alleged delay, we find upon the evidence of Chandan Lal, who was examined on behalf of the plaintiff that shortly after the submission was signed the arbitrators all met, they framed rules for the due carrying out of the arbitration, the parties were required to make their different cases in writing, they were examined, questions were put to them both by the arbitrators and by each other and opportunity for cross-examination was allowed. It seems to us that the arbitration was carried out, in a much more business-like way than proceedings of this kind usually are. After these meetings (which would appear to have been amply sufficient to have decided the somewhat trivial dispute between three brothers concerning their family matters), not much appears to have been done until the 20th of August 1906. This is not altogether surprising; the tribunal consisted of five persons and there may have been some difficulty in getting them together. They did not all reside at the same place, and one of them at least was an invalid. Furthermore, the probabilities are that, as the result of the investigation of the matters in dispute which took place in October and in November 1905, it was pretty clear to all the parties what the result of the arbitration would be. However this may be, the plaintiff does appear to have served a notice attempting to revoke the arbitration on the 16th of August 1906. After that, the tribunal met again on the 20th of August and continued to sit for several days. No one appears to have taken the least notice of the notice served by the plaintiff. Chandan Lal, his own witness, although he denies now having signed the award, admits that the arbitrators met and he sat with them, though he says he took no part in the proceedings and formed no opinion. The other two arbitrators Badri Parshad and Jamna Prasad, who were examined, give a totally different version of the affair. They say that the arbitration continued in August, that the award was the work of the arbitrators and that it was dictated by the Umpire and signed by them all. The learned Subordinate Judge has accepted their evidence and we think he was amply justified in doing so. The evidence of Chandan Lal is improbable to the last decree.

It is said that further delay took place between the date of the award and its registration, and that this circumstance supports the plaintiff's case and suggests that the award was not bona fide and the name of the Umpire, Chandan Lal, was forged. We cannot find that there was any extraordinary delay. After the award was drawn up by non-professional persons it had to go to a Pleader to advise as to what was to be done therewith. After his advice, it had to go to the Collector in order that the amount of the stamp should be adjudicated upon. In all probability the Collector sent it to the treasury. We can well believe that a considerable amount of time was taken up in making the usual and necessary inquiries. The award could not be registered until all this was done and the duty actually paid.

We, therefore, think that the plaintiff's case fails upon the two main grounds, namely the delay on the part of the arbitrators in completing the award, and also on the allegation that it was not signed by the arbitrators and Umpire.

The third ground was not urged by learned Counsel and, so far as we can see, the award was a perfectly valid one and, therefore, the appeal fails. We accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

Appeal dismissed.

MEHR SINGH v. DEVI DYAL.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1094 OF 1909.

November 28, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Johnstone and Mr. Justice Shah Din.

MEHR SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

DEVI DYAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Succession—Sehgal Khatris of Gujranwala and Eminabad—Hindu Law—Joint undivided property—Separation of two branches of a joint Hindu family—Separate and exclusive enjoyment of different portions of property by each branch for above 40 years—Presumption—Partition—Party sued unnecessarily—Costs.

The onus of proving that Sehgal Khatris, residing in a town, who do not own agricultural property and have never carried on agriculture as a means of livelihood, are governed by custom, at variance with Hindu Law, in matters of succession to non-agricultural property situate in a town, is on the party who sets up such a custom. The Riwaj-i-am as well as the Wajib-ul-arz which govern agricultural Khatris do not apply to non-agricultural Khatris.

Where the following facts are proved:—

(1) that the two branches of a joint Hindu family separated in food and residence more than 40 years ago;

(2) that each branch held and enjoyed separately for over 40 years the two portions of a family property;

(3) that during the said period each branch treated as its exclusive property the share in its possession;

(4) that each branch alienated from time to time some fractions of the share in its possession and the other branch acquiesced in such alienations;

And there were also certain documents which taken together were inconsistent with the continuance of the family as joint:

Held, (1) that there is a justifiable inference that there was an agreement to partition the property in interest and right;

(2) that there was a disruption of the joint family;

(3) that, though there was no actual division of the property by metes and bounds, a separation in interest and right as regards the property did take place, and that thenceforth it was the subject of ownership in certain defined shares with the result that the character of undivided property and joint ownership was taken away from it, and;

(4) that such partition in law is as effectual as a partition by metes and bounds of undivided property held by the members of a joint Hindu family.

Where a defendant is sued unnecessarily and after dismissal of suit is made a respondent in appeal without just cause, he is entitled to costs in both the Courts.

Appeal from the order of the District Judge of Gujranwala, dated 19th June 1909 dismissing plaintiffs' claim.

Rai Bahadur Lala Lal Chand, for the Appellants.

Lala Dwarka Das, for Respondents Nos. 1 and 2.

Khwaja Zia-ud-Din, for Respondent No. 3.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Gujranwala dismissing the suit brought by the plaintiffs-appellants for possession of 2/3rds share of a haveli known as haveli Malwian, situated in the town of Eminabad, Tahsil and District Gujranwala. Attached as an appendix to this judgment is a pedigree-table which shows the relationship of the parties. The common ancestor, Sardar Mihan Singh, had three sons, Sahib Singh, Sukha Singh and Mahtab Singh. Sahib Singh died about Sambat 1890 leaving a son Gurdit Singh. Gurdit Singh had two wives. Musammat Ganesh Devi and Musammat Nand Kaur. By his first wife, Musammat Ganesh Devi, he had a son, Partab Singh, who predeceased his father leaving a widow, Musammat Jai Kaur and two daughters, Musammat Jahan and Musammat Lachhmi. Musammat Ganesh Devi had also a daughter, Musammat Hukam Devi, who left a son, Devi Dial, who is defendant No. 1 in this case. Musammat Gaban, daughter of Partab Singh, left a son Sant Ram who is defendant No. 2.

Sukha Singh, the second son of Sardar Mihan Singh, had four sons, Jodh Singh, Wir Singh, Sham Singh and Ganda Singh. Plaintiff No. 1, Sobha Singh, is a son of Sham Singh and plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3, Sher Singh and Natha Singh, are the son and grandson respectively of Wir Singh. Jodh Singh has left descendants some of whom are pro forma defendants in the case.

Mahtab Singh, the third son of Sardar Mihan Singh, had two sons, Dal Singh and Gurmukh Singh, of whom the latter is said to have left Eminabad more than 40 years ago and settled in Gujranwala. His sons have been impleaded as pro forma defendants.

It will be seen from the above that the plaintiffs are from among the descendants of Sukha Singh, while defendants Nos. 1 and 2, who are the principal defendants in the case, are descended from Sahib Singh defendant No. 3. Ram Singh is a brother of Musammat Nand Kaur, widow of Gurdit Singh, and he is the only party who is not a member of Sardar Mihan Singh's family. The plaintiffs sued defendants Nos. 1 to 3 for a 2/3rds share of the haveli in dispute substantially on the following allegations:—

(1) That the haveli in question had been built, owned and left by Sardar Mihan Singh, the common ancestor of the parties.

(2) That the three sons of Mihan Singh were members of a joint Hindu family and as such were joint owners of the said haveli: more than 40 years ago, Gurmukh Singh, son of Mahtab Singh, exchanged his 1/3rd share in the haveli with the 1/3rd share held by Sahib Singh, son of Gurdit Singh, in another ancestral haveli situate at Gujranwala with the result that Gurdit Singh became owner of 2/3rds share in the haveli in question, while the descendants of Sukha Singh became owners of the remaining 1/3rd share. The descendants of Gurdit Singh and Sukha Singh, however, continued to reside in the haveli as members of a joint Hindu family.

(3) That Gurdit Singh before his death, more than 35 years ago, executed a Will in respect of his property in favour of his two widows, Musammat Ganesh Devi and Musammat Nand Kaur, and his widowed daughter-in-law, Musammat Jai Kaur, and under that Will the said widows held the estate left by Gurdit Singh in lieu of their maintenance one after the other. The last surviving widow being Musammat Nand Kaur, who died a few months before suit.

(4) That the haveli in dispute was the joint property of the descendants of Sahib Singh and Sukha Singh who constituted a joint Hindu family and had always been held and treated as such; that according to Hindu Law and custom the plaintiffs, who are the collaterals of the late Gurdit Singh and co-sharers in the haveli in question, were entitled to the possession of the 2/3rds share left by the above-mentioned widows, and that defendants Nos. 1 to 3 had no right in the presence of the plaintiffs to the said haveli and were in unlawful possession of the same.

In answer to the plaintiffs' claim Ram Singh, defendant No. 3, pleaded that he was not in possession of any part of the haveli and that he had been sued without just cause. Defendants Nos. 1 and 2, who have contested the suit throughout, filed a written statement traversing the material allegations contained in the plaint and pleaded in effect that the haveli in dispute had been built not by Sardar Mihan Singh, the common ancestor of the parties, but partly by Sardar Sahib Singh and partly by his son, Sardar Gurdit Singh; that the portion of the haveli occupied by the descendants of Sukha Singh had been given to Sukha Singh by Sahib Singh for purposes of residence, that Gurdit Singh and Sukha Singh and after their respective deaths their heirs and descendants were not members of a joint Hindu family holding the haveli in question in joint ownership as co-parceners; that under the Will of Gurdit Singh executed by him in 1862 his widows and his daughter-in-law had become exclusive owners of the portion of the haveli in suit, their possession not being merely in lieu of maintenance for their respective lives; that the widows had from time to time alienated certain portions of the haveli in exercise of their rights of ownership; that the plaintiffs and their predecessors-in-interest had by their conduct recognised the widows' exclusive ownership in the haveli in dispute and were, therefore, debarred from claiming the same as part of the property of a joint family; that the parties were bound by Hindu Law under which defendant No. 1 as daughter's son of Gurdit Singh and defendant No. 2 as his great-grandson succeeded to the haveli in dispute in preference to the plaintiffs. In replication the plaintiffs varied their original allegations in the plaint as to the construction of the haveli by saying that it was built jointly by Sardar Sahib Singh and Sardar Sukha Singh with the money of Musammat Maina Devi, widow of Sardar Mihan Singh. They, however, reiterated their original allegations to the effect that the haveli as the ancestral property of the parties in which Gurdit Singh had a 2/3rds share and Sukha Singh 1/3rd share; that the whole haveli had been held and occupied as the undivided property of a joint Hindu family; that though shares in the haveli had been allotted as aforesaid there had been no separation of those shares by partition; that the Will of Gurdit Singh had not affected the joint character of the haveli, the widows having had only a life-interest in the same under that Will; that under Hindu Law and the custom applicable to the parties the plaintiffs had a preferential right of succession to the haveli in dispute as against the contesting defendants, and that the plaintiffs had not abandoned their rights in the life-time of the widows.

Upon the pleadings of the parties, the District Judge framed eight issues which are set forth in his judgment.

The more material of those issues are the first four, which run as follows:—

(1) Did any portion of the haveli known as haveli Malwian belong to the late Sukha Singh, son of Sardar Mihan Singh? And, if so, in what capacity?

(2) In case he owned it as heir to Sardar Mihan Singh, did he not get his 1/3rd share partitioned in the life-time of Sahib Singh?

(3) Are the parties governed by custom?

(4) If they are governed by Hindu Law, cannot the defendants, Devi Dial and Sant Ram, be given priority to the plaintiffs?

On the 1st issue the District Judge held that the haveli Malwian had been built by Sahib Singh and not by Mihan Singh; that the portion of it which was occupied by Sukha Singh's descendants had been gifted to Sukha Singh by Sahib Singh; and that, therefore, the 2/3rds share of the haveli in dispute could not be treated as part of the undivided property of a joint Hindu family. He further held that, on the facts found by him, the principle of survivorship could not apply to a case of this kind, and that plaintiffs as descendants of the donee, Sukha Singh, could not claim possession of any portion of the haveli from the defendants. On this view of the case, a finding on issue No. 2 was unnecessary and was not recorded. On the 3rd and 4th issues the District Judge held that the parties, who were high caste Khatris, and residents of a town, were governed in matters of succession by Hindu Law and not by custom, and that under Hindu Law the defendants excluded the plaintiffs from succession to the property in suit. On the 7th issue, which related to the alleged acquiescence of the plaintiff in the exclusive title of the widows to the haveli in suit, the District Judge found in defendants' favour holding that alienation of different portions of the haveli had been made by the widows to the knowledge of the plaintiffs and their predecessors-in-interest. On these findings, the plaintiffs' suit has been dismissed.

In appeal, the points raised before the District Judge have been argued before us at considerable length on both sides, and, after giving our best consideration to the arguments advanced, we think that the decree passed by the District Judge is correct and, must be upheld. On the view that we take of the case, it is unnecessary to decide definitely whether the haveli in question was built by Sardar Mihan Singh, the common ancestor of the parties, or by his eldest son Sardar Sahib Singh, though we are inclined to agree with the District Judge that it was built by Sahib Singh. In our opinion, even if the haveli was built by Sardar Mihan Singh and, therefore, his three sons, Sahib Singh, Sukha Singh, and Mahtab Singh inherited it as joint property in their capacity of members of a joint Hindu family, there was a description of the joint family followed by a division of the haveli between the co-owner in the life of Gurdit Singh, more than 40 years before the date of suit; and everything on the record points to the portion of the haveli now in dispute having been treated ever since as the separate and exclusive property of Gurdit Singh and of his heirs and descendants. The plaint and the plaintiff's replication go a great way to support this view. In para. 2 of the plaint it is admitted that more than 40 years ago Sardar Gurmukh Singh, the only son of Mahtab Singh, (who was third son of Sardar Mihan Singh), abandoned his own share in the haveli in question in favour of Gurdit Singh after taking in exchange one-third share of the latter in the ancestral haveli at Gujranwala; and it is stated that, in consequence of this exchange, Gurdit Singh became owner of a two-thirds share in the haveli, Sukha Singh's descendants becoming owners of the remaining one-third. Reference is also made in the plaint to the Will made by Gurdit Singh in favour of his widows, which is dated 16th November 1862 (page 15 of the paper-book), and though Gurdit Singh died admittedly more than 35 years ago, his widows and his daughter-in-law have admittedly remained in possession of the said two-thirds share during their respective lives, the plaintiff and the other descendants of Sukha Singh, who are fairly numerous, being content with the one-third share which Sukha Singh occupied in the life-time of Gurmukh Singh. In their replication also, the plaintiffs concede that Gurdit Singh gave his one-third share in the haveli at Gujranwala to Gurmukh Singh and took his one-third share in the haveli, in question, as a result of which he became owner of two-thirds share in the latter haveli while the descendants of Sukha Singh became owners of the remaining one-third share (page 46). They further admit that they had all along been in possession only of the said one-third share, and though they add that "shares were allotted on account of a large number of family members," they do not make any attempt to explain why, after the death of Gurdit Singh, his two widows and his daughter-in-law alone continued to occupy two-thirds share of the haveli as before, and why their own branch, consisting as it did of a large number of members, contented itself with occupying the one-third share which Sukha Singh had originally occupied. No doubt, both in the plaint and in the replication the plaintiffs insist upon the whole haveli having remained throughout as the undivided property of their alleged joint family; and in their replication they even say that the descendants of Gurdit Singh and Sukha Singh have been in proprietary possession of the haveli "without specification of shares." But the facts admitted in the pleadings clearly amount to a separation of interests in the haveli in question and there is ample evidence on the record, to which we shall presently refer, of the actual separate enjoyment by the heirs and descendants of Gurdit Singh and of Sukha Singh, respectively, of the two-thirds share and one-third share above referred to, the two branches of the family having been also separate both in food and residence, at least ever since the death of Gurdit Singh and very possibly since the death of Sahib Singh.

The principles which govern the partition of joint property belonging to an undivided Hindu family have been laid down in several decisions of their Lordships of the Privy Council; and the question for decision in cases like the present is whether or not, with reference to those principles, the facts of the case in hand establish a separation of interests between the various members of a joint family as regards the particular piece of property in dispute which would amount to a division of the same without actual partition of it by metes and bounds. In the leading case of Appovier v. Rama Subba Aiyar (1) their Lordships of the Privy Council laid down the law in effect as follows:—"When the members of an undivided family agree among themselves with regard to particular property, that it shall thenceforth be the subject of ownership in certain defined shares, then the character of undivided property and joint enjoyment is taken away from the subject-matter so agreed to be dealt with; and in the estate each member has thenceforth a definite and certain share which he may claim the right to receive and enjoy in severalty, although the property itself has not been actually severed and divided." There may be a division of title, without division of the subject to which the title is applied: a division of the right without a division of the property by actual partition by metes and bounds. In the later case of Doorga Pershad v. Musammat Kundun Koowar (2), their Lordships say that the fair inference from the decision in Appovier's case (1) seems to be that, inasmuch as there may be a division of the kind there spoken of, viz., a division which, though not carried out by a partition by metes and bounds, would nevertheless alter the status of the family, the question in every particular case must be one of intention, whether the intention of the parties, to be inferred from the instruments which they have executed and the acts they have done, was to effect such a division.

In a recent case in Bala Bux v. Rukhmabai (3) in which the plaintiff, a Hindu, claimed to be entitled on the death of his uncle in 1882 to the property of a joint family by right of survivorship, one of the members of which had separated himself in 1869, and no agreement by the other members to remain united or to reunite had been proved. The Judicial Committee laid down the law as follows:—"There is no presumption when one co-parcener separates from the others that the latter remain united. Where it is necessary, in order to ascertain the share of the outgoing co-parcener, to fix the shares in which the others are, or would be entitled to the separation of one may be said to be the virtual separation of all. And an agreement amongst the remaining co-parceners to remain united or

(1) 11 M. I. A. 75; 8 W. R. 1 (P. C.).
(2) 13 B. L. R. 235; 21 W. R. 214; 1 I. A. 55.
(3) 30 C. 725, 5 Bom. L. R. 469; 7 C. W.N. 612; 30 I. A. 130.

to reunite must be proved like any other fact." In another case reported as Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain Sahu (4) their Lordships of the Privy Council were of opinion that an iqrarnama executed by the members of a joint Hindu family, which stated in clear terms that defined shares in the whole joint property had been allotted to the several co-parceners, had the effect in law of causing a separation in estate and interest between all the co-parceners: and, following the principle laid down in Appovier's case (1), they ruled that the property of the joint family had been divided by the allotment to them of defined shares by the iqrarnama. The whole question of the partition of joint property held by an undivided Hindu family by allotment of defined shares to its members without actual partition by metes and bounds was again considered by the Privy Council in a very recent case reported as Parbati v. Naunihal Singh (5). In their judgment in that case, their Lordships reiterated the principles laid down in Appovier's case (1) and in the case of Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain Sahu (4) above referred to, and held that an agreement between the members of a joint Hindu family, whether oral or in writing, to hold and enjoy their joint property in certain defined shares, which agreement was duly acted upon as evidenced by the transaction and conduct of the members of the family with respect to the management of their property, has the effect of partitioning the same, though no actual division by metes and bounds, is established. Referring to Appovier's case (1) and the case of Balkishen Das (4), their Lordships observed in their judgment: "In both these cases the members of a joint Hindu family, some of them being minors, acting by and through their parents, executed instruments in writing providing, in the first case, that part, and, in the second case that the whole, of the joint family property should belong to and be enjoyed by the different members of the family in specified shares. The effect of this was held to be that, as to the property so dealt with, there was a division of rights; the status of the family was changed; the tenancy of the property severed and converted from something, to use the language of English law, like a joint tenancy into a tenancy in common, and the previously undivided family became by operation of law divided" (see page 421 of the report). After quoting some passages from the judgments in the above-mentioned cases, their Lordships observed: "There is not a suggestion in either of the above mentioned judgments that the agreement to partition the joint family property in interest, and right must be embodied in a deed or instrument in writing. It might be a parol agreement." In another part of the judgment, in discussing the documentary evidence adduced to show that there had been a disruption of the joint family and a separation of interests as regards the property held by it, their Lordships say: "but of the numerous documents given in evidence many are absolutely inconsistent with the continuance of the family as a joint Hindu family owning the family property jointly: none are inconsistent with the partition in interest and right of that property in the manner indicated in the petition; and some are inexplicable on any other assumption."

"If there be one thing more than any other inconsistent with the existence of a joint Hindu family, it is that the eldest male and manager for the family, should treat one member as the owner of his share of the entire property, and account with that member for the income of the property on that basis."

Again, at page 428 their Lordships say: "It is unnecessary to examine all the other documents in the case. Few, if any, of them are inconsistent with the defendant's case; many of them are quite inconsistent with that of the plaintiff. The High Court examined them in great detail. They deal with them, however, in what, in their Lordships' opinion was an erroneous method. They apparently only considered whether each document was by itself sufficient to rebut the prima facie presumption that, as the plaintiff's family were admittedly a joint Hindu family before 1861, it continued to be joint, and omitted to take into account the cumulative effect of all these documents."

We now proceed to consider whether or not, with reference to the principles laid down and the observations made by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the above-mentioned cases, the two-thirds

(4) 30 C. 738; 30 I. A. 139; 7 C. W. N. 578.

(5) 31 A. 412; 3 Ind. Cas. 195; 11 Bom. L. R. 878; 10 C. L. J. 121; 13 C. W. N. 983; 5 M.L. T. 427; 6 A. L. J. 597.

share of the haveli in dispute can be held to be the separate property of Gurdit Singh's branch, for it is obvious that, if it can be so held, the plaintiffs who are descended from Sukha Singh, would have no right to succeed to the said share in the presence of Gurdit Singh's daughter's son, defendant No. 1, unless the latter were excluded from succession by some custom at variance with Hindu law. As we have already observed, according to the plaintiffs' own admission, the ⅔rds share of the haveli in suit has been in possession of Gurmukh Singh's branch ever since Gurmukh Singh exchanged his ⅓rd share in the Gujranwala haveli with his ⅓rd share in this haveli and it is admitted that after the death of Gurdit Singh his two widows, Musammat Ganesh Devi and Musammat Nand Kaur and his widowed daughter-in-law, Musammat Jai Kaur, occupied the portion in dispute and that, after the death of the last surviving widow, it has been in the possession of defendants Nos. 1 and 2. There is important evidence on the record to prove that Gurdit Singh and after his death his two widows treated the 2/3rds share of the haveli as their exclusive property, and that the plaintiffs have acquiesced in the exercise by them of rights of ownership in respect of the same. On the 16th November 1862 Gurdit Singh executed a Will in favour of his two widows and his widowed daughter-in-law (page 15 of the paper-book), and in that Will he refers to the portion of the haveli which is now in dispute as his own exclusive property. No doubt, the recitals in that Will are in no way binding on the plaintiffs, but the important point to note is that in that Will, which is the only document executed by Gurdit Singh in which he refers to the nature and extent of his own interest in the haveli at Eminabad, and of the existence of which, as appears from the plaint, the plaintiffs were fully aware, the 2/3rds share now in question is claimed by Gurdit Singh as his separate property, and no steps whatever have ever been taken by the plaintiffs to contest that claim. The only reasonable inference that can be drawn from the conduct of the plaintiffs in relation to the Will in question is that they were aware that a separation of interest had taken place between the members of the family as regards the Eminabad haveli which amounted to a partition of the same, though no actual division by metes and bounds had taken place. After the death of Gurdit Singh, they allowed the widows to hold and enjoy the 2/3rds share in dispute in accordance with the directions contained in the Will, and both the members of the family and outsiders treated the widows as exclusive owners thereof and dealt with them on that basis. On the 6th September 1875, Musammat Ganesh Devi, Musammat Nand Kaur, and Jai Kaur sold to Nihal Singh, brother of plaintiff No. 1, (who is defendant No. 4 in this case), a portion of the haveli in their possession known as Mastgarh and the vendee Nihal Singh subsequently sold that portion to one Lala Amar Nath. In the sale-deed the widows claim to be owners of Mastgarh by right of inheritance, and the boundaries of the property sold, as contained in the deed, show that they also claim to be exclusive owners of the big deorhi to the north and refer to the southern portion of the haveli as belonging to Sardar Sukha Singh. No objection whatever to this sale was made by any member of the family and the sale in question remains unchallenged up to the present moment. On the 24th December 1876, Sobha Singh, plaintiff, executed a written lease in favour of Musammat Nand Kaur in respect of a portion of the haveli consisting of one dalan and two kothris on an annual rental of Rs. 2-0-0. In that lease, Sobha Singh refers to Musammat Nand Kaur as owner of the house and agrees to vacate the same on due notice being given by her for the purpose. The execution of this lease is admitted by Sobha Singh (page 59). On the 31st Baisakh Sambat 1935, A. D. 1877, Sobha Singh plaintiff sold a 1/12th share of a tawela, which was admittedly part of the haveli, to his own brother, Nihal Singh, and in the sale-deed he refers to himself as the owner of the share sold, one of the boundaries of the same being entered as the tawela of the heirs of Sardar Gurdit Singh, deceased. On the 17th May 1879, three sale-deeds were executed by different members of the plaintiffs' branch of the family in respect of different shares in the tawela, viz., 1/6th share by Nihal Singh, ⅛th share by Sher Singh, (plaintiff No. 2), and 1/12th share by Hakim Singh, son of Jodh Singh, the vendees in each sale being Diwan Anant Ram and Amar Nath. Each vendor refers to the share sold by him as the share to which he is entitled as owner in his own right: and it is noteworthy that the northern and the southern boundaries of the shares sold are put down in each deed as respectively the house of the heirs of Sardar Gurdit Singh and the deorhi of the said house. On the 9th September 1882 one Islam took a lease from Musammat Jai Kaur and Devi Dial, defendant No. 1, of a portion of the haveli known as dharamsala (page 14), and Sobha Singh, plaintiff, admits that he wrote the deed of lease on the record (page 48). Lastly, Ganesh Das, witness, proves that he wrote a lease dated the 4th July 1888 on behalf of one Jumma in favour of Musammat Nand Kaur, Musammat Jai Kaur and Devi Dial in respect of a kothri in the big deorhi of the haveli which Jumma had taken on rent.

The above-mentioned documents, taken together, lead irresistibly to the conclusion that there had been a disruption of the joint family of the parties in the life-time of Gurdit Singh, and that though there may have been no actual division of the Eminabad haveli by metes and bounds there took place a separation in interest and right as regards this haveli between Gurdit Singh and Sukha Singh and that thenceforth it was the subject of ownership in certain defined shares with the result that the character of undivided property and joint ownership was taken away from it. On the one hand, the widows and daughter-in-law of Gurdit Singh held, enjoyed and dealt with the portions of the haveli included in their 2/3rds share which they have always been in possession of, as their exclusive property, and, on the other hand, the descendants of Sukha Singh treated their own 1/3rd share including parts of the tawela attached to the haveli as their exclusive patrimony and dealt with it on that basis. From the circumstances and the facts of the case we are, therefore, justified in concluding that in the life-time of Gurdit Singh there must have been an agreement between him and Sukha Singh and Gurmukh Singh, son of Mahtab Singh, to partition the Eminabad haveli in interest and right; and, as laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council, such partition is in law as effectual as a partition by metes and bounds of undivided property held by the members of a joint Hindu family. Further, in the words of their Lordships in Parbati v. Naunihal Singh (5), "of the numerous documents given in evidence many are absolutely inconsistent with the continuance of the family as a joint Hindu family owning the family property jointly, none are inconsistent with the partition in interest and right, of that property  and some are inexplicable on any other assumption." As their Lordships observe in the same case, each document discussed above may not be sufficient by itself to rebut the prima facie presumption that as the parties' family was originally a joint Hindu family it continued to be joint, but the cumulative effect of all these documents is overwhelming, and the only conclusion that can be reasonably drawn from the facts proved in this case is that there was a disruption of the family more than 40 years ago accompanied by a division of the haveli in question in interest and right which took away from it the character of joint property. On the death of Gurdit Singh, therefore, the plaintiffs were not entitled to the 2/3rds share in suit by right of survivorship under Hindu Law and they were excluded from succession by Gurdit Singh's daughter's son, defendant No. 1.

It now only remains to consider whether, in matters of succession, the parties are governed by any custom at variance with Hindu Law, for, if no such custom is established, Hindu Law must govern this case.

In this connection we have to observe that in their plaint the plaintiffs have relied on both Hindu law and custom as furnishing the rule of decision as regards their alleged right to succeed to the haveli in dispute, and in their replication they took up the same position, appealing both to the principles of Hindu Law, as expounded by Mayne in his Hindu Law and Usage, and to the Riwaj-i-am of the Gujranwala Tahsil prepared at the Settlement of 1867 (page 46 of the paper-book.) On the other hand, the defendants, both in their written pleas and in their oral statements, said that they were bound by Hindu Law and not by custom. On the issue framed in this connection, the District Judge has held that the parties are governed by their personal law and not by custom; and we have no hesitation in agreeing with him in that view. The parties are Sehgal Khatris residing in a town, they own no agricultural land and have never carried on agriculture as a means of livelihood, and the property in suit is a haveli situate in a town. Under these circumstances, the onu lay heavily on the plaintiffs of proving that they were governed not by Hindu Law but by custom, and we do not think that that onus has been discharged by them. The Riwaj-i-am of the Gujranwala district, prepared at the Settlement of 1867, on which the plaintiffs rely, governs agricultural Khatris and not the parties who have no connection whatever with agriculture and live in a town, and, for the same reasons, the Wajib-ul-arz of Mauza Eminabad prepared in 1856 cannot be held to govern the succession to the property in question. No instances of any value in support of the applicability of custom to the Sehgal Khatris regarding right of succession to non-agricultural property, such as the haveli in suit, have been cited, the balance of oral evidence on the question under consideration being, on the whole, in favour of the contestiug defendants' position.

On behalf of defendant-respondent No. 3, Ram Singh, it has been urged by Khawaja Zia-ud-din that his client was impleaded as a defendant in this case quite unnecessarily as he had never been in possession of any part of the haveli. We notice that Ram Singh disclaimed all interest in the subject-matter of the suit in his pleas and no evidence whatever was adduced by the plaintiffs to show that he had any interest in the same, and that it was necessary for them to sue him as a defendant. In the appeal also he has been made a respondent without just cause and, therefore, apart from the merits of the case, the appeal as regards him must fail and is hereby dismissed and he will get his costs in both the Courts.

For the above reasons, we hold that the plaintiffs-appellants have failed to prove that they are entitled to succeed to the 2/3rds share of the haveli in dispute to the exclusion of defendants-respondents Nos. 1 and 2, and, maintaining the decree of the lower Court, we dismiss this appeal with costs throughout.

Appeal dismissed.

APPENDIX.—Pedigree-table.

UMAR DIN v. BUDHE KHAN.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 46 OF 1909.

November 16, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Johnstone and Mr. Justice Shah Din.

UMAR DIN alias BAGGA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BUDHE KHAN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Alienation—Necessity—Duty of alienee to inquire that an antecedent debt is a just debt—Antecedent debt a decretal debt—Alienee an outsider—Rule as to inquiry.

Where an alienee, who is an outsider, finds that the alienor's debt, regarding which he must make inquiry, is a decretal debt he need not make any further inquiry, and the reversioners will not be allowed to go behind the decree. But this rule will not apply where it is clear that the alienee's suspicions should have been aroused by the surrounding circumstances, or where it is proved that he actually had knowledge of the bad faith of the decretal transaction.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated 20th October 1908, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd class, Hoshiarpur, dated 20th June 1908, decreeing plaintiff's claim.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Appellant.

Sheikh Umar Bakhsh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Two appeals have been filed by Umar Din alias Bagga in connection with alienations by his father, defendant No. 1. In both the Courts below the two suits have been dealt with together.

The history of the case is as follows:—On 11th May 1897, Nabi Khan and Wadhu Khan mortgaged to Daulat Ram 91 kanals and 12 marlas of land for Rs. 700. On 1st March 1900, they executed a further mortgage deed of the same land for an additional sum of Rs. 212. These mortgages were without possession, but, inasmuch as the mortgagors failed to pay munafa, Daulat Ram brought a suit for possession on 20th May 1901, putting down Rs. 1,212 as the burden on the land. On 26th June 1901, the mortgagors put in a written statement contending that undue influence had been exercised and that, as a matter of fact, munafa had been paid; but on 2nd July 1901, the parties filed a compromise in which the mortgagors agreed that a decree for possession might be passed in lieu of Rs. 1,375, Rs. 150 of which was the money due to one Shiv Nath on another mortgage.

Next, on 14th September 1904, Nabi Khan, Wadhu Khan and Musammat Viro sold 59 kanals and 14 marlas out of the aforesaid land to defendants, Basanta, Rupa and others, for Rs. 1,452 and upon this sale a pre-emption suit was brought, the plaintiffs being Budhe Khan and Babu Khan, defendants, reversioners of the vendors, the suit was contested; but ultimately, on 11th May 1905, the pre emptors obtained a decree for pre-emption on payment of Rs. 77 to the vendee, the sum of Rs. 1,375 being left with them to pay to Daulat Ram, mortgagee, at their pleasure. Finally, the present suits were brought on the 3rd February 1908. One suit is for a declaration that the sale-deed of 14 September 1904 should not affect the reversionary rights of the plaintiffs after the death of the vendees, and the other suit is for a similar declaration with regard to the mortgages aforesaid. The first Court drew up issues and gave plaintiff a decree subject to payment of Rs. 924-6, to the mortgagees and Rs. 77 to the pre-emptors, but the lower Appellate Court dismissed the plaintiff's suit on the short ground that Rs. 77 was certainly paid in good faith by the vendees and that the item of Rs. 1,375 could not be impugned, because it had become merged in a decree of a competent Court.

The plaintiff now comes up to this Court with further appeals, and we have heard an able argument upon the point decided by the learned Divisional Judge. We need not go into the question of the passing of consideration or the existence of "necessity" for the various items in the mortgage-deeds, for we agree with the Divisional Judge that the plaintiff cannot contest the mortgage-deeds in these suits of his against the vendees and the pre-emptors. We need only refer to Devi Ditta v. Saudagar Singh (1) (middle) and to recall to mind the numerous dicta of Judges of this Court as to the duty that lies upon an alienee, who is taking ancestral property on sale or mortgage from a proprietor who is subject to Punjab custom. But, shortly, the two principles with which we are concerned are these. The payment of a just antecedent debt is "necessity;" secondly, the alienee must make in good faith reasonable inquiry into the question whether the alleged debts due by the alienor were for consideration and "necessity." In connection with these principles, there is, at the page quoted above, in the Punjab Record for 1900 an apt illustration by Mr. Justice Chatterji in the course of which he says that, when a vendee is an outsider and the debt in question is a decretal debt, the reversioner cannot go behind the decree. This is, of course, obiter dictum but we agree that it is correct; and the meaning of it, put in other words, is that, when a vendee or a mortgagee in cases like the present finds that a debt regarding which he must make inquiry is based upon an unsatisfied decree, he need make no further inquiry regarding it. Of course, if it can be shown that the alienee actually had knowledge that there was bad faith in the transaction, or if it is clear that the alienee's suspicions should have been aroused by the surrounding circumstances, then, perhaps Mr. Justice Chatterji's dictum would require qualification; but if a genuine outsider proposes to buy a land from a proprietor and in good faith undertakes to pay off a decree due by the alienor to a previous creditor, we think that the matter is concluded and that the reversioners cannot be allowed to interfere.

(1) 65 P. R. 1900.

GOKUL CHAND v. SHIB CHARAN.

But in the present case arguing for the plaintiff Mr. Tek Chand contends that there is reason to believe that the vendees in the case were aware that the original mortgage debts were not for "necessity." He based this contention upon two propositions; first, that the vendees are residents of the same village Bahadurpur in which the land is situated and in which the vendors live; secondly, that although some seven years have passed since the purchase, the vendees or the pre-emptors have not yet redeemed the land. We do not think that these two considerations prove Mr. Tek Chand's point. In the plaint itself, the vendees are stated to be living at Ranchi in Chota Nagpur and not in the Punjab. There is no evidence as to how long ago they went to live at Ranchi but this much is clear that the vendees are not agriculturists but contractors and traders, and that all their interests appear to be in other and distant places. It cannot, therefore, be presumed that they were aware of the real facts concerning the mortgages of 1897 and 1900. Then, it is quite natural that the vendees or pre-emptors should not yet have redeemed the land from the mortgagee. The sum of money to be paid is large, and litigation has been going on. It is easy to understand that the vendees or pre-emptors would not like to pay Rs. 1,375 to the mortgagee until they were quite satisfied that all possible attacks upon their title had come to an end. The onus of proof that the vendees did not act in good faith is certainly on the plaintiff in the circumstances of the case and we do not think that he has discharged that onus.

We, therefore, dismiss both the appeals with costs.

Appeals dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 279 OF 1911.

November 4, 1911.

Present:—Mr Justice Chamier.

GOKUL CHAND—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

SHIB CHARAN—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 106—Lessee for a fixed term—Notice to quit delivered at a shop where defendant did not reside—Validity of notice to quit—Lessee holding over—Notice, whether necessary.

A notice to quit, sent by post and delivered by the postal peon to a person other than the defendant at the shop from which the defendant was sought to be ejected, but where the defendant did not reside, is not a good notice within the meaning of section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act.

If a lessee for a fixed term of years remains in possession of a house after the expiration of the term of the lease in defiance of the authority of the lessor, he is not entitled to a notice to quit under section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act.

Second appeal from the decision of the Additional Judge of Moradabad, dated 23rd December 1901.

Mr. Haribans Sahai, for the Appellant.

Mr. Chaudhri, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This was a suit by the respondent for the ejectment of the appellant from the southern portion of a shop situated in the town of Moradabad. The shop was originally the joint property of the respondent and the appellant. The respondent in 1900 sued for partition of the shop and separate possession of his share of it. The suit terminated in a compromise, according to which the shop was divided between the parties, the respondent getting the southern portion, and the appellant the northern portion of it. But it was agreed that the respondent should give to the appellant a lease of the southern portion for eight years. It was part of the compromise that the respondent should give the appellant a registered lease. No lease was ever given but the appellant occupied the southern portion of the shop as the tenant of the respondent and it has been found by the Courts below that the term of eight years for which the appellant was to hold possession as tenant terminated on the 20th September 1908. Immediately after the expiry of the term, the respondent endeavoured to get the appellant to vacate the southern portion of the house. But the appellant resisted all efforts to dislodge him. Ultimately, on the 21st February 1910, the respondent brought the present suit. The appellant resisted the suit in the Court of first instance on the ground that the respondent's next friend agreed to allow the appellant to remain in possession of the respondent's share of the house until the respondent attained majority. That defence failed. In appeal to the District Judge, the appellant took two points neither of which has been discussed before me. At the hearing he was allowed to raise a third point, namely, that the respondent was not entitled to maintain the suit as no notice to quit, as required by section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, had been served on the appellant. The lower Appellate Court called on the Court of first instance for a finding on the question whether any notice to quit had been given by the respondent to the appellant. The first Court then found that the tenancy terminated on the 20th of the month and that due notice to quit on the 20th of February 1910 had been given to the appellant through the post. That finding was affirmed by the lower Appellate Court. In second appeal to this Court it is contended that the notice which was given does not comply with section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, because it was not given either personally to the appellant or to any of his family, or servant at his residence, or affixed to a conspicuous part of the house. It appears that the notice was sent by post and was taken by the postal peon to the shop now in question. The appellant says that he does not reside in the shop. This point does not seem to have been taken in the lower Appellate Court, but there is good reason for thinking that the appellant does not reside in the shop, for the respondent himself described the appellant in the plaint as resident of another part of Moradabad. It seems to me that it must be held that the notice does not comply with section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act. The respondent, however, contends that section 106 has no application to the present case. The relevant portion of that section is as follows:—'In the absence of a contract, a local law or usage to the contrary, a lease of immoveable property for any other purpose (which includes a lease of the kind now in question) shall be deemed to be a lease from month to month terminable on the part of either lessor or lessee by fifteen days' notice expiring with the end of the month of tenancy.' It is quite clear that between 1900 and September 1908 this was not a lease from month to month. It was a lease for eight years by virtue of the compromise, notwithstanding that the parties intended that there should be a registered document, for the compromise was incorporated in a decree. It is contended that the appellant remained in possession after the 20th September 1908 and from that date was a tenant from month to month. But the evidence shows that the respondent endeavoured to get the appellant out of the house as soon as the lease terminated. There is no ground for holding that the appellant remained in possession with the consent of the respondent. The appellant retained possession in defiance of the respondent and was not entitled to any notice to quit before the suit was brought. In my opinion, section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act does not apply to this case. Therefore, the respondent was entitled to a decree for possession of the southern portion of the shop, notwithstanding that the notice to quit does not comply with section 106. The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 181 OF 1911.

November 9, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Karamat Husain and Mr. Justice Chamier.

QUDRAT ULLAH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

CHUNNI MAL—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 114—Presumption, extent of—Document alleged to have been lost by one of the parties, but loss not proved.

Kashmir University Library
Accession No. 75382

QUDRAT ULLAH v. CHUNNI MAL.

Q. sued C. to redeem a mortgage on payment of Rs. 115, a portion only of the mortgage-money. The balance, Q. stated, having been paid to the mortgagee. He further stated that some of the payments would be proved if the mortgage-deed were produced as they were endorsed on that document. C. did not produce the mortgage-deed but stated that it had been lost. He could not, however, prove the loss:

Held, that under the circumstances the presumption under section 114 of the Evidence Act could not be pushed to the extent that the mortgage-deed, if produced, would have proved that only Rs. 115 remained due on the mortgage, the rest having been paid off to the mortgagee.

Second appeal from the decision of the Additional Judge of Moradabad, dated the 8th November 1910.

Mr. Surendo Nath Sen, for the Appellant.

Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

CHAMIER, J.—This was a suit by the appellant for the redemption of a mortgage made by one Chajju Khan in favour of the respondent Chunni Mal on March the 11th 1898. Chajju Khan transferred all his rights in the property to the appellant on November the 16th, 1908. The deed seems to have been before the Courts below, but it cannot now be found on the record. It is said to contain a statement that the amount remaining due on the mortgage was Rs. 115. The appellant prayed for a decree for redemption of the property on payment of Rs. 115, alleging that the remaining amount claimable under the mortgage had been paid to the mortgagee. The respondent Chunni Mal pleaded that no payments had been made to him at all. In paragraph 3 of the plaint the appellant said that the original mortgagor had asserted that some of the amounts paid to the mortgagee were endorsed on the document and others were proved in other ways. The respondent Chunni Mal was called upon to produce the mortgage-deed. He said that he had lost it in September 1909. The Munsif found that it was proved that the document had been lost. He also found that the appellant had failed to prove that any payments had been made, and he passed a decree for redemption on payment of Rs. 718-7-6. His decree was affirmed on appeal by the Additional Judge with a trifling modification as to costs. But the learned Additional Judge held that Chunni Mal had failed to prove the loss of the mortgage-deed. He found in effect that Chunni Mal had invented the story of the loss of the document. He evidently thought that Chunni Mal was keeping back the mortgage-deed. In second appeal it is contended that the lower Appellate Court ought to have presumed that, if the mortgage-deed had been produced, it would have proved that all the sums alleged by the appellant to have been paid were in fact paid, leaving only Rs. 115 due on the mortgage. It is suggested that the learned Judge failed to notice that he was entitled, under section 114 of the Indian Evidence Act, to make this presumption against Chunni Mal. It is rather difficult to say with certainty whether the learned Additional Judge had or had not in his mind section 114 of the Evidence Act. But there is one passage in his judgment which suggests that whether he had that section in his mind or not, he realized that the non-production of the mortgage-deed by Chunni Mal was a strong point against him, for after discussing the appellant's evidence and other matters, he says, "the only circumstance against the contesting defendant is that the loss of the bond is not proved in my opinion." Speaking for myself, I am not satisfied that the learned Judge bore in mind the rule contained in section 114 of the Evidence Act which permitted him to presume that the mortgage-deed, if produced, would have been unfavourable to Chunni Mal. But, under the present Code of Civil Procedure this Court is entitled in second appeal to find the facts where the lower Appellate Court has failed to record a proper finding and it seems to me useless to send this case back in order that this presumption of fact may be dealt with. On the question whether the presumption should be pushed to the extent desired by the appellant, namely, that it should be presumed that the mortgage-deed, if produced, would have proved that only Rs. 115 remained due on the mortgage, I think that that would be going too far. It is quite clear from paragraph 3 of the plaint that it was not the case of the appellant in the Court of first instance and that he never was led to suppose that all the payments to that extent were endorsed on the mortgage-deed. If it was never his case that all the payments were endorsed on the mortgage-deed, it is impossible to presume that the deed, if produced, would have proved payments. The probability is that neither side has told the truth. One party has alleged that a much larger sum has been paid than has in fact been paid, and the other party has met the allegation with the false statement that nothing has been paid. On the pleadings, and with reference to the other circumstances of the case, I am not prepared to push the presumption to the extent desired by the appellant who has failed to prove that any sums were paid on account of the mortgage. I am of opinion that the decree of the Court below is right and I think it should be affirmed.

KARAMAT HUSAIN, J.—I agree in the order proposed by my learned colleague.

BY THE COURT.—Order of the Court is, that the appeal be dismissed with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

The objections are dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REVISION CASE No. 700 OF 1911.

November 30, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis.

PREM SINGH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—PETITIONERS

versus

MOKAND SINGH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Custom—Succession—Religious institution—Dharmsala—Mahantship—Rule of succession—Necessity to ascertain—Right of owner's descendant to oust trespasser—Ejectment suit—Trespasser—Plaintiff bound to prove his own title.

A plaintiff must prove his own title before he can oust a trespasser, even though the defendant has no title.

In a dispute about succession to the mahantship of a Dharmsala or other wakf property, the first duty of a Court is to ascertain the rule of succession which obtains as regards the particular shrine.

Bhai Bhagat Singh v. Harnam Singh, 49 P. R. 1892; Gyan Parkash v. Hazura Singh, 3 P. R. 1899, followed.

The mere fact that plaintiff is a descendant of the original owner of the Dharamsala does not entitle him to oust a trespasser.

Petition, under section 70 (1) (a) and (b) of Act XVIII of 1884 as amended by Act XXV of 1899, for revision of the order of the Divisional Judge, Amritsar Division, dated the 24th February 1911, affirming that of the District Judge, Amritsar, dated the 30th May 1910, decreeing plaintiff's claim.

Messrs. Pestonji Dadabhoy and Arthur Grey, for the Petitioners.

Lala Hukam Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This suit relates to a Dharmsala at Amritsar. According to plaintiff, who sues for possession, the Dharmsala belonged to Guru Bhag Singh who put in Rangi Ram Singh as Manager, and plaintiff claims on two grounds,—

(1) As nearest heir of Rangi Ram Singh (propounding a genealogical tree according to which Guru Bhag Singh is plaintiff's spiritual grandfather and is also Rangi Ram Singh's spiritual uncle), and (2) as being now the owner in succession to Guru Bhag Singh. The plaintiff's claim is utterly denied, and the defendants plead that Prem Singh, defendant, was nominated by Rangi Ram Singh as his successor and that Rangi Ram Singh left a Will in Prem Singh's favour, and that Prem Singh was chela of Rangi Ram Singh.

The lower Courts have found that the defence is groundless and that Prem Singh has no rights. But as the Courts rightly observe even though defendants have no title, plaintiff must prove his title before he can oust even a trespasser.

The Courts have presumed to be genuine an old ikrarnama professing to have been executed on 30th April 1860 by Rangi Ram Singh in which he acknowledges that the Dharmsala belongs to Guru Bhag Singh and that he has been put in by Bhag Singh to do service. I see no sufficient ground for holding in revision that this deed is not a genuine one. But I do not see that it necessarily follows that everything stated in the document is correct. The first Court holds that the property is waqf. The Divisional Judge holds that the mahantship reverts on the death of Rangi Ram Singh without leaving a chela to Guru Bhag Singh, and that the latter is plaintiff's grandfather and that the spiritual succession is the same as natural succession, going from father to son as in the case of a Patiala shrine to which this Dharmsala is subordinate.

A good deal seems to me to have been taken for granted which has not been proved nor even put in issue. I understand that the Divisional Judge has not granted plaintiff a decree on the strength of the Dharmsala being private property, but on the ground that he has now succeeded to the mahantship. But what the rule of succession is as regards this particular shrine has never been put in issue. The rule of succession has to be ascertained in such cases [vide Bhai Bhagat Singh v. Harnam Singh (1); Gyan Parkash v. Hazura Singh (2)]. The shrine in question may or may not be subordinate to some shrine in Patiala (though no Patiala shrine was even mentioned in the pleadings), and the rule of succession here may or may not be the same as in the Patiala shrine; what the rule is in the Patiala shrine is also a matter which has never been put in issue. A rule of succession which is fairly common in cases in which the last mahant has nominated no chela to succeed him is, that a successor is nominated by the bhik and duly installed, but it is not claimed that plaintiff has succeeded by this method, and this rule is by no means the universal rule.

(1) 49 P. R. 1892. (2) 3 P. R. 1899.

For the plaintiff it is contended that this is a suit by a man who has succeeded to the mahantship to oust a trespasser, and, further, that even if plaintiff has not regularly succeeded to the mahantship he is still entitled as being a descendant of the original owner to oust a trespasser. But for defendant it is urged, in reply to the latter point, that even taking it that Rangi Ram Singh was only agent of Guru Bhag Singh this relationship ceased on Bhag Singh's death and that Rangi Ram's possession was thereafter adverse to any successor of Bhag Singh, and that plaintiff's claim as owner to oust defendants is, therefore, time-barred.

It appears to me that the necessary points have not been put in issue and inquired into and I remand the case for inquiry by the first Court into the following issues:—

(i) Has plaintiff succeeded to the mahantship, according to the rule of succession governing this shrine?
Onus on plaintiff.

(ii) If not, is plaintiff the owner of the shrine and is he, as such, entitled to take possession in the absence of a mahant?
Onus on plaintiff.

(iii) Is plaintiff's claim qua owner time-barred?
Onus on defendants.

Return to be made through the Divisional Judge, who should record his opinion, within four months.

Execution of decree to be stayed meanwhile.

Case remanded.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 480 OF 1910.
June 22, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

BIROO GORAIN AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—APPELLANTS

versus

JAINURAT KOER—DECREE-HOLDER—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47, O. XX r. 2, cls. (2) and (3)—Adjustment of decree out of Court —Not certified to Court—Fraud of decree-holder, whether Court can enter into investigation of—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 18—"Kept from knowledge of right"—Exercise of right—Difference between—Substantial compliance with cl. (2), r. 2, O. XXI.

If the adjustment of a decree out of Court has not been certified as required by rule 2 of Order XXI of the Code of 1908, the Court executing the decree cannot take notice of it. In such a case it is not open to the Court to investigate, under section 47 of the Code, allegations of fraud made by the judgment-debtor against the decree-holder.

Gadadhar Panda v. Shyam Churn Naik, 12 C. W. N. 485, explained.

Ramayyar v. Ramayyar, 21 M. 356, dissented from.

Periatambi v. Vallaya, 21 M. 409; Ganapathy v. Changa, 29 M. 312, referred to.

Kamini Debi v. Aghore Nath, 4 Ind. Cas. 402; 11 C. L. J. 91; 14 C. W. N. 357; Nistarini Dassi v. Kazim Ali, 12 C. L. J. 65; 7 Ind. Cas. 258; Man Mohan Karmakar v. Dwarkanath Karmakar, 7 Ind. Cas. 55; 12 C L. J. 312 and Hiramony Biswas v. Musa Khan, 7 Ind. Cas. 625, followed.

Even if it is established that the conduct of a decree-holder is fraudulent, the judgment-debtor is not entitled to obtain an extension of the time within which to make an application to the Court under clause 2 of rule 2 of Order XXI, because the judgment-debtor is not, by means of fraud, kept from the knowledge of his right to make the application, within the meaning of section 18 of the Limitation Act, but from the exercise of his right to make the application.

In such a case it is open to the judgment-debtor to institute a suit for damages for the fraud.

Poromanand Khasnabish v. Khepoo Paramanik, 10 C. 354, followed.

While an appeal from a decree was pending, the decree-holder applied for execution. The judgment-debtor appellant obtained an ad interim stay of execution. After that the judgment-debtor made an application to the Court of Appeal stating that the case had been adjusted and that he wanted to withdraw the appeal. Accordingly, the appeal was dismissed and the decree-holder respondent waived his right to costs. An application for execution which was pending in the Court below was also dismissed. Subsequently, the decree-holder again applied for execution of the decree:

Held, that, under the circumstances, the judgment-debtor by his application to the Court of Appeal had in substance complied with the requirements of clause 2, rule 2, Order XXI of the Code.

BIROO GORAIN v. JAINURAT KOER.

Appeal from the order of the Sub-Judge of Patna, dated August 6th, 1910.

Babu Karunamoy Bose, for the Appellants.

Babus Dwarka Nath Chakrvarti, Lalit Mohan Banerji, and Smritish Chandra Ghose, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—We are invited in this appeal to set aside an order by which the Court below has summarily refused to entertain an objection of the judgment-debtors that the decree under execution has been completely adjusted out of Court. The circumstances under which this objection was taken are patent on the face of the record. The decree under execution was made in a suit for rent on the 24th of September 1903. An appeal was referred to this Court on the 8th January 1909. Three days later, the appellants applied for a Rule to stay proceedings in the execution which had already been commenced in the Court below. The Rule was granted and an ad interim stay was directed. On the 5th February 1909, the appellants presented an application to this Court in which it was stated that the matter in difference between the parties had been adjusted and that, in pursuance thereof, they had agreed to withdraw the appeal. This application was directed to be heard on the 8th of February. On that date in the presence of the Vakil for the appellants and the Vakil for the respondents the Court granted the application. The appeal was dismissed and the rule discharged ; the respondent also waived her right to the costs of the proceedings in this Court. On the 22nd of February, the Vakil for the respondent addressed a letter to the Deputy Registrar in which he prayed that as the appeal had been withdrawn, the order of this Court might be sent down to the Court below as the records were required for the purpose of another case. Five days later, the order of this Court was communicated to the Court below and the records were also returned. In the order which was drawn up, it was stated that the appellants had intimated to the Court that the matter in difference between the parties had been adjusted and on that footing the appeal had been dismissed without costs.

On the 2nd March 1909, the Court below recorded an order to the effect that the record had been received back and directed the decree-holder to take proper steps. On the 8th March the application for execution was dismissed as no steps had been taken in that behalf by the decree-holder. In this manner the application for execution which had been presented on the 4th November 1908 was disposed of by the Court below. It now transpires that on the 18th March 1909, the decree-holder presented a second application for execution, but it was dismissed for non-prosecution on the 11th May following. On the 6th of June 1910 the decree-holder presented the application on the basis of which the proceedings now before us were initiated. The decree-holder ignored the settlement alleged by the judgment-debtors in their application to this Court on the 5th February 1909 and prayed that execution might proceed on the footing of the application of the 4th November 1908. Notice was served upon the judgment-debtors who promptly preferred objections on the 25th of July 1910. These objections were of a two-fold character, namely, first, that the execution could not proceed because the decree had been adjusted in full, and, secondly, that if the execution could proceed, the decree-holder was bound to proceed against the properties mentioned in the prayer clause of the plaint before she could be allowed to proceed against the other properties of the judgment-debtors. The Subordinate Judge overruled these contentions and held that as the alleged adjustment had not been certified, it was not competent to the Court to take notice of it. The Subordinate Judge further held that upon the face of the objections the adjustment, if true, was between the decree-holder and persons who were not parties to the execution proceedings, and consequently the adjustment could not be of any value to the judgment-debtors. The Subordinate Judge also held that the discretion of the decree-holder to proceed in execution of her decree in any manner she chose, was not restricted by the facts stated in the prayer clause of the plaint.

The judgment-debtors have now appealed to this Court. On their behalf the decision of the Subordinate Judge has been attacked substantially on three grounds, namely, first, that although the adjustment has not been certified in the manner contemplated by rule 2 of Order XXI of the Code of 1908, as the conduct of the decree-holder is fraudulent, it is open to the Court to investigate the allegations of fraud under section 47 of the Code of 1908; secondly, that the provisions of rule 2 of Order XXI of the Code have in substance been complied with; and thirdly, that if it is open to the decree-holder to proceed with the execution, she cannot sell the properties of the judgment-debtor in any manner she choses, but must proceed first against the properties mentioned in the prayer clause of the plaint.

BIROO GORAIN v. JAINURAT KOER.

In so far as the first of these objections is concerned, reliance has been placed upon the cases of Gadadhar Panda v. Shyam Churn Naik (1); Ramayyar v. Ramayyar (2) and Trimbak Ramkishna Ranade v. Hari Laxman Ranade (3). In our opinion, there is no foundation for this contention. Order XXI, rule 2, of the Code provides in clause (3) that payment, "which has not been certified or recorded as aforesaid, (i.e., as explained in clause 1 or 2, at the instance of either the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor), shall not be recognized by any Court executing the decree." The contention of the learned Vakil for the appellants in substance is that in cases where the conduct of the decree-holder is fraudulent, it is open to the Court, in fact it is incumbent on the Court, to investigate the allegation of fraud under section 47 of the Code of 1908, notwithstanding the clear and specific provisions of clause (3) of rule 2 of Order XXI. This argument is obviously fallacious. A proceeding under rule 2, Order XXI, is a proceeding under section 47 of the Code, inasmuch as it decides a question between the parties to the suit and relating to the execution, satisfaction or discharge of the decree made in the suit. If the contention advanced on behalf of the appellants were to prevail in all cases where fraud is imputed to the decree-holder, the provisions of clause (3) of rule 2, Order XXI would become nugatory; in other words, the provisions of rule 2, would be superseded by the wider provisions of section 47. We are, therefore, unable, upon the clear provisions of statutory law, to give effect to the contention of the learned Vakil for the appellants.

As regards judicial decisions to which our attention has been drawn, Gadadhar Panda v. Shyam Churn Naik (1) does not, when analysed, support the contention of the appellants. No doubt, there are isolated expressions in that judgment which would support the view that it is competent to the Court to deal with a case under section 244 of the Code of 1882 when an allegation of fraud is made in relation to a case of payment or adjustment of a decree. But it is worthy of note that no question of limitation arose in that case. It cannot be held that the learned Judges intended to lay down that although the period of limitation within which an application by the judgment-debtor under clause (2) of rule 2 of Order XXI is to be presented to the Court has expired, it is still open to him to secure an investigation of the very same matter by application under section 47 of the Code of 1908. The only case which supports the contention of the appellants is the decision in Ramayyar v. Ramayyar (2). It is sufficient, however, to point out that a contrary view was taken by the learned Judges of the Madras High Court in Periatambi v. Vallaya (4) and the decision in Ramayyar v. Ramayyar (2) was expressly dissented from in Ganapathy v. Chenga (5). On the other hand, a series of decisions of this Court, amongst which may be mentioned Kamini Debi v. Aghore Nath Mookerjee (6); Nistarini Dasi v. Kazim Ali (7); Monmohan Karmkar v. Dwarkanath Karmakar (8) and Hiramony Biswas v. Musa Khan (9), show conclusively that the contention of the appellants ought not to prevail. The authorities on the subject were fully reviewed in the case of Monmohun Karmakar v. Dwarkanath Karmakar (8) where it was pointed out that in a case in which an application under clause (2) of rule 2 of Order XXI would be successfully met by the objection of limitation, the judgment-debtor was not entitled, under the colour of section 47 of Code of 1908, to obtain an investigation of the objection that the decree had been satisfied or adjusted out of Court. We adhere to the view taken in that case. We are also clearly of opinion that the decision in Trimbak Ram Krishna Ranade v. Hari Laxman Ranade (3)

(1) 12 C. W. N. 485.
(2) 21 M. 356.
(3) 34 B. 575; 12 Bom. L. R. 686; 7 Ind. Cas. 940.
(4) 21 M. 409.
(5) 29 M. 312.
(6) 11 C. L. J. 91; 14 C. W. N. 357; 4 Ind. Cas. 402.
(7) 12 C. L. J. 65; 7 Ind. Cas. 258.
(8) 12 C. L. J. 312; 7 Ind. Cas. 55.
(9) 7 Ind. Cas. 625.

BIROO GORAIN v. JAINURAT KOER.

is of no assistance to the appellants. We may further point out that even if it is established that the conduct of the decree-holder is fraudulent, the judgment-debtor is not entitled to obtain an exclusion of the time within which an application is to be made to the Court under clause (2) of rule 2 of Order XXI. Section 18 of the Limitation Act, which deals with the effect of fraud, is clearly of no avail to the appellants. That section provides that "when any person having a right to make an application has by means of fraud been kept from the knowledge of such right or of the title on which it is founded or where any document necessary to establish such right has been fraudulently concealed from him, the time limited for making an application against the person guilty of the fraud or accessory thereto * * * * * shall be computed from the time when the fraud first became known to the person injuriously affected thereby, or in the case of the concealed document, when he first had the means of producing it or compelling its production." It is not suggested on behalf of the appellants that they were kept by means of fraud from the knowledge of their right to make the application mentioned in clause (2) of rule 2 of Order XXI. Their grievance is that they have been kept by means of fraud from the exercise of their right to make this application. Consequently, if we were to accede to the contention of the appellants, we should have to substitute for the phrase "from the knowledge of such right." the phrase "from the exercise of such right." But, clearly, the knowledge of a right and the exercise thereof are fundamentally distinct things. We are, therefore, of opinion that, in so far as the first contention of the appellants is concerned it must fail, notwithstanding the earnest appeal which the learned Vakil for the appellants made to us that the view we propose to take might involve considerable hardship to innocent persons. But if the judgment-debtor, notwithstanding the express provision of clause 2, rule 2, Order XXI, still enters into an adjustment with the decree-holder out of Court and omits to take the necessary precaution of making an application within the time allowed by law, he has no just ground of complaint when the decree-holder takes advantage of his omission to seek the protection of the law. Further, it is not by any means clear that the judgment-debtor in a case of this description is really without any remedy, because it is well settled, as pointed out in the case of Poromanand Khasnabish v. Khepoo Paramanick (10), that it is open to the judgment-debtor who has been defrauded in this manner to institute a suit for damages for the fraud. It is also clear as laid down in Madhub v. Novodeep (11); Queen-Empress v. Bapuji Dayaran (12); Queen-Empress v. Mutthu Ramon (13) and Queen-Empress v. Pillala (14), that the decree-holder, who has recourse to such a fraudulent act, renders himself liable to proceedings under the Criminal Law. In the present case, therefore, even if the appellants were to fail in their contention, they would not be wholly without a remedy. The first contention of the appellants, therefore, fails.

In so far as the second contention is concerned, it raises the question whether the judgment-debtor has not in substance complied with the requirements of caluse (2), rule 2, Order XXI. The learned Vakil for the appellants has contended that the petition of objection presented to the Court below on the 25th of July 1910 may be treated as in continuation of the application made to this Court on the 5th of February 1909 in which the fact of the alleged adjustment was notified to the Court. In our opinion, this contention is well founded and must prevail. No doubt, an application under clause (2), rule 2, Order XXI, ought to be presented to the Court in which the decree is under execution; and it ought to call upon the Court to issue a notice to the decree-holder to show cause why the adjustment should not be recorded as certified. Tested from this point of view, the application of the 5th February 1909 might, at first sight, be deemed open to objection. But the circumstances of this case are of a very special character. No doubt, an application for execution of the decree of the Court below was pending before the Subordinate Judge, but the decree itself was under appeal to this Court; and the only decree which could ultimately be

(10) 10 C. 354.
(11) 16 C. 126.
(12) 10 B. 288.
(13) 4 M. 325.
(14) 9 M. 101.

enforced by the decree-holder against the judgment-debtor would be the decree of this Court, whether that decree be one of affirmance, reversal or modification. Consequently, when the judgment-debtors notified to this Court that the decree had been adjusted, it could not be said that they had not acted in accordance with law. No doubt, that application did not call upon the decree-holder to certify the alleged adjustment, but it was not necessary to take such a step at that stage. In fact, although the allegation of adjustment was made, it was not repudiated by the learned Vakil for the decree-holder respondent. On the other hand, the Vakil for the respondent gave up his costs not only in the rule but also in the appeal. The fact undoubtedly points to the conclusion that there must have been some arrangement between the parties. It is also inconceivable that if no arrangement had been entered into between the parties, the judgment-debtor after having paid Rs. 365 as Court-fees on the memorandum of appeal presented on the 8th of January 1909 should have voluntarily asked for leave to withdraw the appeal on the 5th of February 1909. It was only after the decree-holder had applied to the Court on the 6th June 1910 to execute the decree, ignoring the alleged adjustment, that it became necessary for the judgment-debtor to apply to the Court to compel the decree-holder to certify the adjustment in question. We, therefore, hold, under the circumstances of the case that, treating the application of the 5th February 1909 presented to this Court and the petition of objection presented to the Court below on the 25th July 1910 as parts of the same transaction, there was sufficient compliance with the provisions of the law. The Court is never astute to impose a technical bar so as to give effect to a scheme of fraud, and it would be lamentable if we were constrained to hold that the application of the 5th February 1909 in which the allegation of adjustment was made, was of no avail to the judgment-debtor for the purposes of proceeding under clause (2), rule 2, Order XXI. In our opinion, the Subordinate Judge ought to have entertained the objection taken in the application of the 25th July 1910 and investigated it on the merits. The second contention of the appellants must, therefore, prevail.

In so far as the third contention is concerned it is not necessary for us to determine whether it is well founded. But we must point out that the decree now under execution is a perfect specimen of the mode in which a decree ought never to be drawn up. The decree as it stands is unintelligible and cannot be executed without reference to the judgment, possibly also without reference to the pleadings. If the question arises later on as to whether, in the event of execution of the decree, the decree-holder is in any way fettered as to the manner in which she should proceed against the properties of the judgment-debtors, the question must be re-investigated by the lower Court with reference to all the proceedings in the suit. The question, therefore, will be left open for future investigation.

The result, therefore, is that this appeal is allowed, the order of the Sub-Judge set aside and the case remanded to him in order that the objections taken by the judgment-debtors in their application of the 25th July 1910 may be investigated as evidence.

Appeal allowed.

We must add that the Subordinate Judge took a very narrow view of his duties in this matter, when he held that as, upon the face of the pleadings the alleged adjustment purported to have been entered into between the judgment-debtors on the one hand and persons who are strangers to the proceedings, on the other, the adjustment could not be of any avail to the judgment-debtors. But the allegation of the judgment-debtors is that the adjustment was entered into for the benefit of the decree-holder with her husband and her father-in-law. If this be so, the Court will discover the real nature of the transaction, and not impose technical bars to effectuate a scheme of fraud; that is, in a matter of this description, the Court is bound to look to the substance and not to the mere form of the transactions placed before it.

The appellants are entitled to their costs in this Court. We assess the hearing fee at five gold mohurs.

BALMOKAND v. AYA SINGH.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.
CIVIL REVISION No. 3204 OF 1910.
November 19, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Robertson.
BALMOKAND AND OTHERS—CREDITORS—PETITIONERS
versus
AYA SINGH AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Insolvency Act (III of 1907), s. 37—Transfer to give preference—Mortgage in favour of a creditor discharging his debts—Debtor unable to pay his debts at the time—Annulment of transfer—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 53.

A debtor, who was clearly unable to pay his debts, executed a mortgage of what appeared to be his whole valuable assets in favour of some of his creditors by which their own debts were discharged, some of these debts being on account of hundis which had not then become due. A portion of the mortgage-money was to be paid in cash to the debtor before the Sub-Registrar. Within three months from the date of the alienation, the other creditors applied that the debtor be declared an insolvent. Eventually, the debtor was declared an insolvent on this application:

Held, that the transfer was made with a view to give preference to some creditors over the others and should be annulled under section 37 of the Insolvency Act.

The terms of section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act and the terms of section 37 of the Insolvency Act are not identical. There is this material difference that in the case of transfers to be set aside under the provisions of section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, actual fraud must be proved; whereas, under section 37 of the Insolvency Act, it is only necessary to show that the transfer has been made with a view to show preference to one creditor, to whom a debt may be validly due, over another creditor.

Petition, under section 47 of Act III of 1907, for revision of the order of the Divisional Judge, Rawalpindi Division, dated the 15th June 1910, confirming that of the District Judge, Rawalpindi, dated the 5th March 1910, adjudicating in the matter of the insolvency of the firm of Aya Singh and Sons, Rawalpindi, and annulling the mortgage executed by the insolvent in favour of Balmokand and others on 1st March 1909.

Mr. Pestonji Dadabhai, for the Petitioners.

Babu Sewa Ram Singh, Messrs. Nand Lal and Nanak Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This application for revision, for it is no more, has been argued at great length before me, but it will not be necessary to dispose of it in a long judgment.

As regards the first point, whether or not the District Judge was right in declaring the debtors' firm to be insolvent, there is no doubt whatever. Harnam Singh's own statement is clear, and in Balmokand petitioner's own evidence ample reason for such an order was shown. It is not now seriously contended that that part of the order was wrong, and I accordingly hold that the firm of Aya Singh and Sons was correctly declared insolvent.

As regards the second point whether the mortgage executed by the debtors in favour of Balmokand and other petitioners should be declared to be valid, the case requires a little further consideration. It appears that on 1st March 1909 a mortgage-deed was executed by Aya Singh and Harnam Singh for Rs. 13,000 in favour of three persons, Balmokand, Ram Narain and Gokal Chand, the present petitioners. The debts due from the mortgagor to Balmokand and Ram Narain and to Fakir Chand, a relation of theirs, were paid off by this mortgage-deed and the balance in cash, a sum of Rs. 5,600, was to be paid before the Sub-Registrar on registration. It is to be noted that some of the debts to Balmokand and others discharged by this deed were on account of hundis, the payment of which was not yet due, the property mortgaged constituting the whole immoveable property and practically the whole of the valuable assets of the debtors. Immediately on hearing of this, a petition was presented by certain creditors of Aya Singh and Harnam Singh on the 4th May 1909, i.e., within three months of the alienation, upon which an order declaring the debtors to be insolvent was finally passed by the District Judge on the 5th March 1910. In that order the matter of this alienation by mortgage was dealt with in the following words:—

"There can be no doubt as to the insolvency of the firm of Aya Singh and Sons or that Aya Singh having mortgaged the greater part of his immoveable property in favour of some of his creditors has absconded. He has, therefore, given undue preference to some of his creditors and has under section 4 (c) committed an act of insolvency. For the reasons given I order that the firm of Aya Singh be declared insolvent, and under section 37 of the Act that the mortgage deed dated the 1st March 1909 be deemed fraudulent and void and that it is hereby annulled, the petition having been presented within three months of the said date, i. e., on the 2nd May 1909".

The main contention in argument before me has been that, admitting that the order declaring the debtors to be insolvent may have been correct, the order annulling the mortgage was not so inasmuch as the mortgage was a bona fide transaction intended to benefit the creditors. The section of the Act which deals with this point runs as follows:—

"(1) Every transfer of property or of any interest therein, every payment made, every obligation incurred, and every judicial proceeding taken or suffered by any person unable to pay his debts as they become due from his own money in favour of any creditor with a view of giving that creditor a preference over the other creditors, shall, if such person is adjudged insolvent on a petition presented within three months after the date thereof, be deemed fraudulent and void as against the receiver and shall be annulled by the Court.

"(2) This section shall not affect the rights of any person who in good faith and for valuable consideration has acquired a title through or under a creditor of the insolvent."

It is argued that this mortgage was not executed with a view to give certain creditors a preference over the other creditors within the terms of that section. It is difficult, of course, to see into the mind of an alienor and we are only competent to judge by his actions. It is argued that a specific issue should have been framed in respect of this mortgage and opportunity given to the mortgagees to produce evidence on the subject."

We will deal with this point first.

It appears that on the 15th July a general issue regarding the insolvency of the debtors was drawn up but no specific issue as regards this mortgage. Balmokand was, however, present, and on that day he was instructed to produce evidence on the 27th July. On the 27th July no evidence was produced nor at any subsequent stage nor does any application appear to have been made to the Court for the production of evidence. It is, however, contended that the whole attention of the Court and the parties was concentrated on the necessity of producing Aya Singh who had absconded and never appeared. There were two changes of Officers during the progress of the case. On the 5th March 1910, the case came before Captain Frizelle. On that occasion Harnam Singh was present and was examined and it would have been open to the petitioners to have subjected him to any cross-examination which they considered necessary and desirable. On that occasion Balmokand was represented by Counsel and the first Court records that he admitted the execution of the mortgage-deed dated the 1st March 1909 in favour of his client but claimed that it should be secured. There is nothing to show that he desired to produce any evidence on the point nor is it very easy to see what evidence he could produce. The facts are patent on the record. Nor does he allege in his grounds of appeal to the learned Divisional Judge that any specific application was made for an opportunity to call evidence or any application made to frame a specific issue as to the validity of the mortgage-deed. The circumstances, therefore, appear to be these:—

Aya Singh and Harnam Singh were clearly unable to pay their debts. They executed a mortgage-deed of what appears their whole valuable assets in favour of Balmokand and other petitioners by which their own debts were discharged, some of these debts being on account of hundis which had not then even become due. It is urged that the balance was to have been used for the liquidation of the debts of other creditors, but it was not necessary to effect any such alienation as this, in order to divide the purchase-money among the creditors. The authorities quoted in favour of Mr. Pestonji's contention in support of the validity of this alienation in all cases deal with transfers in which section 53 of Transfer of Property Act is concerned. The terms of section 53 of Transfer of Property Act and the terms of section 37 of the Insolvency Act are not identical; there is this material difference that in the case of transfers to be set aside under the provisions of section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act actual fraud must be proved, whereas under section 37 of the Insolvency Act it is only necessary to show that the transfer has been made with a view to show preference to one creditor to whom a debt may be validly due over another creditor. This is a marked distinction between the cases and it appears to me that the circumstances under which this alienation was made make it perfectly clear that it was made with a view to give preference to one creditor over another and that the order annulling it under section 37 was perfectly correct.

I accordingly reject the petition with costs throughout.

Appeal rejected.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 1713 AND 1714 OF 1909.

August 7, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

SITAL PROSAD—APPELLANT

versus

BAJRANGI SAHAI—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 2, O. XXII, r. 5—Legal representative, determination of question as to decree—Appeal—Death of party before new Civil Procedure Code—Order after new Civil Procedure Code—Application of new Code.

An order under rule 5 of Order XXII of the Code of 1908 determining the question as to who is the legal representative of a deceased party, is not a decree and is not appealable under the new Code, though it was appealable under the old Code.

Where the party died in 1908 but the order was passed in 1909 under Order XXII, rule 5: Held, that, the order must be treated as one under the new Code and it is not appealable.

Appeals from the order of the District Judge of Darbhanga, dated June 2nd, 1909, affirming that of the Sub-Judge of that place, dated May 4th, 1909.

Babus Jogesh Chundra Roy and Suredra Nath Ghoshal, for the Appellant.

Babu Karunamoy Bose, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

SECOND APPEAL NO. 1713 OF 1909.

The only question of law which calls for decision in this appeal is, whether an order under rule 5 of Order XXII of the Code of 1908 is liable to be questioned on appeal as if it were a decree. Seven persons as plaintiffs commenced a suit against eight persons as defendants for a declaration that they were the reversionary heirs of one Phekulal and that certain alienations made by the widow of Phekulal were unauthorised and did not bind the estate in their hands. During the pendency of the suit in the Court of first instance, the first plaintiff Sheo Sahai died. Thereupon, on 21st September 1908, the other plaintiffs applied to have it noted that they were the representatives-in-interest of the deceased. On the 20th February 1909, the appellant before us, Sital Prosad, made an application to have it recorded that he, as the son of the daughter of Sheo Sahai, was entitled to carry on the suit. The result was that a question arose between Sital Prosad and the other plaintiffs as rival claimants to the interests originally vested in Sheo Sahai. The Subordinate Judge on the 4th May 1909 held that Sital Prosad had failed to satisfy him that he was the representative-in-interest of Sheo Sahai, and accordingly dismissed his application. Sital Prosad then appealed to the District Judge. Objection was taken at once that the appeal was incompetent and this objection prevailed. Sital Prosad has now appealed to this Court and on his behalf it has been contended that the order in question must be taken to have been made by the Subordinate Judge under the Code of 1882 and that consequently the appeal to the District Judge was competent. In the alternative it has been argued that the order was in the nature of a decree and that consequently a first appeal and a second appeal are both competent. In our opinion there is no foundation for either of these contentions. It will be observed that although Sheo Sahai died in 1908 before the new Code of Civil Procedure came into force, the application by the other plaintiffs for substitution was made on the 21st September 1908 while the application by Sital Prosad was made on the 20th February 1909. They were, however, both considered and disposed of under the new Code and the order of the 4th May 1909 must be treated as an order under rule 5 of Order XXII of the Code of 1908. Now, it has not been disputed that, although an appeal was allowed against an order under section 367 of the Code of 1882 by clause (18) of section 588, an order under rule 5 of Order XXII, is not appealable as an order under Order XLIII. But it has been argued that the order is in the nature of a decree. A reference to section (2) of the Code, however shows that there is no foundation for this contention. The term "decree" as defined in that section means the formal expression of an adjudication which so far as regards the Court expressing it, conclusively determines the right of the parties with regard to all or any of the matters in controversy in the suit. The matter in controversy in the suit is the validity of the alienation made by the widow of Phekulal. Whether Sital Prosad or any of the other plaintiffs is the legal representative of the first plaintiff, Sheo Sahai, is obviously not a question in controversy in the suit. Consequently, it cannot be suggested that an order under rule 5 is in the nature of a decree. In fact, it is plain that an order under rule 5 really embodies a summary investigation in so far as the contesting claimants are concerned. It is not intended that such determination should have any operation beyond the scope of the suit itself; the rights of the conflicting claimants must, if necessary, be determined in a separate suit properly framed for that purpose.

The result is that this appeal is dismissed with costs.

It is conceded that this judgment will govern the other appeal (Second Appeal No. 1714 of 1909) which is also dismissed with costs.

Appeals dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 444 TO 456 OF 1910.

September 20, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Phillips.

P. B. VEDACHELLA MUDALIAR AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS

versus

VIJAYARAGHAVACHARIAR AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), s. 77 and Sch. 8—"Arrear" whether includes interest—Suit for interest on rent due—Jurisdiction of Revenue Courts.

The word "arrear" in section 77 and the corresponding provision in Schedule A of the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), includes interest due and payable on arrears of rent.

Revenue Courts have jurisdiction to entertain suits for interest due on arrears of rent.

Second appeals against the decrees of the District Court of Chingleput, in A.S. Nos. 368, 370, 360, 362, 367, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376 to 379 of 1909, respectively, against the decision of the Sub-Collector of Chingleput in Summary Suits Nos. 132, 134, 17, 25, 48, 145, 14, 16, 24, 36, 42, 46 and 131 of 1909.

Mr. R. Subramamania Aiyar, for the Appellants.

Mr. C. V. Ananthakrishna Aiyar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the Sub-Collector and the District Judge concurred in holding that a suit for interest on arrears of rent is not cognisable by the Revenue Courts under the provisions of Madras Act I of 1908. The definitions of rent and of arrears in the Act no doubt, prima facie, support that view, rent being defined in section 3 as "whatever is lawfully payable in money or in kind or in both to a landholder for the use or occupation of land in his estate for the purpose of agriculture" and arrear being defined in section 60 as "an instalment of rent not paid on the day on which it falls due." Section 61 then enacts that "an arrear shall bear simple interest at the rate of one half per centum per mensem from the date on which the arrear fell due until it is liquidated." Section 77 (clause 1) lays down that at any time after an arrear of rent has become due the landholder may institute a suit before the Collector for the recovery of the arrear. It does not say of a suit for "arrear and interest" though sections 60 and 61 taken together would, prima facie, tend to show that the word "arrear" does not of itself include interest. Clause 2 of section 77, in stating what other remedy is open to the landholder for the realisation of arrears, says that he may distrain the moveable property of the ryot. It is clear from section 78 that the landholder is entitled to distrain unless both the arrear and interest which it says he is entitled to include in his demand are paid. This is made clearer by section 127 which refers to the sale of the immoveable property for arrears of rent and interest. On going carefully through the sections of the Act, we cannot but come to the conclusion that the word "arrear" was intended to include also the interest due on it (See sections 78 (2) (a), 87, 112 and 122). We can see no reason for supposing that the Legislature intended to give jurisdiction to the Revenue Courts exclusively to try suits for arrears of rent and to exclude from their jurisdiction claims to interest and arrears. Prima facie, Revenue Courts were regarded as best fitted to try claims for rent between landholders and ryots. Although the language of the sections is by no means as clear as might be desired, we are satisfied that the intention clearly was to include interest in the expression "arrear" in section 77 and in the corresponding provision in Schedule A. The decrees of the lower Courts must, therefore, be reversed and the suit remanded to the Sub-Collector for disposal on the merits. Each party will bear his own costs throughout upto date.

SAHIB v. USMAN.

Second Appeals Nos. 445 and 456 of 1910 follow.

SECOND APPEALS NOS. 446 TO 455 OF 1910.

For the reasons given in our judgment in Second Appeal No. 444 of 1910, the decrees of the lower Courts in so far as they disallow interest on the arrears of rent claimed up to the date of plaint will be set aside. The decrees will be confirmed in other respects. The suits must be remanded to the Sub-Collector in so far as the claim for interest up to the date of plaint is concerned, for disposal according to law. No order about costs in this Court.

Decree modified.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL NO. 444 OF 1910.

November 27, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis.

Musammat SAHIB—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

USMAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Succession—Biloch Khosas of Sanghar Tahsil, District Dera Ghazi Khan—Collaterals of 6th degree whether exclude a daughter—Burden of proof.

The Riwaj-i-am of a village provided as follows:—"No limit has been observed in the past as to the degree of relationship, but the 3rd degree has now been fixed in consultation as the limit up to which collaterals can exclude a daughter:

Held, that such an arbitrary rule can have no weight.

Civil Appeal No. 76 of 1896, followed.

Where among Biloch Khosas of Tahsil Sanghar, District Dera Ghazi Knan, the contest was between the daughter of a late owner and his collaterals in the 6th degree, and the daughter admitted that collaterals up to the 3rd degree only could exclude her: Held, that it was for the daughter to prove that collaterals of the 6th degree did not exclude her.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Multan Division, dated the 17th November 1909, affirming that of the Munsif, 1st class, Dera Ghazi Khan, dated the 14th September 1909, decreeing plaintiffs' claim.

Mr. Nand Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Raushan Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The parties are Biloch Khosas of the Sanghar Tahsil of the Dera Ghazi Khan District. The contest is between the daughter of the late owner and the collaterals in the 6th degree. The lower Courts have decided in favour of the collaterals and the daughter appeals to this Court.

The collaterals rely on ordinary custom. The daughter relies on an alleged custom whereby collaterals up to the 3rd degree and no further exclude a daughter.

Reliance is placed on the Riwaj-i-am of 1872-73 in support of the daughter's contention, but though the rule is here laid down as stated by her it is not worded as an existing custom, but frankly owns that no limit has been observed in the past as to the degree of relationship, and that the 3rd degree has now been fixed in consultation as the limit up to which collaterals can exclude a daughter. Such an arbitrary rule can have no weight, as has been laid down in Civil Appeal No. 76 of 1896, which is a similar case though not relating to Khosas.

And the Riwaj i am of the later Settlement lays down that a daughter gets no share, except that she can get a share up to that allowed by Muhammadan Law if her father has left it her in writing. Counsel for appellant quotes a ruling dated 20th December 1893 of an Honorary Civil Judge holding powers of a 2nd grade Munsif; there was no appeal in this case and I cannot take it as binding on me, nor can I consider a single judgment of this sort as sufficient to prove a custom.

As to the instances cited by the witnesses, Counsel calls my attention to one cited by Ghulam Hussain but as it relates only to a case of one daughter succeeding to the whole property to the exclusion of the other daughters I fail to see what use it is. Other instances Counsel admits are not in point.

It is for the daughter, having admitted that collaterals exclude a daughter, to prove that only collaterals, up to the 3rd degree can so exclude and this she has failed to do.

Then it is alleged that she succeeds by gift. The deed of gift has been excluded by the lower Courts for want of registration

SHADI KHAN v. BEEBEE UMDAN BEGAM.

Counsel relies on Imam Bakhsh v. Karim Shah (1) but here the deed is a simple deed of gift to take effect at once, so the ruling cited is inapplicable. Counsel then argues that the daughter held possession even prior to the writing of the deed, which was merely the record of an already accomplished fact. The deed, however, does not say this, and the plea seems to me a new one. Even if ground No. 6 of appeal to the Divisional Judge meant to plead this, the plea was apparently never raised in the first Court; had it been raised, an issue could have been framed and the matter inquired into. I think the Courts have rightly held the deed to be inadmissible in evidence. I uphold the decree of the lower Courts and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 16 P. R. 1895.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 756 OF 1909.

November 24, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Johnstone and Mr. Justice Shah Din.

SHADI KHAN—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat BEEBEE UMDAN BEGAM—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Muhammadan Law—Dower—No dower named at marriage—Excessive amount named in earnest—Excessive amount named for "show"—"Proper dower," tests for determining—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 5—Pauper appeal barred technically—"Sufficient cause", for extending time.

Where no dower is proved to have been named at marriage, "proper dower" according to Muhammadan Law should be allowed.

Where a dower, excessive in respect of the means of the husband, was promised in earnest, it cannot be reduced in the absence of custom allowing reduction.

Where an excessive dower was promised but only for "show", "proper dower" should be allowed, and in estimating the amount of such dower the status of the husband should be taken into account.

Obiter—"Proper dower" varies according to social position of the woman's family, the wealth of her husband, her own personal qualifications, the circumstances of the time and the conditions of society surrounding her.

Against a decree dated 18th May 1908, the defendant applied to the Chief Court on 16th June 1908 for leave to appeal as a pauper. An inquiry as to his financial condition having been ordered on 24th February 1909, the District Judge reported that he was a pauper. After that his father died leaving property which he inherited. Upon this the Chief Court held that he was not a pauper and in compliance with the Court's order he paid the necessary Court-fee on 21st June 1909:

Held, that under the circumstances, the appellant was entitled to the benefit of section 5 of the Limitation Act.

Intzam Begam v. Waziran, 47 P. R. 1899; Durga Charan v. Dookhi Ram, 26 C. 925, followed.

Second appeal from the order of the District Judge, Ferozepore, dated 18th May 1908, decreeing plaintiff's claim in part.

Shaikh Taj-ud-Din, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.

JOHNSTONE, J.—We have postponed consideration of our judgment in this case for a week because respondent, though served, did not appear and Counsel for appellant intimated that he had not heard from his client, these circumstances raising a suspicion that the case had been settled out of Court. We have now ascertained from respondent who appeared in person, that no compromise had taken place and we, therefore, proceed to judgment

The first point for decision is, whether the appeal is or is not barred by time. The lower Court's decree bears date 18th May 1908. On 15th June 1908 defendant-appellant applied for leave to appeal as a pauper. Inquiry into his financial condition was ordered and on 24th February 1909, the District Judge reported him a pauper. After that, however, his father died leaving property which he inherited and this Court then held that he was not a pauper. On 21st June 1909, obeying this Court's order, he paid the necessary Court-fee, Rs. 125. We have been referred to Intizam Begam v. Waziran (1), Durga Charan v. Dookhi Ram (2). The latter case being very similar to the present in its facts in this connection and it seems to us impossible to dismiss the appeal as time-barred. Technically, it may be time-barred, but it seems clear to us that the case is eminently one in which section 5, Limitation Act, should be invoked. Appellant was really a pauper until his father died and after that he carried out the order of this Court to the letter. We hold, therefore, that the appeal is within time.

The claim was against a husband for "prompt dower." It is said that Rs. 30,000 was claimable as such but that on account of poverty plaintiff would content herself with asking for Rs. 10,000. Plaintiff impleaded

(1) 47 P. R. 1899.

(2) 26 C. 925.

SHADI KHAN v. BEEBEE UMDAN BEGAM.

her father-in-law as well as her husband, The former according to plaintiff having stood as surety. The promise to pay Rs. 30,000 prompt dower was admittedly oral. Father and son put in a joint written statement in which they urged that it was never intended that such a promise as that of Rs. 60,000 as dower should be enforced, sums of that sort being stated among Pathans merely for purposes of ostentation, that in this case dower was fixed "according to Muhammadan custom"; that dower should only be allowed "according to the position of the parties", that defendants are poor and so forth, and that the suit should be dismissed with costs.

Issues were drawn up thus,—

(1) Was plaintiff's prompt dower on her marriage fixed at Rs. 30,000?

(2) Did defendant make a verbal contract with plaintiff for payment of this dower?

(3) Did defendant No. 2 contract with plaintiff to be surety for payment of such dower by defendant?

(4) If plaintiff succeeds in her claim for dower is defendant No. 2 jointly liable with defendant No. 1, therefore, (whatever its amount) by reason of their being joint owners of property?

(5) If plaintiff is entitled to dower from defendant No. 1, what is the proper amount of it?

The onus was laid on plaintiff in respect of the first four issues and "on the parties" in respect of the fifth.

The last issue was—

(6) Is plaintiff in possession of any property taken from either or both defendants which should be set off as part of that amount? Onus on defendant.

The District Judge finally decreed Rs. 2,000 against defendant No. 1 alone with costs. Defendant No. 2 having died, we need not go into the question of his liability at all. The reasoning of the District Judge may be briefly summarised thus:—

The engagement to pay Rs. 60,000 was entered into but only "for show" and is not enforceable. Defendants have failed in their attempt to prove that Rs. 53 was all that was promised. In the early part of the case defendants never thought of alleging that a small sum like this had actually been promised. Defendants tried to compromise the claim by offering Rs. 1,750 and this fact should be used in estimating what is a reasonable sum to award.

Defendant No. 1's eldest brother actually paid Rs. 2,000 as prompt dower to his bride. The circumstances to be taken into account are "the social position and wealth of the parties, the custom prevailing in their families and the status of the bride." The bridegroom belongs to a well-to-do family, but the bride does not. Therefore, Rs. 2,000 is a fair amount.

The appeal is based on the contentions that the Court below erred in estimating the "proper dower", and that the amount alleged being found a mere sham, Rs. 13·4, the minimum sharai "prompt dower" should have been decreed. There having been no appearance for the plaintiff-respondent and, therefore, no arguments on her behalf, we must take it that she simply supports the view of the Court below.

The first question then is, what was actually mentioned at the marriage as the dower to be paid? Lower Court says Rs. 60,000. Defendants said in their pleadings that dower was promised "according to Muhammadan custom" and they attempted to prove by evidence that Rs. 53 was named. In my opinion the lower Court is right in holding that this attempt was a complete failure and on the other side we have plaintiff's witnesses Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6 who swear that Rs. 60,000 was named. Whether this was named in earnest or not, I am convinced it was named and I would hold accordingly.

The next question is, whether the parties intended this large sum should be paid, a question to be answered in the light of surrounding circumstances. As defendant promised the sum, it is for him to show the promise was known by the opposite party to have been a mere sham. There is no direct evidence that this was so, and the indirect indications in the file are these. First, in a suit filed in the same year in which this marriage took place (1902), between Pathans of the adjoining District of Ferozepore, it was held that a dower of Rs 60,000 had been promised probably in earnest and the contract was enforced—See page 2, paper-book. The only essential difference between that case and this is that there the husband was a wealthy man, while here he is said to be "not wealthy" but merely well-to-do. Secondly, plaintiff's witness No. 2 says Rs. 60,000 is customary "amongst us Pathans" and adds that at the wedding Rs. 1,000 or 1,100 worth of jewels and clothes were given. This implies no inconsiderable opulence in the husband and is recognition that the bride was a woman of some importance. Thirdly, plaintiff's witnesses, Nos. 3, 5, 6 and 7 all corroborate this account of marriage gifts to plaintiff. What witness No. 3 gave his own wife who was of an unknown tribe, not Pathan, is neither here nor there. Fourthly, plaintiff's witness No. 5 says defendants were worth Rs. 20,000 or Rs. 25,000 and plaintiff's father Rs. 8,000 or Rs. 9,000. Fifthly, witness No. 3 says defendant-appellant was first married to his daughter and promised her Rs. 60,000 as dower, but, when she was dying, got her to remit it. If this is true, defendant-appellant did not consider the promise a mere sham; and I see no good reason to doubt the statement. What plaintiff's witness No. 6 actually paid as dower to his wife is immaterial as we do not know she was one of plaintiff's female relatives.

SHADI KHAN v. BEEBEE UMDAN BEGAM.

Turning to defendant's evidence, the first witness does not help. What his sister got as dower proves nothing. A similar remark applies to the fourth witness and the dowers of his wives and to defendant No. 2 examined as a witness page 24, as regards the dowers of his wife and defendant No. 1's second wife, neither being stated to be a female relative of plaintiff.

My conclusion from the above is that defendant No. 1 has not proved that the promise to pay Rs. 60,000 was a mere sham in the proper sense of the phrase. The District Judge has, however, found that this sum was named "simply for show," and I am, therefore, perhaps precluded, in the absence of argument by plaintiff against the District Judge's finding, from holding the opposite; but I consider that I am not precluded from holding, on the above evidence, that the parties though they may have recognised that Rs. 60,000 was an excessive amount did not have in their minds any idea that plaintiff, as the price for surrendering her person to defendant No. 1, was valued at a nominal sum like Rs. 53. The third question is what is the "proper dower" in the present case on the hypothesis that Rs. 53 was not named and that Rs. 60,000 was named only for show. In connection with this I have consulted several text-books on Muhammadan Law and all the rulings I have been able to find bearing directly or indirectly on the question. These rulings I have noted below*.

The gift of Shah Nazam-ud-din Ahamad v. Bibi Husaini (3) that, if dower is to be estimated, the amount should be based on what it is customary for the wife's family to receive and not for the husband's family to give, though the means and position of the husband must not be wholly excluded from consideration.

In Sugra Bibi v. Masuma Bibi (4) the Judges refused to reduce the dower actually promised, even though payment might swallow up the whole estate.

In Ahmad Hoosein v. Khadjia (5) it seems to have been recognised that dower might have to be estimated.

In Mulakh Do Alum Nawab Tajdar v. Mirza Jehan Kudr (6) the Privy Council pointed out that under the Punjab Civil Code, held to be in force at the time in Oudh, the Courts could reduce dower to a reasonable figure.

But in Suleman Kadr v. Mehdi Begum (7) the same authority ruled, apart from the Punjab Code, that Courts in Oudh could not reduce dower below what was actually promised.

In Ladoo v. Mahumdee (8) it was ruled that a Court need not award full amount mentioned at marriage but could award a reasonable sum in accordance with the husband's position and the facts of the case.

In Sahibzadi Begam v. Said-ul-Nisa Begam (9) half a lakh had been claimed. Two principles were laid down, first, the Court cannot reduce to a "reasonable" figure a sum proved to have been promised, except on proof of custom allowing such reduction; secondly, but if

(3) 4 W. R. 110.
(5) 2 A. 573.
(5) 10 W. R. 369.
(6) 10 M. I. A. 252; 2 W. R. (P. C.) 55.
(7) 21 C. 135; 20 I. A. 144.
(8) 49 P. R. 1867.
(9) 123 P. R. 1880.

Shah Nazam-ud-din Ahmad v. Bibi Hussaini, 4 W. R. 110; Sugra Bibi v. Masuma Bibi, 2 A. 573: Ahmad Hoosein v. Khadija, 10 W. R. 369; Mulkah Do Alum Nawab Tajdar v. Mirza Jehan Kudr, 10 M. I. A. 252; 2 W. R. (P. C.) 55; Suleman Kadr v. Mehdi Begam, 21 C. 135; 20 I. A. 144; Ladoo v. Mahumdee, 49 P. R. 1867; Sahibzadi Begam v. Said-ul-nissa Begam, 123 P. R. 1880; Muhammad Wazir Beg v. Fatima Begum, 7 P. R. 1881; C. A. No. 980 of 1894, (Chief Court Punjab.)

Court finds the sum promised was merely nominal, the woman should get the "proper dower" under Muhammadan Law.

In Muhammad Wazir Beg v. Fatiman Begum (10) the facts were peculiar. Rupees 7,000 was found to have been promised and not to have been unreasonable at the date of the promise. Much less was claimed and still less awarded by the Court below and accepted by plaintiff.

Lastly, in the unpublished ruling C. A. No. 980 of 1894 of this Court, it was laid down that, where no dower was found to have been fixed at marriage, no reduction from an "unreasonable" to a "reasonable" sum was possible, and so Rs. 26-8 was awarded. It is pointed out that according to the evidence in that case the custom among the Pathans of Kasur, to which tribe the parties in the present case also belong, the custom was not to reduce large dowers but to pay nothing at all. It cannot be said that in the present case any such custom has been established.

It seems to me that the apparent conflict between the authorities is of a superficial kind, if we leave out the Chief Court case of 1837, as we can safely do in view of the two later rulings. There are three possible cases:—

(a) where no dower is proved to have been named at marriage;

(b) where a dower, excessive in respect of the means of the husband, was promised in earnest;

(c) where an excessive dower was promised but only for show.

As regards (a) we can, for the purposes of the present case, rule out C. A. No. 980 of 1894 because there a special custom that nothing is paid was found established; and we are left with Shah Nazam-ud-din Ahamad v. Bibi Husaini (3) which in effect lays it down that "proper dower" according to Muhammadan Law should be allowed.

As to (b) we have Sugra Bibi v. Masuma Bibi (4) and Suleman Kadr v. Mehdi Begum (7) forbidding reduction of dower promised in earnest. The Privy Council ruling in Mulkah Do Alum Nawab Taidar v. Mirza Jehan Kudr (6) need not be taken into account as it is based on the Punjab Civil Code. Sahibzadi Begam v. Said-ul-Nisa Begam (9) lays it down that reduction is inadmissible in the absence of custom allowing reduction; and Muhammed Wazir Beg v. Fatima Begam (10), as shown above, is not in point and is not in conflict with the Allahabad or Calcutta case.

As to (c) we have really on the second principle laid down in Sahibzadi Begam v. Said-ul-Nisa Begam (9) that in such cases "proper dower" should be allowed.

I have gone into this detail because I think an attempt should be made to classify and so to show clearly the principles on which Courts in this Province should act. The present case comes under class (c); and we must allow "proper dower", if it can be ascertained, and in default sharai dower, which is quite a different thing and may be taken as Rs. 26-8-0.

As regards the manner of estimating "proper dower," we have the aforesaid dictum in Shah Nazam-ud-din Ahmad v. Bibi Husaini (3); at first sight there seems to be a conflict between this dictum and the rules laid down in certain commentaries on Muhammadan Law, but I am of opinion that the conflict is only apparent. In effect, I take the Weekly Reporter ruling to mean that the husband's status is to be taken into account. Thus, though in Mulla's Principles of Muhammadan Law (1905) page 155, it stated that the "proper dower" for a woman is the average dower given to her father's female relatives, this a bald statement and evidently incomplete. Bailie's Digest of Imamiea Law, p. 71, gives as the criteria nobility of the woman, beauty of her person and custom of her female relatives. Nothing is said one way or the other as to husband's status, and the rule laid down, as we shall presently see, is clearly imperfect. Next, in his Digest of Anglo Muhammadan Law, 3rd Edition, page 120, Sir Roland Wilson says it is "doubtful" whether the husband's means should be taken into account at all. But when we turn to the other and more detailed commentaries we see that the husband's status cannot be left out of consideration.

In Boyle's Manual of Law relating to Muhammadans (1873), page 61, there is a hint that it is not right only to take into account the dowers given to females of the woman's father's family, for it is said that those dowers should be taken into account when those females are on a footing of equality with her. In B. N. Baillie's Digest, page 95, while it is said that the dowers of her father's female relatives but not of her mother are to be taken into account, yet, when comparison is made between her and for instance her sister, the sister's husband's status as compared with her husband's status must be considered. Turning to an authority probably greater than any of these, Amir Ali's Muhammadan Law, 3rd Edition, Volume II, page 476, the learned author notes that Radd-ul-Muhtar allows consideration of the mother's position, and that both Radd ul Muhtar and the Fatawa-i-Alamgiri lay it down that, in comparing a woman to her sister or other relatives, the latter's husband must be of similar standing to her husband; and, therefore, page 477, "proper dower" varies according to "social position of the woman's family, the wealth of her husband, her own personal qualifications, the circumstances of the time and the conditions of society surrounding her." Finally, Abdur Rahman in his Institutes of Musalman Law (1907), Article 77, includes "the condition of the husband" as one of the tests of "proper dower."

(10) 7 P. R. 1881.

Basing my opinion on these authoritise, I would overrule the contention of defendant's Pleader that in estimating "proper dower" the husband's status is not to be taken into account.

There is no evidence as to actual dowers paid in plaintiff's father's family to females of that family. Neither party has been able to give any instances, and we are left to the other indications detailed in the account of the evidence of the parties given earlier in this judgment and to the circumstance that defendant's father, late defendant No. 2, tried to compromise the case by offering some 7½ ghumaos of land or Rs. 1,700 cash in lieu of dower—See P. W. 4 and the judgment of the Court below. Taking all this into account, it seems to me that plaintiff has shifted to the shoulders of defendant the onus of showing that Rs. 2,000 is more than the "proper dower", and this onus is undischarged.

For these reasons I would dismiss the appeal with costs.

SHAH DIN, J.—I agree generally in the foregoing judgment and in dismissing the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 972 OF 1910.

November 28, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Robertson.

FATEH DIN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

ALLAHA DITTA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Alienation—Vergal or Bargal Jats of Jhelum District—Will by a sonless Vargal.

A Bargal sonless Muhammadan Jat of the Jhelum District cannot validly bequeath his property by Will to his daughter's sons in presence of agnate collaterals.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Jhelum Division, dated the 6th June 1910, affirming that of the Munsif, 1st class, Jhelum, dated the 9th March 1910, decreeing plaintiff's claim.

Mr. Nand Lal, for the Appellants.

Bakhshi Gokal Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The parties are Vargal of Bargal Jats of the Jhelum District.

The question for decision here is simply, can a Bargal sonless proprietor validly bequeath his property by Will to his daughter's sons in presence of agnate collaterals?

Now, it appears that the deceased Atar made several previous attempts to alienate this land in favour of his daughter's sons and there is no question of his desire and intention to bequeath the land to him. He endeavoured to do so first by means of an alleged adoption. The parties are Musalman Jats and it was held that amongst this tribe such an adoption is not valid. Then he endeavoured to alienate part of this land by sale to his daughter's sons Feroze, etc. That alienation was contested by the same reversioners who are plaintiffs in this case and it was then decided inter partes that Atar had no power to alienate his property even by sale with possession in presence of the collaterals. It is now sought to establish in a suit in which some, at any rate, of the parties are the same that although it has been decided that Atar had no power to alienate by adoption and further he had no power to alienate by sale, he has the power to bequeath his land by Will.

None of the instances produced of alienation by Will are cases which have occurred amongst this actual tribe of Vargal Jats except one which is of too recent a date to form a precedent. Some of the other cases are cases occurring amongst other gots of Jats and these cannot be excluded from consideration as Jats of the Jhelum District probably follow practically identical custom, though they could not be held of the same value in cases of the same got. The answer of the Jats recorded at pape 54 of Talbot's Customary Law of Jhelum District is vague and unsatisfactory. In the ordinary course of events the right of alienation by Will follows upon the creation of the right to alienate inter vivos, but it is impossible to hold in this case that it can be said to exist in this tribe. It is, however, very significant that it has been decided in a suit in which some of the parties were indentical with those in this suit, (in which the broad issue of the power of Atar to alienate was drawn) that he had no power to alienate in any way in the presence of his collaterals without proving necessity. I prefer to base my judgment, that of a single Judge, largely upon this precedent and the actual evidence on the record rather than upon any broad consideration of the question of custom of the Vargal jats.

I accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITIONS NOS. 741 TO 743 OF 1910.

November 16, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim.

RAMANATHAN CHETTIAR AND ANOTHER —PETITIONERS

versus

SOKKANATHA GOUNDEN AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 232-- Oral assignment of decree—Whether application in accordance with law—Step-in-aid of execution—Limitation.

The effect of section 232, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, is that no application for execution based on an oral assignment of the decree, can be entertained at all by Courts. Such an application is not one in accordance with law, nor is it a step-in-aid of execution. The assignee of a decree under an oral assignment has no locus standi at all to apply for execution.

Parvati v. Digambar, 15 B. 307, followed,

Hafizudin Chowdhuri v. Abdul Aziz, 20 C. 755, not approved.

Brojonath v. Iswar Chundra Dutt, 19 C. 482 and Mangal Khan v. Salimulla Khan, 16 A. 26, distinguished.

Where an application by a verbal assignee for execution of the decree has been dismissed it will not have the effect of enlarging the time even if written assignment is subsequently obtained after the expiry of limitation.

Petitions, under section 25 of Act IX of 1887, praying the High Court to revise the orders of the District Munsif of Erode, dated 6th August 1910, in E. P. Nos. 4311, 4312 and 4313 of 1907 respectively in S. C. S. Nos. 3121, 3128 and 3135 of 1902 respectively.

Mr. T. M. Krishnaswamy Aiyar, for the Petitioners.

Mr. S. S. Vencatramana Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

IN C. R. P. No. 741 OF 1910.

The question of law involved in this case is, whether an application for execution of a decree made by a person who purported to be assignee of the decree by oral transfer can be regarded as an application in accordance with law or as a step-in-aid of execution, the assignee having, after the dismissal of the application and after the period of limitation had lapsed, obtained an assignment in writing. Section 232 of the old Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, says that if a decree be transferred by assignment in writing or by operation of law from the decree-holder to any other person, the transferee may apply for its execution; this means that the Court cannot, for purposes of section 232, recognize any other mode of transfer, such as an oral transfer. As pointed out in Parvati v. Digambar (1), as assignee of a decree under an oral assignment has no locus standi at all to apply for execution. Then, how can it be said that an application by such an assignee may still be in accordance with law, or a step-in-aid of execution. I think the position of the petitioners is clearly untenable; and their learned Vakil has not been able to adduce any authority in its support. Of the cases cited, those nearest to the point are the cases which lay down that an application by a representative of a deceased decree-holder for execution of the decree might be regarded as being in accordance with law or a step-in-aid of execution, even if the application is not accompanied with a succession certificate. But section 4 (1), clause (b) of the Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889) merely lays down that the Court shall not proceed to execute the decree until the certificate is produced, and not that the representative cannot make the application until he has obtained the certificate. [See Brojonath Surma v.

(1) 15 B. 307.

Iswar Chundra Dutt (2) and Mangal Khan v. Salimullah Khan (3)]. The effect of section 232, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, however, is that no application based on an oral transfer can be entertained at all, and it would, therefore, be impossible to treat such an application as being in accordance with law, or as having the effect of furthering execution. The Court not having the power to recognize such an application, this application must be regarded in law as having no sort of effect. I may mention that the Vakil for the petitioners very rightly refrained from contending that I should ignore the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code in considering whether an application for execution is in accordance with law or is to be regarded as a step-in-aid of execution, because the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 was enacted after the Limitation Act came into force. Such a view seems to have been taken in Hafizuddin Choudhri v. Abdul Aziz (4), but it is contrary to a series of decisions and is obviously untenable. I hold, therefore, that the order of the District Munsif is right. The petition is dismissed with costs.

IN C. R. P. NOS. 742 AND 743 OF 1910.

These petitions follow C. R. P. No. 741 of 1910 and for the reasons recorded in the judgment therein C. R. P. No. 743 of 1910 is dismissed with costs and C. R. P. No. 742 of 1910 is dismissed.

Petitions dismissed.

(2) 19 C. 482. (3) 16 A. 26.
(4) 20 C. 755.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1050 OF 1910.

November 21, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Banerjee and Mr. Justice Tudball

JAGAR NATH OJHA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAMPHAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 35—Suit and decree for joint possession.

An action for joint possession is maintainable and a decree for such possession must be given unless the Court deems it unreasonable in the interests of all the parties concerned to pass such a decree.

Phani Singh v. Nawab Singh, 28 A. 161; A. W. N. (1905) 233, dissented from.

Bhairon Rai v. Saran Rai, 26 A. 588, followed.

Rahmat Chaudhri v. Salamat Chaudhri, A. W. N. (1901) 48; Watson and Company v. Ram Chand Dutt, 18C· 10; 17 I. A. 110; Bhola Nath v. Busken, A. W. N. (1894) 127, referred to.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge of Ghazipur, dated the 27th June 1910.

Mr. Surrendro Nath Sen, for the Appellants.

Mr. Ahmed Kareem, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The only question in this appeal is whether a plaintiff who had never been in possession but was entitled to possession jointly with other persons could be granted a decree for joint possession. The facts of the case are fully set forth in the order of our brother Chamier by which he referred this case to a Bench of two Judges. They are briefly these:—The property in suit, which is a share of zemindari originally belonged to one Lachhmi Ojha. It passed on his death to his widow, and on the widow's death to the plaintiff, to the respondents and to others. As the plaintiff did not obtain possession of the property, he brought the suit out of which this appeal has arisen, for possession jointly with the defendants. He also claimed damages but that part of the claim has not been pressed in this Court. Other reliefs were asked for with which we are not concerned in this appeal. The Court of first insance decreed a part of the claim but refused to grant a decree for joint possession. This decree was affirmed by the lower Appellate Court. The contention before us is that a decree for joint possession ought to have been passed in the plaintiff's favour. For the opposite contention reliance is placed upon the decision of a Bench of this Court in Phani Singh v. Nawab Singh (1). That case, no doubt, supports the view taken by the Courts below but, with great deference, we are unable to agree with it. In the Full Bench case of Bhairon Rai v. Saran Rai (2), it was held that where the plaintiff had been ousted from joint possession by the defendants, a decree could be made in his favour for restoration to joint possession. We fail to see that on principle there is any distinction between the case of a person who was in joint possession but was subsequently dispossessed and the case of a person who was entitled to joint possession but had not obtained such possession. As pointed out by our brother Chamier, an action for joint possession is a well known form of action both in England and in this country and, before the decision of the case of Rahmat Chaudhri v. Salamat Chaudhri (3), (1) 28 A. 161, A. W. N. (1905) 233.

(2) 26 A. 588.
(3) A. W. N. (1901) 48.

decrees were always made for such possession. There may, no doubt, be cases in which the Court may not deem it reasonable in the interests of all the parties concerned to make a decree for joint possession. An instance of such a case is that of Watson and Company v. Ram Chand Dutt (4). Another case of the same kind is that of Bhola Nath v. Buskin (5). That a decree for joint possession can be made has until recently in this Court always been regarded as settled law but if any doubt existed on the point, it has been removed by the clear provisions of Order XXI, rule 35 of the present Code of Civil Procedure. In our opinion the circumstances of the present case are such as to entitle the plaintiff to a decree for joint possession. The Courts below were, therefore, wrong in not granting him such a decree. We accordingly allow the appeal, and vary the decree of the Courts below by adding to the decree made by those Courts a decree in the plaintiff's favour for joint possession of the property decreed. The appellant will have his costs in this Court and in the Courts below.

Appeal allowed.

(4) 18 C. 10; 17 I. A. 110.
(5) A. W. N. (1894) 127.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 150 OF 1910.
November 13, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Karamat Husain and Mr. Justice Chamier.
SHAMINATH CHOUDHRI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
RAMJAS AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Compromise decree—Compromise obtained under undue influence—Suit to set aside the decree whether maintainable.

A suit to set aside a consent decree obtained under undue influence is maintainable.

Hadders Field Banking Company, Limited v. Henry Lister and Son, Limited, (1895) 2 Ch. 273; 64 L. J. Ch. 523; 12 R. 331; 72 L. T. 703: 43 W. R. 567; Musammat Golab Koer v. Badshah Bahadur, 2 Ind. Cas. 129; 13 C. W. N. 1197; Sarvesh Chandra Basu v. Hari Dayal Singh, 5 Ind. Cas. 236; 14 C. W. N. 451; 11 C. L. J. 346, referred to.

First appeal from the decision of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur.

Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru (with him Mr. Ramakant Malviya), for the Appellant.

Mr. Choudhri (with him Messrs. Govind Pershad and Purshottam Das), for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the appellant to set aside a decree for partition of a joint family property which was passed upon compromise between the parties. The ground of suit is that the consent of the appellant to the compromise was obtained by undue influence exerted on him by the defendant-respondent Ramjas Chaudhuri. The suit has been dismissed by the Court below on the ground that no such suit is maintainable. The Subordinate Judge was of opinion that a decree could not be set aside by suit except on the ground of fraud or collusion. In the course of his judgment, he refers to section 44 of the Evidence Act. But that section does not purport to enumerate the grounds on which a decree can be attacked by a separate suit. There are cases, no doubt, which suggest that where a decree is attacked by a party on any ground other than that of fraud, he should proceed by way of motion or application for review of judgment. But all the recent authorities are to the effect that whether or not a party may proceed by way of motion or application for review of judgment he may proceed by suit. In the case of the Huddersfield Banking Company, Limited v. Henry Lister and Son, Limited (1) a consent order had been made for the sale of some power looms. The Banking Company afterwards ascertained that the power looms had been affixed to certain mills so as to become part of the property comprised in a mortgage security. At the time of the consent order it was supposed that the machinery was not affixed to the mills and, therefore, was not part of the security. The Company brought an action to have the order set aside. The action was resisted on the ground that the arrangements having merged in an order of the Court could not be set aside. Vaughan Williams, J., said "The real truth of the matter is that the order is a mere creature of the agreement, and to say that the Court can set aside the agreement and it was not disputed that this could be done if a common mistake were proved but that it cannot set aside an order which was the creature of that agreement seems to me to be giving the branch an existence which is independent of the tree. Under the circumstances I have come to the conclusion that I can set aside the order and give effect to what are the true rights of the parties." His views were affirmed by the Court of Appeal. Lindley, L. J., said "I have not the slightest doubt that a consent order can be impeached not only on the ground of fraud but on any grounds which invalidate the agreement which it impresses in a mere formal way than usual. In my mind the only question is whether the agreement on which the consent order was based can be invalidated or not. Of course, if that agreement cannot be invalidated, the consent order is good. If it can be, the consent order is bad." Lopes and Kay, L. JJ., expressed themselves to the same effect. The decision in that case was followed in Musammat Golab Koer v. Badshah Bahadur (2) and in Sarbesh Chandra Basu v. Hari Dayal Singh (3). The judgment of the Court in the last mentioned case contains an exhaustive review of the authorities both as to the grounds on which a decree obtained by consent or upon a compromise can be attacked and as to the procedure to be adopted in such cases. In our opinion the decision of the Court below is wrong. We allow the appeal, set aside the decree of the Subordinate Judge, and remand the suit in order that it may be restored to the file of pending cases and disposed of according to law. Costs which in this Court will include fees on the higher scale will be costs in the cause.

(1) (1895) 2 Ch. 273; 64 L. J. Ch. 523; 12 R. 331 72 L. T. 703; 43 W. R. 567.

Appeal allowed.

(2) 13 C. W. N. 1197; 2 Ind. Cas. 129.

(3) 14 C. W. N. 451; 5 Ind. Cas. 206; 11 C. L. J. 346.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 58 OF 1908.

October 19, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim

SRIRANGA BUPALA BALAI RAO GARU AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS

versus

RAJAH DAMARA KUMARA THIMMA NAYANIM BAHADUR VARU AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 375 A—Compromise in execution—Subsequent application for execution on basis of compromise—Estoppel—Question of law

In execution of a decree a compromise was effected by the parties as to the mode of satisfying the decree and accepted by the Court which dismissed the execution application then pending and directed that if the parties did not adhere to the compromise a fresh application for execution would have to be filed. Thereafter, several payments were made in accordance with the compromise but the whole amount due not having been paid it was sought to realize the balance in execution when the defendant contended that the terms of the compromise could not be enforced in execution:

Held, that the defendant was estopped from contending that the terms of the arrangement could not be enforced in execution.

Held, further, that the question whether estoppel arises on certain facts is a question of law, and that whatever its other effects may be, section 375 A of the Civil Procedure Code, does not in any way affect the rule of estoppel.

Appeal against the order of the District Court of North Arcot, dated 22nd October 1907 in E. P. No. 16 of 1906 in O. S. No. 12 of 1890.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. V. Seshagiri Aiyar, for the Appellants.

The Hon'ble Mr. L. A. Govindaraghava Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—As regards one of the grounds on which the judgment of the lower Court is based, namely, that the decree is not executable against the successor of the zemindar who was party to the suit, it is enough to point out that this view cannot be supported in view of the decision of this Court in Zemindar of Karvetnagar v. Trustee of Tirumalai Tirupati (1) which is followed in Deparu Kalappa Reddi v. Akkhappa Narayanim (2).

We also think that the contention of the learned Vakil for the appellant that the respondent is estopped from contending that the terms of the compromise as evidenced by the petition dated the 16th February 1907 cannot be enforced in execution. The decree was one for partition of certain family jewels and one of the decree-holders assigned his interest in the decree to the appellant. Then the parties agreed before the executing Court that the appellant instead of having a share of the jewels would get a certain sum of money as their value, and they further agreed, as we read the petition, that the money was to be realised in execution. The Court there-

(1) 32 M. 429; 19 M. L. J. 401; 2 Ind. Cas. 18.

(2) 8 M. L. T. 297; 2 M. W. N. 75; 8 Ind. Cas. 392.

upon passed an order accepting the terms of the compromise and directed that the application then pending for execution be struck off, and in case the parties did not adhere to the agreement, a fresh application for execution would have to be filed. Then we find that several payments were made in accordance with this agreement, and afterwards the decree was ordered to be transmitted to another Court for execution for the balance of the money. Upon these facts, it seems to us that the defendant is estopped from contending that the terms of the arrangement cannot be enforced in execution. In so holding, we act upon a principle which had been well established in many cases [see Sadasiva Pillai v. Rama Lingh Pillai (3), Gouree Sunkar Tribedee v. Amon Ali Chowdhry (4); Lakshmana v. Sukiya Bai (5); Sheo Golam Lall v. Beni Prosad (6).] It is true that the matter was not presented in this light before the lower Court, but these facts which we have stated are not disputed, and it is really a question of law whether estoppel arises on these facts; and there can be no question in such a case of the respondent being prejudiced because estoppel was not pleaded against him in so many words. We may mention that much reliance has been placed by Mr. Govinda Raghava Iyer, the learned Pleader for the respondent, on section 375A of the Civil Procedure Code which he contends has the effect of preventing any compromise such as this being enforced in execution. But the section, whatever its other effects may be, does not in any way affect the rule of estoppel, and the learned Vakil for the respondent is unable to contend that it does.

We, therefore, set aside the order of the District Judge and remand the case. He will dispose of the Execution Petition No. 16 of 1906 according to law.

The costs will abide the result.

Appeal allowed.

(3) 2 I. A. 219 pp. 232, 233; 15 B. L. R. 383; 24 W. R. 193.
(4) 21 W. R. 309.
(5) 7 M 400.
(6) 5 C. 27; 4 C. L. R. 29.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL NO. 492 OF 1909.

November 23, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Caspersz and Mr. Justice D Chtterjee.

PROMODA NATH ROY—DECREE-HOLDER—APPELLANT

versus

ALAMGIR KHAN CHOWDHURY AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT DEBTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant – Co-sharer's suit for entire rent making other co-sharers parties—Decree for his share of rent only – Whether decree a rent decree or money decree —"Decree", meaning of—Reference to pleadings and judgment, if allowable.

A co-sharer landlord brought a suit for the entire arrears of rent making his co-sharers pro forma defendants and praying for a declaration that the decretal amount should be a charge upon the tenure in arrears. The Court held that as the plaintiff's share of the rent was separately collected, his co-sharers were not necessary parties and that the claim for their share of the rent was untenable. A decree was passed for the plaintiff's share of the rent to be realised from the assets of the tenant who had in the meantime died. This decree was not appealed against:

Held, that, although the suit was rightly framed as a suit for rent and a decree properly passed would be capable of execution under the special procedure of the Bengal Tenancy Act, yet in the present case the Court passed a money decree only and it was incapable of execution as a rent decree under the Act.

A Court can refer to the pleadings and judgment in order to ascertain the real meaning of a decree.

Appeal from the order of the Sub-Judge of Rajshaye, dated August 14th, 1909.

Dr. Rash Behary Ghose, Babus Sarat Kumar Mitra and Satish Chandra Ghose, for the Appellant.

Babus Dwarka Nath Chakravarti, J. Bagchi, Shyama Charan Roy and Hira Prosad Chatterjee, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The main question in controversy in this case is whether the decree obtained by the appellant can be executed as a decree for rent under the Bengal Tenancy Act. The learned Subordinate Judge has held in the negative, and the decree-holder appeals. The decree-holder is the owner of six annas and the opposite party defendants Nos. 2 to 6 are the owners of two annas of an eight annas mehal which was let out in patni to the ancestor of the judgment-debtors opposite parties. The decree-holder, as such 6 annas owner brought a suit to recover arrears of rent against the patnidar making the owners of the remaining two annas pro forma defendants, praying for a decree for the entire rent, as also, for a declar-ration that the decretal amount should be a charge upon the tenure in arrears. Issue No. 7 in the suit ("Are the plaintiffs entitled to have a lien on the tenure in suit?") was evidently framed in consequence of the last prayer being objected to. The learned Subordinate Judge who tried the suit held that as the rent for the 6 annas had been separately collected, the co-sharers were not necessary parties and that the claim for their share of the rent was untenable. He held on the 7th issue, that the plaintiffs as part owners could not enforce a lien on the tenure and ultimately passed a decree for a sum which was to be realised from the assets of the patnidar Nur Mahomed Khan who had died in the meantime, his heirs being substituted on the record in his place. This decree was made in April 1907, and there was no appeal against it. When the decree-holder sought to execute this decree as a rent decree under the Bengal Tenancy Act, objection was preferred by the judgment-debtor, Shamsunnissa Khanum, that the decree was a money decree and must be executed as such. The Court of execution, reading the decree by the light of the judgment in the original suit, held the objection to be well founded.

It is contended in appeal before us that the decree is a decree for rent; that the Court below was wrong in referring to the judgment for the proper construction of the decree; that, even if the judgment could be referred to, the 7th issue was immaterial and should not have been raised or tried so that the matter cannot be res judicata, and that, in any case, the decree-holder is entitled to sell the tenure under section 158B. of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Reliance has been placed on the case of Rajah Promoda Nath Roy v. Rameni Kanta Roy (1).

We have no doubt that the suit was rightly framed as a suit for rent, and a decree properly passed therein would be capable of execution under the special procedure of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The law on the point, however, had not as yet been quite settled, and the plaintiff was advised to make his special prayer for the declaration of a charge on the tenure. Inasmuch as the defendants contested that prayer, an issue was framed and decided against the plaintiff and a decree was passed for the amount in arrear to be realised from the assets of the deceased putnidar. Even without the light thrown by the judgment, this last mentioned portion of the decree indicates that the Court meant to pass a money decree. The judgment, however, makes the whole position clear and there is ample authority for the Court to refer to the pleadings and judgment in order to ascertain the real meaning of a decree. See Jagatjit Singh v. Sarabjit Singh (2); Magniram v. Mehdi Hossein (3). The decree in question was not appealed against, and has become final and is binding between the parties in execution. See Ram Kirpal Singh v. Rup Kuari (4). No question of res judicata can arise, as the question is raised not in another suit but in execution of the decree passed in the same suit. Again, the decree not being, in our opinion, a decree for arrears of rent, as contemplated by the Bengal Tenancy Act, the provisions of section 158B of that Act have no application. Moreover, the decree was passed before that section was enacted. We think, therefore, that the learned Subordinate Judge was right in his estimate of the nature of the decree, and we accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs 5 gold mohurs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 35 C. 331; 12 C. W. N. 249; 10 Bom. L. R. 66; 7 C. L. J. 139; 3 M. L. T. 151; 18 M. L. J. 43.

(2) 19 C. 159.
(3) 31 C. 95.
(4) 11 I. A. 37; 6 A. 269.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 352 OF 1911.

November 22, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Tudball.

ABDUL HAKIM KHAN AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

CHANDAN AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), ss. 73, 74, 77—Application for registration—Inquiry—No evidence produced—Order of refusal.

Where, owing to the absence of the parties, who were to attend for the purpose of an inquiry under section 74 of the Indian Registration Act, a Registrar dismisses an application made under section 73 of the

ABDUL HAKIM KHAN v. CHANDAN.

Act to have the document registered, the order of the Registrar is an order of refusal within the meaning of section 77 of the Act.

Sajibullah Sirkar v. Haji Khosh Mohomed Sirkar, 13 C. 264, followed.

Ulit Upadhia v. Imam Bandi Bibi, 24 A. 402, referred to.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge of Saharanpur, dated the 27th of January 1911.

Mr. Brajnath Vyas, for the Appellants.

Mr. S. A. Haider, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiffs-respondents under section 77 of the Registration Act to secure registration of a sale-deed which was admittedly executed by defendant No. 1 as general attorney of defendant No. 2. The suit was contested by both the defendants. Registration was refused by the Sub Registrar on the 20th of December 1908. Within the period of thirty days from that date the plaintiffs-respondents applied to the Registrar under section 73 of the Act. A date was fixed by the Registrar for an inquiry to be made under section 74. On the date fixed the parties did not appear, and the Registrar recorded an order dismissing the application. The plaintiffs then brought the present suit. The suit was resisted chiefly on the ground that there had been no inquiry by the Registrar under section 74 of the Act and that, therefore, there had been no such refusal to register as is contemplated by section 77. A plea has been raised in this Court that the application to the Registrar had not been made within the time allowed by law. There is no substance in this plea as it was admitted by the parties in the Court below that that application was made within thirty days of the order passed by the Sub-Registrar. This is manifest from the opening lines of the Appellate Court's judgment and it has not been shown to us that the statement contained in the judgment is incorrect. Both the Courts below decreed the plaintiff's suit relying upon the ruling in Sajibullah Sirkar v. Haji Khosh Mahomed Sirkar (1). They have held that the order of the Registrar is a refusal within the meaning of section 77. The point taken before us is that the applicants, i. e., the present plaintiffs, not having appeared before the Registrar and not having adduced evidence, the inquiry which is ordered by section 74 was not made, and, therefore, the order of the Registrar is not a refusal such as is contemplated by the law. Reliance is placed upon certain observations in Ulit Upadhia v. Imam Bandi Bibi (2). The question for decision in that case was not that which is now before us. In that case the plaintiff Musammat Imam Bandi Bibi, had made an application to the Registrar to obtain an order for registration more than thirty days after the order of the Sub-Registrar refusing registration. It was, therefore, held that she had not fulfilled one of the conditions precedent to the bringing of a suit under section 77. In the course of the judgment certain observations were made by one of the learned Judges. On pages 406 and 407 Burkitt, J., says "the words 'refuses to order the document to be registered under section 76' imply, in my opinion, that the application must have been presented in time under section 73, and that after inquiry the Registrar has refused to direct it to be registered". Stress is laid upon the words that after inquiry the Registrar has refused to direct it to be registered. At the bottom of page 406 the judgment continues—"finally I would point out that the right of suit given by section 77 of the Act is a right consequential on a refusal under section 76, which refusal is based on the inquiry directed by section 74, and if there be no such refusal no right to sue accrues under section 77". In so far as those observations touch on the question of the inquiry made after an application, they were quite unnecessary for a decision on the point in issue in that case In the case now before us there is no material on the record to show to us what exactly happened in the present case, and we are not prepared to hold that where the District Registrar on an application duly presented within time has fixed a date for the purposes of an inquiry and has then refused to register the document because no evidence has been adduced before him no such refusal has been made as is contemplated by section 77. There is nothing in the circumstances of the case to show that the application under section 73 was not a bona fide application which the plaintiffs did not intend to prosecute. It is clear that they neither withdrew nor abandoned their application. The Registrar's order dismissing the application was one merely refusing to register the document because no evidence of the execution thereof had been placed before him. We agree with the remarks in Sajibullah Sirkar v. Hari Khosh Mahomed Sirkar (1). In our opinion the decision of the Court below is correct. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

(1) 13 C. 264.

(2) 24 A. 402.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTTA HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2276 OF 1909.
July 21, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Caruduff Mohant JAGARNATH DAS—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
BIBI RUPA—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Shebait—Alienation by Mohant—Suit to set aside alienation—Burden of proof—Power of shebait—Alienation when to be justified—What has to be established to justify alienation.

The question as to the party on whom the onus of proof lies in a suit to set aside an alienation of endowed property, is one not capable of a general and inflexible answer.

Hunoomanpersaud Panday v. Babooee Munraj Koonweree, 6 M. I. A. 393 at p. 419; 18 W. R. 81, referred to.

Where, at the time of such alienation, the plaintiff was joint Manager of the properties of the endowment and had special means of knowledge as to the funds available for the purpose of the management, it was for him to prove that there was no necessity for the alienation made by the Mohant in possession. The power of a shebait in respect of an alienation of endowed property is analogous to that of the Manager of the property of an infant.

Prosunno Kumari v. Golab Chand, 2 I. A. 145; 14 B. L. R. 450; 23 W. R. 253, Doorganath v. Ramchander, 4 I. A. 52; 2 C. 341, Sheo Shankar Gir v Ram Sheiwak, 24 C. 77, Nawab Sir Syed Hossain Khan v. Mohant Bhagwan Das, 11 C. W. N. 261; 34 C. 249; 6 C. L. J. 442; and Madho Parshad v. Ram Ratan, 11 Ind. Cas. 507; 14 C. L. J. 264; 15 C. W. N 838; (1911) 2 M. W. N 66; 13 Bom. L. R. 780; 21 M. L. J. 933; 10 M. L. T 481, relied upon.

The alienation of the corpus ought only to be resorted to as an extreme measure in the absence of other reasonable means of providing for the means of the endowment.

Natarja Desikar v. Palaniappa Chetty, 9 Ind. Cas. 281; 20 M. L. J. 969; 9 M. L. T 8?, referred to.

What has to be established to justify such an alienation is that, for the needs of the endowment, no other means was available short of an absolute alienation of the property. It is not enough to find that the sum paid by the transferee was applied for the purposes of the endowment Where there was no finding that the needs of the endowment at the time the alienation was made might not have been met by other means than an absolute transfer of a portion of the endowed property, the sale was held to be void.

Appeal from the decree of the Second Sub-Judge of Mozaffarpur, dated June 3rd, 1909, modifying that of the Additional Munsif of that place, dated February 15th, 1909.

Babus Lachmi Narain Singh, for the Appellant.

Babu Umakali Mukherjee and Manmotha Nath Mukherjee, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The subject-matter of the litigation which has given rise to this appeal is a parcel of 4 bighas of Fakirana land which admittedly formed part of the endowed properties belonging to the Panapur Math. It appears that Mohant Siaram Das, the spiritual head of this endowment, died on the 12th August 1905. Upon his death, disputes arose as to the succession to the office of Mohant, and on the 27th June 1906, these disputes were settled among three rival claimants by name Baldeo Das, Jagar Nath Das and Saligram Das. The parties agreed that Baldeo Das would continue to be the Mohant during his life-time and that upon his death, Jagar Nath Das would succeed as Mohant of the two Asthals at Panapur Nariar and Berhampura while Saligram Das would succeed as the Mohant of the Asthal at Chapra Rupnath. It was further arranged that, during the life-time of Baldeo, Jagar Nath would be joint manager with him in respect of the two Asthals to which he would be entitled to succeed upon his death, while Saligram would be the joint manager of the Asthal at Chapra Roopnath to which he would be entitled ultimately to succeed. This ekrarnama was duly registered on the 27th June 1906 and contained an express provision that Mohant Baldeo Das would not have any right of alienation of the properties of the endowment. The deed further recited that the properties of the endowment were subject to considerable ancestral debts, that is, debts incurred during the management of the preceding Mohants, that if payment of the said ancestral debts necessitated the sale of any property. Jagarnath and Saligram, by joining with Baldeo in execution of deeds of sale in respect of the properties appertaining to the Asthals at Panapur Nariar and Berhampura and Chapra Roopnath respectively, would pay off the ancestral debts, and that if Jagar Nath and Saligram did not join in the execution of the deeds of sale, Baldeo Das would be entitled, upon giving notice, to execute deeds of sale under his own signature and pay off the ancestral debts thereby. It appears that, on the 9th April 1907, Baldeo Das executed a conveyance in favour of the defendant-respondent in respect of the disputed property. The plaintiff commenced this action on the 8th April 1908 for declaration that the transfer was void and that he was entitled to recover possession. The defendant resisted the claim on the ground that the transfer had been executed for justifying necessity and that she had consequently acquired an indefeasible title to the property transferred.

JAGARNATH DAS v. BIBI RUPA.

The Court of first instance found that out of the consideration-money of Rs. 800 paid for the conveyance, it had been established that Rs. 254 had been applied in satisfaction of a debt incurred to meet the expenses of the sradh ceremony of Mohant Siaram Das that, as to the remainder, there was no satisfactory evidence to show that it was needed for the benefit of the endowment. In this view, the Court of first instance gave a decree to the plaintiff for recovery of possession upon payment of Rs. 254 with interest thereon. Both parties were dissatisfied with this decision and appealed to the Subordinate Judge. The plaintiff contended that he was entitled to recover the property without payment of any sum at all. The defendant contended, on the other hand, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the property under any circumstances. The Subordinate Judge has affirmed the finding of the first Court that Rs. 254 was needed for payment of the debt incurred at the time of the sradh of Siaram Das. As regards the remainder, he has found that it was also needed to meet the expenses of the management of the endowment. Upon these findings, the Subordinate Judge has held that the whole of the consideration-money was applied for the benefit of the endowment and that the plaintiff was consequently not entitled to impeach the title of the defendant.

The plaintiff has now appealed to this Court and, on his behalf, the decision of the Subordinate Judge has been assailed on three grounds, namely, first, that the finding of the Sub-Judge upon the question of necessity cannot be supported, inasmuch as he had erroneously thrown the burden of proof upon the plaintiff; secondly, that the facts found do not show that there was any justifying necessity for the alienation and, thirdly, that even if there was any justifying necessity for the alienation, the transfer was void as it was in contravention of the provisions of the charnamah by which the transferor was bound.

In so far as the first of these contentions is concerned, there is, in our opinion, no substance in it. No doubt, ordinarily when a person takes a property from a limited owner and his title is impeached, the burden is upon him to show that he has acquired the property under circumstances which make his title unimpeachable. It was explained by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the case of Hanoomman Persaud Panday v. Musammat Babooee Munraj Koonwaree (1):— "No hard and fast rule can be laid down in cases of this description. The question, on whom does the onus of proof lie in such suits is one not capable of a general and inflexible answer. The presumption proper to be made will vary with circumstances and must be regulated by and dependent on them." The Subordinate Judge has pointed out that, at the time the alienation took place, the plaintiff was joint manager of the properties of the endowment. He had special means of knowledge as to the funds available for the purpose of the management at the time. It was for him to prove that there was no necessity for the alienation made by the Mohant in possession. The first ground, therefore, must fail.

In so far as the second ground taken by the plaintiff appellant is concerned, it is, in our opinion, well founded. No doubt, as has been laid down by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the cases of Prosunno Kumari v. Golab Chand (2) and Doorganath v. Ram Chunder (3) and also by this Court in the cases of Sheo Shankar Gir v. Ram Sahewak (4) and Nawab Sir Syed Hossein Ali Khan v. Mohant Bhagwan Das (5), the power of the shebait in respect of alienation of endowed property is analogous to that of the manager of the property of an infant. [Madho Prasad

(1) 6 M. I. A. 393 at p. 419; 18 W. R. 81.
(2) 2 I. A. 145; 14 B. L. R. 450; 23 W. R. 253.
(3) 4 I. A. 52; 2 C. 341.
(4) 24 C. 77.
(5) 11 C. W. N. 261; 34 C. 249, 6 C. L. J. 442.

JAGARNATH DAS v. BIBI RUPA.

v. Ram Ratan (6)]. It must be remembered, however, as pointed out by the learned Judges of the Madras High Court in the case of Sreenath Devasigamani Pandarosannadhi alias Nataraja Desikar v. Palaniappa Chetty (7), that the needs of an endowment may be very different from the needs of a human being and the test to be applied to determine what is justifying necessity in the case of an endowment may not be the same as in the case of a human being. Mr. Justice Krishnaswami Ayyar observed in the case just mentioned: "The shebait is in a position analogous to that of the guardian of an infant heir and he cannot alienate the corpus of the estate except for sufficient necessity. A decree can also be passed against the corpus of the property. A necessity justifying alienation of rent and income will not be such as will justify an alienation of the corpus. Alienation of the corpus ought only to be resorted to as an extreme measure in the absence of other reasonable means of providing for the needs of the endowment." In the case before us, there is no finding by the Subordinate Judge that the needs of the endowment at the time the alienation was made might not have been met by other means than an absolute transfer of a portion of the endowed property. It is not enough to find that the sum paid by the transferee was applied for the purposes of the endowment. What has to be established to justify the alienation is that, for the needs of endowment, no other means was available short of an absolute alienation of the property. We are, therefore, of opinion that upon the facts found by the Subordinate Judge, the sale cannot be supported. But as the sum advanced by the defendant has been applied for the benefit of the endowment, ordinarily the plaintiff would be entitled to ask the Court to vacate the sale only on condition that the sum paid is re paid to the vendor. It has been contended, however, by the learned Vakil for the appellant that he is not bound to pay this money, because the sale is not merely voidable but void because it was made in contravention of the provisions of the ekrarnama. This leads us to the consideration of the third ground.

(6) 15 C. W. N. 838: 14 C. L. J. 264; 11 Ind. Cas. 507: (1911) 2 M. W. N. 66; 13 Bom. L. R. 780; 21 M. L. J. 938; 10 M. L. T. 481.

(7) 20 M. L. J. 969; 9 M. L. T. 83; 9 Ind. Cas. 281.

In support of the third ground, our attention has been invited to the clause in the ekrarnama that Mohant Baldeo Das had no right of alienation. The learned Vakil for the respondent has contended with considerable force that this implies that there was to be no right of alienation except for justifying necessity. He has argued that, if this view is not adopted, the result would be that the endowment might be hopelessly embarrassed in cases of necessity where the necessity could not be met for the income of the properties endowed. We are unable to accept this contention as well founded. If the construction suggested by the learned Vakil for the respondent be accepted, we have to insert in the deed words not to be found there. At the same time, if the words proposed are inserted in the deed, the clause in question becomes superfluous. It would then merely provide that the Mohant would not have any right of alienation except for justifying necessity. In other words, the effect of the deed would be what the ordinary law is in cases of alienation by Mohants. On the other hand, it is clear that, in exceptional cases of the description suggested by the learned Vakil for the respondent, it would be open to the parties to bring a suit for administration of the endowed properties, and part of the endowed properties could be alienated under the direction of the Court so as to save the endowment. We are, therefore, clearly of opinion that the alienation in this case was contrary to the express provisions of the ekrarnama and as it has been found that the defendant at the time of her purchase had notice of the provisions of the instrument, she is clearly bound by the terms thereof. The deed in favour of the defendant is, therefore, clearly void and the plaintiff is entitled to have the sale cancelled without re-payment of the consideration.

The result is, that this appeal is allowed, the decrees of the Courts below discharged and the suit decreed. But, under the circumstances of the case, we are of opinion that each party should pay his own costs in all the Courts. We further declare that the plaintiff will not be entitled to any mesne profits up to the date of this judgment.

Appeal allowed.

RAGHUNATH PROSAD v. KASHI PROSAD.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 147 OF 1911.

August 15, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

RAGHUNATH PROSAD—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—APPELLANT

versus

KASHI PROSAD AND ANOTHER—DECREE-HOLDERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 48—Fraud, interpretation of—Judgment-debtor's objection to validity of sale, if fraud proved—"Date of decree"—Order by Appellate Court—Decree-holder's power to add to period of limitation.

Section 48, sub-section (2) clause (a), Civil Procedure Code requires not only that there should be fraud on the part of the judgment-debtors, but also that the fraud should be of such a character as to prevent the decree-holder from executing the decree.

Seshachalam Chetti v. Rajam Chetti, 8 M. L. J. 203, relied upon.

The term "fraud" in section 48 should be interpreted in a wider sense than that in which it is generally used in English law.

Pattakara v. Kangasami Chetti, 6 M. 365, followed.

The conduct of a judgment-debtor cannot be deemed fraudulent simply because his objection to the validity of the sale of his property in execution, ultimately proves unsuccessful. And that objections cannot stand in the way of further execution of the decree.

In the course of execution proceeings in connection with a certain decree, an Appellate Court directed that the judgment debtor should pay a certain amount every month in satisfaction of the decree:

Held, that it was not the intention of the Appellate Court to supersede the original decree and that the order merely determined the mode of payment for the satisfaction of the decree, and that if clause (b) of sub-section (1) of section 48 of the Code be not applicable to the case, the decree-holder cannot execute the decree after 12 years from the date of the original decree though the application for execution is made within 12 years of the Appellate Court's order aforesaid.

A decree-holder cannot, by binding himself not to execute a decree for a certain period, add to the time which the law allows him to execute it.

The judgment of Sir Barnes Peacock in Kristo Komal Singh v. Huree Sirdar, 13 W. R. (F. B.) 44, referred to.

Appeal from the order of the Sub-Judge Patna, dated March 11th, 1911.

Moulvi Muhammad Mustafa Khan, for the Appellant.

Babus Umakali Mukerjee and Manmatha Nath Mukerjee, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against an order by which the Court below has allowed the execution to proceed on the basis of a decree for money made on the 18th August 1897 against three persons by name Ram Prosad, Thakur Prosad and Raghunath Prosad. Ram Prosad died on the 1st April 1903 and Thakur Prosad on 13th February 1910. An application was made on the 1st September 1910 and was met at once with the objection that no order for execution could be made on the basis thereof under section 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1908. The Subordinate Judge has overruled the objection and has held that the case is covered by sub section (2) clause (a) of section 48. The judgment debtor has now appealed to this Court and on his behalf it has been argued that the view taken by the Subordinate Judge is manifestly erroneous.

Section 48 provides that where an application to execute a decree, not being a decree granting an injunction has been made, no order for the execution of the same decree shall be made upon any fresh application presented after the expiration of twelve years from one of two dates, namely, first, the date of the decree sought to be executed, and secondly, the date of default in making payment when the decree or any subsequent order directs any payment of money to be made at a certain date or at recurring periods. Sub-section (2) lays down that nothing in the section shall be deemed to preclude the Court from ordering the execution of a decree upon an application presented after the expiration of the term of twelve years when the judgment-debtor has by fraud or force, prevented the execution of the decree at some time within twelve years immediately before the date of the application. In view of the date of the decree and the date of the present application for execution which, it is not suggested, is in continuation of any previous application, it is manifest that the objection under section 48 prima facie is well founded. In the Court below the decree-holders attempted to bring the case within clause (a) of sub section (2) and the Subordinate Judge has held that the decree holders were prevented by fraud from executing the decree at some time within twelve years immediately before the date of present application. He has relied upon three circumstances in support of his view that there was fraud on the part of the judgment-debtors of the description mentioned in the section. He has pointed out, in the first place, that after the properties of the judgment-debtors have been sold in execution of this very decree on the 13th June 1898, they took objection to the validity of the sale under sections 244 and 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882. The objection was disallowed on the 4th April 1899 and an appeal was preferred to this Court but was ultimately dismissed on the 22nd February 1901. The Subordinate Judge appears to have thought that as the objection of the judgment-debtors to the validity of the sale ultimately proved unsuccessful, their conduct must be deemed fraudulent. The second circumstance upon which the Subordinate Judge relies, is the fact of the institution of a suit by one Makunda Bibi who claimed title to the property on the foot of a mortgage, dated the 27th January 1897. The suit instituted by her ultimately proved unsuccessful and was dismissed on the 17th May 1902. The Subordinate Judge is of opinion that this suit was instituted by Mukunda Bibi at the instance of the judgment-debtors who had created in her favour a fictitious mortgage. The third circumstance upon which the Subordinate Judge relies is the institution of a suit against one Radha Krishna in respect of a house which was sold in August 1903. After the decree-holder had purchased this property Radha Kissen preferred a claim, which was allowed on the 5th September 1909. The decree-holder as purchaser instituted a suit for declaration of title which was decreed on the 15th November 1906. An appeal preferred against that decree was dismissed on the 17th May 1907.

RAGHUNATH PROSAD v. KASHI PROSAD.

In our opinion, none of the three circumstances upon which the Subordinate Judge has relied in support of his view is sufficient to show that there was fraud on the part of the judgment-debtors within the meaning of section 48, Code of Civil Procedure. It is worthy of note, in the first place, that the objection which was taken by the judgment-debtors was to the validity of an execution sale or of the title acquired by the decree-holder as purchaser. In other words, the decree-holder had to face an objection by the judgment-debtors not in his character as a decree-holder but in his character as an execution purchaser. In the second place, it is obvious that the objection, whether groundless or well-founded, could not stand in the way of further execution of the decree. There was nothing to prevent the decree-holder from proceeding with further execution during the pendency of the investigation into the validity of the objection. Indeed, the history of the litigation shows that the decree-holder did proceed to execute the decree notwithstanding the proceedings for inquiry into the objections mentioned. Section 48 requires not only that there should be fraud on the part of the judgment-debtor but also that the fraud should be of such a character as to prevent the decree-holder from proceeding with execution of the decree; that this is essential is shown by the decision in Seshachalam Chetti v. Rajam Chetty (1).

The only question which remains is, whether the circumstances mentioned by the Subordinate Judge can be treated as constituting fraud on the part of the judgment-debtor. The term "fraud" as used in section 48 is not defined in the Code. But the learned Judges of the Madras High Court pointed out in the case of Pattakarra v. Rangasami Chetti (2) that the term "fraud" in that section should be interpreted in a wider sense than that in which it is generally used in English law. This view has been adopted in subsequent decisions and it has been ruled that where the judgment-debtor has eluded arrest in execution of the decree or has prevented the execution of attachment processes, his conduct is fraudulent within the meaning of section 48 [Bhagu Jethi v. Malek Bawasaheb (3) and Venkayya v. Raghava Charlu (4.] [Visalatchi v. Siva Sankara (5); Rai Shamkissen v. Damar Kumari (6).] It is not necessary for us to consider whether some of these decisions upon their special facts, may not be open to legitimate comment. The true rule appears to have been laid down by the learned Judge of the Allahabad High Court in Beni Prasad v. Kashi Nath (7), where it was held that when a judgment-debtor keeps out of the way when warrants are issued for his arrest and puts in false objections in bad faith and thereby dishonestly evades payment of money justly due to the decree-holder and determines to take advantage of the delay which

(1) 8 M. L. J. 203.
(2) 6 M. 365.
(3) 9 B. 318.
(4) 22 M. 320.
(5) 4 M. 292.
(6) 11 C. W. N. 440.
(7) 6 A. L. J. 401; 2 Ind. Cas. 222.

he has dishonestly and fraudulently created, when an application for execution is made beyond 12 years from the date of the decree, the execution of the decree is not barred. In the case before us, it is impossible to hold that the conduct of the judgment-debtor was such as to prevent the decree-holders by fraud from proceeding with execution of their decrees. The inference, therefore, follows that the grounds upon which the decision of the Subordinate Judge is based cannot be supported.

The learned Vakil for the decree-holder has next endeavoured to support the order of the Subordinate Judge on a different ground. He has contended in substance that the case falls within clause (b) of sub-section 1 of section 48. That clause provides that 12 years may be taken to commence from the date of default in making a payment of money where the decree or any subsequent order directs payment of money to be made at a certain date or at recurring periods. The learned Vakil has, in this connection, invited our attention to an order made by this Court on the 7th April 1908 in the course of proceedings in execution of this very decree. It appears that Thakur Prosad, one of the judgment-debtors, had on a previous occasion agreed to pay Rupees 10 every month towards the satisfaction of the decree. Subsequently, the position of Thakur Prosad in life improved and the decree-holder contended that he ought to be compelled to pay a larger sum. The result was that the Court directed Thakur Prosad to pay Rupees 25 every month. The order of the Court was in these terms:—"The judgment-debtor appellant (Thakur Prosad) will pay to the decree-holder respondent Rupees 25 in satisfaction of the balance of the decretal amount with costs from this date until the whole amount is paid off. The amount must be paid by the 12th of each month. The appellant will pay the respondent the costs of this Court. In default of payment of any one instalment, the whole of the balance of the decretal amount will become due." It may be conceded that this order is an order of the description contemplated by clause (b) of sub-section (1) of section 48 inasmuch as it directs the payment of money at a certain date or at recurring periods. But the question still remains whether the present application for execution of the decree is made within 12 years from the date of default in making the payment directed. Now, it is obvious that there has been no default by Thakur Prosad in carrying out this order, because it is conceded that up to the 13th February 1910 when Thakur Prosad died he had regularly made the payments on the dates prescribed. But it is contended by the learned Vakil for the respondent that default was made by the other judgment-debtors Raghunath Prosad and the sons of Thakur Prosad after his death. In our opinion, this argument is based upon the fallacy that the undertaking to make the payment was not by Thakur Prosad personally but by him as the representative of the family to which he himself and the other judgment-debtors belonged. But the other judgment-debtors were not even parties to the appeal in which this order was made and there is no room for controversy in our opinion that the undertaking was by Thakur Prosad alone and that there was no default from the date whereof the decree-holder is entitled to claim the benefit of clause (b) of sub-section (1) of section 48.

The learned Vakil for the respondent has finally suggested that the decree which he was seeking to execute was not the original decree, but the order of this Court made on the 7th April 1908. This contention also is clearly unfounded. It was not the intention of this Court to supersede the original decree. The order of this Court merely determined the mode of payment for the satisfaction of that decree. We are further of opinion that it was not open to the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor by any agreement to extend the period prescribed by section 48 of the Code. In support of this proposition we may refer to the judgment of Sir Barnes Peacock in Kristo Komal Singh v. Auree Sirdar (8), where the learned Chief Justice observed as follows:—"The Court of execution has no power to alter the decree of the Court which passed it, and the parties cannot alter the law or a decree of Court even by consent. A man may bind himself not to execute a decree of Court within a certain period, but he cannot, by binding himself not to execute the decree for a certain period, add to the time which the law allows him to execute it." In our opinion, it was not open to the decree-holder to claim an extension of the time prescribed by section 48 by virtue of the arrangement which was made on the 7th April 1908. The learned Vakil for the respondent has in conclusion urged that the case is very hard and that the decree-holder now finds himself in this difficulty because he consented to accept payment from the judgment-debtor by instalments. But it is incumbent on us to remember that, as was observed by Lord Campbell in the East India Company v. Odit Churn Pal (9), it is the duty of all Courts of Justice to take care for the general good of the community that hard cases do not make hard law.

(8) 13 W. R. 44 (F. B.).

The result, therefore, is that this appeal must be allowed and the order of the Court below discharged. The appellant is entitled to his costs both in this Court and in the Court below. We assess the hearing fee in this Court at two gold mohurs.

Appeal allowed.

(9) 5 M. I. A. 43 at p. 69.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 154 OF 1910.

November 16, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim and Mr. Justice Spencer.

NATARAJA IYER—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

THE SOUTH INDIA BANK AT TINNEVELLY AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, rr. 46, 54—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 268, 274—Attachment of debt—Debt secured by a hypothecation bond—Moveable property—Immoveable property—General Clauses Act (X of 1897)—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 58.

A debt secured by a hypothecation bond is moveable property within the meaning of rule 46 of Order XXI, Civil procedure Code, 1908.

The provisions of rule 54 of Order XXI, Civil procedure Code, are not meant to apply to property of the nature of a debt secured by a hypothecation bond. The provisions seem to contemplate that the immoveable property should be in the nature of tangible property.

Karim-un-nissa v. Phul Chand, 15 A. 134, Tarwadi Bholanath v. Bai Kashi, 26 B. 305, Debendra Kumar Mandal v. Rup Lal Das, 12 C. 546, Kasinath Das v. Sadasiv Patnaick, 20 C. 805, Baijnath Lohea v. Binoyendranath Palet, 6 C. W. N. 5, Bal Dev Dharup Marwadi v. Ram Chandra Bilwant Kulkarni, 19 B. 121, Munippa Naick v. Subramanya Iyer, 18 M. 437, Achamma v. Basappa, 8 M. L. J. 1, followed.

Appasawmi v. Scott, 9 M. 5; Sami Iyer v. Krishna Sami, 10 M. 169, not followed.

Security must follow the debt and if the debt is once attached, the benefit of the security would accrue to the attaching creditor, if his remedy against the property still exists.

Appeal against the order of the Subordinate Judge of Negapatam, dated 6th July 1910, in Execution Application No. 271 of 1910 in O. S. No. 30 of 1903 on the file of the Subordinate Judge of Tinnevelly.

Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. Subramanya Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The question in this appeal is, whether the sale in execution of a decree of a debt due to the judgment-debtor under a hypothecation bond is liable to be set aside on the ground of irregularity. It cannot be so set aside if it is to be regarded, as held by the lower Court, as moveable property within the meaning of Order XXI, rule 46, corresponding to section 268 of the old Code. The language of rule 46 which treats as moveable property a "debt not secured by a negotiable instrument," is undoubtedly wide enough to cover a debt secured by a hypothecation bond on a simple mortgage.

But, it is contended, that such a debt is immoveable property within the definition of such property as given in the General Clauses Act, as including a benefit arising out of land. It may be that a security of this character is a benefit arising out of land, but supposing that this definition would show that a simple mortgage-debt would, generally speaking, be regarded as immoveable property, still we have got to see whether the meaning is really what is contemplated by the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to the execution of decrees.

It seems to us that the provisions of rule 54, Order XXI, corresponding to section 274 of the Code of 1882, are not meant to apply to property of the nature of a debt secured by a hypothecation bond. For instance, as pointed out in Karim-un-nissa v. Phul Chand (1), if the property to be attached is a mortgage-debt, where the mortgagee is not in possession nor is entitled to possession of the mortgage property, the requirements as to the proclamation of the order at some place or adjacent to the property, and the affixing in a conspicuous part of the property, could not be applied. These provisions seem to contemplate that the immoveable property should be in the nature of tangible property. Further, the mortgagee, not being entitled to possession, his decree-holder would not be entitled to go upon the land for the purpose of proclaiming or affixing the order. Then, there is another difficulty in the way of holding that mortgage-debt is to be treated as immoveable property for the purpose of attachment. Rule 54 does not provide for any order prohibiting the mortgagor, that is, the person owing the debt, from paying the debt to the mortgagee whose right is sought to be attached, and without such an order, the object of attachment might be frustrated. Rule 46, on the other hand, provides for such prohibiting order being passed. The fact is, as pointed out in Tarwadi Bholanath v. Bai Kashi (2) and other cases, the security must follow the debt and if the debt is once attached, the benefit of the security would accrue to the attaching creditor, if his remedy against the property still exists.

(1) 15 A. 134.

Much reliance, we may also mention, has been placed on behalf of the appellant on the definition of mortgage as an interest in immoveable property as given in the Transfer of Property Act. But the real question, as we have said, is, whether it is immoveable property within the meaning of rule 54, Civil Procedure Code, and, for the reasons we have stated, it is difficult to regard it as such.

There is some diversity of judicial opinion on the question under discussion, but we are satisfied that the weight of opinion is, undoubtedly, in favour of the view we have taken. See Debendra Kumar Mandal v. Rup Lal Dass (3), Kasinath Das v. Sadasiv Patnaick (4); Tarwadi Bholanath v. Bai Kashi (2), Karim-un nissa v. Phul Chand (1); Bainath Lohea v. Binoyendranath Palet (5) and Bal Dev Dharup Marwadi v. Ram Chandra Balwant Kulkarni (6). As regards this Court, opinion seems to have fluctuated. While Turner, C. J., in Appasawmi v. Scott (7) was inclined to adopt the view which has the support of the majority of the High Courts, the other two learned Judges favoured a different view. In Sami Iyer v. Krishna Sami (8) the inclination was to support the view taken by the majority of the Judges in Appasawmi v. Scott (7). In Muniappa Naick v. Subramanya Iyer (9) the view adopted in Debendra Kumar Mandal v. Rup Lal Das (3) and Kasinath Das v. Sadasiv Patnaick (4) is expressly approved, though the learned Judges seem to imply that a sale under section 268 of the Code of 1882 might be irregular. Achamma v. Basappa (10) simply follows Muniappa Naick v. Subramanya Iyer (9). There is thus some uncertainty as to the exact view held by this Court on the point under discussion. But, as the conclusion at which we have unhesitatingly arrived is undoubtedly supported by preponderance of authority of the other High Courts, we do not think it necessary to refer the matter to a Full Bench. The appeal will, therefore, be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 23 B. 305.
(3) 12 C. 546.
(4) 20 C. 805.
(5) 6 C. W. N. 5.
(6) 19 B. 121.
(7) 9 M. 5.
(8) 10 M. 169.
(9) 18 M. 437.
(10) 8 M. L. J. 1.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 799 OF 1910.

December 1, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Johnstone and Mr. Justice Shah Din.

BISHNA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat RATTANI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Agent—Compromise—Power-of-attorney—Construction of deed—Words giving general powers—Ejusdem generis—Power to compromise not similar to power to refer to arbitration—Agent not signing on behalf of principal—One plaintiff signing for the other though not appointed agent.

Three brothers, A., B. and C. were plaintiffs in a suit. A. and B. had given a special power-of-attorney for the case to C., authorizing the latter to engage a legal practitioner or to prosecute the case himself, to present applications to Court and to refer to arbitration. The power of attorney then recited the following words:—"garza ke kul sakhta pardakhta mukhtar mazhar ko manzur wa makbul hoga"—"In short, everything done by the mukhtar will be binding on me."

A compromise in writing was put in; it was signed by A. and C. but B. neither signed the compromise nor appeared in Court to assent to it. C. signed the compromise only for himself and not on behalf of B. A. signed to the following effect:—"for myself and as mukhtar for the other plaintiff through C. mukhtar."

told, on the presentation of compromise, to B. on a given date. C. appeared on that date that B. had not come though told to do so, C was then acting only for himself.

(1) that the compromise did not bind B; at the words purporting to express acceptance rs done by the mukhtar must be interpreted ight of the powers previously specifically set The power to compromise, like the power to aw the suit or confess judgment, was not generis with the powers specifically set forth power of attorney. Power to refer to arbitra- ld not be likened to the power to compromise; Begam v. Piari Begam, 50 P. R. 1898, fol-

(3) that C. never acted in the matter of the compromise on behalf of B. and A's signature on behalf of the other plaintiff could not bind B as A. held no power-of-attorney from B.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Ludhiana Division, dated the 25th May 1910, reversing that of the Additional District Judge, Ludhiana, dated the 23rd February 1910, decreeing plaintiff's claim.

The Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shafi, for the Appellants.

Mr. Devi Diyal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The parties to this case, as finally arrayed, are Bishna, Nikka Singh, and Dhanna Singh, sons of Samand Singh plaintiffs, and Musammat Ratni, Musammat Rani and Shera, minor defendants. The claim was for a declaration that a certain decree obtained by Shera against the two other defendants by collusion should not affect plaintiffs' reversionary rights. The suit having been instituted in December 1907, a compromise in writing was put in on 24th February 1908. Bishna did not sign that compromise or appear in Court to assent to it, and the first Court, therefore, while holding the other two plaintiffs bound by the compromise, found Bishna not bound and then on the merits granted him the declaration prayed for. Both Dhanna Singh and Bishna had given a special power-of-attorney for the case to Nikka Singh, but the first Court finally ruled that the powers given did not include authority to compromise, and further that it was more than doubtful whether Nikka Singh purported to act for Bishna in signing the compromise. On appeal, however, the learned Divisional Judge held that Bishna was bound and, therefore, decreed as to all the plaintiffs on the basis of the compromise.

The plaintiff Bishna has appealed against this finding, and Mr. Shafi on his behalf has had an easy task in showing that the first Court's decision is the correct one. The lower Appellate Court has misunderstood the facts of the case in at least one important particular. It is wholly wrong in writing that "Nikka distinctly asserted that he was acting as Mukhtar of Bishna and reported that Bishna would not attend Court as he accepted the compromise in full.' In reality, Nikka Singh, when told to produce Bishna on a given date appeared on that date and said that Bishna had not come, that he had told him to come and had warned him that he (Nikka Singh) was not acting for him, and that now he (Nikka Singh) was acting only for himself. There is thus in this incident nothing to support the idea that Bishna was bound by anything Nikka Singh said or did.

Next, the lower Appellate Court is not right in saying that the compromise was entered into by Nikka and Dhanna on behalf of Bishna. In the first place, Dhanna was not agent for Bishna at all; and secondly, Nikka expressly signed the compromise only for himself, while Dhanna wrote "for myself and as Mukhtar for the other plaintiff through Nikka Singh" "Mukhtar." The other plaintiff, no doubt, meant Bishna, but even so we cannot see that Nikka Singh, the only agent Bishna had, has, judging by the above words, acted as Bishna's agent in executing this compromise, whatever he may have thought he was doing.

Thirdly, we cannot agree with the Divisional Judge when he holds that the power-of-attorney covers the power to compromise. It authorizes Nikka Singh to engage a legal practitioner or to prosecute the case himself and to present applications in Court and to refer to arbitration. Then follow the words "garze ke kull sakhta pardakhta Mukhtar mazhar ko manzur wa kabul hoga." We think that such words as these must be interpreted in the light of the powers previously specifically set forth, and, in our opinion, the power to compromise like the power to withdraw the suit or to confess judgment, is not ejusdem generis with those powers. The Divisional Judge, we think, is wrong in likening arbitration to compromise because in both the case is settled "out of Court," for, in arbitration, the case once instituted, is finally settled by the Court.

GANPAT PRASAD v. SARJU.

It is unnecessary to pursue the argument further, for in Wazir Begam v. Piyari Begam (1) we have an authority very much in point. There the wording of the power of attorney was much the same as in the present case, and it was held that the power to compromise had not been conferred. Another indication the same way is, that Nikka Singh himself hardly thought himself empowered to compromise for Bishna.

We may note, as an episode in the case with which we are not now concerned, that the first Court first simply dismissed Bishna's claim for default of appearance. and that this Court set aside that order and remanded for re-decision.

For the reasons stated above, we accept the appeal, set aside the judgment and decree of the lower Appellate Court and remand the case to the lower Appellate Court to dispose of the remaining questions raised in the appeal to the lower Appellate Court.

Stamp on appeal refunded. Other costs to be costs in the case.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 50 P. R. 1898.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 385 OF 1911.

November 23, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Karamat Husain and Mr. Justice Chamier.

GANPAT PRASAD AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

ARJU—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 235—Agent and principal—Agent representing untruly the extent of his authority to third person—Breach of contract—Liability of agent to third person—Agent acting beyond the scope of his authority.

Section 235 of the Contract Act applies to a case where an agent untruly represents the extent of the authority given to him by his principal.

If a man makes a contract as agent, he promises that he is what he represents himself to be and he is liable for the breach of his contract whether or not he is aware that he is acting beyond the scope of his authority.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge of Banda, dated the 25th of March 1911.

Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru (with him Mr. Benode Behari), for the Appellants.

Mr. M. L. Agarwala (with him Mr. Gulzari Lal), for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—There has been some dicussion in this Court as to what the lower Appellate Court intended to find, in our opinion, the findings are perfectly clear. The appellants here were commission agents carrying on business at Karwi in the Banda District. One Mannu Lal, the proprietor of a shop at Katri in the Central Provinces, had five hundred bags of grain stored at Badausa in the Banda District. On the 25th of December 1907, the defendants, acting as commission agents on behalf of Mannu Lal, sold the five hundred bags of grain to the respondent at the rate of 9 seers 6 chitaks to a rupee and the respondent paid them Rs. 51 as earnest money. Delivery of the grain was to be given in eight days. But Mannu Lal, the owner of the grain, refused to allow the appellants to deliver it to the respondent on the ground that he had not authorized them to sell the grain at the rate at which it was sold. The learned Judge finds distinctly that the appellants were authorized by Mannu Lal to sell the grain at the rate of $9\frac{1}{4}$ seers to a rupee and were not authorized to sell it as they did at the rate of 9 seers 6 chitaks to a rupee. He also finds distinctly that the appellants did not inform the respondent at the time of the sale that they were not authorized to sell the grain at the rate of 9 seers 6 chitaks to a rupee. He says "it follows from this finding that they untruly represented themselves to be authorized agents of Mannu Lal to sell his grain at the rate of 9 seers 6 chitaks to a rupee and are, therefore, liable under section 235 of the Indian Contract Act to compensate the respondent for the damages sustained by him." He gave the respondent a decree for Rs. 425 but refused to give him the costs spent by him in a previous suit against Mannu Lal, on the ground that he might have impleaded the appellants in the previous suit and so have saved the expense of the present suit. The respondent has filed cross-objections with regard to the refusal of the learned Judge to give him the costs of the previous suit. The objections were filed beyond time and the reason given for not filing them within time is unsatisfactory. We decline to consider the cross objections. On behalf of the appellants it is contended that section 235 of the Contract Act does not apply to the case. Dr. Tej Bahadur argues that it was intended to apply to only the case of a person who represents himself to be the agent of another when in fact he has no authority from him whatever, but not to the case of a person who untruly represents the extent of the authority given to him by another. Dr. Tej Bahadur concedes, that the case of Collen v. Wright (1) on which section 235 is obviously based has been applied to both classes of cases in England. It seems to us clear that section 235 was intended to apply to both classes of cases. There is no distinction in principle between the case of a man who represents that he has authority from another when he has no authority whatever and the case of a man who represents that he has certain authority from another when he has authority of another description. In neither case can the man who makes the representation be said to be the authorized agent of the other with reference to the matter on which he has no authority. We agree also with the learned Judge of the Court below that the appellants must be taken to have untruly represented themselves to be authorized by Mannu Lal to sell his grain at the rate of 9 seers 6 chitaks to a rupee. For, as it was said in the case of Collen v. Wright (1), if a man makes a contract as agent he promises that he is what he represents himself to be and he is liable for the breach of his contract whether or not he is aware that he is acting beyond the scope of his authority. In our opinion the decision of the Court below is perfectly right and we dismiss the appeal and cross-objections with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 8 El. & Bl. 647; 27 L. J. Q. B. 215; 4 Jur. (N. S.) 357; 6 W. R. 123.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 543 OF 1910.

November 10, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim.

GOPAL ROW GADYRAM SAHIB—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER.

versus

VEERAPPAN SERVAIKARAN—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Promissory-note, suit on—Promisee's name inserted in erroneous manner—Suit by real promisee—Maintainability of suit—Rectification of instrument, suit for, whether necessary.

A suit on a promissory-note can be maintained by a person intended as the real promisee of the note, although a wrong made is mentioned by mistake in the note, as promisee. The real promisee is entitled to produce evidence to show that the name given is a mistake.

Jacobs v. Benson, 63 Am. Dec. 609; 39 Maine 132 and Willis v. Barrett, 2 Starke's Report 29, relied upon.

Subbu Narayana Vanthiar v. Ramaswamy Iyer, 30 M. 88, 1 M. L. T. 377; 16 M. L. J. 503, explained and distinguished.

It is not necessary to bring a suit for rectification of the instrument before a suit on the promissory-note can be instituted.

Petition, under section 25 of Act IX of 1887, praying the High Court to revise the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Tanjore, in S. C. S. No. 673 of 1910.

Mr. P. S. Subramanya Iyer, for the Petitioner.

Mr. T. R. Venkatrama Sastri, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—What happened in this case was this. The plaintiff was entitled to some money from the defendant on settlement of accounts, and the defendant to secure the amount due, executed the promissory-note sued on. By a mistake of the writer, the name of the plaintiff's father was written as the person in whose favour it was executed instead of the plaintiff's name. The plaintiff's father was dead and his name was inserted by mistake, the parties intending all the time that the plaintiff was to be the promisee. The Subordinate Judge has non-suited the plaintiff on the ground that a suit for rectification of the promissory-note must be first brought and the instrument rectified before he can institute the suit. A suit for rectification of document is not cognizable by the Small Cause Court, but I do not see the necessity for such a suit. The case of the plaintiff is, that he is in fact the promisee and was intended to be such, but only his father's name has been entered by mistakes as if it was his own name. Evidence can be given to show that there was such a mistake. See Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume II, page 473, section 797, Jacobs v. Benson (1), and Willis v. Barrett (2); and there is no reason why the Small Cause Court cannot receive such evidence. Section 87 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, also seems to confirm the view, because, if a party to a negotiable instrument is entitled to make an alteration to carry out the common intention of the parties it stands to reason that evidence can be adduced to show that there has been a mistake. I do not think Subba Narayana Vathiyar v. Ramaswami Iyer (3) decides anything to the contrary. Here, what is sought to be proved is not that the parties intended that the benefit of the promissory-note should accrue to a person not named in the instrument, but that, by the promisee named in the promissory-note, the real promisee was intended.

(1) 63 Am. Dec. 609; 39 Maine 132.
(2) 2 Starke's Rep. 29.

The judgment of the Subordinate Judge is reversed and the suit will be remanded to him for trial on the merits. Costs will follow the result.

Decree set aside.

(3) 30 M. 88; 1 M. L. T. 377; 16 M. L. J. 503.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 755 OF 1910.

November 7, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Spencer.

CUDDAPARA ANANTARAZU GARU AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS.

versus

CUDDAPPARAZU NARAYANARAZU GARU AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 120—Illegal attachment and sale—Suit for restitution and declaration—Limitation—Cause of action.

Where property has been wrongfully attached in execution of a decree and has subsequently been sold in pursuance of such attachment, a suit for a declaration that the attachment was illegal and for restitution is within time if brought within 6 years from the date of sale, though more than five years from the date of attachment. Though the attachment gives a cause of action for a declaratory suit, the sale gives a fresh cause of action as, till then, the title in the property does not pass from the owner.

Robert Skinner v. Shankar Lal, 31 A. 10 n; 5 A. L. J. 638 n; 1 Ind. Cas. 556 and Narasimha Rao v. Ganga Ram, 18 M. L. J. 590; 4 M. L. T. 271, relied upon.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of Cuddapah, in A. S. No. 159 of 1908, presented against the decree of the District Munsif of Nandalur, in O. S. No. 550 of 1906.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. S. Sivaswami Aiyar, Advocate-General, for the Appellants.

The Hon'ble Mr. L. A. Govindaraghava Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—We think that the decree of the lower Appellate Court cannot be sustained. The learned Advocate-General for the appellant, though admitting that the attachment of 29th November 1898 was an invasion of the plaintiff's right and gave a cause of action for a declaratory suit, has, we think rightly, contended that the sale on the 30th June 1906 was a fresh invasion of the plaintiff's right and gave a fresh cause of action. The District Judge has referred to a second attachment, but apparently the first attachment was not discharged, and the Advocate-General does not base his argument on any allegation that the sale was not in pursuance of the original attachment of the 29th November 1898, nor is it contended that the attachment is a continuing wrong, but we think that the sale ought properly to be regarded as a fresh and greater invasion of the plaintiff's right so as to give a fresh cause of action. The sale, though held in pursuance of the attachment, was not a necessary consequence of it. The plaintiffs, no doubt, might then have sued, but we do not think they were bound to sue. [See Robert Skinner v. Shankar Lal (1).] The attachment gives the judgment-creditor certain right in execution, but the title to the property continues in the owner notwithstanding the attachment and it so continues even if the owner's objection to the attachment be disallowed. [Narasimha Row v. Ganga Ram (2).] But when a sale takes place and is confirmed, the title passes to the purchaser from the date of the sale (section 65, Civil Procedure Code). The owner's title is affected by a sale in an altogether different and greater degree than it is by an attachment. We think this gives the owner of the property a fresh cause of action. In the present case, the suit was brought within 6 years from the date of sale, and was, therefore, not barred by Article 120, Schedule II of the Limitation Act of 1877.

We must, therefore, set aside the decree of the District Judge, and direct him to restore the appeal to his file and dispose of it according to law.

The costs in this appeal will abide and follow the result.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 31 A. 10 n; 5 A. L. J. 638 n; 1 Ind. Cas. 556.

(2) 18 M. L. J. 590; 4 M. L. T. 271.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
CIVIL RULE No. 2793 OF 1911.
August 3, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.
RAGHUNANDAN PROSAD SINGH AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS
versus
RAM NARAIN SINGH AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Sanction to prosecute—Whether application in writing necessary—Inquiry—Sanction after great length of time—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 195.

Sanction under section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code should ordinarily be given only on an application made by some person who may desire to complain of any of the particular offences specified in the section but whose complaint cannot be entertained without such sanction.

Durga Das Rukhit v. Queen-Empress, 27 C. 820; In re Banarsi Das, 18 A. 213; Baperam Surma v. Gouri Nath Dutt, 20 C. 474 and Mufat Ali v. Emperor, 10 C.W. N. 222; 3 Cr. L. J. 112; 2 C. L. J. 619, referred to.

It must be observed, however, that section 195 does not expressly provide that an application must be made for the grant of sanction. The rule stated above may be justified to this extent that before sanction is granted, the Court must be satisfied that there is some person who is willing to avail himself of it and carry on the prosecution.

An application for sanction need not to be made in writing nor need it be made before an inquiry is held under section 195.

An application was made to a Munsif for sanction to prosecute under sections 209, 210, 193 and 465 Indian Penal Code: the Munsif refused the application on the ground that it was undesirable to grant sanction to a private prosecutor, and his order was upheld on appeal:

Held, that in the circumstances of the present case it would be improper to grant sanction to the private prosecutor.

Rule against the order of the District Judge of Shahabad, dated November 7th, 1910.

Babu Raghunath Singh, for the Petitioners.

Mr. K. Jaiswal and Babu Chandra Sekhar Prosad Singh, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—We are invited in this rule to set aside an order which purports to have been made under section 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It appears that the opposite party bought at different times the interest of Jatadhari and Jagdeo Narain in certain estates. Subsequently, Jatadhari filed a rent suit against one Subhago and obtained an ex parte decree. On the 13th April 1907, an application was made to the Court which had tried the suit, for sanction to prosecute the partners, except Kuldip, for offences under sections 209, 210, 193 and 465 of the Indian Penal Code. The Munsif refused to grant the sanction on the 24th August 1907. He held in substance that this was an attempt by the petitioners for sanction to have by a cheap method an inquiry into their civil rights. An appeal preferred to the District Judge was dismissed on the 10th January 1908. At the same time, the learned Judge observed that if there was any civil suit or other judicial proceeding in which it transpired that there had been fraud and manufacturing of false evidence, sanction to prosecute could be properly asked for these. No civil suit or other judicial proceeding seems to have been subsequently commenced and on the 11th September 1909, Kuldip, alleging that he was the son of the daughter of Subhago, who had meanwhile died, made an application for return of certain documents. Notice was thereupon issued to the present opposite party to show cause if there was any objection to the return of the documents. They came forward and stated that the documents were forgeries and ought to be impounded. The learned District Judge thereupon refused to return the documents and directed the Police to inquire into the matter. The Police held an elaborate investigation and upon their report the learned Judge was satisfied that serious offences against public justice had been committed. He thereupon made the order now under consideration. His order was in substance to the effect that Ram Narain Singh and Jay Gopal Singh or either of them would be entitled to prosecute Kuldip, Jatadhari and Raghu Nandan for offences under sections 193, 209, 211 and 465, Indian Penal Code. These persons, subsequently, appeared before the learned Judge and represented to him that he had no jurisdiction to make the order in question. Thereupon the learned Judge, on the 20th February 1911, held that his order had been made without jurisdiction and he made a reference to this Court to have the order cancelled. This Court, however, declined to entertain the matter, unless an application was made in the regular way by the party concerned for cancellation of the alleged improper order. The present Rule was, subsequently, obtained by the petitioners.

RAGHUNANDAN PROSAD SINGH v. RAM NARAIN SINGH.

In support of the Rule it has been argued that the sanction granted under section 195 ought to be revoked because it was granted without jurisdiction. It has been contended, in the first place, that the proceedings for grant of sanction were irregular because no application had been made for that purpose by the party to whom sanction has now been granted. We are of opinion that there is no substance in this contention. It may be conceded that the cases of Durga Das Rukhit v. Queen-Empress (1), In re Banarsi Das (2), Baperam Surma v. Gouri Nath Dutt (3) and Mufat Ali v. Emperor (4) recognise the proposition that ordinarily a sanction under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, should be given only on an application made for it by same person who may desire to complain of the particular offence but whose complaint cannot be entertained without such sanction. It must be observed, however, that section 195 does not expressly provide that an application has to be made for the grant of the sanction. The Rule recognised in the cases mentioned may be justified to this extent that before a sanction is granted, the Court must be satisfied that there is some person who is willing to avail himself of the sanction and to carry on the prosecution for the purpose whereof the sanction is granted. It does not follow, however, that such application must be made in writing or that it must be made before an inquiry is held under section 195. In our opinion, the objection taken on behalf of the petitioners is wholly groundless.

It has been argued, in the second place, that sanction ought to be revoked in view of the previous orders made by the Court which tried the rent suit and the learned Judge himself. As we have already stated, the application of the opposite party for sanction to prosecute the petitioners was refused on the 24th August 1907. That order, in our opinion, was, at the time it was made, based on good and sufficient grounds. The learned Munsif pointed out, upon the authority of the decision of this Court in In the matter of Chundra Kant Ghose (5), that in cases of this description, it was undesirable that sanction should be granted to a private prosecution. The order of the Munsif was sought to be assailed by way of appeal to the learned Judge, who also declined to interfere. In view of these facts, it is clearly improper that sanction should now be granted to these very persons for the prosecution of the petitioners. On this ground the sanction must be revoked.

But it does not follow by any means, as has been apprehended by the learned Counsel for the opposite party, that the ends of justice will be defeated. This is clear from section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, that steps may yet be taken very effectively to bring the offenders to justice if an offence has been committed, as the learned District Judge seems to hold on the result of the Police inquiry. The scope and object of section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, are perfectly plain, but have sometimes been misunderstood. The object of the section is to bar the institution of proceedings for prosecution in respect of certain offences unless such prosecution has been sanctioned by the Court concerned or action has been taken on the complaint of the Court. The policy of the law is that in cases relating to offences against public justice, the responsibility primarily rests with the Court concerned and the Court must decide whether it is necessary, for the sake of the purity of the administration of public justice, to have a prosecution, and whether such prosecution should be conducted by a private or by the public prosecutor. In the case before us, the application of the intending private prosecutor has already been refused; but the Court is still at liberty to adopt the other alternative. It will, therefore, be open to the proper authorities, the District Magistrate and the Public Prosecutor, to consider whether any action should be taken in this matter; but before it is decided to adopt such a course, one very important element must be borne in mind, namely, whether in view of the length of time which has already elapsed, a prosecution now commenced is likely to be brought to a successful termination.

The result, therefore, is that this Rule must be made absolute and the order of the learned District Judge set aside. The papers will be returned in order that further and

(1) 27 C. 820.
(2) 18 A. 213.
(3) 20 C. 474.
(4) 10 C. W. N. 222; 3 Cr. L. J. 112; 2 . CL. J. 619.
(5) 3 C. W. N. 3.

appropriate steps, if necessary, may be taken. The document impounded will be kept in custody and will not be returned.

Rule made absolute.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
CIVIL RULE No. 2527 OF 1911.
June 27, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.
KRISHNA PROSHAD MANDAL—PETITIONER
versus
RABINDRA NATH DINDA—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Sanction to prosecute—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 195—Filing forged document though not tendering in evidence—Attempt to use forged document—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 471, 511—Proceeding under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code —Costs.

The filing of a forged document in a Court with the intention of relying on it at the trial of a case amounts to an attempt to use such document though the document itself was not actually used; and the person filing it may be prosecuted for offences under sections 511 and 471 of the Indian Penal Code.

Ambika Prasad v. Emperor, 35 C. 820; 8 Cr. L. J. 398, dissented from.

It is improper to award costs to a person who applies for sanction under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code.

Rule against the order of the District Judge of Midnapur, according sanction to the opposite party to prosecute the petitioner, passed in reversal of the order of the Munsif of Contai, dated 5th November 1910.

Babu Khirode Narayan Bhuiyan, for the Petitioner.

Babu Jotish Chondra Hazarah, for the Opposite Party.

Babu Ram Charan Mitra, Senior Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—We are invited in this Rule to set aside an order by which the Court of appeal below, in reversal of the order of the original Court, has directed the prosecution of the petitioner under section 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure for attempt to commit an offence punishable under section 471 of the Indian Penal Code. The circumstances under which the order has been made are not disputed before this Court. On the 18th August 1909, the plaintiff, now opposite party before us, instituted a suit for recovery of arrears of rent against the petitioner. On the 7th September, the defendant filed his written statement in which he pleaded payment of the sum claimed to the officer of the plaintiff. On the 19th December the defendant filed what purported to be a receipt for the sum alleged to have been paid. On the 3rd March 1910, the plaintiff petitioned to the Court not to accept this receipt, because it had been filed too late. The plaintiff further appears to have impugned the genuineness of the document. On the 31st March, the defendant petitioned to the Court that the document then on the record might not be accepted as genuine. He asserted that the receipt filed by him had been removed from the record and in its place had been substituted the document which was justly impugned as forged by the plaintiff. On the 8th April, the suit was decreed, and we have been informed that no evidence was adduced by the defendant to prove the payment alleged to have been made by him. On the same day, the successful plaintiff prays that the receipt might be kept in safe custody, and on the 7th May following, he applied for sanction to prosecute the defendant. The defendant contended that he had not committed any offence. He denied that the receipt on the record had been filed by him and he reiterated his former statement that the document impugned as forged had been substituted by some person for the genuine document originally produced by him. The Court disbelieved this evidence and came to the conclusion that the document on the record had been originally filed by the defendant. But the Court refused the application under section 195, in view of the decision of this Court in the case of Ambika Prasad v. Emperor (1) which was treated as authority for the proposition that the filing of a document in Court was not an act which constituted an offence within the meaning of section 471 of the Indian Penal Code, because it had never been tendered in evidence. The plaintiff then appealed against this order. The learned Judge has held, upon the authority of the decision of this Court in Queen-Empress v. Lala Ojha (2), that the defendant is liable to be prosecuted for an offence under section 471 of the Indian Penal Code read with section 511; he has also directed the defendant to pay to the plaintiff the costs of the proceedings under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code.

(1) 35 C. 820; 8 Cr. L. J. 398.
(2) 3 C. W. N. 653.

KRISHNA PROSHAD v. RABINDRA NATH.

This decision has been assailed before us on two grounds, namely, first, that the petitioner has not committed any offence, and, consequently, his prosecution cannot be directed under section 195; and, secondly, that no order for costs ought to be made against him even if the order under section 195 is maintained. In our opinion the first of these contentions is unsustainable but the second must prevail.

It is clear upon the facts stated which have been determined only for the purpose of the present proceedings, that the applicant is liable to be prosecuted for attempt to commit an offence punishable under section 471, Indian Penal Code. The Courts below have concurrently found that the receipt in question is a forged document and was filed by the defendant in support of the allegation previously made in his written statement that he had paid to the officer of the plaintiff the sum claimed as arrears of rent. Two questions, therefore, arise for consideration, namely, first, whether the applicant has used as genuine a document which he knew to be forged, and, secondly, if this question be answered in the negative, whether he has attempted to use a document as genuine which he knew or had reason to believe to be forged.

In regard to both these questions, reliance has been placed, as already stated, upon the case of Ambika Prasad v. Emperor (1) which has been treated as an authority for the propositions that the mere filing of a document in Court without tendering the same in evidence does not constitute user of it within section 471 of the Penal Code. In our opinion, the head-note to the report is more comprehensive than the judgment, and we are not prepared to affirm it as an inflexible proposition of law that the filing of a document in Court can never constitute an user of it within section 471, Indian Penal Code, till it has been actually tendered in evidence. It has further been argued, on the strength of this decision, that the filing of a document in Court does not constitute an attempt to use it as evidence, and that, consequently, the petitioner is not liable to be prosecuted under section 471 read with section 511, Indian Penal Code. No doubt, there is one isolated sentence in the judgment in the case of Ambika Prasad v. Emperor (1) which lends some apparent support to this contention. But if the learned Judges intended to lay it down as an inflexible rule that what has been done in the case before us did not in law constitute an attempt to use the document, we are not prepared to accept that view as well founded. Here the petitioner has done everything that was necessary to enable him to tender the document in evidence at the trial. He had produced it and filed it in Court; and his purpose admittedly was to rely upon it at the trial with a view to support his plea of payment of the sum claimed by the plaintiff. Upon these facts, we are of opinion that the case is, undoubtedly, one of an attempt to use the document, though possibly not a case of using the document itself. It is not necessary for our present purpose to give a definition of an attempt to commit an offence within the meaning of section 511, Indian Penal Code. The line of separation between preparation and 'attempt' may in some cases be very fine and the question whether what has been done amounts only to preparation or constitutes an attempt must depend upon the circumstances of each case. The danger which necessarily pursues an endeavour to define what constitutes a 'preparation' and an 'attempt' is well illustrated by the decision in Empress v. Riosat Ali (3) where Sir Richard Garth, C. J., relied upon the case of Reg. v. Chaseman (4) and Macpherson's case (5) for the purpose of defining what constitutes an attempt. The cases relied upon, however, have been, subsequently, overruled in England [Queen v. Brown (6) and Queen v. Williams (7).] Without undertaking, therefore, to define the term 'attempt,' we hold that the circumstances of the case before us show that the prosecution of the petitioner has been rightly ordered and that order will stand.

But in so far as the order of the Court below directs the payment of costs by the petitioner to the opposite party, it must be set aside. A proceeding under section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code ought not to be treated as a proceeding between private parties. The person who applies for sanction presumably does so in the interests of the administration of public justice, and if that be his real point of view, he cannot very

(3) 7 C. 352; 8 C. L. R. 572.
(4) Lewis & Cavros 145.
(5) Dean & Bell 202.
(6) 24 Q. B. D. 357.
(7) (1893) 1 Q. B. 320.

well claim costs from the party against whom he obtains the order. Besides, the grant of sanction does not establish the guilt of the person against whom the order is made; if ultimately it transpires that the person is innocent, the order for payment of costs by him to the party who obtained the sanction cannot very well be justified. We, therefore, make the Rule absolute in part and set aside the order for payment of costs. The order of the Court below is affirmed in other respects.

Rule made absolute in part.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE No. 598 OF 1911.

November 16, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

BEHARI LAL AND OTHERS—ACCUSED.

Ferries Act (IV of 1878), s. 22—Unauthorised collection by servants of lessee—Liability of lessee—Master and servant—Act done beyond scope of duty.

B. as the lessee of a ferry employed C. to attend to the ferry and collect the tolls. C. in contravention of law extorted unauthorized and excessive toll from certain passengers and thereby committed an offence under section 22 of the Ferries Act. B. was prosecuted for this offence and convicted:

Held, that the conviction of B., who was not present and took no part in the extortion, was bad in law.

Queen-Empress v. Tyab Alli, 24 B. 423, distinguished.

Reference submitted by the Sessions Judge of Farrukhabad, dated the 18th of October 1911.

The Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is a reference by the Sessions Judge of Farrukhabad. The facts of the case are as follows:—The applicants for revision in the Court below, namely, Behari Lal and Bashir-ud-din, are the lessees of Singhi Rampore Ferry. As such lessees they employed certain persons to attend to the ferry and collect the tolls. These servants in contravention of the law extorted unauthorized and excessive toll from certain passengers thereby committing an offence under section 22 of the Ferries Act. The lessees, who apparently were not present and took no part in the extortion, have been prosecuted for this offence, and have been convicted and fined, apparently, on the ground that whatever the servants have done in the course of their employment that act is the act of the masters. The learned Government Advocate has called my attention to a ruling in Queen-Empress v. Tyab Alli (1). That is a case under the Arms Act. The accused therein was a licensed vendor of arms and ammunition and he employed a certain man as a salesman. The latter sold certain Military Ammunition to certain persons without previously ascertaining that such persons were legally authorized to possess the same. It was pointed out in the judgment of that case that the question for decision was whether the accused had or had not "delivered" the stores, as section 22 of the Indian Arms Act, 1878, makes penal a "delivery" of Military stores et cetra. The learned Judges who decided the case remarked as follows:—"We fail to see how it can be contended that, under these circumstances, a delivery of goods by the man in charge would not be a delivery by the owner of the shop? It is not a question of intention, of mens rea, or of knowledge; it is the delivery which the Act makes penal and the delivery by the Manager is clearly in this case a delivery by the licensee." The rule laid down in Attorney-General v. Siddon (2) runs as follows:—"Whatever a servant does in the course of his employment with which he is entrusted and as a part of it, is the master's act." The offence in the present case is a very different one. It consists of extortion of unauthorized tolls from passengers. The servants in doing this act did something which was outside the scope of their employment. In this very offence there is decidedly a mens rea, a criminal intent. If it were an act done by the servant within the scope of their employment, then the conviction of the master would, in the present case, be a good one. But, in my opinion, the principle laid down in Attorney-General v. Siddon (2) does not apply to the present offence. The conviction of the lessees is bad in law. I accept the reference and set aside the conviction and sentence. The fine, if paid, be refunded.

Conviction set aside.

(1) 24 B. 423.

(2) (1830) 1 C. & J. 220; 1 Tyr 41; 9 L. J. (o. s.) Ex. 7.

BABU PERSHAD v. EMPEROR.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
CRIMINAL REVISION No. 510 OF 1911.
November 14, 1910.
Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball.
BABU PERSHAD--PETITIONER
versus
EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 110, 406 —Judgment of lower Appellate Court very sketchy—Evidence not examined or weighed carefully—High Court's power to interfere on merits—Revision—Practice—Reputation—Evidence—Admissibility.

The High Court will not ordinarily interfere on merits with proceedings under section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure provided that the Court hearing the appeal under section 406 shows in its judgment that it has really and not merely nominally considered the evidence on the record.

Where the judgment of a District Magistrate, deciding in appeal a case under section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, is very short and does not show that the evidence was at all examined and carefully weighed, the High Court will interfere on merits in revision.

Sham Lal v. King-Emperor, 6 A. L. J. 487; 2 Ind. Cas. 225; 9 Cr. L. J. 528, referred to.

In a proceeding under section 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code a list of crimes in which the accused was suspected by a Police Officer is inadmissible in evidence to establish the reputation of the accused.

Revision against an order of the District Magistrate of Meerut.

Mr. Boys (with him Messrs. R. Alston and Sital Prashad Ghosh), for the Applicant.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in revision from an order of the District Magistrate of Meerut whereby he dismissed the applicant's appeal from the order of a first class Magistrate binding him over to be of good behaviour in his own bond for Rs. 2,000 with two sureties for Rs. 2,000 each for a period of one year. As remarked by Alston, J., in the case of Sham Lal v. Emperor (1), the High Court will not ordinarily interfere on the merits with proceedings under section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure provided that the Court hearing the appeal under section 406, shows in its judgment that it has really and not merely nominally considered the evidence on the record. In the present case some fifty three witnesses for the prosecution were examined by the Court of first instance. The case was keenly contested by the applicant, who called about one hundred and twenty witnesses to establish his good character. The Magistrate who heard the case wrote a judgment covering some eight or nine pages of typed matter. He discussed the evidence and came to a conclusion in respect thereto. The District Magistrate decided the appeal in a judgment of some fourteen lines. He has merely stated therein that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate had tried the case carefully and conscientiously and had given sound reasons for his conclusions and that he (the District Magistrate) agreed with his reasons and considered that the evidence on the record warranted the order passed. There is no attempt, whatsoever in this judgment to show that the evidence was at all examined and carefully weighed. It is a judgment written as if it were the case of a revision and not of an appeal. The learned Judge of this Court before whom this application was filed, therefore, admitted it in order that the evidence might be examined with the assistance of the applicant's Counsel. I would, therefore, call the attention of the District Magistrate to the remarks by Alston, J., in the above mentioned case with which I fully agree.

There are certain facts in this case which are either admitted by the prosecution witnesses or clearly proved on behalf of the applicant. The latter is a Brahmin by caste and a resident of the town of Ghaziabad, his father Debi Diyal is a retired Kanungo and apparently a well-to-do man. It has even been said by one of the witnesses for the prosecution that he is worth a lakh of rupees. He owns zemindary in several villages, house property and also earns an income by money-lending. The accused is a man of about 36 years of age who has acted as general-attorney on behalf of his father. Income tax has been jointly assessed on both father and son and there can be no doubt that the son has been managing his father's estate especially when the latter was in service. The accused has two uncles who have served in the Police force as Sub-Inspectors and his cousins are in Government service in the Postal Department. He is also a general attorney on behalf of these cousins. He is, moreover, the only son of his father. It will thus be seen that the surrounding circumstances of the accused's life are not such as tend to make a man an habitual thief, receiver of stolen property, a harbourer of thieves or so dangerous or desperate a character that it is unsafe to allow him to mix with the public. Furthermore, it is in evidence that the applicant was a candidate] for a seat on the Municipal Board of Ghaziabad. In 1902 he very keenly contested with one Abdullah Khan the seat which the latter had held for many years. He was defeated but he contested the validity of the election in the Court of the District Magistrate. Sub-Inspector Juni Singh, a witness for the prosecution, has clearly admitted that there is ill-feeling between Abdulla Khan and Debi Dayal also over property. There is no doubt that the property of Ibadullah, a brother of Abdullah Khan and father of the witness Siraj Ahmed, was attached and sold up by Debi Diyal. The evidence of Syed Farazand Ali, Tahsildar, also shows that when he became Tahsildar of Ghaziabad in 1906 the accused made a complaint to him that the local Police Officer (who was then Agha Sher Ali Khan) was doing his best to dishonour him. One Budhu was prosecuted under section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and was bound over to be of good behaviour. This was apparently in the year 1909. He, I understand, was one of the applicant's servants, who has, however, been dismissed since the case. In the course of the case against Budhu some of the witnesses, who are also witnesses in the present case, namely, Sheo Charan Das, Siraj Ahmed, Gokul Chand, Bhagwan Das, Madda Mal and Zaharia Mal, stated in their evidence that Budhu was an associate of the present applicant and that the latter was a badmash, against these six witnesses the present applicant filed a suit for damages for defamation in the Civil Court. These suits have been subsequently dismissed, I understand on a technical point, namely, that the statements were privileged. It is in these circumstances that the present case was launched against the applicant sometime towards the end of the year 1910. The charge against him falls under clauses (a), (b), (c) and (f) of section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It is that he is by habit a robber and house-breaker; that he habitually receives stolen property; that he habitually protects and harbours thieves, and that he is so desperate and dangerous a character as to render his remaining without security for good behaviour, hazardous to the community. In addition to a mass of irrelevant and inadmissible evidence which has been admitted on the record, the other prosecution evidence was directed to proving the applicant's reputation. It was further alleged that he had committed certain specific offences for none of which he was ever prosecuted excepting one case in which he was convicted of an offence under section 232, Indian Penal Code, and fined Rs. 25. In the matter of the charge under clause (f) of section 110 this one conviction is practically the sum total of the evidence to prove that the applicant is desperate and dangerous to the community. One witness does, indeed, state that the applicant extorted money from a man who is now dead. He further stated that the accused attempted to extort money from a person who is still alive, but who is not called to prove the fact. This witness is speaking solely from hearsay. Several witnesses have stated that they are so afraid of him that they remain indoors after dark. They say that they fear for their lives. I have examined the record. Not one of them can give a reasonable cause for this fear. In so far as the charge under clause (f) is concerned, there is practically no evidence at all. The charge under this clause cannot be proved by general repute. The one case of assault which has been established against the applicant is utterly insufficient to prove that he is a dangerous character. I would point out that the Magistrate took into evidence the record of a case against the accused in which on the 13th of October 1909 he was fined a sum of Rs. 10 for failing to attend the police station on summons issued by the Sub-Inspector. This record is perfectly irrelevant. It does not, for a single instant, indicate that the accused is a man of bad or violent character. It is one instance of the evidence which was inadmissible but on which the Magistrate placed great reliance. Coming to the charges under clauses (a), (b) and (c), eliminating inadmissible evidence, there remains a considerable number of witnesses of the town of Ghaziabad and neighbouring villages, who have testified to the fact that the applicant has the reputation of being a man, who habitually harbours thieves, commits theft and receives stolen property. The majority of these witnesses have stated that they have seen the accused associating with various persons some of whom they declare to be persons of bad character, but in the majority of these cases, however, beyond the opinion of the witnesses themselves there is nothing to show that these alleged associates are persons of bad character. In the cases only of Mohan Kedarn and Budhu have the convictions been established. The question remains whether this evidence for the prosecution is worthy of acceptance. I have gone minutely and with great care through both that for the prosecution and the defence. Omitting the Government servants, namely, the Police Officers and the Tahsildar, seventeen of the witnesses are residents of the town. Others are of the neighbouring villages. As I have noted above, the accused is a man of about 36 years of age. The majority of witnesses against him state that it is only during the last three or four years that he has taken to evil ways. One or two have stated that he has always been such a man. All of these witnesses are neighbours, many of whom have known him all his life and nearly all have known him for a long period. It is impossible for the two statements to be correct, namely, that the man has been a bad character all his life and that he has only been a bad character during the last three or four years. As I have already pointed out, the surrounding circumstances of his life are not such as tend to make a man become an habitual thief or receiver of stolen property. If he had been such all his life it is clear that all his neighbours must have heard of this many years ago. We may take it, therefore, for granted that of the two statements made by the prosecution witnesses in this respect one is more likely to be correct which goes to show that it is only in later years he has taken to evil courses. But there are very clear indications in the evidence of the witnesses themselves as well as from the surrounding circumstances that the witnesses have done their best to exaggerate and to make things look as black as possible against the accused. I take the case of Sheo Charan Das as an example. He is a zemindar and money-lender of Ghaziabad. He gives the reputation of the accused. He states that he associates with Mohan, Budhu and certain others who were his servants and of whom Budhu was bound over. His statement that Murli and Ghasi, goldsmiths, are also his associates is valueless as evidence. He states that these goldsmiths melt down stolen property for the accused. The basis of his knowledge he cannot give, nor is it established that Murli and Ghasi are men of bad character. He then states what he must know to be a lie, i. e., that the accused has no honest occupation, although it is proved from other evidence that the accused lends money and has obtained decrees in the Civil Courts. The character of this witness is further indicated by a little episode in his life, which has been proved. Prosecution witness No. 11 is one Chaudhari Bhagwan Das, who like Sheo Charan Das is a member of the Municipal Board. On the 8th of February 1909, Sheo Charan Das and Madda Mal, Prosecution witness No. 4, and Ram Chandar, Prosecution witness No. 7, and one other person presented a petition to the District Officer as against Bhagwan Das. They therein gave to Bhagwan Das the very character and reputation which they now ascribe to the present accused. In his cross-examination Sheo Charan Das admitted having made this complaint and stated that at that time Bhagwan Das was a man of bad character but that he had since reformed and is now a good man. Bhagwan Das, when examined as a witness for the prosecution in this case, stated that Sheo Charan Das, etc., had filed this petition against him because the present accused Babu Prasad, being hard pressed by the Police had gone to him to seek his assistance and to pray him to intercede on his behalf with the Police Officer. He says that seeing Babu Prasad on several occasions in his company these misguided men Sheo Charan Das, et cetera jumped to the conclusion that he and Babu Prasad were alike and, therefore, filed the petition of the 8th of February 1909. That petition is on the record. An examination of it shows that while Sheo Charan Das et cetera, set forth therein the names of many persons of alleged bad character with whom they said Bhagwan Das was associating, they nowhere in that petition mentioned the name of Babu Prasad. Now, Babu Prasad is said (vide the evidence of Agha Sher Ali Khan, Sub-Inspector) to have had a hand in every crime which was committed in the years 1908 and 1909 in the town of Ghaziabad. Two thefts occurred in the two houses, which adjoin that of the accused on either side. Even in these cases, according to the Sub-Inspector, the accused had a hand. I do not for a moment believe the statement of the Sub-Inspector. It is palpably gross exaggeration, even if Babu Prasad were a man of bad character. But granting that Babu Prasad is an habitual thief and receiver of stolen property and has been so far several years to the knowledge of all these witnesses, and granting that Bhagwan Das's statement is true, it is impossible to understand why the petition of the 8th February 1909 contains no mention of the present accused. As a matter of fact, there is nothing to show that Bhagwan Das was ever an habitual thief or receiver of stolen property. The petition was probably the outcome of ill-feeling over some local matter; apparently no action was taken on it. It shows how persons of Sheo Charan Das's position and character are ready to make a false statement of this kind and it is a most significant fact that the petition mentioned above contains no trace of the present accused's name. In a case like the present one, where a man has been for thirty-two years of his life apparently a respectable and honest member of society and who is said to have taken to evil courses without any ostensible reason it would, I think, be dangerous to rely on the statement of a man of this description, Sheo Charan's credibility is also indicated by other portions of his evidence. He states that Debi Dayal accused's father is a wealthy man and that he owns a small share in "one" village. He does not know that Debi Dayal is a money-lender. He knows of no ill-feeling between Abdul Khan and Debi Dayal. Now, this witness is a joint zemindar with Abdulla Khan in several villages. He must know that Debi Dayal is a money-lender. The ill-feeling between Abdulla Khan and the accused must be a matter of notoriety in a small town like Ghaziabad, especially since the contest over membership of the Municipality. The witness is clearly lying. The remarks I have made in respect of this witness, who is one of this most respectable of the prosecution witnesses, apply with equal force to Zaharia Mal, Madda Mal, Gokal Chand, Sambhu Ram Chander, Mannu Lal, Bhagwan Das, Girdhari and Chajju Mal. Of the other Ghaziabad witnesses, Akhtar Buland Khan, a petition-writer, is clearly shown by his cross-examination to be inimical to the accused. The majority of these Ghaziabad witnesses are connected with each other by relationship or business. One of the prosecution witnesses No. 16 curiously enough states that the accused is a man of good character. The witness Siraj Ahmad Khan was examined at a late stage of the case, He also states that the accused has no ostensible means of livelihood, but he is clearly a man who is moved by bitter ill-feeling against the accused. In a matter of reputation it would be a gross absurdity to place any reliance on the evidence of a witness like this. Abdulla Khan is his uncle. He holds a mukhtar-nama on behalf of his father. He has been cross-examined. He states that he does not know whether or not the accused had his father's property sold up.....He even says that he does not know that the accused contested his uncle's seat on the Municipal Board. He states that the accused threatened him after he had given evidence against Budhu. He adds that he filed no complaint in respect thereto as he did not know that the accused could be bound over. He pretends to be terrified by the accused. It is curious conduct for a Pathan. The remaining witnesses come from the neighbouring villages of Ghaziabad. An examination of their evidence will show that a large number of them, in fact the majority are co-sharers in villages in which Abdulla Khan and Sheo Charan Das, et cetera, are also co-sharers. Mohan Singh is a Thela-wala, Bansi and Bhawani are persons who ply carts for hire, very few of these witnesses are persons of any social standing. Most of them state that they have known the accused only for a few years though he has lived all his life in their neighbourhood. Many of them admit that they obtained their information as to the accused's character from Bhagwan Das, Sheo Charan Das and Madda Mal. The evidence of Salig and Hardeo Singh is purely hearsay and is of no value in regard to the accused's character. They nearly all mention different persons as being associates of the accused. They say these men are bad characters. There is no evidence to show this nor are there proofs on the record of any conviction against them. I take the evidence of Bhagwan Singh as a typical example of this class of witness. He says: I live in Karera about two miles off Ghaziabad. I am a zemindar paying revenue Rs. 100 on my own account and Rs. 1,025 as lambardar. I have known the accused for three years. I have often seen him with Wali Dad of Mula who is a bad character. His gang was connected with the dacoity in Razapore. Hence, I consider him a badmash. He admits that Abdulla Khan and Ramrichpal are co-sharers in his village. Now, the Razapore dacoity or robbery was not committed in his presence so that his statement merely amounts to this that he heard certain rumours and, therefore, considered the accused a badmash. As evidence establishing reputation, this is valueless. It establishes no reputation whatsoever. In this second batch of witnesses I also note that one Chote speaks for the accused and states that he is a good man. There remains the evidence of the Police Officers and the Tahsildar. The Police Officers are, of course, not impartial witnesses considering the relations that have clearly been existing between them and the accused. Their evidence, moreover, on the face of it contains gross exaggerations and mis statements. The Police Officers state that the accused has no means of subsistence which is palpably false. I notice that the Magistrate allowed the first Police Officer to put in a list of crimes in which he himself and another Officer suspected the accused. This class of evidence is quite inadmissible in such a case as this to establish the matter of a man's reputation. No doubt, a Police Officer is a competent witness to speak to the reputation of persons who dwell within his circle. No doubt, in the course of inquiries his suspicion may have been directed against certain persons and he may by reason thereof have received an impression as to their character and their reputations. He, no doubt, is entitled, when he has sworn to the reputation of a man, to give the basis of his knowledge and to point out how he has come to consider the accused a man of bad character. But it is quite a different thing for the Magistrate to take into evidence a list of cases in which other Police Officers, who have not been called as witnesses, have remarked in their diaries that suspicion had fixed itself on a certain person. If the local Police feel at all disposed to do harm to any resident of their circle it is a very simple matter for them to enter in their diaries from time to time that suspicion has fallen on certain persons and then finally to have their names registered in the Police register of bad characters and ultimately to take steps against them. I do not say that this is either always or frequently done. But it is so easily done that this class of evidence is of very little value and, unless the actual Police Officer is called who made the inquiry in his diary, a list of such cases is totally inadmissible in evidence. It is also very easy for a Police Officer to say that suspicion fell on the accused in certain cases. I note here that in the case of one Nanak in which suspicion was said to have fallen on the present accused, Nanak has himself been called as a witness for the defence and has given the lie to this statement. There is another case in which one Kedaru was convicted in 1909, certain witnesses have actually stated that the accused joined with Kedaru in commiting the offence. The untruth and the exaggeration of this statement is evident from the fact that the Police Officer cannot even say why he did not send up the accused for trial. Referring to the evidence of Agha Sher Ali Khan, Sub-Inspector, I see that he makes reference to the capture of a gang of men who were carrying arms in a grove in Ghaziabad. The men in that case were sent up for trial, were convicted under the Arms Act and were also bound over to be of good behaviour. I see that in the course of the case it was alleged that the accused Babu Prasad had sent for the gang to commit crime. The untruth of this is palpable. For if there had been any evidence whatsoever on the point, the Police most assuredly would have prosecuted Babu Prasad along with the others. This witness showed great bias against the accused and was thus led to make incredible statements. He alleged that crime had been very rife in 1908 and 1909 in the town, and that all investigations showed that the accused was concerned in them. He even states that the accused was concerned with the burglaries in the houses of those persons who live next door to him. It is hardly possible to believe this. He admits that on no occasion has he ever searched the accused's house. The Magistrate allowed him to give hearsay evidence to the effect that he had heard that Mohan and Ghasi, goldsmiths melted down property for the accused. The Tahsildar Syed Farzand Ali Khan has limited himself to stating that Babu Prasad did not bear a good character but that his reputation was "very bad indeed." He added that he had no personal opinion about the accused. He admitted that his informants on the question of Babu Pershad's character were Bhagwan Das and Siraj Ahmed whom I have already discussed. He admitted that when the accused made a complaint to him about the Police he made no inquiry about the matter. It is surprising to me that a man of this witness's position, holding the post of a Magistrate, should have lent himself to a case like the present one. The fact that Siraj Ahmed and the accused were on bad terms must have come to his knowledge. Likewise, the character of the other Ghaziabad witnesses. According to himself, he merely swallowed what those persons told him and his statement is valueless as evidence. The Magistrate took into evidence the record of the case, Emperor v. Budhu, under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code, which was decided on the 23rd September 1909. Now, the record of this case was inadmissible except to prove the fact that Budhu, an alleged associate of the applicant, had been bound over. But the Magistrate in his judgment says, "from the evidence of witnesses in the above case and from the Magistrate's judgment it is fully established that the said Budhu was an associate of the accused whom the Magistrate styles a notorious badmash according to the witness." To treat this record as evidence in this matter was most unfair to the present accused who was no party to the former trial of Budhu and had no opportunity of defending himself. Practically, the Magistrate has taken into evidence against the accused the statement of witnesses who were examined in a case to which the accused was no party and whom he had no opportunity of cross-examining; next the Magistrate took into evidence the record of the case, Emperor v. Dalip, under section 109 of the Code of Criminal Procedure decided on the 23rd September 1909. This was equally inadmissible in evidence. No evidence whatsoever (except hearsay) has been produced to show that the present accused has any concern with the accused in that case. The Magistrate has clearly taken into consideration the evidence of the witnesses in that case, for he refers to it in his judgment. He has also taken into evidence the case against the same persons under the Arms Act and also the record of the case against the present accused under section 174, Indian Penal Code, which I have already mentioned. He has also taken into consideration the record of the civil suit brought by Debi Dayal against other persons for recovery of money on the basis of a mortgage-deed. Babu Prasad was no party to that suit, though his father was. It is said that the Munsif came to the conclusion that Babu Prasad was guilty of fraud. How this evidence is admissible to prove that the accused is a habitual robber, receiver of stolen property or harbourer of thieves I fail to see. The Magistrate has taken the Munsif's judgment as evidence, proving that the accused was an extravagant man from whom his father had separated. The Munsif may on the evidence before him have come to that conclusion for the purpose of that case. But as Babu Prasad was no party to that suit it is clear that that judgment was not admissible in evidence to prove that the accused is an habitual thief, robber or receiver of stolen property.

(1) 6 A. L. J. 487; 2 Ind. Cas. 225; 9 Cr. L. J. 528.

In the view I have taken of the evidence for the prosecution, it is unnecessary to discuss the evidence for the defence at any length: I wish to lay no stress on it, because, in my opinion, the prosecution evidence is tainted and is unworthy of acceptance. But I cannot conclude my judgment without pointing out how unjust the Magistrate has been in the manner in which he weighed this evidence. He divided the witnesses into three groups, (a) Brahmins, of whom there were sixty-four, (b) Railway servants and (c) forty-seven men of different castes. The Brahmins he rejected en bloc because they were Brahmins. The Railway servants he rejected en bloc because the local Police in the year 1910 had successfully prosecuted a European Railway official named Mr. Roots for illicit importation of cocaine. The balance of forty-seven he rejected because most of them said that they had no personal knowledge of the accused's character, the rest he said were either partizans of the accused or were threatened by him. The Magistrate did not deign to point out the grounds on which he held that some of the witnesses were his partizans. He selected one witness Niadar as an example of those cowed by the accused. Mula Mal, a brother of Niadar, at the trial of Budhu, stated that Babu Prasad was Budhu's associate and a bad character. Niadar has in the present case come forward to state that the accused is a man of good character. The Magistrate concludes that Niadar had done this in order to avert the wrath which had fallen on the head of his brother, because Babu Prasad sued him for defamation. There is no presumption that Mula Mal stated the truth any more than that Niadar has stated the truth, yet for no real reason the Magistrate concludes that the latter is a liar. The Magistrate has also generally rejected the evidence for the defence because the witnesses state that they do not know other local bad characters. He also says that they have not had a sufficient opportunity of watching the movements of the accused. The majority of them are neighbours and have had just as much opportunity as the witnesses for the prosecution. I would point out that the Magistrate had nowhere in his judgment even mentioned the fact that the present accused had complained against the Police to the Tahsildar. In his judgment he even goes so far as to cast a slur on the character of the accused's father, though the witnesses for the prosecution themselves have almost unanimously stated that his character is above suspicion. He says in his judgment.—"The prosecution witnesses put the accused's father's present worth at about a lakh. How that was acquired I must not discuss here." This innendo is unjust and unfair. A document was produced on behalf of the defence to show that the father of the accused had made adverse remarks against the Ghaziabad Police in an application to the Collector of Aligarh for leave. In respect to this, the Magistrate remarks that it is not shown that the Ghaziabad Police had any information of it at all. Yet, curiously enough, he omits all mention of the other petition presented to the Tahsildar which I have already noted above. Towards the end of the judgment the Magistrate observes,—"Moreover, it would appear from the record that the present prosecution was proposed as far back as February 1910, but it was not sanctioned until the authorities had fully satisfied themselves on the point." This was not a relevant fact in the first place, and in the second place there is no evidence to establish it, any more than there is to establish he explanation given by the accused himself, of this very delay in launching the prosecution against him. His explanation is that in February 1910 the then District Magistrate, Mr. Poster, and the Superintendent of Police after inquiry into the matter decided to take no proceedings against him and that the present proceeding was only taken on the arrival of a new District Magistrate who was ignorant of the true facts. It is unnecessary to say any more. The evidence against the accused is, in my opinion, open to very grave suspicion and the case is not one in which a Court would be justified in calling on the applicant to give security for his good behaviour. The appeal was one which, in my opinion, was worthy of much more consideration at the hand of the lower Appellate Court than it actually received. I admit the application, the order of the Magistrate is set aside in toto.

In re THEOPHILUS RAMAPPA.

Application allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE NO. 185 OF 1911.
CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION NO. 142 OF 1911.

November 7, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, KT., Judge, and Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar.

In re THEOPHILUS RAMAPPA—PETITIONER.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 408—Criminal breach of trust by servant—Various sums of money received by servant from master at various times by false representations and not accounted for.

The accused, as the servant of a firm, obtained various sums of money from the Manager of the firm at various times by false representations that they were required for paying coolies but could not account for them afterwards:

Held, that the accused was guilty of criminal breach of trust as a servant.

Queen v. Hamilton Thompson, 32 L. J. M. C. 57; Queen v. Cooke, 40 L. J. M. C. 68, referred to.

Petition, under sections 435 and 439, Criminal Procedure Code, praying the High Court to revise the judgment of the Sessions Judge of South Canara, in Criminal Appeal No. 62 of 1910, confirming the conviction, but reducing the sentence passed on the petitioner by the Treasury 1st Class Magistrate of South Canara, in C. C. No. 3 of 1910.

Dr. S. Swaminathan, for the Petitioner.

Mr. C. F. Napier, Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

ORDER.—The accused, who was the superintendent of Messrs. Killick Nixon's Coffee Casing Works has been convicted of criminal breach of trust by misappropriating a large sum of money made up of amounts which he received from the Manager at various times on the false pretence that they were required for paying coolies who garbled coffee. The point argued in revision is that the receipt of each sum of money making up the aggregate amount by false representation amounted to the offence of cheating; that the charge against the accused really was that he committed various offences of cheating more than three in number, and that a single charge for all these acts of cheating was illegal. It is urged that the subsequent appropriation of the amounts by the accused to his own use would not amount to criminal breach of trust as the criminal intent was present at the time of the receipt of the money from the Manager. This argument is not sound. When the accused received the money he did so as a servant of the Company for the express purpose of using it for his master's benefit in a particular way. He was, therefore, entrusted with the money, and his appropriating it to himself clearly amounts to criminal breach of trust.

Dr. Swaminadhan relied on the case of Queen v. Hamilton Thompson (1) where, in similar circumstances, it was held that the offence committed was not larceny; but that case was disapproved of in the latter case of Queen v. Cooke (2) where it was pointed out that the earlier case merely held that the accused received money by false pretences, but the question whether his subsequent retention of it would amount to larceny was not considered. We are of opinion, therefore, that the conviction is right. We ought to observe that, in our opinion, Counsel ought to have brought to our notice the later decision, which weakened the case relied on by him. The petition is dismissed.

Petition dismissed.

(1) 32 L. J. M. C. 57.
(2) 40 L. J. M. C. 68.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 1460 OF 1911.

November 30, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kensington.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

GANDA SINGH—ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 35, 397, 438, 439—Accused convicted in two separate cases—Second sentence ordered to run from date of order—Direction illegal—Concurrent sentence, when can be passed—Revision—Effect to be given to real intention of Magistrate—Reduction of sentence.

The question whether sentences should be concurrent or consecutive arises only in cases of separate convictions at one trial. In all other cases, section 397 is imperative and should not be disregarded.

On 30th March 1910 A. was sentenced to four years' rigorous imprisonment. On 19th April 1910, he was convicted in a separate case by the same Magistrate and sentenced to three years' imprisonment which the Magistrate ordered should run from the date of his order. The first sentence was reduced on appeal to two years. On a reference to the Chief Court that the Magistrate's direction as to the commencement of the sentence in the second case was illegal;

Held, (1) that the direction was illegal and ought to be expunged from the order;

(2) that as the intention of the Magistrate was that A. should undergo a total period of 4 years' imprisonment, effect should be given to this intention and, consequently, the second sentence should be reduced to a term of two years to commence from the date of expiry of the first sentence.

Case reported by the District Magistrate, Lahore, under section 438 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

FACTS.—In case No. 14/7 decided by the Additional District Magistrate, Lahore, the accused Ganda Singh was sentenced on 30th March 1910 to undergo 4 years' rigorous imprisonment, including 3 months' solitary confinement, under sections 366/109, Indian Penal Code, and in Case No. 24/7 the same accused was sentenced by the said Additional Divisional Magistrate, on 19th April 1910, to undergo 3 years' rigorous imprisonment.

In both cases appeals were lodged and in Case No. 14/7 the sentence of accused Ganda Singh was reduced to 2 years' imprisonment, while in Case No. 24/7 the appeal was rejected by the learned Sessions Judge.

In the judgment of the latter Case No. 24/7 the Additional District Magistrate noted that Ganda Singh is sentenced to 3 years' rigorous imprisonment from the date of the order, i. e., 19th April 1910; this order is contrary to section 397, Indian Penal Code.

The proceedings were forwarded for revision on the following grounds:—

POUNUSAWMY NAIDU v. EMPEROR.

That the order of the Additional District Magistrate in Case No. 24-7 dated 19th April 1910 regarding commencement of the sentence, in face of the previous sentence in Case No. 14-7, appears to be contrary to section 397 of Criminal Procedure Code, and those words ought, therefore, to be expunged, or the sentence reduced in order to give effect to the Magistrate's wish as, according to section 397, Criminal Procedure Code, the sentence cannot run concurrently.

It is, therefore, requested that necessary alterations in the order may be made accordingly.

The files of the case are also submitted.

ORDER.—The Additional District Magistrate, when sentencing Ganda Singh on the 19th April 1910 (Case No. 24-7 of 1910), overlooked the application of section 35, Criminal Procedure Code.

It is only in case of separate convictions at one trial that the question arises whether sentences should be concurrent or consecutive. In all other cases, section 397 is imperative.

Ganda Singh had been previously convicted by the same Magistrate on 30th March 1910 and sentenced to 4 years' imprisonment, since reduced to two years on appeal. The Magistrate was not competent to direct that the fresh sentence of 19th April 1910 should run from the date of his order and that portion of his order is set aside.

It seems to have been the Magistrate's intention that Ganda Singh should undergo a total period of 4 years' imprisonment. To give effect to this intention, as near as may be, it is hereby ordered on revision that the second sentence of 19th April 1910 be so far reduced that the period of imprisonment for that offence shall be for two years instead of three years, to commence on expiry of the sentence awarded on the earlier conviction of 30th March 1910.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 557 OF 1911.
CASE REFERRED No. 107 OF 1911.
November 23, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Spencer.

N. POUNUSAWMY NAIDU AND OTHERS —ACCUSED

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 349, clause 2—Case sent for disposal to higher Magistrate—Power of superior Magistrate to send back case to former—"Pass such order as he thinks fit," meaning of.

Where a case is sent by a Sub-Magistrate under section 349, Criminal Procedure Code, to a Sub-Divisional Magistrate for disposal, the latter has no power to return the case to the former for disposal, but should dispose of it himself.

The provision in clause 2 of section 349, Criminal Procedure Code, that the Magistrate to whom the proceedings are submitted may pass such order as he thinks fit, means that he may pass such other final order disposing of the case as he thinks fit.

Case referred for the orders of the High Court, under section 438 of the Criminal Procedure Code, by the District Magistrate of Tinnevelly, in his letter dated 14th September 1911.

Mr. Joseph Satya Nadar, for the Accused.

Mr. P. R. Grant, for the Crown.

ORDER.—We agree with the District Magistrate's view that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate to whom the case was referred by the Sub-Magistrate was bound to dispose of the case himself and that he had no power to send the case back to the Sub-Magistrate for disposal. The provision in clause 2 of section 349 of the Criminal Procedure Code that the Magistrate to whom the proceedings are submitted may pass such order as he thinks fit, means, when taken in conjunction with the words immediately preceding, viz., (judgment), and sentence, that he may pass such other final order disposing of the case as he may think fit. We set aside the conviction of the accused by the Sub-Magistrate and direct the Sub-Divisional Magistrate to dispose of the case himself.

Conviction quashed.

BALA PASBAN KULDIP LAL v. GURWAR MISSER.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
CIVIL RULE No. 4125 OF 1911.
August 22, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.
BALA PASBAN KULDIP LAL—PETITIONER
versus
GURWAR MISSER—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 195 476—Sanction, granting, revoking or refusing to grant —Judicial proceeding—Competency of order under section 476 while hearing appeal under section 195 (6)—Sanction to stranger to suit.

The grant of sanction to prosecute, the revocation of sanction already granted, and the refusal of an application to grant sanction, are all judicial acts.

A District Judge in an appeal under sub-section (6) of section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code affirmed the order of a Munsif and refused to grant sanction to a stranger to a suit, and at the same time made an order under section 476:

Held, that it was perfectly open to the Judge to take proceedings under section 476, inasmuch as the fact of the commission of an offence had been brought to his notice in the course of a judicial proceeding under sub-section (6) of section 195.

In re Mathura Das, 16 A. 80, dissented from.

Queen-Empress v. Sheikh Beari, 10 M. 232; Queen-Empress v. Seshadri Ayyangar, 20 M. 383 and Pampapati Sastri v. Subbia Sastri, 23 M. 210, followed:

Held, also, that the Judge acted properly in refusing to grant sanction to a stranger to the suit.

Rule granted against the order of the District Judge of Mozaffarpur, refusing to grant the sanction to prosecute the opposite party.

Babu Shoroshi Charan Mitra, for the Petitioner.

Babu Ram Charan Mitra, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—We are invited in this Rule to set aside an order of prosecution under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, on the ground that it has been made without jurisdiction. The circumstances under which the order in question has been made may be briefly recited.

It appears that, in the course of a rent suit, process was served upon the defendant. The peon learnt subsequently that there had been false personation in connection with the service. He reported the matter to the Court with the result that a fresh summons was issued and served on the real defendant. An application was thereupon made by a stranger to the suit for sanction to prosecute three persons under section 205, Indian Penal Code. The Court refused the application, mainly, on the ground that sanction ought not to be granted to a person who was not a party to the proceeding and was apparently in no way interested in the matter before the Court. He then appealed to the District Judge under sub-section (6) of section 195, Criminal Procedure Code. The learned Judge held that no sanction ought to be granted to a stranger, but upon the facts placed before him, he came to the conclusion that proceedings should be taken under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code. He, therefore, gave notice to the parties, took evidence and made an order under that section, because, in his opinion, a strong prima facie case was established that the offence alleged had been committed.

We are now invited to set aside this order on the ground that it was incompetent to the learned Judge to make an order under section 476 inasmuch as the commission of the alleged offence was not brought to his notice in the course of a judicial proceeding. In support of this view, reliance has been placed upon the cases of Jadunath Mahta v. Jogadish Chandra Deb (1) and In the matter of Mathura Das (2).

In the first of these cases it was ruled by a Division Bench of this Court that when a Nazir of a Subordinate Judge has been resisted in execution of a decree and the Subordinate Judge has thereupon taken action under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, he cannot be said to have acted judicially. It was further held that a proceeding before the District Judge in the same matter under sub-section (6) of section 195 was not a judicial proceeding. In so far as the first of these propositions is concerned, it is clear that it cannot be maintained in view of the decision of a Full Bench of this Court in the case of Shaikh Bahadur v. Eradatullah Mallick (3), where it was pointed out that an execution proceeding is a judicial proceeding within the meaning of section 476, Criminal Procedure Code. It is possible that the learned Judge who decided the case of Jadunath Mahta v. Jagdish Cunder Deb (1) acted on the view subsequently adopted in the case of

(1) 7 C. W. N. 423.
(2) 16 A. 80.
(3) 6 Ind. Cas. 801; 37 C. 642; 14 C. W. N. 799; 12 C. L. J. 45.

BALA PASBAN KULDIP LAL v. GURUWAR MISSER.

Har Charan Mukerjee v. King-Emperor (4) that an execution proceeding is not a judicial proceeding. That view, however, as we have just stated, can no longer be maintained. In so far as the second proposition is concerned, the learned Judges stated their opinion with considerable hesitation, and we take it that they did not intend to decide the point finally. But if the case really involves a decision upon that point, we are unable to accept it as sound on principle. It cannot be disputed that the grant of a sanction under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, is a judicial act; consequently, the revocation of a sanction already granted is equally a judicial act. It cannot, therefore, be doubted that the refusal of an application to grant sanction is precisely of the same nature as the two orders just mentioned.

In so far as the case before the learned Judges of the Allahabad High Court is concerned, [In re Mathura Das (2)], it is clearly distinguishable, though based upon very questionable grounds. There it was held that an application under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, made to a District Judge wes not a judicial proceeding and did not entitle the Judge to make an order under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code. We are not prepared to accept this view as well founded. Whether the application ought to have been made in the first instance before the primary Court or whether it might have been properly made before the learned Judge, there is no room for doubt that an application under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, for grant of sanction is a judicial proceeding. The view we take is supported by the decision of a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in the case of Queen-Empress v. Sheikh Beari (5), where it was ruled that sanctioning a prosecution for an offence is a judicial act. The same view was taken in the cases of Queen-Empress v. Seshadri Ayyangar (6) and Pampapati Sastri v. Subba Sastri (7). In the case before us, the application under section 195 when presented to the Court of first instance did commence a judicial proceeding and the order of refusal was a judicial act. Consequently, the proceeding before the District Judge, under sub-section (6) of section 195 in which he was invited to review the propriety of the order of refusal of the Court of first instance, was also a judicial proceeding. The learned District Judge, undoubtedly, acted properly in refusing to grant sanction to a stranger to the suit. At the same time, it was perfectly open to him to take proceedings under section 476, inasmuch as the fact of the commission of an offence had been brought to his notice in the course of a judicial proceeding under sub-section (6) of section 195. The contention, therefore, that the order of the District Judge was made without jurisdiction cannot be supported.

It has been argued, in the next place, that no order should be made in this case during the pendency of the civil suit. We are of opinion that there is no substance in this contention. The matter in controversy in the civil suit has no bearing upon the question to be investigated at the criminal trial, that question is whether an offence has been committed under section 205, Indian Penal Code, which has obviously no bearing upon the question to be determined in the suit for rent.

It has finally been suggested that section 476 should be restricted in its application in the same manner as section 195 has sometimes been restricted in other words, as the Court does not ordinarily grant sanction under section 195 to a person in no way connected with the proceeding, the Court should similarly refuse to direct a prosecution under section 476 when the fact of commission of an offence has been brought to its notice by a stranger. We are not prepared to accept the limitation suggested, and are of opinion that the order of the District Judge should not be disturbed.

The Rule is, therefore, discharged.

Rule discharged.

(4) 1 C. L. J. 161; 2 Cr. L. J. 110; 32 C. 367; 9 C. W. N. 364.
(5) 10 M. 232.
(6) 20 M. 383.
(7) 23 M. 210.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.
CIVIL APPEAL No 167 OF 1907.
October 9, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim and Mr. Justice Spencer.
GUJJALAPADI SUBBA NAIDU AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS
versus
GUJJALAPADI VENCATASUBBA NAIDU, MINOR BY MOTHER AND GUARDIAN CHELLAMMA—RESPONDENT.

Decree, amendment of —Application to correct decree to bring it into accordance with judgment—Obvious slip or mistake.

An application to a Court to correct a decree so as to bring it into conformity with the judgment can be entertained only where the Court has made an obvious slip or mistake. Where the conclusions arrived at by a Court though they may be wrong are clearly set forth in its judgment, objections that they are wrong cannot be entertained at the announcement of the judgment.

Application to the High Court in Civil Appeal No. 167 of 1907 to correct the decree so as to bring it into conformity with the judgment.

The appeal was originally heard by the Hon'ble Justices Abdur Rahim and Krishnasawami Iyer, who delivered the following judgment on January 12th, 1911:—

Mr. K. Srinivasa Iyengar, for the Appellants.

Dr. S. Swaminathan, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

KRISHNASAWMI IYER, J.—This is a suit for partition. The plaintiff's father, the defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3, the father of the defendants Nos. 4 to 9 and the husband of the 10th defendant were brothers and members of an undivided Hindu family. The plaintiffs claim a fifth share, the 10th defendant's husband having died before suit. The plaintiff's father also being dead, and the plaintiff being himself a minor, he is represented by his mother as his next friend. It is admitted by the plaintiff that for about three years before suit, the several branches have been cooking their meals separately and living in different houses (vide paragraph 5 of the plaint). On the other side, it is admitted for the defendants that certain pasture lands, debts due to the family, an indigo vat and certain family jewels are still undivided. They made a division, it is said, of the family lands except the pasture lands referred to above, of the cash and grain belonging to the family, of certain debts due on the pledge of jewels, and of the moveables generally.

Part of the division, i. e., with reference to the lands and moveables, is alleged to have taken place about the year 1898. The rest of the division is alleged to have taken place on the 13th July 1899. Exhibit I, which purports to be a receipt to the first defendant executed by the other five sharers, is relied on in support of the second division. It is dated the 14th July 1899.

The first question is whether the division evidenced by Exhibit I is true. The case is beset with considerable difficulty as neither party has told the whole truth. Exhibit I purports to bear the mark of the sharers, the plaintiff being represented by his mother. It also bears the attestations of the defence witnesses Nos. 1, 7, 8, 9, 12 and 13. The 14th defendant who is examined as the second witness for the defence, and the defence 3rd and 4th witnesses who are not attestators of Exhibit I support the partition of 1899. The District Judge has discredited the evidence of these witnesses as regards the execution of Exhibit I and the partition of 1899. I am unable to agree with him. I see no force in his criticism of the evidence of the defence 3rd and 4th witnesses. He has overlooked the fact that on the very first day of the trial the 1st witness for the defence spoke of the division of the cash and the moveables on one day and of the execution of Exhibit I on the subsequent day. There is nothing, therefore, in the evidence of the defence third witness which is calculated to throw doubt on the genuineness of Exhibit I. It is true the witness has made a mistake when he said that the tenth defendant's husband was dead at the time. But he was speaking to an event that had occurred about 8 years before his deposition and the tenth defendant's husband having died shortly after the partition of 1899. The witness's mistake is easily explained. The defence fourth witness referred to in Exhibit I as one of the mediators, also supports the partition of 1899, and nothing has been urged against his testimony. The first and twelfth witnesses examined on behalf of the defendants are discredited by the District Judge, because the former has purchased some lands from the fourth defendant and the latter was indebted to the family. These circumstances do not appear to be sufficient for rejecting their testimony. The defence witnesses Nos. 7, 8 and 9 and 13 seem to be interested in some pasture lands sold under Exhibit F to one Chinta Subbiah by the first defendant a fortnight before the institution of the suit. It is suggested by the District Judge that the conveyance of the pasture lands was probably a bribe to the witnesses. They deny the insinuation and, although there may be some suspicion attaching to the transaction, I do not think their testimony can be altogether ignored. A more important point which the District Judge makes against the genuineness of Exhibit I is that it does not bear the attestation of the plaintiff's maternal uncle Changamma Naidu who is alleged to have been present at the time of the partition and who is certainly now looking after the plaintiff's affairs. I agree that this is a circumstance of some value against the truth of Exhibit I. On the other hand, there are several circumstances which make in favour of the partition of 1899 and the genuineness of Exhibit I. In the first place it does not appear to me that such a large number as eight independent persons, viz., defence witnesses Nos. 1, 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 12 and 13, would have entered into a conspiracy with the defendants to concoct the document against the plaintiff. If Exhibit I was not genuine, it would have included a reference to a partition of the lands, and thus made out a case of more or less complete partition. The defendant's case being that there was a partition in 1898, nothing would have been more appropriate than a recital of such a partition in Exhibit I. There is evidence of separate dealings by some of the members of the family which the District Judge had not succeeded in explaining on his theory of no partition. If, on the other hand, the cash and debt bonds belonging to the family were really divided in 1899, such division would afford an adequate explanation for the separate dealings of some of the members. Exhibit X, dated the 7th of July 1903, spoken to by defence witness No. 5, evidences a debt of Rs. 200 due to the plaintiff. The explanation given by the plaintiff's mother and his maternal uncle that it was money which stood outstanding in the name of their father, although it had been given by him as stridhanam to his daughter, is improbable on the fact of it and is inconsistent with the evidence of defence witness No. 5. That witness did not support the story of the plaintiff's witness No. 2 that his father lent the money. I have no hesitation in holding that the plaintiff's version on this matter is a pure after-thought, for it was not suggested in the cross examination of the defence witness No. 5 who was examined before the plaintiff's witness. Again, Exhibit XI*a* shows separate sales of chillies grown by the plaintiff, the fourth defendant and the 10th defendant. Here, again, the explanation attempted by the plaintiff's 1st, 2nd and 4th witnesses that it was Guruvadu that supplied the chillies and not the plaintiff's mother is contradicted by the defence witnesses Nos. 4 and 9 and by the document Exhibit XI and cannot be accepted. These separate transactions of the plaintiff must have been due to the possession of separate funds and the strong probability is that the separate funds came into existence by means of the partition of 1899. The 4th defendant has made purchases under Exhibits III, IV and V and taken a pro-note Exhibit G-3 and a mortgage Exhibit XVII. These transactions would not be inconsistent with the plaintiff's case if the 4th defendant was the de facto manager of the joint family. He has also made a sale of part of the land purchased, but all these transactions are subsequent to the year 1900. Some evidence has been given in the case of separate cultivation. I shall, however, deal with it in connection with the question of the partition of the lands. Some stress was laid during the argument on the fact that no evidence has been adduced to show what has become of the large sum of Rs. 2,546 allotted to the plaintiff at the partition. But the plaintiff's maternal uncle who is conducting the litigation on his behalf is a well-to-do man and resident in a distant village and the defendants' inability to trace this money cannot, under the circumstances, be urged against the truth of their case. A more formidable objection was as to what has become of the money taken by the defendants at the partition. The answer may, however, be in the fact that they took bonds and not money in great part at the partition and that those bonds are now represented by the outstandings in the name of the fourth defendants. On the whole, I am inclined to hold that the balance of evidence and the probabilities are in favour of the genuineness of Exhibit I and the partition of 1899.

GUJJALAPADI SUBBA NAIDU v. GUJJALAPADI VENKATASUBBA NAIDU.

The next question is about the alleged partition of the lands in 1888. The defendants admit that pasture lands have not been divided. They have adduced evidence of separate cultivation. Certain keylu and estimate accounts for faslis 1311, 1312 and 1313, viz., Exhibit IV produced from the custody of the zemindari Karnam showing heaps and measurement in the names of sharers separately are relied on. I do not think it is safe to accept them when the duplicates in the zemindar's office have not been produced. These accounts relate to the period after misunderstandings must have arisen and there is no explanation why, if the partition of the lands was in fasli 1308, the accounts of faslis 1309 and 1310 are not forthcoming to show separate cultivation accounts. Exhibits A, B., C. and D. which show the entire cultivation in the name of 1st defendant in faslis 1307, 1312, 1313 and 1314, are against the case set up by the defendants. Although it may be, that in consequence of the admitted separate living and separate cooking and the division of the cash and certain of the outstandings in 1899, the parties began to cultivate separately, I have no doubt that a partition of the lands has not been effected. The strongest circumstance against the truth of the partition is the absence of all reference to it in the receipt, Exhibit I, the lands themselves being the villages of the Venkatigiri Zemindari. The division is said to have been made by the casting of lots and that must have been after lists were framed. The lands consist of numerous items. The original suggestion that was made during the argument that such plot was divided into six shares and lists would, therefore, be unnecessary is entirely against the specification in the schedule attached to the additional written statement filed by the defendants on the 13th of March 1906. The defence witness No. 1 says that lots were cast in six shares. If the division was true there must have been lists. But none is produced. I am clearly against the defendant's case that there was a partition of the lands in the year 1898.

As regards the second issue, no argument has been addressed to us. We must, therefore, accept the finding of the District Judge. We must also accept the finding on the third issue. As cattle were divided under Exhibit I the cattle now found in the fourth defendant's possession cannot be deemed to be family property. There is nothing to show that there was any cash belonging to the joint family at the date of the suit. In view of the finding as to the genuineness of Exhibit I, the argument of the District Judge as to the existence of cash at the date of the suit falls to the ground. We must also hold that the house sites, together with the buildings thereon, in the ex parte occupation of the plaintiff and the defendants are their respective separate property. The common family house having been long ago burnt down and each of the members having occupied separate sites and created his own building thereon they must be deemed to be separate property of each. The plaintiff will have decree for a one-fifth share in all the family lands with mesne profits except the house, together with the house sites on which they stand and in the outstandings as per schedule filed by the plaintiff and the paddy and ragi valued at Rs. 880 and the jewel named Thalika Pudelu Danda. The rest of the plaintiff's claim will stand dismissed. The 10th defendant and who had got her share under Exhibit I is not entitled to claim maintenance. Each party will bear his or her own costs throughout.

ABDUR RAHIM, J.—I agree.

This appeal having been posted to be spoken to, and having stood over for consideration till this day the Court (Abdur Rahim, J. and Spencer, J.) made the following ORDER.—In this appeal which was originally heard by one of us and Mr. Justice Krishnasawmi Iyer and was pronounced by him as judgment of the Court on the 12th January 1911, at the time he pronounced judgment, the learned Vakil for the appellants objected to certain conclusions apparently on the ground that they were not in accordance with the rest of the judgment.

Mr. Justice Krishnasawmi Iyer noted the objection and ordered the case to be sent down for being spoken to when we would next sit together. The matter was not brought up before the same Bench before Krishnasawami Iyer, J., ceased to exercise the office of Judge of this Court.

The objection taken is that the direction in the judgment that there shall be a decree for the plaintiff for 1/5th share in all the family lands except certain houses is not in accordance with the rest of the judgment but that the lands which stand in the name of the fourth defendant, namely, those mentioned in the third issue should have been excluded, inasmuch as it has been found that there had been a partition of cash, outstandings, moveables, etc., and it is not proved by the plaintiff that the lands in question were bought with the income of such family property as was left undivided. But this is not a case of an obvious mistake or slip which could be corrected at this stage. It is found in clear terms, that the decision of the lower Court on the third issue is correct. It may be that the conclusion on this point is wrong but even if it be so, we do not see how it can be corrected in the present application. The decree must be drawn up in accordance with the judgment.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 117 OF 1910.

November 1[illegible], 1911.

Present:—Mr. Richards, K. C., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerjee.

ABDUL GHANI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

ABDUL MAJID—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Interest--Suit by co-sharer against lambardar—Profits—Interest preceding suit and pendente lite—Burden of proof.

In a suit by a co-sharer against a lambardar for profits, the plaintiff would ordinarily be entitled to interest for the period during which the lambardar withheld the profits and also for the period the suit was pending. It would be for the lambardar to show that special circumstances existed which relieved him of liability for the payment of interest.

First appeal from the decision of the Assistant Collector of Benares, dated the 3rd November 1908.

Mr. Gokul Prashad, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. L. Agarwala, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff-appellant for his share of profits for the years 1311, 1312 and 1313 fasli. A preliminary objection has been taken to the hearing of the appeal on the ground that it is time-barred. The circumstances under which this objection has been urged are these. The suit was filed in the Court of the Assistant Collector and the amount claimed was a sum of Rs. 6,000. The Assistant Collector made a decree in the plaintiff's favour for Rs. 1,635-7-0. The plaintiff claimed a further sum of about Rs. 1,200, and in respect of this amount he preferred an appeal in the Court of the District Judge. In that Court no objection was taken on behalf of the defendant that an appeal did not lie to that Court. The result was that the appeal was heard by the learned District Judge and he varied the decree of the Court of first instance. Thereupon, an appeal was preferred to this Court, and this Court was of opinion that no appeal lay to the learned Judge, and that as the value of the suit was Rs. 6,000 the appeal should have been preferred to this Court. Accordingly, the memorandum of appeal was ordered to be returned to be presented in the proper Court, and has now been presented in this Court. No doubt, the appeal to this Court is beyond time but the appellant has asked us to exercise our discretion under section 5 of the Limitation Act and to entertain the appeal although it has been filed beyond time. We are of opinion that, in view of all the circumstances, we should exercise our discretion in favour of the appellant. It appears that there were six suits instituted in the Court of first instance for profits against the lambardar by the same parties and one was brought by the plaintiff-appellant against the same lambardar to recover Rs. 6,000. In all the other suits the amount claimed was below Rs. 5,000. In two of these suits, appeals were filed in the Court of the District Judge; and as the amount claimed by the appellant in his appeal was about Rs. 1,200, his Pleader, through an oversight, filed the appeal in the lower Court whereas it should have been presented in this Court. We think that there was a bona fide mistake, which was not very unnatural, and that, under the circumstances, we ought to allow the appeal to be heard. We have accordingly heard the appeal.

Three questions have been raised before us. The first is that the Court below made a decree for an amount which was less than the amount due to the plaintiff according to the account filed by the defendant himself in the Court below. In the abstract of accounts which the defendant filed in the lower Court the total amount shown as due to the plaintiff for his share of profits was Rs. 1,754-7-3. The lower Court made a decree for Rs. 1,635-7-0 only so that it awarded a sum of Rs. 119-0-3 less than what according to the defendant was payable to the plaintiff. Mr. Gokul Prasad on behalf of the appellant admits that in the defendant's account there is a mistake of Rs. 2-15-6. So that the plaintiff ought to get Rs. 116 0-9 more than what the lower Court has awarded to him. Mr. Agarwala on behalf of the respondent contends that the abstract of accounts filed on behalf of the defendant was incorrect and that this is due to the fact that shares held by the plaintiff in different mahals were mixed up. He has not shown us in what respects the account is erroneous. The document is at least a clear admission of the amount actually collected by the defendant on account of the plaintiff's share. So that, prima facie, the account must be deemed to be correct unless it is shown that it is erroneous in any particular. That has not been attempted to be shown, and we see no reason why he should not be bound by the figures given by himself. Therefore, it is manifest that the plaintiff ought to have got a decree for Rs. 116 0-9 in addition to the amount awarded to him by the lower Court.

The next objection is that the Court below has not allowed for interest the period preceding the institution of the suit and for the period of the pendency of the suit. It cannot be denied that in the judgment of the learned Assistant Collector no reason is assigned for not awarding such interest. Ordinarily, a plaintiff to whom profits are due would be entitled to interest for the period during which the lambardar withheld the profits and he would also be entitled to interest for the period of the pendency of the suit. It would lie upon the lambardar to show that there were special circumstances which relieved him of liability for the payment of interest. In his written statement the defendant no doubt urged that he offered to render an account of the profits to the plaintiff and that the plaintiff refused to take such an account, but no issue was joined in the Court below on that point. There the parties agreed that two issues should be tried, namely, an issue as to whether the profits should be calculated on the basis of the gross rental or on the basis of actual collections and second, what was the amount payable to the plaintiff. From this we infer that the defendant did not adhere to the plea put forward by him in the written statement on the question of interest. There is apparently no reason why the plaintiff should not get interest and we think he is fully entitled to it.

The third point is that the lower Court, although it professed to include in the calculation of profits the income arising from the land known as the holding of Zainab Bibi, did not in fact include those profits in the account. This is manifest from the account prepared by the learned Assistant Collector. In his written statement the defendant did raise an objection as to the profits arising from the land mentioned above, but the objection he put forward was a very technical one, and it was one which, in our opinion, had no foundation for it. The Court of first instance, however, refused to go into that point solely on the ground that the parties had agreed upon the questions which were to be determined and this was not one of the questions so to be determined. From the account prepared by that Court and the foot-note appended to it, it is manifest that the Assistant Collector intended to allow the rent of these lands to be included in the account. The plaintiff is, therefore, entitled to his proportionate share of the profits arising from the holding known as the holding of Zainab Bibi. There is no dispute between the parties as to the figures. They are admitted by the defendant in the account filed by him.

The decree of the Court below should, therefore, be varied by adding to the amount of that decree Rs. 116-0-9 and the plaintiff's share of the profits of Zainab's land, and on the total amount which will be found due to the plaintiff he will be entitled to interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum up to the date of the institution of the suit, and thereafter at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. We accordingly allow the appeal and vary the decree of the Court below by adding to the amount of that decree the two items mentioned above, the latter of which is to be calculated and specified in the decree and we allow interest as mentioned above. The parties will pay and receive costs in the Court of first instance in proportion to failure and success. In all other Courts they will abide their own costs.

Appeal allowed.

NARSINGH NARAIN SINGH v. AJODHYA PROSAD SINGH.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 3175 OF 1909.

NOVEMBER 28, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

NARSING NARAIN SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

AJODHYA PROSAD SINGH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Arbitration—Arbitrator, if bound by rules of practice adopted by Courts—Arbitrator not to go beyond precise questions submitted—Right of party in whose favour award is given to impeach its validity—Award if can be filed in part—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 525.

An arbitrator is not bound by mere rules of practice which Courts have adopted for general convenience, and he has greater latitude than Courts of law to do complete justice between the parties according to equity and good conscience. But he cannot go beyond the precise questions submitted nor can he determine any claims or demands, though existing between the parties, save only those which they have agreed that he shall decide.

Therefore, where the question submitted to an arbitrator was, whether the plaintiff had a right of way over a specified strip of land; Held, that the arbitrator had no authority to lay out a new path on a piece of land over which neither party alleged a right of way.

The party in whose favour an erroneous action of the arbitrator operates, cannot be heard to impeach the validity of the award.

In re Bradshhaw's Arbitration, (1842) 12 Q. B. 562; 76 R. R. 349; 17 L. J. Q. B. 362; 12 Jur. 998; Moore v. Butlin, (1887) 37 A. & E. 595; 2 N. & P. 436; W. W. & D. 638; 7 L. J. Q. B. 20; Taylor v. Shuttleworth, (1840) 6 Bing. (N. S.) 277; 8 Scott 565; 8 D. P. C. 280; 9 L. J. C. P. 138, relied upon.

It is not competent to a Court in a proceeding under section 525 of the Code of 1882, to direct that an award be filed in part. An application to file an award which is open to attack in part should be refused.

Dondekar v. Dondekar, 6 B. 663; Mona Vikrama v. Mallichery, 3 M. 68; Thiruvengada Thiengar v. Vaidinatha, 29 M. 303, Mustafa v. Phulja, 27 A. 526; A. W. N. (1905) 86; 2 A. L. J. 416, relied on.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Gya, dated July 30th, 1909, confirming that of the Munsif of Gya, dated March 22nd, 1909.

Dr. Rash Behary Ghose, Babus Umakali Mukerjee and Ganesh Dutt Singh, for the Appellant.

Babus Mohendra Nath Roy and Chandra Sekhar Prosad Singh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against a decree by which the Courts below have concurrently ordered the partial enforcement of a private arbitration award. The parties to the proceeding are related to each other, and had a dispute as to a pathway for passage from the land of the plaintiff and his brother to a village towards the north of the property of the first defendant. There were also disputes between the parties in respect of other matters to which detailed reference is not necessary for our present purpose. On the 16th July 1908, the matters in controversy which were set out in full detail in a registered instrument of submission were referred to the arbitration of a gentleman by name Dilkiswar Singh. He made his award on the 31st August 1908. On the 14th September following, the plaintiff applied under section 525 of the Code of 1882 that the award be filed in Court. The defendants resisted the application on every conceivable ground; they questioned the validity of the submission, imputed misconduct and partiality to the arbitrator, alleged a revocation of the submission before the award was made, and contended that the award had determined a question not included in the submission. The Courts below have overruled all the objections except one, as entirely unfounded and have directed the award to be filed in part. The result has been that a modified decree has been made in favour of the plaintiff. The plaintiff has appealed to this Court, and on his behalf the decree has been assailed in so far as it modifies the award. The arbitrator found in substance that the pathway alleged by the plaintiff and denied by the defendants did, as a matter of fact, exist, but he held that if the thoroughfare was allowed to continue, great inconvenience and injury would be caused to the first defendant. In this view the arbitrator laid out a new pathway in lieu of the disputed thoroughfare. The plaintiff was satisfied with the award in this respect, but the defendants objected that the award was in excess of the authority of the arbitrator, inasmuch as the matter covered by the submission was the existence or otherwise of the disputed pathway, and it was beyond the competence of the arbitrator to substitute in lieu thereof a new pathway. This view has found favour with the Court below, and, as we have already explained, they have declined to direct the award to be filed in so far as the pathway is concerned. The propriety of this decision has been assailed before us on two grounds, namely, first, that the award is not beyond the scope of the submission, as upon a liberal construction thereof, the whole question of a right of way must be taken to have been laid before the arbitrator and, secondly, that in any view the defendants were not competent to take exception to the award, as it was essentially in their favour.

In support of the first ground that the submission should be liberally construed so as to enable the arbitrator to do substantial justice, reliance has been placed upon the cases of Knox v. Simmonds (1); Prosser v. Gorringe (2); Delver v. Barnes (3) and Fuller v. Fenwick (4). It may be conceded that the arbitrator is not bound by mere rules of practice which Courts have adopted for general convenience, and he has greater latitude than Courts of law to do complete justice between the parties according to equity and good conscience. In this view, Courts are never astute to entertain technical objections to awards. In other words, as Lord Halsbury, L. C., said in Adams v. Great North of Scotland Rawilay Company (5), the Courts will not review awards upon the merits: they will not constitute themselves as Courts of appeal to examine whether or not the conclusion at which the arbitrator arrived was sound, both in point of law and in point of fact. This salutary doctrine, however, is subject to the fundamental rule that an arbitrator cannot go beyond the precise questions submitted: it will not do for him to determine any claims or demands, though existing between the parties to the submission, save only those which they have agreed that he shall decide. This is sound on principle; the submission furnishes the source and prescribes the limits of the authority of the arbitrator. The arbitrator is inflexibly limited to a decision of the particular matters admitted; he cannot take upon himself an authority which the submission does not confer. Price v. Popkin (6); Pascoe v. Pascoe (7); Baillie v. Edinburgh Oil Gaslight Company (8) and Buccleuch, Duke of v. Metropolitan Board of Works (9). In each case, therefore, where a question arises whether the arbitrator has exceeded his authority and it is urged that the submission should be liberally construed and interpreted, the question really reduces itself to this, whether the circumstances of the case bring it within the scope of the one or the other of the two conflicting principles we have formulated. In the case before us, the terms of the submission are, in our opinion, against the contention of the appellant. The matter in controversy submitted to the arbitrator was not whether the plaintiff should have access to the northern village across the land of the defendants but whether he had a right of way over the specified strip of land. The arbitrator was bound to base his decision upon an investigation of the latter question and he had no authority to lay out a new path on a piece of land over which neither party alleged a right of way. Walker v. Simpson (10); Wyman v. Hamword (11) and Ross v. Linder (12). We are, therefore, not prepared to accept the first contention of the appellant.

In support of the second contention of the appellant it has been argued that if the arbitrator has exceeded his authority, he has done so for the benefit of the defendants and they, at any rate, are not entitled to assail the award which is really in their favour. In our opinion this contention is well-founded and must prevail. It is an elementary principle that only the party prejudiced by the exercise of excessive authority by the arbitrator is entitled to object to the award by reason of it; the party in whose favour the erroneous action of the arbitrator operates, cannot be heard to impeach the validity of the award on this ground. In Bradshaw's Arbitration (13), whether an award was assailed by one of the claimants, Lord Denman, C. J., observed that the error assigned was no matter of complaint for him, as it was in his favour and to his advantage. Similarly, in Moore v. Butlin (14) the learned Chief Justice

(1) (1791) 3 Bro. C. C. 358; 1 Ves. J. 369.
(2) (1811) 3 Taunt 426.
(3) (1807) 1 Taunt 48; 9 R. R. 707.
(4) (1846) 3 C. B. 705; 16 L. J. C. P. 78; 10 Jur. 1057.
(5) (1891) App. Cas. 31.
(6) (1839) 10 A. & E. 139; 2 P. & D. 304; 8 L. J. Q. B. 198; 3 Jur. 433.
(7) (1837) 3 Bing (N. C.) 898; 5 Scott 117; 3 Hadges 188; 6 L. J. C. P. 322.
(8) (1835) Cl. and F. 639.
(9) (1872) L. R. 5 H. L. 418; 5 Exch. 221; 41 L. J. Ex. 137; 27 L. T. 1.
(10) (1888) 80 Maine 143; 13 Attentie 580.
(11) (1868) 55 Maine 534.
(12) (1881) 17 South Car 593.
(13) (1842) 12 Q. B. 562; 76 R. R. 349; 17 L. J. Q. B. 362; 12 Jur. 998.
(14) (1837) 7 A. & E. 595; 2 N. and P. 436, W. W. and D. 638; 7 L. J. Q. B. 20.

observed that the party in whose favour the mistake had been made could not avail himself of it to set aside the award. [See also Taylor v. Shuttleworth (15)]. Again, in Lyman v. Arnus (16) a party objected to an award because it made certain deductions from demands presented against him by his adversary and assigned to himself certain goods and merchandise. In answer to the contention that these acts were beyond the authority of the arbitration, the Court said: "He has no right of complaint, it was in his power." [Galvin v. Thomson (17)]. In the case before us the arbitrator found in substance that the pathway existed as alleged by the plaintiff; in this view he ought to have made a decree accordingly. But as, in his opinion, the existence of a pathway at that particular spot would inconvenience the defendants, he laid out another path for the use of the plaintiffs. This course was adopted for the benefit and convenience of the defendants. It is difficult to appreciate upon what principle the defendants can be allowed to question the award on the ground that the arbitrator exceeded his authority, the position would have been intelligible if the plaintiff had sought to assail the award in so far as it did not allow him a pathway in the precise place alleged by him. The second ground taken by the appellant must, therefore, be allowed.

We may add that it was not competent to the Courts below in a proceeding under section 525 of the Code of 1882, to direct that the award be filed in part; the Court was bound to refuse the application if in its opinion the award was open to attack in part. Dandekar v. Dandekar (18); Mana Vikrama v. Mallichery (19); Thiruvengada Thiengar v. Vaidinath (20); Mustofa v. Phulja (21). In the view we take, however, the question becomes immaterial.

The result, therefore, is that the appeal must be allowed and the decrees of the Courts below discharged. We direct that the award be filed in its entirety and a decree drawn up in accordance therewith. The plaintiff is entitled to his costs in all Courts from the first defendant.

Appeal allowed.

(15) (1840) 6 Bing. (N. S.) 277: 8 Scott 565; 8 D. P. C. 280; 9 L. J. C. P. 138.
(16) (1827) 5 Pickering 213.
(17) (1836) 13 Maine 367.
(18) 6 B. 663.
(19 3 M. 68.
(20) 29 M. 303.
(21) 27 A. 526; A. W. N. (1905) 86; 2 A. L. J. 416.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No 1466 OF 1909.
August 29, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

IMRIT CHAMAR—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SRIDHAR PANDAY AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 9, 11, 90, 130—Title-deed—Original not produced by witness on being summoned—Secondary evidence, right to use—Application for issue of warrant—Non-payment of process-fee—Whether right lost—Statement in document as to boundary—Admissibility against stranger—Document 30 years old—Presumption of genuineness—Discretion of Court—Cess Act (IX of 1880 B.C.), s. 95—Absence of name of tenant—Admissibility of Road Cess Return in evidence—Court bound to assign reasons for view as to s. 90, Evidence Act—Erroneous reasons in Law—Second Appeal, interference by High Court.

Under section 130 of the Evidence Act, a witness who is not a party to a suit cannot be compelled to produce his title-deeds to any property. Where, therefore, a person is directed by summons to produce the original of a document, and he does not do so the party who summoned him is entitled to use as secondary evidence a certified copy of the document. Where a party omits to pay the fee for the issue of a warrant against the person holding the original of a document, he does not thereby lose the right of using a copy as secondary evidence.

A statement by the grantor in the schedule to a lease regarding the ownership of certain property situate on the boundary of the land demised can be used in evidence against persons who were not parties to the transaction evidenced by the lease.

Abdulla v. Kunj Behari Lal, 12 Ind. Cas. 149; 14 C. L. J. 467, followed.

Brajeshwari v. Budhanudi, 6 C. 268; 7 C. L. R. 6 and Manohar Singh v. Sumirta Kuar, 17 A. 423, distinguished.

Under section 90 of the Evidence Act, it is not obligatory upon a Court to assume that a document is genuine merely because it purports to be 30 years old and is produced from proper custody. The Court has a discretion in the matter which must be judiciously exercised.

Srinath Patra v. Kuloda Prosad, 2 C. L. J. 592, referred to.

If it established that there is internal evidence to doubt the genuineness of a document, and if the recitals contained therein are inconsistent with admitted or proved facts the Court may call upon the party to produce evidence of execution.

Shafiqunnissa v. Shaban Ali Khan, 26 A. 581 at p. 586 (P. C.); 9 C. W. N. 105, relied upon.

IMRIT CHAMAR v. SRIDHAR PANDAY.

A lower Appellate Court is bound to assign reason for its views at to the applicability of the provision of section 90 of the Evidence Act; and where these reasons are erroneous in law, it is competent to the High Court to interfere in second appeal.

Trailokia v. Shurno, 11 C. 539, relied upon.

The absence of recitals in a document may be used in evidence as against a person who is not a party to that document, under sections 9 and 11 of the Evidence Act.

Sagurmull v. Manraj, 4 C. W. N. ccvii (short notes), relied upon.

Therefore, the absence of the name of a party from the category of tenants mentioned in the Road Cess Return is evidence against him.

Queen-Empress v. Grees Chunder, 10 C. 1024 and In the matter of Jaggun Lal, 7 C. L. R. 356, distinguished and not approved.

Appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge of Shahabad, dated April 21st, 1909, affirming that of the Munsif of Arrah, dated August 27th, 1908.

Babus Biraj Mohan Majumdar and Sarat Chandra Lahiri, for the Appellant.

Babus Dwarka Nath Mitter and Bijoy Kumar Bhattacharrya, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against a decree of dismissal in a suit for redemption of an alleged usufructuary mortgage. The defendants deny the title of the plaintiff and their contention has found favour with the Courts below. Upon the present appeal, the decree of the Subordinate Judge has been assailed on behalf of the plaintiff, on three grounds; namely, first, that a certified copy of a perpetual lease dated the 21st December 1874 was improperly rejected by the Court of first instance; secondly, that the first mortgage-deed was improperly excluded from evidence upon a misapprehension of the legal effect of the provisions of section 90 of the Indian Evidence Act; and, thirdly, that the Court of first instance ought not to have received in evidence a road-cess return produced by the defendants as evidence in their favour, because it does not show the name of the predecessor of the plaintiff as a tenant of the disputed property.

In so far as the first of the grounds is concerned, it has been argued that the two reasons assigned by the Court below for exclusion of the perpetual lease of the 21st December 1874, are erroneous in law. In our opinion, this contention is well founded. The Subordinate Judge, in agreement with the primary Court, has held that as the plaintiff had failed to put in process-fee for the issue of warrant against the person called upon to produce the original of this lease, he was debarred by reason of his own default from using the certified copy as secondary evidence. The Subordinate Judge has further held that even if the copy was received in evidence, it would not be of any assistance to the plaintiff, because the recitals of the boundaries in the schedule to that document are not admissible in evidence against the plaintiff who was no party to the transaction.

In so far as the first reason is concerned it is not disputed that the plaintiff had caused summonses to be served upon the witness who had custody of the original and was called upon to produce it. The witness, however, did not comply with the order of the Court. The plaintiff subsequently applied for the issue of a warrant against the witness but no process-fee was paid for service of the writ. This does not, in our opinion, amount to default on the part of the plaintiff. As was pointed out by this Court in the case of Bhagabat Prasad Singh v. King Emperor (1), under section 130 of the Indian Evidence Act, no witness who is not a party to a suit can be compelled to produce his title-deed to any property, or any document in virtue of which he holds any property as pledgee or mortgagee or any document the production of which might tend to incriminate him, unless he has agreed in writing to produce them with the person seeking the production of such deed or some person through whom he claims. It cannot be disputed that the lessee under the perpetual lease of the 21st December 1874 was entitled to urge that the document was his title-deed, and that he was not bound to produce the original except in the event contemplated by section 130 of the Indian Evidence Act. It is not alleged that the lessee had agreed with the plaintiff in writing to produce the original in Court. Consequently, if, after service of summons upon him, he did not produce the original, the plaintiff became entitled to use the certified copy as secondary evidence. The first reason assigned by the Subordinate Judge in support of his order of rejection of the document cannot, therefore, be supported.

In so far as the second reason is concerned,

(1) 14 C. L. J. 120; 11 Ind. Cas. 794.

IMRIT CHAMAR v. SRIDHAR PANDAY.

it has been contended by the learned Vakil for the defendants-respondents that as they were not parties to the transaction evidenced by the lease, no recital in that document could be used in evidence against them. In support of this proposition, reliance has been placed upon the cases of Brajeshwari v. Budhanudi (2) and Manohar Singh v. Sumirta Kuar (3). These cases, however, are clearly distinguishable, as no question of the admissibility of any document in evidence arose for consideration in either of these cases. What was ruled was that the recital in a document as to the payment of consideration was not binding upon a person other than the executant. [Bisheswar v. Harbans (4).] If the document was sought to be used against the executant who denied receipt of consideration, the burden, prima facie, would lie upon him to explain how he had executed a document containing such recital. In the case before us, no such question arises. The question to be decided is whether the statement by the grantee in the schedule to the lease, that on the boundary of the land demised was the holding of the predecessor of the present plaintiff can be used in evidence against the defendants, although they were not parties to the transaction evidenced by that document; in our opinion the document is admissible in evidence on the principle explained by this Court on the case of Abdulla v. Kunja Behari Lal (5). In fact, the case before us is stronger than the case then before the Court, because it is alleged here that the statement was made by the landlord of the plaintiff who might be expected to know who was in occupation of the land as his tenant. The case is, therefore, completely covered by the decisions in the cases of Ningawa v. Bharmappa (6); Abdul Aziz Molla v. Ebrahim Molla (7) and Burha Mandari v. Megh Nath (8). The ground assigned by the Subordinate Judge for the rejection of this piece of documentary evidence cannot be upheld. The first ground urged on behalf of the appellant must, therefore, prevail.

(2) 6 C. 268; 7 C. L. R. 6.
(3) 17 A. 428.
(4) 6 C. L. J. 659; 3 M. L. T. 38.
(5) 12 Ind. Cas. 149; 14 C. L. J. 467.
(6) 23 B. 63.
(7) 31 C. 965.
(8) 2 C. L. J. 4 n.

In so far as the second ground is concerned, it has been contended that the Subordinate Judge has misapplied the provisions of section 90 of the Indian Evidence Act, in respect of the document alleged to be the first mortgage executed by the predecessor-in-interest of the plaintiff. It cannot be disputed that the Subordinate Judge was bound to assign reasons for the view he took as to the applicability of the provisions of section 90 and if his reasons are erroneous in law, it is competent to this Court to interfere in second appeal [Trailokia v. Shurno (9)] Under section 90 it is not obligatory upon a Court to assume that the document produced is genuine merely because it purports to be thirty years old and is produced from proper custody. The Court has a discretion in the matter but that discretion must be judiciously exercised in the manner explained by this Court in the case of Srinath Patra v. Kaloda Prosad Banerjee (10). The Court has first to consider whether, in the circumstances of the particular case, the document has been produced from custody which may be deemed proper. When this is found in favour of the party who has produced the document the question arises whether the Court should, in the exercise of its discretion vested in it, raise the presumption of genuineness with regard to the document. If, to take one instance as pointed out by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Shafiq-un-nissa v. Shaban Ali Khan (11), it is established that there is internal evidence to throw doubt upon the genuineness of the document, and if the recitals therein contained are inconsistent with facts admitted or proved beyond the possibility of dispute, the Court may call upon the party to produce evidence of execution. In the case before us, this procedure does not appear to have been followed. The Subordinate Judge is, moreover, in error when he states that the document has not been produced from proper custody; the case for the plaintiff is that the mortgage has been redeemed. If that story is believed, the document would properly be found in the custody of the mortgagor. We are of opinion, therefore, that the Subordinate Judge has not dealt with this part of the case properly and it is necessary for him

(9) 11 C. 539.
(10) 2 C. L. J. 592.
(11) 26 A. 581 at p. 586; 9 C. W. N. 105.

to re-consider the question in view of the principle explained by this Court in the case of Srinath Patra v. Kolada Prosad Banerjee (10). He will first consider whether the two elements mentioned in section 90 have been established; if he holds that they have not been proved to his satisfaction, he will call upon the plaintiff to give evidence of execution. The second ground will, therefore, prevail.

In so far as the third ground is concerned, it has been argued that the Road Cess Return is not admissible in evidence under section 95 of the Bengal Cess Act, 1880. That section, however, has no application to the circumstances of the present case. The maker of the document does not seek to use it as evidence in his favour. It is sought to be used in evidence by one stranger against another. The real question is, whether the absence of the name of the predecessors of the plaintiff from the category of tenants mentioned in the Road Cess Return is evidence against him. In support of the contention that it is not evidence, reliance may possibly be placed upon the cases of Queen-Empress v. Grees Chunder Banerjee (12) and In the matter of Juggun Lal (13). These cases, however, if they decide that the absence of a recital in a document is not admissible in evidence at all under any section of the Indian Evidence Act, cannot be accepted as giving a correct exposition of the law. As a matter of fact, in neither of these cases was the question raised in this broad form. What was argued was that section 34 did not make the document admissible for the purposes stated. It was pointed out, however, in the case of Sagurmull v. Manraj (14) that under sections 9 and 11 of the Indian Evidence Act, the absence of recital in a document may be used in evidence as against the person who is not a party to that document; and the observation of Lord Robertson in the case of Ram Pershad Singh v. Lakhpat Koer (15) must be taken to be restricted in the same manner. We are of opinion, therefore, that the Road Cess Return was admissible in evidence. What weight ought to be attached to the circumstance, however, is a matter entirely for the Court of first instance to consider. The third ground urged by the appellant must, therefore, be overruled.

The result is, that this appeal is allowed and the decrees of the Courts below discharged. The case will be remanded to the Court of first instance for re-trial. The certified copy of the lease of the 21st December 1874 will be received in evidence and the Court will also consider, with reference to section 90 of the Indian Evidence Act, whether what purports to be a first mortgage-deed in respect of this land by the predecessor of the plaintiff, is or is not genuine. Both the parties will be at liberty to adduce fresh evidence, and all questions which arise upon the pleadings and the issues, will be open for consideration. The costs incurred up to the present stage will abide the result.

Appeal allowed and case remanded.

(12) 10 C. 1024.
(13) 7 C. L. R. 356.
(14) 4 C. W. N. ccvii (short note).
(15) 30 C. 231 at p. 247.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 92 AND 221 OF 1909.

September 1, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

LAKHI CHOWDHURI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

AKLOO JHA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Party—Non-joinder—Objection that suit bad for want of necessary plaintiff—If can be taken in appeal for first time—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. I, r. 9—Bengal Estates Partition Act (VIII B. C. of 1876), ss. 23, 25, 29, 45, 46, 119—Declaratory suit that defendant not tenant, if maintainable during partition.

Where a defendant omits to take exception in the first Court to the frame of a suit on the ground that a necessary party has not been joined as plaintiff, it is not open to him at the appellate stage to take such objection. A Court has power to decide questions in controversy under rule 9 of Order I of the Code of Civil Procedure, in so far as the parties before it are concerned.

The plaintiff and the defendant No. 2, in this case, are the joint owners of an estate which is in course of partition under the Estates Partition Act. The defendant No. 1 claimed that he was a tenant. The plaintiff repudiated that position but his objection was overruled by the Revenue authorities. He now sued for a declaration that defendant No. 1 is not a tenant in respect of any land in the estate and it was contended that the suit was not maintainable:

Held, that section 25 of the Estates Partition Act was no bar to the suit.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Darbhanga, dated November 26th, LAKHI CHOWDHURI v. AKLOO JHA.

1908, reversing that of the first Munsif of Darbhanga, dated April 30th, 1903.

Babu Atul Chandra Datta, for the Appellants.

Babu Lakshmi Narayan Singh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

S. A. No. 92 OF 1909.

This appeal is directed against a decree of dismissal in a suit for declaration of title to immoveable property and for confirmation of possession. The plaintiff and the 2nd party defendants are the joint owners of an estate which is now in course of partition under the provisions of the Estates Partition Act of 1897. In the partition proceedings the first defendant put forward a claim that he was the tenant in respect of a particular parcel of land. The plaintiffs repudiated that position but their objection was overruled by the Revenue authorities. They thereupon commenced this action for declaration that the first defendant was not a tenant in respect of those lands and that he had, as a matter of fact, been set up fraudulently by the second party defendants. The Court of first instance went into the merits and made a decree in favour of the plaintiffs. Upon appeal two objections appear to have been urged on behalf of the defendants; namely, first, that the suit had not been properly constituted, because the son of one of the plaintiffs had not been joined as a party and, secondly, that the suit was barred under the provisions of section 25 of the Bengal Estates Partition Act.

In respect of the first objection, the learned Judge held that it was well founded but that the suit ought not to be dismissed on that ground; he stated in fact that if the suit had not been open to any other objection, he would have remanded the case for re-trial. But in so far as the second objection was concerned, the learned Judge allowed it to prevail and dismissed the suit as not maintainable.

The plaintiffs have now appealed to this Court, and on their behalf the view taken by the learned Judge upon both these matters has been called in question. We are of opinion that his conclusion cannot be supported.

In so far as the question of defect of parties is concerned it is clear that this specific objection was not taken in the Court of first instance. One of the plaintiffs went into the witness-box and from his examination it transpired that he had a son who was jointly interested in the subject-matter of the litigation but had not been brought before the Court. It was thereupon open to the defendants to take exception to the frame of the suit. They did not do so, but allowed the suit to proceed as properly constituted. It was, therefore, not open to them at the appellate stage to take a technical objection of this character. It is further clear that it is needless to send back the case to the original Court for re-trial, as the father may well be deemed to represent all the members of the family. In any event, it is open to the Court to decide the questions in controversy under rule 9 of Order I of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1908, in so far as the parties before the Court are concerned.

With regard to the second point, it has been contended on behalf of the appellants, that the suit is not barred under the provisions of section 25 of the Estates Partition Act of 1897. This argument has not been seriously controverted on behalf of the respondent and, in our opinion, there is no answer to the contention of the appellant. Section 25 provides that no suit, instituted in a Civil Court after the lapse of four months after the Collector has made a direction under clause (a) or clause (b) of section 23, or recorded a proceeding under section 29 by any person claiming right or title in or to a parent estate shall avail to affect or stay the progress of any proceedings which may have been taken under the Act for the partition of the estate. This section obviously has no application to the case before us. In the first place, the defendant does not claim any right or title in or to the parent estate. He claims the status of a tenant under the proprietors in respect of a specific parcel of land. In the second place, the section does not say that a suit of this description does not lie; it merely provides that a suit instituted after four months does not affect or stay proceedings for partition. In the third place, neither section 23 nor section 29 has any application to the facts of this case. It has been argued, however, by the learned Vakil for the respondent that the suit is barred because the partition proceedings have not yet been completed and the matter is still under the consideration of the Revenue authorities. But there are two obvious answers to this contention. In the first place, so far as the question sought to be raised is concerned, it has been finally disposed of by the Revenue authorities. In the second place, section 119 of the Estates Partition Act specifies the orders of the Revenue authorities which cannot be questioned by a suit in any Civil Court. An order under section 45 or 46 is not one of the orders mentioned in section 119. The reason for the exclusion is obvious. The determination by the Revenue authorities is of a summary character and it cannot be taken to conclude finally a question of title between one of the proprietors and a stranger to the proceeding. The learned Vakil for the respondent has not disputed that if the decision of the Revenue authorities had been adverse to the claimant who set up a tenancy, the latter would have been entitled to maintain a declaratory suit for the establishment of the right alleged by him. The same principle is applicable to the converse case and has been recognised in a series of decisions of this Court amongst which may be mentioned Khoobun v. Woomi Churn Singh (1), Kalupnath Singh v. Lala Ramdein Lal (2), Ananda Kishore Chowdhury v. Durga Thakurain (3) and Janaki Nath Chowdhury v. Kali Narain Roy Chowdhury (4).

As pointed out in the case of Zahrun v. Gowri Sunkar (5), the true test to be applied in the solution of questions of this description is, whether the parties who seek relief in the Civil Court really intend to get an adjudication which may affect the Government revenue. If the question which is sought to be raised is of this description, the Civil Court has no jurisdiction It cannot be suggested with any decree of plausibility that the question sought to be raised in this case is of this character.

The result, therefore, is that this appeal is allowed, the decree of the District Judge set aside and the case remanded to him in order that the appeal may be heard on the merits. The costs of this appeal will abide the result.

Under section 13 of the Court Fees Act we direct that the Court-fees paid on the memorandum of appeal to this Court be returned to the appellant.

It is conceded that this judgment will govern the other appeal, in which a similar order will be drawn up.

Appeal allowed,
case remanded.

(1) 3 C. L. R. 453.
(2) 16 C. 117.
(3) 1 Ind. Cas. 549; 36 C. 726; 10 C. L. J. 189.
(4) 7 Ind. Cas. 881; 37 C. 662; 15 C. W. N. 45.
(5) 15 C. 198.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
CIVIL RULE No. 3996 OF 1910.
May 24, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

DEBENDRA NATH SARKAR—DEFENDANT—PETITIONER
versus
BINDHUBALA DASI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 9—Persons dispossessed, whether must be co-plaintiffs—Possession, act of—Nature of property—Grazing cattle whether act of possession.

Where a person enters wrongfully upon any land, it is open to any one of the persons dispossessed to maintain an action for his ejectment, and it is no substantial grievance that all the persons dispossessed have not been joined as plaintiffs. He is sufficiently protected if the persons dispossessed are on the record either as plaintiffs or as pro forma defendants.

Whether a particular act may be treated as an act of possession, depends upon the nature of the property and the special circumstances of the case.

Rajkrishna v. Muktaram Das, 7 Ind. Cas. 700; 12 C. L. J. 605, followed.

The fact that the cattle of a person occasionally grazed on a piece of land is not by itself sufficient to show that the land was in the possession of that person.

Rule against the order of the first Munsif of Bolpur, dated August 4th, 1910.

Babus Bipin Bihari Ghose (Junior) and Provash Chandhra Mitra, for the Petitioner.

Babus Joy Gopal Ghosha and Biraj Mohan Majumdar, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—In this case we are invited to set aside the decree made under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act The subject-matter of the litigation appears to be a house which was at one time the property of one Mr. Cheap and subsequently appears to have been more or less abandoned. The case for the plaintiffs is that they, along with their co-sharers who are made pro forma defendants, were in possession of the disputed property till they were dispossessed by the first defendant on the 6th November 1909. They alleged that they could not induce their co-sharers to join with them as plaintiffs and were consequently obliged to place them on the record as pro forma defendants. They ask for recovery of possession on the ground that the first defendant ought not to interfere with their possession. The learned Munsif, in an exhaustive judgment, has found that the plaintiffs were in possession as stated by them and that the first defendant was not in possession of the property till he raised the pagar on the 6th November 1909. In this view, he has made a decree in favour of the plaintiffs and directed the property to be held by them on their own behalf and on behalf of their co-sharers pro forma defendants.

DEBENDRA NATH v. BINDHUBALA DASI.

On behalf of the first defendant, this decree has been assailed substantially on two grounds, namely, first, that the suit has not been properly framed and, secondly, that upon the facts found by the Court below, the plaintiffs have not such judicial possession of the property as would entitle them to ask the Court to restore them to possession. In our opinion there is no substance in either of these contentions.

In so far as the first point is concerned, it is plain that the suit was properly framed. The learned Vakil for the first defendant urges that as the plaintiffs were admittedly not in exclusive possession of the property, but, according to their own case, held joint possession along with their co-sharers, they ought not to be placed in exclusive possession. It is further argued that a suit of this description could not be maintained, unless all the persons in joint possession, who are alleged to have been dispossessed, joined as co-plaintiffs in the institution of the suit. This position is, in our opinion, clearly unsustainable. The policy which underlies section 9 of the Specific Relief Act is to discourage persons from taking the law into their own hands and entering by force upon the property in the possession of other persons. The law will not suffer a person to be his own judge and will not allow him to take possession of the land, unless he has recovered it by legal means. If the first defendant, therefore, is a person who has wrongfully entered upon the land, it is open to any one of the persons dispossessed, to maintain an action to eject him, and it is no substantial grievance that all the persons whom he dispossessed have not been joined as plaintiffs in maintaining the action. He is sufficiently protected if the persons dispossessed by him are on the record either as plaintiffs or as pro forma defendants. If the contrary view were maintained, a suit of this description might easily be defeated if the dispossesser could win over one of the persons dispossessed to his side. We must, therefore, overrule the first point urged on behalf of the petitioner.

In so far as the second point is concerned, there is obviously no substance in it. The learned Munsif has found that the plaintiffs and their predecessors have for many years past exercised, with reference to the land, acts which might properly be treated as acts of ownership. He has pointed out that in 1882 the predecessors of the plaintiffs took trees standing on the disputed property, that later on in 1896, they took away cart loads of bricks and also another tree, and in 1903, 1906 and 1908 they sold under-shrubs standing on this piece of land. It is perfectly true that, as pointed out by this Court in the case of Rajkrishna v. Muktaram Das (1), whether a particular act may be treated as an act of possession depends upon the nature of the property and the special circumstances of the case. In the case before us, in view of the condition of the property, the Munsif was quite right in holding that the acts mentioned were acts of possession. On the other hand, the only act upon which the first defendant can rely is that the cattle of his predecessors grazed occasionally on the disputed property. As the Court below has pointed out, that by itself is not sufficient to show that the defendant or his predecessor was in possession of the property. In this country especially in the villages, persons are often allowed to graze their cattle on the property of others. It would be impossible, in these circumstances, to hold that the plaintiffs were not, and that the defendant was, in possession.

The Rule is, therefore, discharged with costs. We assess the hearing fee at two gold mohurs.

Rule discharged.

(1) 7 Ind. Cas. 700; 12 C. L. J. 605.

SITARAM v. KALANDI PATRA.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
CIVIL RULE No. 4607 OF 1910.
May 24, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.
SITARAM SWAMI—DEFENDANT—PETITIONER
versus
KALANDI PATRA—PLAINTIFF—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908*), O. V, r.* 17—Service of summons—Substituted service—Ordinary residence—Leaving temporarily—Due and reasonable diligence to find defendant.

If a person leaves his place of residence only temporarily, it cannot be said that the house which he occupied is not where he ordinarily resided.

A peon went to serve the defendant with a summons, but could not find the defendant at his place of residence, upon inquiry he was told by the defendant's wife that her husband had gone to B. a place in the Madras Presidency. He thereupon affixed a copy of the summons to the outer door of the defendant's house. The defendant returned to his house about three months after this:

Held, that the peon had used all due and reasonable diligence within the meaning of rule 17 of Order V of the Code, and that service of the summons had been properly effected.

Sakina v. Gauri, 24 A. 302; Sakharam v. Padmakar, 30 B. 623; 8 Bom. L. R. 757; Subramania Pillai v. Subramania Ayyar, 21 M. 419; Abraham Pillai v. Donald Smith, 29 M 324 and Bhomshetti v. Umabai, 21 B. 223, distinguished.

Sankaralinga v. Ratnasabhapati, 21 M. 324, relied upon.

Rule against the order of the District Judge of Cuttack, dated June 3rd, 1910, dismissing the appeal of the petitioner.

Babu Shiba Prosonna Bhattacharyya, for the Petitioner.

Babus Khetra Mohan Sen, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—We are invited in this Rule to discharge an order by which the Court of appeal below, in concurrence with the Court of first instance, has refused to set aside an ex parte decree in a contribution suit at the instance of the petitioners who were the second and third defendants. The application was made under rule 13 of Order IX which provides that an ex parte decree may be set aside if the defendant satisfies the Court that the summons was not duly served or that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing. The case before us does not fall within the second branch of the rule, because it has been found by the Court below that the petitioners were aware of the suit and did not appear at the hearing. If the petitioners can succeed it can only be on the ground that the summonses were not duly served upon them. Now, upon this part of the case the admitted facts are that the peon, as stated in his return, could not find the petitioners at their residence at Ichapur and on inquiring from their wives learnt that one of them had gone to Vizagapatam and the other to Berhampore, two places in the Madras Presidency, and outside the jurisdiction of the Court. He thereupon attached copies of the summons to the outer door of their residence. As regards one of the petitioners it is stated that he had gone to Vizagapatam in August 1909 and did not return to his usual place of residence till December 1909. Summons was served on the 30th September 1909. Upon these facts, the question arises whether substituted service was properly effected under rule 17 of Order V of the Code. That rule provides that,—we quote only so much of the rule as is applicable to the facts of this case,—where the defendant or his agent refuses to sign the acknowledgment or where the serving officer, after using all due and reasonable diligence, cannot find the defendant, and there is no agent empowered to accept service of the summons on his behalf, nor any other person on whom service can be made, the serving officer shall affix a copy of the summons on the outer door or some other conspicuous part of the house in which the defendant ordinarily resides or carries on business or personally works for gain and shall then return the original to the Court from which it was issued. Two questions arise upon this Rule, namely, first, whether the summonses were affixed on the outer door of the house in which the defendant ordinarily resided; and, secondly, whether, before this was done, the serving officer had used all due and reasonable diligence to find out the defendants. In so far as the first question is concerned, there is no room for dispute that the defendants ordinarily resided in the house on the outer door of which the summonses were affixed. They had left their place of residence only temporarily and, therefore, it cannot be contended that that was not the house in which they ordinarily resided at the time when the service was effected. In so far as the second question is concerned, we have to examine whether the serving officer had used all due and reasonable diligence to find the defendants. His report states that he could not find the petitioners at their place of residence, and upon inquiry from their wives he learnt that one of them had gone to Berhampore and the other to Vizagapatam. One of the petitioners did not return to his residence till about three months after the date of service. Under these circumstances, we are of opinion that, in so far as this defendant is concerned, the peon had used all due and reasonable diligence within the meaning of the rule. We take it, therefore, that the service was properly effected. The learned Vakil for the petitioner has, however, contended that this view is opposed to the decision in the case of Sakina v. Gauri (1) which has been accepted as good law in the case of Sakharam v. Padmakar (2). He has also placed reliance upon the case of Subramania Pillai v. Subramania Ayyar (3) and Abraham Pillai v. Donald Smith (4). These cases, as also the decision in the case of Bhomshetti v. Uma Bai (5), lay down the proposition that merely because the peon is unable to find the defendants at their residence, he is not entitled to effect service in the manner prescribed in rule 17 of Order V of the Code. He must take care to ascertain where the defendants live, and, if practicable try to effect personal service upon them. It is possible that in some of these cases the rule was too broadly stated, and it may be a question whether the decision in every one of these cases can be justified upon the most liberal interpretation of rule 17. The case before us, however, is reasonably free from difficulty. Here one of the defendants had left his residence temporarily. He was absent for several months. It was consequently impossible for the peon to retain the summons in his custody till the return of the defendant, and as the defendant had left the jurisdiction of the Court, it was not possible for the peon to effect service upon him personally outside the jurisdiction. The present case, in our opinion, falls within the principle recognized in the case of Sankaralinga v. Ratna Sobhapati (6). There the learned Judges observed that as it appeared from the serving officer's report that according to the information given to him there was no prospect of his being able to serve the defendant personally within a reasonable time, he was justified in affixing the summons to the door of the house. In so far, therefore, as the petitioner, who has been examined as a witness in the case, is concerned service was properly effected. In so far as the other petitioner is concerned, he has not been examined and there is nothing on the record to show under what circumstances or for what length of time he was absent. We are unable to say, therefore, that the summons was not duly served, in so far as he is concerned.

The result is that the order of the Court below is affirmed, and this Rule discharged with costs one gold mohur.

Rule discharged.

(1) 24 A. 302.
(2) 30 B. 623; 8 Bom. L. R. 757.
(3) 21 M. 419.
(4) 29 M. 324.
(5) 21 B. 223.
(6) 21 M. 324.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2820 OF 1909.
July 7, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

SRI RANG BEHARY LAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

RANCHEYYA LAL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Pleadings—Written statement—Inconsistent defences in alternative, whether allowable—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 112—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VI, r. 7—Amendment of written statement, when may be allowed.

A defendant may in his written statement raise as many distinct and separate, and, therefore, inconsistent defences as he may think proper, in the alternative.

Alickjan Bibi v. Rambaran Shah, 7 Ind. Cas. 166; 12 C. L. J. 357, followed.

Hawkesley v. Bradshaw, (1880) 5 Q. B. D. 302, 49 L. J. Q. B. 333, 42 L. T. 285, 28 W. R. 557, 44 J. P. 473 and Narendra Nath v. Abhoy Charan, 34 C. 51, 4 C. L. J. 437 (F. B), 11 C. W. N. 20, 1 M. L. T. 364, relied upon.

An amendment of the pleadings ought to be allowed whenever this can be done without injustice to the opposite side. For the purpose of raising the real question at issue between the parties such amendment should be allowed, and if the opposite party has incurred expense and been caused delay, it should be compensated therefor.

Australian Steam Navigation Co. v. W. Howard Smith and sons, 14 App. Cas. 318, 61 L. T. 134, followed.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Mozaffarpur, dated August 28th, 1909, affirming that of the Sub-Judge of that District, dated June 29th, 1908.

Babus Jogesh Chandra Roy, Akhoy Kumar Banerjee and Lakshmi Narain Singh, for the Appellants.

Babu Joy Gopal Ghosha, for the Respondent.

SRI RANG BEHARY LAL v. RANCHHAYYA LAL.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against a decree in favour of the plaintiff in a suit for declaration of title to immoveable property and for recovery of possession thereof. The case for the plaintiff is, that the disputed property belonged to his maternal grandfather, Manyar Singh. Manyar Singh died many years ago and left a widow Rajrani Koer who died in 1867. According to the plaintiff, Manyar Singh also left two daughters, his mother Gangabati and her sister Sham Dasi, Gangabati died in 1886 and Sham Dasi in 1909. On the 8th May 1907, the plaintiff commenced this action for declaration of title and recovery of possession of the dispute property from the appellants who purchased it from Gangabati and Sham Dasi under a conveyance executed on the 15th January 1890. The defendants resisted the claim on the ground that the transfer by Gangabati and Sham Dasi was for legal necessity, and they had consequently acquired an indefeasible title. The written statement in which this plea of legal necessity was urged was filed on the 25th March 1907. The issues were framed on the following day and the parties are called upon to file the documentary evidence. On the 27th June the defendants invited the Court to send for the original of certain records from the Collectorate relating to mutation proceedings in 1847, upon the application of Rajrani Koer. On the 16th July 1907, the defendants applied for leave to amend their written statement. This application was refused on the day following. The suit was subsequently tried out, and the only question in controversy between the parties, was whether there was legal necessity for the alienation in favour of the defendants. The Court found that the defendants had failed to discharge the burden that lay upon them to establish the alleged legal necessity. The result was that a decree was made in favour of the plaintiff. Upon appeal to the District Judge, the defendants conceded that the finding of the original Court upon the question of legal necessity could not be successfully assailed on the evidence. In fact, in view of the circumstance that the transaction had taken place nearly forty years before the trial of the suit, it would be extremely difficult, if not wholly, impracticable for the defence to establish the plea. The defendants, however, urged before the District Judge that they ought to have been allowed to amend their written statement. The District Judge overruled this contention and affirmed the decree of the primary Court. Upon the present appeal the only point which has been urged on behalf of the appellants is that their application for amendment of the written statement was improperly refused. In our opinion, this contention is well-founded and must prevail.

The application of the 16th July 1907, for amendment of the written statement was to this effect: The defendants alleged that they had discovered from the record of the mutation proceedings of 1848 that Rajrani Koer then alleged that upon the death of Manyar Singh he had been succeeded by his son Durga Prosad; and that upon the death of Durga Prosad, about the year 1847, Raj Rani Koer herself had succeeded to the estate as the heiress of his son. It was on this basis that the application was made by Raj Rani Koer in 1848, for mutation of the name of Manyar Singh in the records of the Collectorate. The defendants in the present suit prayed that they might be allowed to amend their written statement and set up an alternative defence, namely, that if it was established that Manyar Singh left a son Durga Prosad upon whose death the properties passed to Raj Rani Koer, upon the death of the latter the estate would pass not to the sisters of Durga Prosad, namely, Gangabati and Sham Dasi, but to his nephew Rachia Lal, the present plaintiff. In this view, the question would arise whether the defendants, although they had professed to buy the property from Gangabati and Sham Dasi, on the assumption that they were the heirs to the estate of Manyar Singh had not acquired a good title by adverse possession and whether the claim of Rachia Lal to succeed to the estate of Durga Prosad was not barred by limitation. No doubt the legal inference which could follow upon the establishment of the fact that Durga Prosad had succeeded to the estate of his father Manyar Singh was not explicitly set out in the application for amendment; but it was plainly unnecessary for them to state the legal inference in detail; they could at best ask for leave to amend the written statement by a recital of the fact which they had discovered. The question, therefore, arises whether the defendants were entitled in justice to have their written statement amended as prayed. The answer to this question depends upon two elements; namely, first was it open to the defendants to include in their written statement two inconsistent defences; secondly, if it was open to them to do so, whether their application of the 16th July 1907, ought to have been granted so as to enable them to include in the written statement a defence inconsistent with the defence originally taken.

SRI RANG BEHARY LAL v. RANCHHAYYA LAL.

Now, in so far as the first of these points is concerned, there can be no room for controversy that it would have been open to the defendants to include two inconsistent defences in the alternative in their original written statement. In support of this proposition, reference may be made to the decision of a Full Bench of this Court in the case of Narendranath Barary v. Abhoy Charan Chattopadhya (1) which was applied in Alickjan Bibi v. Rambaran Shah (2). In the case last mentioned, it was pointed out that a defendant may raise by his written statement as many distinct and separate, and, therefore, inconsistent defences as he may think proper. This is in accord with the rule which prevails in England [Hawkesley v. Bradshaw (3).]

In so far as the second question is concerned, it is clear that there was nothing in the law as it stood at the time of the decision of the suit in the original Court, which prevented the defendants from amending their written statement. Section 112 of the Code of 1852 provides that the Court may at any time require a written statement or an additional written statement from any of the parties and fix a time for presenting the same. Upon a construction of the corresponding section 122 of Act VIII of 1859, it was ruled by this Court in Dasimoni Dasi v. Srinath Ghose (4), that on an application by the defendant to be allowed to file an additional written statement, the Court might grant the application even though the additional written statement was inconsistent with the original written statement. Such an order, however, could be made only upon payment of costs by the defendant to the plaintiff. The law, as it now stands, gives a wider discretion to the Court, because rule 7 of Order VI of the Code of 1908 provides that the Court may at any stage of the proceedings allow either party to alter or amend his pleadings in such manner and on such terms as may be just, and all such amendments shall be made as may be necessary for the purpose of determining the real question in controversy between the parties. This rule merely gives effect to what has been the recognised practice, because, as was stated by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the case of Australian Steam Navigation Co. v. W. Howard Smith and Sons (5), their Lordships are strong advocates for amendments, whenever it can be done without injustice to the other side, and even where they have been put to certain expense and delay, yet if they can be compensated for that in any way, an amendment ought to be allowed for the purpose of raising the real question between the parties. The two cardinal elements to be borne in mind are, first, whether the application for amendment is made in good faith, and, secondly, whether the application is made at such a late stage of the case that if we grant the prayer, the plaintiff may be injured because the defendant would without notice raise a totally different and inconsistent case which the plaintiff has not sufficient opportunity to meet [Tildesley v. Harper (6); Charapede v. Commercial Union (7); Weldon v. Neale (8) and Laird v. Briggs (9), Bullen and Leake—Precedents of Pleading, 6th Ed., p. 16.] It is obvious, as we have already explained, that the plaintiffs in the case before us would not have been embarrassed in any way if the amendment had been allowed. We are, therefore, of opinion that the course which was pursued by the Court of first instance and has met with the approval of the District Judge, cannot be defended on principle.

The result is that this appeal is allowed, the decrees of the Courts below set aside and the case remanded to the Court of first instance in order that the defendants may have an opportunity to amend their written state-

(1) 34 C. 51; 4 C. L. J. 437; 11 C. W. N. 20; 1 M. L. T. 364.
(2) 12 C. L. J. 357 at p. 360; 7 Ind. Cas. 166.
(3) (1880) 5 Q. B. D. 302; 49 L. J. Q. B. 333; 42 L. T. 285; 28 W. R. 557; 44 J. P. 473.
(4) 3 B. L. R. App. 11.
(5) 14 App. Cas. 318; 61 L. T. 134.
(6) (1778) 10 Ch. D. 393; 39 L. T. 552; 27 W. R. 249; 48 L. J. Ch. 495.
(7) (1884) 32 W. R. 151 at p. 262.
(8) (1887) 19 Q. B. D. 394; 35 W. R. 820; 56 L. J. Q. B. 621.
(9) (1880) 16 Ch. D. 440 at p. 446; 43 L. T. 632; 29 W. R. 197; 50 L. J. Ch. 260.

ment. The defendants are entitled to their costs both in this Court and in the Court of the District Judge. They will also be allowed one gold mohur as costs of the hearing of the 16th July 1907 in the Court of first instance. The other costs in the Court of first instance will abide the result.

We may add that, in so far as the question of legal necessity is concerned, it will not be open for further consideration. The only point for examination at the re-trial will be whether Manyar Singh left a son Durga Prasad, and if so, what is the result of that circumstance on the rights of the parties. They will be at liberty to adduce evidence on the questions which require determination.

Appeal allowed: Case remanded.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 456 OF 1911.

November 28, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Karamat Husain and Mr. Justice Chamier.

KHAZAN SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

PANNA LAL—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 27 —Further evidence in appeal.

The provisions of Order XLI, rule 27, of the Civil Procedure Code are not intended to give a party a second opportunity of proving his case but to supply a defect in the existing evidence on the record.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge of Meerut, dated the 21st of February 1911.

Mr. Harendro Krishna Mukerji, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. Ishaq, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

CHAMIER, J.—This was a suit by the appellant on a demand promissory-note for Rs. 718, signed on March 13th, 1907, by Naurang Mal and Murli Dhar, who are now represented by the respondent and others. The appellant stated in the plaint that the maker of the note had borrowed two sums of Rs. 150 and Rs. 170 in April and June 1907 on mortgages and left the money with the appellant's brother Mittar Sen to be paid to the appellant on account of the note but the money had not been paid, therefore, the appellant claimed the whole amount for which the note was given and interest thereon at the rate stated in the note. The respondent's defence was that the appellant and his brother Mittar Sen were joint in estate, that a dispute between the appellant and the makers of the note had been referred to the arbitration of Umrao Singh and Newal Singh with the result that it was decided that the two mortgages mentioned above should be made for sum aggregating Rs. 320, and the balance Rs. 400 should be paid in cash; and that, in pursuance of the award, Rs. 400 was paid to the appellant.

The first Court found that the appellant and his brother were joint and that the promissory-note had been re-placed by the mortgages to the extent of Rs. 320, the payment of the sum of Rs. 400 had not been proved. It gave the appellant a decree for Rs. 512 odd, being the amount due on the note less the amount secured by the two mortgages. The respondent appealed to the District Judge, who was inclined to think that a passage in the mortgage of June 1907, showed that the sum of Rs. 400 had been paid to the appellant as arranged by the arbitrators, but he was puzzled by the fact that the note had remained in the hands of the appellant and no receipt could be shown for the sum of Rs. 400 alleged to have been paid to the appellant. The respondent urged before the learned Judge that Rs. 200 had been paid to Umrao Singh, one of the arbitrators; that Umrao Singh had himself obtained another sum of Rs. 200 on a mortgage and paid both sums to the appellant and got the promissory-note back but the appellant had managed to get it from Umrao's widow after his death. The learned Judge then remitted three issues to the first Court. Neither party having produced any evidence, the first Court returned the record to the District Judge.

What then took place in the lower Appellate Court appears from the following extract from his judgment:—

"When the case came before me on the 30th November the reference to arbitration was not on the file, and though the balance of probability was against the plaintiff I thought a certainty was obtainable. I, therefore, framed three issues dealing with the alleged proceedings of the arbitrator and remanded the case. No evidence was adduced on them.....The reference to arbitration had, however, been brought on the file.

KHAZAM SINGH v. PANNA LAL.

"To-day was fixed for hearing and the appellants' Pleader came in with a compromise which the plaintiff repudiated when it was read to him..... Under Order XLI, rule 27, to enable me to pronounce judgment, I examined Khazan and also Panna Lal and brought the repudiated compromise on the record as a paper, its contents not having been proved, it corroborates the evidence that the parties came to terms and confirms the explanation of failure to bring evidence on the issues remanded. It is clear that Khazan was willing to compromise 2 days ago but to-day is greedy and repudiates his agreement. Khazan's conduct and the reference to Umrao Singh's arbitration give me in fact the certainty that was lacking on the 30th November when the probabilities only were against Khazan. Now, it is certain that Shahzad's claim was wiped out in 1907, by the payment of Rs. 400 to his elder son Khazan and the execution of two mortgages in favour of his younger son."

In the first place, I think that there was no justification for remitting issues to the Court of first instance and giving the respondent a second opportunity of proving his case by producing evidence which he might have produced in the first instance. Next, I think that when the respondent did not avail himself of the opportunity that was given to him the District Judge ought to have gone on to decide the case at once. He says that the admission of further evidence was necessary to enable him to pronounce judgment, but the provisions of Order XLI, rule 27, are not intended to give a party a second opportunity of proving his case [see the remarks in Kessowji Issur v. G. I. P. Railway Company (1)]. The learned Judge let in the evidence not to supply a defect or lacuna in the existing evidence but because he thought that some further evidence of a different kind was available. As a matter of fact, the Judge did not get the evidence which he expected, the evidence admitted by him does not bear directly upon the issues remitted by him and the learned Judge says so. He has used the evidence admitted by him merely for the purpose of importing prejudice into the case and punishing the appellant for refusing to come to terms; in my opinion, an improper thing to do. I cannot understand how the learned Judge can have considered himself justified in using the inchoate compromise against the appellant as he did. I disregard entirely the evidence admitted by the District Judge. It is quite clear, and the contrary has not been contended here, that the learned Judge agreed with the Munsif that the oral evidence adduced to prove the payment of Rs. 400 is worthless.

There remains the mortgage of June 1907 which is supposed to prove that the sum of Rs. 400 was paid. That mortgage purports to have been made to secure a loan taken "babat bebaqi ek qita ruqqa kalmi min muqir Naurang Mal waste dene (qarza) Shahzad Rai." It appears to me that these words do not necessarily mean that the mortgage was made in full discharge of the amount due on the ruqqa. The arrangement was that Rs. 400 should be paid in cash and payment of the balance (Rs. 320) secured by mortgage. The words quoted above do not necessarily mean more than that the mortgage is made on account of, in the sense of towards, the discharge of the sum due on the ruqqa or promissory-note. It was contended that the finding of the learned Judge was a finding of fact binding upon this Court in second appeal and could not be challenged because the appellant had not certified that there was no evidence to support the finding. But the finding that the ruqqa has been discharged rests upon the construction of the above quoted passage in the mortgage-deed and other evidence and I have found that the other evidence is not admissible. The evidence which remains, namely, the mortgage-deed, did not satisfy the learned Judge that payment had been made, for he called for other evidence. Therefore, upon the evidence properly admitted, there is no finding which can be said to be binding upon this Court in second appeal, upon the question of the construction of the deed, this Court can in second appeal revise the finding of the District Judge. In my opinion, the mortgage-deed of June 1907, does not prove the payment of Rs. 400 to the appellant. It appears to me to show nothing more than that the mortgage was made in pursuance of the award. I would allow the appeal, set aside the decree of the lower Appellate

(1) 31 B. 381 at p. 390; 11 C. W. N. 721; 6 C. L. J. 5; 4 A. L. J. 461; 2 M. L. T. 435; 9 Bom. L. R. 671; 17 M. L. J. 347.

Court and restore the decree of the Court of first instance.

KARAMAT HUSAIN, J.—I agree.

BY THE COURT.—The order of the Court is that the appeal is allowed that the decree of the lower Appellate Court is set aside, and that the decree of the Court of first instance is restored with costs which in this Court will include fees on the higher scale.

Appeal allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1011 OF 1910.

November 24, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Spencer.

GUNNIAH VENCATACHALAPATHY AIYAR—APPELLANT

versus

PERUMAL IYER AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47—Questions relating to execution—Construction of decree and validity of sale are such questions.

The question whether a sale held in execution of a decree is valid or invalid on the ground that it is not warranted by the decree is one relating to the execution of the decree and must be contested under section 47, Civil Procedure Code, 1908.

The question of the construction of a decree is one relating to execution. Therefore, the question whether the actual execution of a decree is in excess of the decree itself relates to execution.

Rani Kattama Nachiar v. Bothagurusami Thevar, 6 M. H. C. R. 293, Biru Mahata v. Shyama Charan Khawas, 22 C. 483 and Harnam Chunder v. Muhammad Yar Khan, 27 A. 485; 2 A. L. J. 169; A. W. N. (1905) 63, referred to.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of Madura, in A. S. No. 792 of of 1909, presented against the decree of the District Munsif of Madura, in O. S. No. 143 of 1908.

Mr. Sreenivasa Aiyangar, for the Appellant.

Mr. Ananthakrishna Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The defendants Nos. 1 to 3 in this suit were the usufructuary mortgagees of certain properties. The first defendant, who was entitled to one-third share of that right, mortgaged his right to one Ponnaiyen and Ponnaiyen mortgaged his right to the plaintiff.

The plaintiff brought a suit on his mortgage and made Ponnaiyen and Ponnaiyen's mortgagor, the first defendants, as well as the second and third defendants, parties to the suit. Certain other persons, to whom it is unnecessary to refer, were also made parties, and a decree was passed in his favour. The construction of this decree is in question in this suit. The plaintiff contends that not only Ponnaiyen's mortgage-right but the 1st defendant's $\frac{1}{3}$rd interest also in the property was directed to be sold by the decree. The defendants contend, on the other hand, that only Ponniyen's right was directed to be sold. After the decree, an order for sale was passed. It is not disputed that this order directed the rights both of Ponniyen and of the first defendant to be sold. Nor is it disputed that they were, as a matter of fact, brought to sale, and that the plaintiff obtained such delivery as a purchaser of one-third share is entitled to get according to the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code.

The present suit is instituted for partition of the one-third share of the first defendant and recovery of that share. The first defendant did not appear to contest the suit. His co-parceners, the defendants Nos. 2 and 3, contend that the plaintiff is not entitled to partition because the decree in the plaintiff's favour was really only for sale of Ponniyen's right. Exhibit III is the decree. It directed the mortgaged property to be sold in case of default. The mortgaged property is described as one-third share of Perumal Ayyer in certain land, and it is stated that Ponniyen's right was mortgaged to one Devendiayen for Rs. 75, and that it was subsequently mortgaged to the plaintiff.

The respondent's contention that it was only the mortgage-right of Ponniyen that was directed to be sold may not be without some foundation on the construction of this decree, the terms of which appear to be doubtful. But, as already stated, it is admitted that what was directed to be sold was the right both of Ponniyen, and Perumaliyen, the first defendant, and it was that right that was actually sold.

It is contended, that although the order for sale was passed after notice to the first defendant, it is not shown that the notice stated that the application was to bring Perumaliyen's right also to sale. Assuming that the onus was not on the defendants to show that the notice did not state that Perumaliyen's right could be brought to sale, the fact still remains that it was brought to sale. Section 244 of the repealed Civil Procedure Code, 1882, corresponding to section 47 of the present Civil Procedure Code, 1908, lays down that "all questions . . . relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, shall be determined by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit."

The question whether the sale was valid or invalid on the ground that it was not warranted by the decree is one relating to the execution of the decree. The defendants, who were parties to the plaintiff's suit, on his mortgage were, therefore, bound to take steps in execution to impeach the validity of the sale.

It has been repeatedly held that the question whether the actual execution of a decree is in excess of the decree itself one relating to execution. See Rani Kattamma Nachiar v. Bothagurusami Thevar (1); Biru Mahata v. Shyama Charan Khawas (2); Harnam Chander v. Muhammad Yar Khan (3). The defendants not having taken steps to set aside the sale, if they really had any grievance, the plaintiff is entitled to enforce the rights which he obtained under it.

The decrees of the lower Courts are set aside and the suit remanded to the Court of first instance for disposal on the other issues.

The costs of this Court and of the lower Appellate Court will abide the result.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 6 M. H. C. R. 293.
(2) 22 C. 483.
(3) 27 A. 485; 2 A. L. J. 169; A. W. N. (1905) 63.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 33 OF 1911.
December 5, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Tubdall and Mr. Justice Chamier.
ISHAR DAS AND OTHERS—AUCTION-PURCHASERS—APPELLANTS
versus
ASAF ALI KHAN AND OTHERS—DECREE-HOLDERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 89—Sale of property by judgment-debtor after auction-sale—Right of judgment-debtor or his transferee to make an application for setting aside auction-sale.

If a judgment-debtor sells his immoveable property, after it has been sold by auction, then neither he nor his transferee has a right to make an application under Order XXI, rule 89, of the Code of Civil Procedure, to set aside the auction-sale. Debi Prashad Pandit v. Muhammad Unis Arabi, 14 O. C. 33; 9 Ind. Cas. 745, referred to.

First appeal from the order of the Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, dated the 23rd January 1911.

Mr. W. K. Porter (with him Mr. Gulzari Lal), for the Appellants.

Mr. Abdul Raoof (with him Mr. O'Conor), for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

TUDBALL, J.—This appeal arises out of a sale of immoveable property in execution of a decree. The property was sold on 21st August 1910.

On the 20th September 1910, the judgment-debtor, who is the respondent in this appeal, paid into the Treasury the amount which was necessary under Order XXI, rule 89, to enable him to have the sale set aside. On this date the Court was closed and it did not re-open until October 5th, 1910.

It is an admitted fact, that subsequently to the auction-sale and prior to the 20th September 1910, the judgment-debtor transferred by sale all his interests in the property to a third party so that on the later date he could no longer be said to be the owner of the property.

On the 5th October he applied to the Court to set aside the sale under Order XXI, rule 89. To this the auction-purchaser, who was not the decree-holder, objected. Several points were raised by these objections, the chief one being that as the judgment-debtor had parted with his interest in the property by sale to a third party, prior to his application but subsequently to the sale, he was no longer qualified to apply under Order XXI, rule 89. The lower Court decided all the questions in favour of the judgment-debtor, hence this appeal by the auction-purchaser, who raises for decision the same points which were before the lower Court, the chief one being that mentioned above.

In my opinion, the decision of the lower Court on this, the chief point, is wrong: under Order XXI, rule 89 "any person, either owning the property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale" may apply to have the sale set aside.

This language clearly precludes the transferee from the judgment-debtor in the present case from making any such application.

ISHAR DAS v. ASAF ALI KHAN.

Does the fact that the judgment-debtor has parted by sale, with the whole of his interest, after the auction-sale, also preclude him from making the application? The lower Court has held (and the same argument has been pressed upon us in this Court) that after the auction-sale and until it is set aside, no interest is left to the judgment-debtor capable of transfer and hence the sale by him in this case is virtually a nullity and he, therefore, remains in the same position as on the date of the auction-sale; with this, I cannot agree; until the auction-sale is confirmed, the judgment-debtor has a very substantial interest in the property. He still retains a right either to recover his property under Order XXI, rule 89, or to have the sale set aside on the ground of irregularity or fraud (Order XXI, rule 90), even though the title may vest in the auction-purchaser from the date of the sale when once the sale has become absolute.

The rule in Order XXI is a special indulgence to a judgment-debtor or any person holding an interest in the property at the date of sale. It gives them a last chance of saving the property for themselves. It was never intended that the property should be saved for persons to whom the property might be sold privately after the auction-sale had taken place. The language of the rule (which differs considerably from that of section 310 A of the former Code) clearly points to this. It clearly shuts out all persons who purchase or acquire an interest after the auction sale. It seems to me that the Legislature has clearly in mind the case of a purchaser at a private sale from the judgment-debtor after the sale in execution, in respect to whose right to apply under section 310A of the old Code there were conflicting rulings [Haza Ram v. Badri Ram (1); Appaya Shetti v. Kunhati Beiri (2)].

It is, therefore, incorrect to say that the private sale in the present case was a mere nullity and that the judgment-debtor remained the owner of the property in spite thereof.

To allow the present application would, it seems to me, be to defeat the very object of the rule. The person making the application is, no doubt, the judgment-debtor but the person who will benefit by it is the person who has acquired the ownership (or at least an interest in the property) subsequently to the sale in execution, the very person whom the law now in clear terms precludes from making the application. The ruling in Debi Prasad Pandit v. Mohammad Unis Arabi (3) is the only direct decision on the point which has been laid before the Court. With that decision I am in full agreement, and would hold that the judgment-debtor, by divesting himself of all his interest by sale to a third party after the sale in execution, is no longer the person owning the property within the meaning of Order XXI, rule 89. In this view it is unnecessary to decide the minor points which arise in the case. I would allow the appeal and set aside the order of the Court below.

CHAMIER, J.—I concur. I think that there can be no doubt that Order XXI, rule 89, was intended to give persons owning or holding interests in immoveable property, the subject of an execution sale, a last chance of saving the property. But the words "owning such property or holding an interest therein" evidently refer only to persons who own the property or hold an interest therein at the date of the application and whether the applicant be the owner of or only the holder of an interest in the property he must show that he acquired his title before the execution-sale. As I read the rule, neither the owner nor the holder of an interest, who has parted with his title since the sale, or who has acquired title since the sale, can apply under rule 89. That was the view taken in the Oudh case cited. I agree that the appeal should be allowed.

BY THE COURT.—The appeal is allowed. The order of the Court below is set aside. The sale in favour of the appellants will stand confirmed. The appellants will get their costs in all Courts including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 1 C. W. N. 279.
(2) 30 M. 214; 17 M. L. J. 127.
(3) 14 O. C. 33; 9 Ind. Cas. 745.

SUKAN SAHU v. GANGAJALI.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 183 OF 1911.
August 31, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.
SUKAN SAHU—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus
Musammat GANGAJALI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Widow—Widowed daughter-in-law—Maintenance—Residence with family of deceased husband—Not to leave husband's house for immoral purpose—Amount of maintenance, how to determine.

Neither a Hindu widow nor a widowed daughter-in-law is bound to reside with the family of her deceased husband in order to entitle her to separate maintenance.

Prithee Singh v. Raj Koer, 12 B. L. R. 238; 20 W. R. 21; I. A. Sup. Vol. 203, Mokhoda Dasee v. Nundo Lal Haldar, 5 C. W. N. 297; Siddesury Dasee v. Jonardan Sarkar, 5 C. W. N. 549; 29 C. 557, Kusturbai v. Shivjiram, 3 B. 372, Gokibai v. Lakhmi Das Khimji, 14 B. 490 and Surampalli Bongaramma v. Surampalli Bramhazee, 31 M. 338, 3 M. L. T. 266, 18 M. L. J. 254, referred to.

All that is required of a widow or a widowed daughter-in-law is that she is not to leave her husband's house for improper or unchaste purposes, and she is entitled to retain her right to maintenance unless she is guilty of unchastity after she leaves that residence.

The amount of maintenance ought not to be determined with reference to the value of the family properties at the time of the death of the husband of the lady.

Adhibai v. Cursondas, 11 B. 199 and Modhavrav v. Gungabai, 2 B. 639, relied upon.

The amount of maintenance is to depend upon the extent of the property, the position of the family, the nature of the claim alleged, the number of members of the family and other special circumstances of each individual case.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Sarun, dated January 14th, 1911, affirming that of the first Sub-Judge of that District, dated August 10th, 1910.

Babus Umakali Mukerjee and Kulwant Sahay, for the Appellant.

Babus Mohendra Nath Roy and Moulvi Mahomed Mustofa Khan, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against a decree in a suit for recovery of arrears a maintenance by a Hindu lady against her father-in-law. It is not disputed that the husband of the plaintiff died about the year 1881, while he was a member of a joint Mitakshara family composed of his father, himself, his brothers and his grandfather. After the death of her husband, the plaintiff continued to live as a member of the family of her father-in-law. But about the year 1903 disputes broke out by reason of the third marriage of her father-in-law and the introduction of the newly wedded wife into the family circle. The result was, that she was compelled to seek the protection of her brothers. She now claims in the present suit maintenance at the rate of Rs. 25 a month. The Courts below have made a decree in her favour at the rate of Rs. 16 a month and directed that the maintenance should be a charge upon the family property in the hands of the defendant. The learned Vakil for the defendant-appellant has sought to assail that decree on three grounds; namely, first, that as the plaintiff is not residing with her father-in-law she is not entitled to claim any separate maintenance at all; secondly, that the amount of maintenance ought to be determined with reference to the value of the family properties at the time of the death of the husband of the plaintiff; and thirdly, that as the plaintiff has failed to proceed with the suit against members of the family other than the defendant, the charge ought not to be declared upon the entire family property. In our opinion, there is no substance in any of these contentions.

In support of the first ground taken on behalf of the appellant, it has been argued that it is the duty of a widowed daughter-in-law to reside with her father in law, and that if she leaves the house of her father-in-law without any adequate reason, she is not entitled to claim maintenance from him. In support of this view, reliance has been placed upon the decision of a Full Bench of this Court in the case of Khetramani Das v. Kashi Nath Das (1). In our opinion, the case relied upon is clearly distinguishable. That was a decision under the Bengal School of Hindu Law. Consequently, it is not necessary for us to consider whether even under that school of law the view put forward by the learned Vakil for the appellant can be maintained. In so far as the Mitakshara School of Hindu Law is concerned, it is now settled by decisions of the highest authority that neither the widow nor the widowed daughter-in-law is bound to reside with the family of her deceased husband. In support of this proposition, reference may be made to the decision of the Judicial Committee in Pirthee

(1) 2 B. L. R. A. C. 15; 10 W. R. (F. B.) 89.

Singh v. Raj Koer (2), which was the case of a Hindu widow. Reference may also be made to the cases of Mokhoda Dasee v. Nundo Lal Halder (3); Siddesury Dassee v. Jonardan Sarkar (4); Kastuarbai v. Shivaiiram (5); Gokibai v. Lakhmi Das Khimji (6) and Surumpalli Bangarama v. Surampalli Bramhazee (7). It must now be taken as firmly settled that all that is required of a widow or a widowed daughter-in-law is that she is not to leave her husband's house for improper or unchaste purposes, and that she is entitled to retain her right to maintenance unless she is guilty of unchastity after she leaves that residence. Weighty reasons may be assigned, if necessary, in support of this view. Common experience shows that although the family house of her husband's relations is a proper residence for a widow, it is not necessarily the most proper place for her continued residence when she is young and is surrounded by young men, it may even be more prudent and decorous for her to return to her father's care and it may, under many circumstances, be not only a safer but a happier home. The learned Vakil for the appellant has, however, contended that unless the widow has been compelled to leave the house of her husband by reason of the cruelty of her relations she forfeits her right of her maintenance when she ceases to reside there. We are not prepared to accept this position as well founded on principle. The first contention of the appellants consequently fails.

In so far as the second contention is concerned, it has been argued that the amount of maintenance ought to be determined with reference to the state of the family properties at the time of the death of husband of the plaintiff. No authority has been cited in support of this proposition. But it has been suggested that her right ought to be determined on the assumption that a partition had taken place in the life-time of her husband and a separate share allotted to him; she would have been entitled to that share alone by right of inheritance and could not claim any maintenance. This argument is obviously fallacious. No partition, as a matter of fact, did take place in the life-time of the husband of the plaintiff. His interest in the property upon his death passed by survivorship into the hands of the other members of the family and that interest has afforded means to them for addition to the family properties. It is, therefore, impossible to maintain, on principle, the view that the amount of maintenance ought to be determined with reference to the value of the family properties at the time of the death of the husband of the plaintiff. The view we take is supported by two decisions of the Bombay High Court, namely, Adhibai v. Cursandas (8) and Madhavrav v. Gungabai (9). That the argument for the appellant is not well-founded on principle also becomes obvious when we remember the firmly settled rule that the amount of maintenance payable to a widow may be varied from time to time, [Sreeram v. Puddomuki (10); Ram Kalee v. Court of Wards (11), Rukka Bai v. Ganda Bai (12), Nabogopal v. Amritmoyee (13), Ramchander v. Sagunbai (14), Narbadabai v. Mahadev (15), Bhavanamma v. Ramasami (16), Narsingh v. Yadavdas (17)]. The amount of maintenance, it is now well recognized, is to depend upon the extent of the property, the position of the family, the nature of the claim alleged, the number of members of the family and other special circumstances of each individual case. If, therefore, the amount of maintenance can be varied from time to time, it cannot be contended with reason that the amount should be determined and fixed for all time to come with reference to the value of the family properties at the time of the death of the husband of the plaintiff regardless of changes in the circumstances of the family. The second contention, therefore, fails.

In so far as the third contention is concerned, the question does not really arise in these proceedings. The other members of the family are not parties to this litigation,

(2) 12 B. L. R. 238; 20 W. R. 21; I. A. Sup. Vol. 203.
(3) 5 C. W. N. 297.
(4) 5 C. W. N. 549; 29 C. 557.
(5) 3. B. 372.
(6) 14 B. 490.
(7) 31 M. 338; 3 M. L. T. 266; 18 M. L. J. 254.
(8) 11 B. 199.
(9) 2. B. 639.
(10) 9 W. R. 152.
(11) 18 W. R. 474.
(12) 1 A. 594.
(13) 24 W. R. 428.
(14) (1879) Bom. P. J. 450.
(15) 5 B. 99.
(16) 4 M. 193.
(17) (1882) Bom. P. J. 345.

and whether the decree is binding upon their interest in the family property is a question which can arise for consideration only when the plaintiff seeks to execute her decree against them.

The result is that the decree made by the District Judge must be affirmed and this appeal dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 139 OF 1911.
November 18, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Richards, K. C., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.
RAM SARUP—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
Musammat JASODA KUNWAR AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Promissory-note executed simultaneously with the transaction of lending—Stamp on promissory-note ineffectually cancelled—Note inadmissible in evidence—Whether lender can succeed on other evidence of the loan.

Where a lender is able to prove a loan independently and without the assistance of a promissory-note, which is inadmissible in evidence, his claim for the loan ought to succeed.

The plaintiff lent a sum of money to the defendant. Simultaneously with the transaction of lending a promissory-note was executed, the stamp on which was ineffectually cancelled. The promissory-note being inadmissible in evidence, held that the plaintiff could rely on other evidence of the loan. Farr v. Price, I East. 55; 5 R.R. 515; Pramatha Nath Sandal v. Dwarka Nath Dey, 23 C. 851, Krishnaji Narayan Prakhi v. Rajmal Manikchand Marwari, 24 B. 360, Virbhadrapa bin Adrashapa Javli v. Bhimaji Balaji, 28 B. 432, Banarsi Prasad v. Fazal Ahmad, 28 A. 298; 3 A. L. J. 25; A. W. N. (1906) 9; Sri Nath Das v. Angud Singh, 7 A. L. J. 459; 6 Ind. Cas. 126, approved of.

Parsotam Narayan Singh v. Taley Singh, 26 A. 178, dissented from.

Sheikh Akbar v. Sheikh Khan, 7 C. 256, distinguished.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge of Moradabad, dated 22nd November 1910.

Mr. Gokal Prashad, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. L. Agarwala, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit in which the plaintiffs sought to recover certain money. A portion of the money was due upon accounts pure and simple for goods sold. Another portion of it the plaintiff claimed as having been advanced by him to the defendant and for which a certain document, alleged to be a promissory-note, was passed. The claim is then made for Rs. 35-11-6, the price of cloth, Rs. 400 principal and Rs. 140-6-0 interest, in all Rs. 540-6-0 in respect of cash debt, in all Rs. 576-1-6 due under account-books, together with the costs of the suit and future interest. It will thus be seen that the plaintiff bases his claim upon his account-books and it is a claim for money lent. When the document to which we have referred was produced, it appears that the stamp was cancelled by means of two lines drawn crosswise upon it.

The Court of first instance decreed the plaintiffs' claim but holding that the stamp was not effectively cancelled allowed other evidence including the account-books to be given as evidence of the loan. The document, which it held to amount to a promissory-note, was excluded from evidence.

The defendants appealed and the lower Appellate Court adopting the view of the Court of first instance that the document was a promissory-note and that the stamp was not effectively cancelled, refused to allow the plaintiff's claim except for the price of the cloth and reduced the decree of the Court of first instance accordingly.

The plaintiff comes here in second appeal. As to whether or not the stamp was effectually cancelled we offer no opinion. The appellant has not raised the question specifically in his memorandum of appeal.

The next point which was discussed was whether the document in question was a promissory-note within the meaning of the Stamp Act of 1899. On the face of it, it is a request for the loan of money with a promise to re-pay the loan with interest. In the view that we take of the case, it does not become necessary to decide whether or not the document is a promissory-note within the meaning of the Act. We shall, therefore, assume for the purposes of our decision, first, that the document in question amounted to a promissory-note, secondly, that the stamp on it although sufficient was not effectually cancelled; and thirdly, that the taking of the loan and the giving of the note were simultaneous transactions. The appellant contends that even on all these assumptions, he is, (provided he can prove that that money was lent without the help of the note), entitled to succeed in his claim not only for the price of the cloth but also for the money claiming it as he does as money lent. The evidence that the money was in fact lent is overwhelming, and is not disputed in the present appeal. We, therefore, have only to decide whether, on the assumptions that we have made, the plaintiff must fail notwithstanding that the money was in truth and in fact duly lent.

The defendants strongly rely on the case of Shiekh Akbar v. Sheikh Khan (1). The learned Counsel for the defendants admits that in ordinary cases where, for instance, a plaintiff took a promissory-note for the price of goods sold and delivered, if he failed for any reason on his note, he would be entitled to fall back upon the original consideration, namely, the price of goods so delivered, provided that he was able to prove the delivery of the goods, and that such a claim was open to him upon the pleadings.

In like manner, of course, he concedes that if the money was lent and subsequently a note was given for the amount the plaintiff falling on the note would be entitled to fall back upon a claim for money lent. He, however, contends that where the lending of the money and the taking of the note was a simultaneous transaction and the parties all along contemplated that the loan should be secured by the giving and the receiving of the note the plaintiff must stand or fall by the claim based upon the promissory-note, and that if he is unable to give the note in evidence the whole suit fails. For this purpose he relies, as we have stated above, upon the case of Sheikh Akbar v. Sheikh Khan (1).

The facts in that case were somewhat peculiar. But there is no doubt that the giving of the note was the consideration for the deposit of a certain sum of money by the plaintiff. Garth, C. J., in holding that the plaintiff must stand or fall by his claim on his promissory-note says as follows (at p. 260 of the report): "But when the original cause of action is the bill or note itself, and does not exist independently of it, as for instance when in consideration of depositing money with B., B. contracts by a promissory-note to re-pay it with interest at six months' date, here there is no cause of action for money lent or otherwise than upon the note itself, because the deposit is made upon the terms contained in the note, and no other. In such a case the note is the only contract between the parties and if for want of a proper stamp or some other reason, the note is not admissible in evidence the creditor must lose his money." It is contended that what the learned Chief Justice meant was that wherever a loan and the giving of a note are simultaneous the plaintiff cannot fall back upon his claim for money lent. If this be the view of the learned Chief Justice, we are unable to agree with him. As far back as the year 1800 Lord Kenyon in the case of Farr v. Price (2), after holding that the plaintiff could not succeed on a promissory-note on the ground of an error in the stamp, observed: "That as there were other general counts in the declaration if the plaintiff could give other evidence of a consideration paid by him to the defendant he would not be concluded from recovering by the fact of the defendants having given this imperfect promissory-note for it." There is a footnote to the report as follows: "Where a promissory-note had been given for money lent but when produced in Court was unstamped, Lord Kenyon, Chief Justice, permitted the plaintiff to recover on a common count for money lent by proving that when the money for which the loan had been given was demanded of the defendant he acknowledged the debt."

The case of Sheikh Akbar v. Sheikh Khan (1), was considered in Pramatha Nath Sandal v. Dwarka Nath Dey (3). There, as in the present case, a promissory-note had been given for money lent but the note was insufficiently stamped, and was, therefore, inadmissible in evidence. It was held that the plaintiff had a cause of action independently of the document. Petheram, Chief Justice, says (at p. 853 of the report): "The case which has been relied upon by the defendant is that of Sheikh Akbar v. Sheikh Khan (1)." The learned Chief Justice then quotes the passage from the judgment of Garth, C. J., which we have mentioned above, and proceeds: "These words, taken alone, may seem to indicate that when a bill or note is taken for a debt the action must be brought upon the bill or note; and that if for any reason the document is excluded the action must fail; but a reference to the earlier portion of the judgment shows that such was not

(1) 7 C. 256.

(2) 1 East 55; 5 R. R. 515.

(3) 23 C. 851.

the meaning of the Chief Justice, and that when he spoke of a deposit he did not mean a loan, as he then says where money is lent and a bill or note given for the loan which is not paid at maturity, the creditor may disregard the note and sue on the original consideration."

In the case of Krishnaji Narayan Parkhi v. Rajmal Manikchand Marwari (4), where the suit was a suit exactly similar in principle to the present case, Jenkins, C. J., also quotes the judgment of Garth, C. J., in Sheikh Akbar's case (1), and says at page 363 of the report: "It is apparent from this that the actual ratio decidendi was that there was no loan independently of the note so that it does not govern this case if, as I think, there was a loan independently of the note." The Chief Justice was clearly of opinion that where the loan could be proved without having recourse to the note, the plaintiff was entitled to recover. In the same case Candy, J., took the same view, and refers at length to the authorities.

In the case of Virbhadrapa bin Adrashapa Javli v. Bhimaji Baloji Saroff (5), the question arose whether or not the drawing of two parallel lines over a receipt stamp was or was not an effectual cancellation of it. It was held that it was not. The Court then went on to consider whether the plaintiff could be allowed to sue for money lent independently of the promissory-note, and held that the plaintiff could sue.

The same view was taken by a Bench of this Court consisting of Stanley, C. J., and Knox, J., in the case of Banarsi Prasad v. Fazal Ahmad (6). The learned Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Griffin adhered to the same view in Sri Nath Das v. Angad Singh (7).

The only case really in point where a contrary view was taken was the case of Parsotam Narain v. Taley Singh (8). In that case, no doubt, Aikman, J., held that where the parties contemplated at the time of the loan that a note should be taken, the plaintiff must stand or fall by a suit based on the note itself. It is quite clear that the learned Judge relied upon what he supposed was the view of Sir Richard Garth in Sheikh Akbar's case (1). We are unable to follow this case in view of our own opinion, and the authorities we have quoted. We consider that where the plaintiff, as in the present case, is able to prove the loan independently and without the assistance of the note, he ought to succeed.

We accordingly allow the appeal, vary the decree of the lower Appellate Court by restoring the decree of the Court of first instance with costs in all Courts including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

Appeal allowed.

(4) 24 B. 360.
(5) 28 B. 432.
(6) 28 A. 298; 3 A. L. J. 25; A. W. N. (1906) 9.
(7) 7 A. L. J. 459; 6 Ind. Cas. 126.
(8) 26 A. 178.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 549 OF 1910.
August 24, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerji and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

Maharaja RAMESWAR SINGH—DECREE-HOLDER—APPELLANT

versus

TIRPIT SINGH—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—RESPONDENT

Execution of decree—Application for execution—Bar imposed by judgment-debtor—Removal of bar—Subsequent application to be treated as one in continuation of previous application—"Review of judgment"—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 179 cl. (3)—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), Sch. III, Art. 6, cl. (3).

When a decree-holder is unable to proceed with an application for execution by reason of some bar imposed at the instance of the judgment-debtor or any other person, a subsequent application by the decree-holder of the same scope and character may be treated as in continuation of the previous application provided the subsequent application is presented after removal of the bar which interrupted the previous proceeding.

Shaikh Kamaruddin v. Jawahir Lal, 1 C. L. J. 381; 27 A. 334; 15 M. L. J. 258; 7 Bom. L. R. 433; 9 C. W. N. 601; 2 A. L. J. 397; Amulya v. Preonath, 7 Ind. Cas. 886 and Kedar Nath v. Prodyot Kumar, 11 Ind. Cas. 48; 14 C. L. J. 610, relied upon.

This principle is applicable to cases of applications for execution of rent-decree.

Chandra Pradhan v. Gopi Mohan Shaha, 14 C. 385 and Baikuntha Nath v. Aughorenath, 21 C. 387, relied upon.

A rent-decree was passed on May 23rd, 1904. The judgment-debtor made an application for amendment thereof, which was heard ex parte, and on February 25th, 1905, the original decree was materially altered. The decree-holder applied for execution of the original decree on August 26th, 1905, upon which the judgment-debtor objected that the decree could not be executed. The application for execution was then dismissed and the decree-holder applied for a review of the order for amendment. On June 30th, 1906, the review was granted and the original decree was restored. The present application for execution was then made on January 20th, 1909:

RAMESHWAR SINGH v. TIRPIT SINGH.

Held, that the application was not barred; first, because the application of January 20th, 1909, may be treated as one in continuation of the application of August 26th, 1905; and secondly, because under clause (3) of Article 6 of Schedule III of the Bengal Tenancy Act, time ought to run from June 30th, 1906, when the decree-holder's application for review was granted.

Appeal from the order of the District Judge of Darbhanga, dated August 4th, 1910, reversing that of the first Munsif of Modhabani, dated October 1st, 1909.

Babus Ram Charan Mitra, Senior Government Pleader, and Jogendra Nath Mukerjee, for the Appellant.

Babus Baldeo Narain Singh, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against an order by which the Court of appeal below, in reversal of the order of the original Court, has refused an application for execution of a decree as barred by limitation under Article 6 of Schedule III of theBengal Tenancy Act. The decree was for rent, for a sum less than Rs. 500, and was made on the 23rd May 1904. The first application for execution was made on the 7th October 1904, and was dismissed for default on the 9th March1905. The judgment-debtor had, in fact, on the 3rd October 1904 applied for amendment of the decree. This application was heard ex parte and allowed on the 25th February 1905. The result was that the decree as originally drawn up was materially altered. On the 26th August 1905, the decree-holder, not aware, that the decree had been varied in this manner without notice to him, made the second application for execution of the original decree. The judgment-debtor forthwith objected that the decree whereof execution was sought had ceased to exist, and that the only decree of which the decree-holder could possibly take out execution at that stage was the decree as amended on the 25th February 1905. The result was that the decree-holder found it impossible to carry on the execution proceeding and the application was dismissed. The decree-holder, thus apprised of the fact that the decree had been amended, applied on the 29th January 1906 for a review of the order for amendment. On the 30th June 1906 the review was granted and the original decree was restored. The present application for execution was made on the 20th January 1909. Exception was taken by the judgment-debtor on the ground that as more than three years had elapsed from the 23rd May, 1904, it was not competent to the decree-holder to execute the decree. The Courts below have taken divergent views upon this question and the District Judge has given effect to the objection of the judgment-debtor.

On behalf of the decree-holder, it has been argued by the learned Government Pleader that the application is not barred from two distinct points of view; namely, first that the application made on the 20th January 1909 may be treated in substance as an application in continuation of the application of the 26th August 1905, the proceedings on which were suspended by the objection of the judgment-debtor that the decree of which execution was sought had been varied and was no longer capable of execution; secondly, that under clause (3) of Article 6 of Schedule III of the Bengal Tenancy Act time ought to run from the 30th June 1906 when his application for review was granted.

In support of the first contention our attention has been drawn to the decision of the Judicial Committee in the case of Shaikh Kamaruddin v. Jawahir Lal (1) where the principle is recognised that when a decree-holder has found himself unable to proceed with an application for execution by reason of some bar imposed at the instance of the judgment-debtor or any other person a subsequent application by the decree-holder of the same scope and character may be treated as one in continuation of the previous application if such subsequent application has been presented after the bar which interrupted the previous proceeding has been removed. [Amulya v. Preonath (2) and Kedarnath v. Prodyot Kumar (3)]. It cannot be disputed that this principle is applicable to cases of applications for execution of decrees under the rent law. [Chandra Pradhan v. Gopi Mohun (4) and Baikanta Nath v. Aughore Nath (5)]. No doubt, inspite of the application of this doctrine a question may arise, as in the

(1) 1 C. L. J. 381; 27 A. 334; 15 M. L. J. 258; 9 C. W. N. 601; 2 A. L. J. 397; 7 Bom. L. R. 433.
(2) 7 Ind. Cas. 886.
(3) 11 Ind. Cas. 48; 14 C. L. J. 610.
(4) 14 C. 385.
(5) 21 C. 387.

cases of Raghunandun Pershad v. Bhugoo Lall (6) and Sarup Ganjan Singh v. Robert Watson & Co., (7), whether there was, as a matter of fact, such a bar as made it impossible for the decree-holder to proceed with earlier application. In the case before us, however, upon the facts stated, there is no room for controversy that proceedings on the application of the 26th August 1905 were arrested by reason of the objection of the judgment-debtor that the decree of which execution was sought had been materially varied. This made it obligatory upon the decree-holder, if he desired to proceed on the basis of his application, to have the bar removed. He speedily took steps to have the order reviewed which had been made in his absence. His application was successful and the previous order was re-called on the 30th June 1906. Consequently, the present application may well be treated as one made in continuation of the application of the 26th August 1905. In cases of this description, we must look to the substance rather than to the form of the proceedings, and no weight can be attached to the circumstance that the present application does not on the face of it purport to be one in continuation of the previous application. From this point of view, the order of the Court below cannot be supported.

In support of the second contention reference has been made to the case of Kali Prosanna Bose v. Lal Mohan Guha (8), where it was ruled that a narrow construction should not be placed upon the expression "review of judgment" in clause (3) of Article 179 of the second Schedule of the Indian Limitation Act of 1877. In fact, the learned Judges held that an amendment of a decree in a material particular might well be treated as a review of the decree which expression is treated in the Code of Civil Procedure as interchangeable with the expression "review of judgment." If this principle is adopted, there is no room for controversy that time ought to run from the 30th June 1906. The application made by the judgment-debtor on the 3rd October 1904 might well be treated as an application for review of the decree and the order of the 25th February 1905 by which the amendment was allowed might be treated as equivalent to grant of an application for a review of the original decree. Subsequently, there was a genuine application for review of judgment by the decree-holder on the 26th January 1906. The application was granted on the 30th June 1906. Consequently, without unduly stretching the language used in clause (3) of Article 6 of Schedule III of the Bengal Tenancy Act, it may be said that there has been a review of judgment and that time consequently runs from the date of the decision passed on the review. We are not unmindful that the decision in Kali Prosanna Basu v. Lal Mohan Guha (8) has sometimes been questioned [Ahsanullah v. Dukhini Din (9) and Rakhaldas Majumdar v. Jogendra Narayan Majumdar (10)]. But, notwithstanding the doubt sometimes expressed as to the correctness of that decision, it is clear that in the case before us there was real application for a review of judgment, and that clause 3 of Article 6 of Schedule III does not limit the case to an application for review of judgment by a judgment-debtor any more than decree-holder; where, therefore, as here, there has been a review of judgment, the case may well be treated as governed by that Article. From the second point of view also, it is thus clear that the order cannot be supported.

The result is that this appeal is allowed, the order of the District Judge discharged and that of the Court of first instance restored. This order will carry costs both in this Court and in the Court of Appeal below. We assess the hearing fee in this Court at two gold mohurs.

Appeal allowed.

(6) 17 C. 268.
(7) 6 C. W. N. 735.
(8) 2 C. W. N. 219; 25 C. 258.
(9) 27 A. 575.
(10) 3 Ind. Cas. 391, 10 C. L. J. 467.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 235 OF 1910.
November 27, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Richards, K. C., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

BADRI DAS AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAM RIKH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage-deed—Recital as to an antecedent debt in the deed, weight of—Evidence.

BADRI DAS v. RAM RIKH.

Generally speaking, the recital of an antecedent debt in a mortgage-deed is not of much weight by itself.

First appeal from the decision of the Additional District Judge of Meerut, dated the 21st of April, 1910.

Mr. Ahmed Kareem (with him Mr. Ghulam Mujtaba), for the Appellant.

Mr. Harendra Krishna, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit on foot of a mortgage-bond dated the 1st June 1897 said to have been executed by Mir Singh and Ram Rikh. Mir Singh and Ram Rikh were brothers, members of a joint Hindu family, and both of them had issue. The sons were made parties to the suit on the express ground that the property was ancestral property and that the debt was binding upon the family. The mortgage-bond was not forthcoming. This fact was stated in the plaint and a copy of the bond was produced but not the original. Written statements were put in by Ram Rikh, Mir Singh and Jaimal, son of Mir Singh, the main defence being that the bond had been paid off, and that the allegation of its loss was false. While the suit was pending Mir Singh died, and his son, who was already on the record as a member of the joint family, was placed on the record as the representative of his father Mir Singh. A written statement on his behalf was filed on the 4th of March 1910, the written statement on behalf of Mir Singh having been filed on the 21st of August 1909, and that on behalf of Ram Rikh on the 10th of December 1909. It would appear that the issues were framed and the evidence commenced on the same day as that on which the written statement was filed on behalf of Jai Mal, the son of Mir Singh, namely, on the 4th of March 1910. It is quite clear from the perusal of the judgment of the learned Judge that the main question considered and discussed before him was that of the loss of the bond and the issue as to payment. The learned Judge says: "I do not believe that the bond was lost at all. The defence evidence as to payment is certainly such that it would be impossible to accept it in ordinary circumstances, but, as matters stand there may be something in it; what, I find is that, although complete satisfaction is not credible, some substantial portion of the loan had probably been satisfied and hence the suppression of the original bond." Since this decision was given it has been made abundantly clear that the bond was not in fact suppressed. A bond has since been found and produced in this Court with an affidavit satisfactorily explaining its loss and recovery. The document which is produced bears the date of the alleged bond. It bears a certificate of the Registrar, and there is nothing suspicious about it. We say nothing more as to its genuineness, because the document must at least be formally proved as against the minor defendants who deny all knowledge of it. The finding of the bond disposes altogether of the finding of the learned Judge that the bond was satisfied. It bears no endorsement of any payment having been made. There was, however, before the Court another issue, namely, the fourth issue, which was in the following terms:—Was the loan incurred for legal necessity, and, if not, had the defendant executant power to transfer any portion of the hypothecated property? The learned Judge found this issue against the plaintiffs. He says "plaintiffs should, in my opinion, have put in their books and proved the existence of a bona fide debt." In our opinion the attention of the parties was hardly drawn to this question. We have already pointed out that the written statement of the minor Jai Mal was only put in the very day the evidence commenced. There was nothing in the written statement of Ram Rikh or Mir Singh to put in issue the question whether the bond had been made for an antecedent debt. The minors were already parties, but they had filed no separate written statement, and there was no denial that the bond was in fact for an antecedent debt. We think that, speaking generally, a recital in the bond of an antecedent debt is not of much weight by itself. But we think that in the present case it was evidence not only against Mir Singh and Ram Rikh but also against other members of the same joint family the manager of which was Mir Singh. Assuming that this was evidence for the plaintiffs, there was no evidence of any kind to contradict it. The bond contained a recital that Rs. 390 was due on foot of account-books. This recital was verified by Mir Singh and Ram Rikh who admitted before the Registrar the receipt of Rs. 390 "in accordance with the statement in the bond." Ram Rikh was examined and he said that Mir Singh used to manage all the business, and he never attempted to deny that there was an antecedent debt. Not a word was asked the plaintiffs as to the non-production of their account-books. We think that the case could not be decided on the evidence as it stands, against the plaintiffs, on the question of the existence or non-existence of an antecedent debt; under the circumstances we think that the proper course to adopt is to send the case back for re-trial under the altered circumstances which we have set forth above. Unless the bond is now admitted by the minor defendants it must be proved. The Court will then consider the question as to whether or not the bond has been discharged in whole or in part. It will also consider whether or not there was an antecedent debt, and if so, how much? If the bond was given in part only for an antecedent debt, the Court will further consider whether there was any legal necessity for the balance of the money. We accordingly allow the appeal, set aside the decree of the lower Court and remand the case with directions to that Court to proceed to hear and determine the case according to law, bearing in mind the observations which we have made above. The bond which has been produced before us will be sent to the Court below. Costs here and heretofore will abide the event. Costs in this Court will include fees on the higher scale.

Appeal allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2000 OF 1909.

August 7, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

JOG NARAIN SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

BADRI DAS AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 310 A—Mortgage-decree—Tenure—Subsequent rent-decree—Tenure sold in execution—Mortgage decree-holder paying money under section 310—Suit for money against mortgagor—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), section 161—Incumbrance—Contract Act (IX of 1872), sections 69, 70.

The plaintiff obtained a mortgage-decree against the defendant on January 29th, 1901. The superior landlord of the mortgaged tenure obtained a decree against the registered tenant on December 7th, 1901. The landlord in execution of his rent-decree sold the tenure and the plaintiff thereupon deposited money under section 310A of the Code of 1882 and the sale was set aside. The plaintiff then sued the defendant for the money he had deposited:

Held, that, if the plaintiff had not obtained the mortgage-decree, he would have been entitled to have the sale set aside.

Paresh Nath v. Nabo Gopal, 29 C. 1, relied upon.

The fact that he had obtained a decree does not in any way alter his position.

A mortgage created by a tenant, is a lien on his tenure and is consequently an incumbrance within the meaning of section 161 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. If the mortgagee obtains a decree, his lien on the tenure does not cease, and his interest even after the decree continues to be an incumbrance.

Bibijan Bibi v. Sachi Bewa, 31 C. 863, Surjiram Marwari v. Barhamdeo, 2 C. L. J. 202, Bhowani Koer v. Mathura Prasod, 7 C. L. J. 1 and Drake v. Mitchell, 3 East 251, 7 R. R. 449, relied upon.

Maharanee Dasya v. Harendra Lal Roy, 1 C. W. N. 458 and Manindra Chunder v. Jawahir Kumari, 9 C. W. N. 670, distinguished.

A payment made under section 310A of the Code of 1882 is a valid payment for the purpose of section 70 of the Indian Contract Act.

Mahendra Ghoshal v. Bhuban Mardana, 6 Ind. Cas. 810, 38 C. 1, 12 C. L. J. 566, 14 C. W. N. 945, relied upon.

Hari Das v. Panchkowri, 9 Ind. Cas. 615, referred to.

Yogambal Boyee v. Naina Pillai, 33 M. 15, 3 Ind. Cas. 110, 6 M. L. T. 162, 19 M. L. J. 489, not approved.

Therefore, the payment in the present case by the plaintiff was made lawfully and the case is completely covered by section 70 of the Contract Act.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Gaya, dated June 1st, 1909, affirming that of the Munsif of that place, dated January 19th, 1909.

Babus Jogesh Chandra Dey, for the Appellants.

Babu Surendra Krishna Dutt, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal on behalf of the defendants in an action commenced by the plaintiffs for recovery of a sum of money alleged to have been paid by them under section 310A of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882, to set aside a sale in execution of a decree for arrears of rent. It appears that the plaintiffs were mortgagees of the properties in respect of which the landlord obtained a decree for arrears of rent. The plaintiffs sued to enforce their securities and obtained decree on the 29th January 1901 and the 8th February 1904. Meauwhile the mortgagors, now appellants before us, defaulted to pay rent to the superior landlord who obtained a decree against the registered tenant on the 7th December 1901. On the 16th July 1903 and the 11th April 1904, two sums were paid by some of the judgment-debtors towards partial satisfaction of the rent-decree but as the debt was not satisfied in its entirety the landlord decree-holder proceeded to sell the tenure on the 21st December 1904. The plaintiffs thereupon deposited on the 20th January 1905 a sum sufficient under section 310 A of the Code of 1882, for the reversal of the sale. The sale was accordingly set aside on the 11th February 1905. On the 20th January 1908, they commenced the present action for recovery of the money they had deposited together with interest and costs.

The Courts below have concurrently decreed the suit. In the present appeal, that decree has been assailed on the ground that the payment was voluntary and the plaintiffs are not entitled to ask for restitution from the defendants. In our opinion, there is no substance in this contention. The learned Vakil for the appellants has argued that, inasmuch as the plaintiffs had obtained decrees on the footing of their securities, they were not liable to have their interest affected by the sale in execution of the rent-decree, and that in substance they had no interest to protect. It has not been disputed and, in view of the decision of a Full Bench of this Court in the case of Paresh Nath Singha v. Nobo Gopal Chattopadhaya(1), it cannot be disputed, that if the plaintiffs had not obtained a decree on the basis of their mortgage, they would have been entitled to have the sale set aside under section 310A The question, therefore, arises whether the fact that they had obtained decrees, in any way altered their position.

Section 159 of the Bengal Tenancy Act provides that where a tenure or holding is sold in execution of a decree for arrears due in respect thereof the purchaser shall take subject to the interests defined in Chapter XIV, as "protected interest" but with power to annul the interests defined in that Chapter as "encumbrances." Section 161 then lays down that the term "encumbrance" used with reference to tenancy means any lien, sub-tenancy, easement or other right or interest created by the tenant on his tenure or holding or in limitation of his own interest therein, and not being a protected interest as defined in section 160. It cannot be disputed that a mortgage created by a tenant is a lien on his tenure or holding and is, consequently, an encumbrance within the meaning of section 161. It has been suggested, however, that as soon as mortgagee obtains a decree, he ceases to have any lien on the tenure or holding, in other words, that his interest is no longer an encumbrance on the tenure within the meaning of section 161, This contention is obviously unfounded. It was pointed out by this Court in the case of Bibijan Bibi v. Sachi Bewa (2) that the security is not extinguished till the sale has taken place in execution of the mortgage-decree and the proceeds have been distributed in satisfaction of the sum due to the mortgagee. This principle was applied in the case of Surjiram Marwari v. Barhamdeo (3) and Bhawani Koer v. Mathura Prasad (4) and is in fact supported by the decision of Lord Ellenborough in Drake v. Mitchell (5), that a judgment recovered in any form of action is still but a security for the original cause of action until it be made productive in satisfaction to the party. If we were to give effect to the contention of the appellant, the result would be that as soon as a mortgagee obtains a decree on his security, his position becomes worse than what it was when he was a mortgagee, pure and simple. It has not been disputed, as we have already observed, that as mortgagee he would have encumbrance liable to be annulled by the purchaser at the sale for arrears of rent. It cannot also be disputed that if he purchased the property in execution of his own decree, his interest would be equally liable to be annulled by the purchaser at the sale in execution of the decree for arrears of rent, although such decree was obtained against the registered tenant. But, it is suggested, that his intermediate position is different; that is, after the decree has been obtained, he would have no lien at all on the property. We are not able, for the reasons stated,

(1) 29 C. 1.

(2) 31 C. 863.
(3) 2 C. L. J. 202.
(4) 7 C. L. J. 1.
(5) 3 East 251; 7 R. R. 449.

to give effect to this contention as well-founded on principle.

But it has been contended that the view which may thus be defended on principle is opposed to the decision of this Court in Moharanee Dasya v. Harindra Lal Roy (6) and Manindra Chunder Nundy v. Jawaher Kumari Bibi (7). These cases, however, are clearly distinguishable. There the purchaser at the sale in execution of the mortgage-decree acquired the property subject to pre-existing rent charges. When, therefore, after his purchase as full owner he paid the rent charge, he could not claim to recover that sum from the judgment-debtor whose interest he had purchased. This conclusion is based on the principle that the purchaser at the sale in execution of the decree of the mortgagee acquired the property subject to the rent charge, and consequently when he discharged that rent charge, he simply fulfilled his own obligation. The dictum in Akhoy Kumar v. Bejoy Chand (8) cannot be taken to involve a final decision upon the point. Our attention has also been invited to the decisions in Bepin Behary Sarnokar v. Kali Dass Chatterjee (9) and Baikunta Nath Dev v. Udoy Chand Maiti (10). These were cases in which the person who made the payment to have the sale set aside was a person whose interest had not been affected by the sale which he sought to get reversed. In the first of these cases, the decree for rent had been obtained with respect to non-agricultural land and the purchaser of a sale in execution of such a decree does not acquire the property free from encumbrances. In the second case, the sale sought to be set aside was a sale under the Public Demands Recovery Act which passes to the purchaser merely the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor. On the other hand, there are cases in the reports which undoubtedly militate against the contention of the appellant, and amongst these may be mentioned Smith v. Dinonath (11); Jugdeo Narain Singh v. Raja Singh (12); Abdul Wahid Khan v. Shaluka Bibi (13); Bindu Bashini Dassi v. Harendra Lal Roy (14) and Upendra Chandra Mitter v. Tara Prosanna Mukerjee (15).

The learned Vakil for the appellant has finally contended that the present case is clearly beyond the operation of the provisions of sections 69 and 70 of the Indian Contract Act. In so far as section 69 is concerned, it may be conceded that it has no application, because it provides that a person who is interested in the payment of money which another is bound by law to pay, and who, therefore, pays it, is entitled to be re-imbursed by the other. It may be assumed that the present defendants as judgment-debtors under the rent-decree were not bound by law to make a payment under section 310A to have the sale of the property set aside. But, when we examine section 70, its terms appear to be comprehensive enough to cover the case. That section provides as follows:—"Where a person lawfully does any thing for another person or delivers any thing to him, not intending to do so gratuitously, and such other person enjoys the benefit thereof, the latter is bound to make compensation to the former in respect thereof, or to restore the thing so done or delivered." It cannot be disputed that the payment in the present case was made lawfully. The money which was deposited by the plaintiffs was such as they were entitled to deposit under section 310A of the Code of 1882. The deposit was made in the presence of the present defendants who, as judgment-debtors, were parties to the execution proceedings in the course of which the sale had taken place. The payment was further accepted by the Court. Under these circumstances it cannot be suggested that the payment was not made lawfully. But it has been suggested that the defendants are not the persons who have enjoyed the benefit thereof. In support of this proposition reliance has been placed upon the decision of the Madras High Court in Yogambal Boyee v. Naina Pillai (16). In that case, it appears to have been laid down that section 70 has no application where the payment is made under such circumstances as to make it impossible for the person who is benefited thereby to refuse to accept the benefit conferred upon

(6) 1 C. W. N. 458.
(7) 9 C. W. N. 670.
(8) 29 C. 813 at p. 818.
(9) 6 C. W. N. 336.
(10) 2 C. L. J. 311.
(11) 12 C. 213.
(12) 15 C. 656.
(13) 21 C. 496; 21 I. A. 26.
(14) 25 C. 305; 2 C. W. N. 150.
(15) 30 C. 794.
(16) 33 M. 15; 3 Ind. Cas. 110; 6 M. L. T. 162; 19 M. L. J. 489.

him. The learned Judges pointed out that the section appears to have been modelled on the principle recognised in the cases of Lampleigh v. Brathwait (17) and that, interpreted in the light of that decision, the term "enjoys" ought to be construed to mean "accepts and enjoys." We are not prepared to adopt this narrow construction of the section. The effect of it would be to exclude the operation of the section in all cases where statutory payments are made for the protection of a property by a person who, but for such payment, might be seriously prejudiced. We may further point out that the interpretation which has been suggested is opposed to the decision of this Court in the case of Mahendra Ghoshal v. Bhuban Mardana (18), where a payment made under section 310A of the Code of 1882, was treated as a valid payment for the purposes of section 70 of the Indian Contract Act. Reference has also been made to the case of Hari Das v. Panchkowri (19), which, however, does not really militate against the view we propose to take. The decision in Yogambal Boyee v. Naina Pillai (16) was cited before Mr. Justice Coxe, but, as we read his judgment, he did not express his approval of the interpretation put upon section 70. On the other hand, he rests his judgment upon the perfectly intelligible ground that as the person who made the payment had, as a matter of fact, no interest to protect, he could not claim to be re-imbursed. We are, therefore, of opinion that the present case is completely covered by section 70.

It has finally been suggested that the decree ought to have determined the separate liability of each of the several defendants. In our opinion, there is on substance in this contention. This is not a suit for contribution the nature of which was fully explained in Matichand v. Bajrang Sahai (20). The plaintiffs were not bound to bear any portion of the burden upon the failure of the defendants to pay rent which under the law they were bound to pay to the superior landlord. The plaintiffs are entitled to a joint decree against all the defendants. When they realise their dues by execution, if necessary, it will be open to the defendants to settle their liability inter se; the plaintiffs are obviously interested in no way in the determination of that question.

The result is, that the decree of the Court below is affirmed, and this appeal dismissed with costs to the plaintiffs-respondents.

Appeal dismissed.

(17) 1 Smith L. C. 11th Ed. 160.
(18) 12 C. L. J. 566; 6 Ind. Cas. 810; 38 C. 1; 14 C. W. N. 945.
(19) 9 Ind. Cas. 615.
(20) S. A. No. 1878 of 1909.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

EXECUTION SECOND APPEAL No. 296 OF 1911.

November 23, 1911.

Present:—Sir George Knox, Kt., Judge, and Mr. Justice Griffin.

KUAR RADHKA RAMAN PARSHAD AND OTHERS—DECREE-HOLDERS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat GULZARI KUAR—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1903), s. 104 (2), O. XLIII, r. 1 (j), O. XXI, rr. 90, 92—Order setting aside sale—Second appeal.

No second appeal lies from an appellate order setting aside a sale under Order XXI, rule 90. But the High Court may entertain an appeal as a revision, if the case calls for further consideration.

Execution second appeal from the decision of the District Judge of Ghazipur, dated 23rd December 1910.

Mr. Muhammad Ishaq, for the Appellants.

Mr. Govind Prashad, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—A preliminary objection is taken to the hearing of this appeal; and the objection is to the effect that no appeal lies. The application before the Subordinate Judge of Ghazipur was an application on the part of the judgment-debtor praying that the sale of certain property which had been held by the Court might be set aside. The Court considered the application and, in our opinion, dealt with it under powers which it believed it had under Order XXI rule 90. It passed an order setting aside the sale and the ground on which it set aside the sale was that the Court had before it no decree and no certificate such as is required in the case of decrees sent from a foreign Court for execution to another Court. Order XLIII, rule 1 (j) grants an appeal from orders setting aside a sale. Section 104 of the Code exacts that no appeal shall lie from any order passed in appeal in such a case. This objection is fatal. We dismiss this appeal with costs.

But, inasmuch as the case is one which calls for further consideration, we proceed to take it up in revision and we direct that notice be sent to the opposite side.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

REGULAR CIVIL APPEAL No. 554 OF 1909.

July 26, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

MATHURA PROSAD—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

RUKMINI KOER—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Maintenance grant—Grant to two ladies and half the amount to son of one after death of both ladies—Construction—Survivorship—Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 4—Grant silent as to interest—Interest whether may be decreed.

K. executed an ekrarnamah, in favour of two ladies R. and P. providing that they were to receive Rs. 650 as maintenance, and that after the death of both, one-half of the amount was to be continued as maintenance to the son of P. should she have a son:

Held, upon a construction of the document, that the grant was to the two ladies as if they constituted one grantee with right of survivorship inter se that so long as the two ladies lived they would be jointly entitled to Rs. 650 and upon the death of either, the other as survivor would be entitled to the whole sum of Rs. 650, and that upon the death of both, the allowance would be reduced, namely, Rs. 325 would be continued in favour of the son of P., if any.

Held, further, that on the death of P. the sum which had accrued due to her would be treated as property in respect whereof the survivor would be entitled to succeed by survivorship and not by inheritance, and that, therefore, no succession certificate was necessary to be taken out by the survivor in order to entitle her to a decree.

Beejraj v. Bhyropersaud, 23 C. 912, referred to.

Held, also, that, although the ekrarnamah does not provide for payment of interest upon default, it is open to the Court to award interest in the shape of damages for unlawful detention of money.

Chajmal Das v. Brij Bhukan, 22 I. A. 199; 17 A. 511, Gudri Koer v. Bhubaneswari, 19 C. 19; Moti v. Ramohari, 24 C. 699; 1 C. W. N. 437, Jogeshur v. Ghanasham, 5 C. W. N. 356 and Mansab Ali v. Gulab Chand, 10 A. 85, relied upon.

Appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge of Darbhanga, dated June 22nd, 1909.

Babus Mohendra Nath Roy and Joy Gopal Ghosha, for the Appellant.

Babus Umkali Mukherjee, Jogesh Chandra Dey and Chandra Sekhar Banerjee, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against the decree in a suit by a Hindu lady to enforce her right of maintenance under an ekrarnamah executed in her favour by her brother-in-law on the 27th May 1865. It appears that one Sobhan Lal left three sons, Kishen Bullabh, Gopi Bullabh and Joi Bullabh. Joi Bullah left a widow Rukmini Koer and a daughter Prasan Bibi. Gopi Ballabh died childless. Kishen Ballabh left a son Brij Bhukan. After the death of Joi Bullabh disputes broke out between his widow and his brother Kishan Bullabh, and on the 27th May 1865, Kishen Bullabh executed an ekrarnamah, on the strength of which Rukmini Koer now seeks to enforce her right of maintenance. Kishen Bullabh died many years ago and the suit has been brought against the grandsons of Brij Bhukhan by his daughter Maharani Bibi. The Court below has held that the plaintiff is entitled to receive maintenance at the rate of Rs. 650 per year for the whole period in suit, that is, from the beginning of Joit 1308 to the end of Choit 1314. That decree has been assailed on behalf of the defendant in the present appeal on four grounds, namely, first that upon a true construction of the ekrarnamah, it ought to have been held that upon the death of Parson Bibi the right to receive maintenance completely lapsed, secondly that in any event, the plaintiff is not entitled to claim maintenance at a rate higher than half the sum named in the ekrarnamah; thirdly, that the plaintiff is not entitled to obtain a decree for the maintenance which accrued due before the death of Parsan Bibi, that is, maintenance for the period between the 4th May 1901 and the 24th February 1902; and, fourthly, that as the ekrarnamah does not provide for the payment of the interest on arrears of maintenance, no interest ought to have been allowed in the decree.

In support of the first contention the learned Vakil for the appellant has invited our attention to the terms of the ekrarnamah. The clause which is material for the purpose of the disposal of the present question is in these terms: "The said Musammat" (that is Rukmini Koer) "made a proposal to me" (that is the grantor Kissen Bullabh) "that a sum of Rs. 650 be settled on her as her maintenance allowance during her life-time and that of her daughter Prasan Bibi, that in case any male child be born of the womb of Musammat Parsan, the said son shall after the death of the said Musammats get half of the said amount, i. e., Rs. 325 a year. Whereas it is incumbent on me to grant maintenance allowance to the said Musammats and to have regard for the son of Musammat Parson Bibi, and whereas I should in consideration of the claim, as a relation of the said Musammat on me, to make concession and should have kind and compassionate regard for them, I, the declarant, accepted the proposal mentioned above and I do declare that I will without objection pay the said annual allowance to the said Musammats during their lile-time as per instalments given below, and that in the event of Musammat Parsan Bibi giving birth to a male issue I will pay to him after the death of the said Musammats half the annual allowance, i. e., Rs. 325." The learned Vakil for the appellant has invited us to construe this clause as indicating that the grant was in favour of the two ladies and that the intention of the grantor was, that upon the death of either of them, the maintenance should completely lapse. In our opinion there is no foundation for this contention. It is the duty of the Court, in cases of this description, to ascertain the true intention of the grantor as expressed by the language used by him. The object of the grantor in the case before us, undoubtedly, was to provide for the maintenance of both the ladies. He could not have intended that upon the death of one, the other should be left without any provision for maintenance. It has not been seriously suggested that the death of either could render unnecessary the support of the other. It may also be added that if the contention of the appellant were to prevail, the result would be that upon the death of one of the ladies, the maintenance would be discontinued or remain in suspense till the death of the survivor, when it would be revived in favour of the son of Parsan Bibi to the extent of Rs. 325. This would be an obviously unreasonable intention to impute the grantor. The first contention, therefore, is overruled as wholly untenable.

In support of the second contention the learned Vakil for the appellant has argued that the object of the grantor was to provide for the maintenance of both the ladies, and that he intended that upon the death of either the maintenance payable to the other should be one-half of the original amount. No doubt, when a grant is made for maintenance in favour of two persons, prima facie it may be contended that upon the death of either the other would be entitled to only a proportionate amount. [Jogeswar Narain v. Ram Chundra (1)], But in the case before us there are ample indications of an intention to the contrary. The grantor provided that the two ladies were to receive Rs. 650, and that after the death of both, one-half of that amount was to be continued as maintenance to the son of Parsan Bibi, should she have a son born of her womb. According to the contention of the learned Vakil for the appellant, the intention of the grantor was substantially to make a separate grant in favour of each for the sum of Rs. 325. But no words are used in the document from which such an inference may legitimately be drawn. Upon a construction of the whole document, therefore, we are of opinion that the grant was to the two ladies as if they constituted one grantee with right of survivorship inter se. In this view, so long as the two ladies lived, they would be jointly entitled to Rs. 650, and upon the death of either, the other as survivor would be entitled to the whole sum of Rs. 650, and upon the death of both the maintenance allowance would be reduced, namely, Rs. 325 would be continued in favour of the son of Parsan Bibi, if any. The second ground taken for the appellant cannot, therefore, be supported.

In so far as the third ground is concerned, it may be conceded that it seems at first sight plausible. The learned Vakil for the appellant has argued that the amount of maintenance which accrued due up to the time of the death of Parsan Bibi constitutes a debt due to her from the representatives of the grantor and that, consequently, under section 4 of the Succession Certificate Act, it is obligatory upon the plaintiff to obtain a succession certificate before a decree can be made in her favour. We are of opinion that this contention is not well-founded. As we have already explained, the nature of the right to maintenance was such that each of the grantees was entitled to take by survivorship to the other and the nature of the right would be impressed upon the arrears of maintenance, if any; consequently, the sum which had accrued due before the death of Parsan Bibi would rightly be treated as property in respect whereof the survivor would be entitled to succeed by survivorship and not by inheritance. We may add that if the contention of the appellant were accepted the result would be that the amount of the debt would have to be specified in the application under section 6 of the Succession Certificate Act and the process amount would also have to be set out in the certificate under section 8. But what was the precise amount of the maintenance which had accrued due in favour of Parsan Bibi at the time of her death. It cannot be suggested for a moment that it was the whole sum at the rate of Rs. 650, nor can it be maintained that it was half of that sum, for that involves the erroneous assumption already negatived that the grant was to the two ladies to the extent of one-half share in favour of each. It is clear, therefore, that this is not a debt within the meaning of section 4 of the Succession Certificate Act. Reference may, in this connection, be usefully made to the analogy furnished by the class of cases where it has been held that a succession certificate is not needed where one member of a joint Mitakshara family succeeds by survivorship to a debt payable to another member. Beejraj v. Bhyropersaud (2). The third contention of the appellant consequently fails.

(1) 23 C. 670; 23 I. A. 37.

In so far as the fourth contention is concerned, there is plainly no substance in it. It is true that the ekrarnamah does not provide for payment of interest upon default made by the grantor or his representatives. But it is open to the Court to award interest in the shape of damages for unlawful detention of many [Chajmal Das v. Brij Bhukan (3); Gudri Kore v. Bhubneswari (4); Moti v. Ramohari (5); Jageshari v. Ghanasham Dass (6); Mansab Ali v. Gulab Chand (7)] and we are of opinion that, in view of the conduct of the defendant, which is hardly calculated to create any sympathy in his favour the decree for interest has been justly made.

The result is, that the decree made by the Subordinate Judge is affirmed and this appeal dismissed with costs. We assess the hearing fee at Rs. 25.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 23 C. 912.
(3) 17 A. 511; 22 I. A. 199.
(4) 19 C. 19.
(5) 24 C. 699; 1 C. W. N. 437.
(6) 5 C. W. N. 356.
(7) 10 A. 85.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 147 OF 1910.
December 4, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Karamat Husain and Mr. Justice Chamier.

MUHAMMAD HUSAIN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

AMIR HAIDAR—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 193 (g)—Suit for arrears of rent—Set-off claimed by defendant in respect of a sum wrongfully collected by plaintiff—Proof of payment—Receipt lost—Proof by other evidence.

In a suit by a lessor against his lessee for arrears of rent, the lessee is not entitled to claim a set-off in respect of a sum which had been wrongfully collected by the lessor as rent.

If a receipt granted in lieu of certain payments is lost, the party alleging the payments is not bound to prove the loss of the receipt, but may prove payments by other evidence.

First Appeal from the decision of the Assistant Collector first Class, Muzaffarnagar, dated 25th of February, 1910.

Mr. B. E. O'Conor (with him Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru), for the Appellant.

Hon'ble Dr. Sunder Lal (with him Mr. S. A. Haider), for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This was a suit by the appellant for Rs. 5,707, arrears of rent and interest thereon, due on a lease granted by him to the respondent on September 13th, 1906. The claim is in respect of the years 1314 and 1315 F. and the kharif instalment of 1316*F.* It was a term of the lease that if the rents stated in the papers handed over to the respondent were found to be less than the actual rents payable by the tenants of the villages the amount payable to the appellant would be reduced accordingly. In his plaint the appellant admitted that the rent should be reduced by a sum of Rs. 55-5-6 per annum. At the hearing, this figure was altered to Rs. 88-7-3 per annum. The respondent claimed a further deduction of Rs. 88 8-9 on this account of which the Court below has allowed Rs. 78.

The respondent also claimed to be entitled to set-off a sum of Rs. 524-10-9 which amount he said had been collected by the appellant on account of the rents for years preceding 1314*F*. which had been assigned to the respondent. The Court below has allowed a set-off of Rs. 516 under this head. The respondent pleaded further that he had paid Rs. 3,955 in addition to the sums the receipt of which was admitted by the appellant. The Court below has allowed this plea.

In the result, the Court below found that nothing was due from the appellant and accordingly dismissed the suit. There were other points in dispute but they have not been brought before us in appeal.

The only questions raised in the arguments before us were, whether the respondent is entitled to set-off the sum of Rs. 516 against the appellants' claim, and whether payment of the whole or any part of the sum of Rs. 3,955 by the respondent has been proved.

On the question of the set-off we think that section 193 (g) of the Tenancy Act is conclusive. It provides expressly that not set-off shall be allowed in any suit under the Act except a sum due to the defendant on an unsatisfied decree under this Act or under any enactment thereby repealed. On the question of the payments made to the appellant, it is necessary to refer to several documents before noticing the oral evidence adduced by the respondent.

With his plaint, which was filed on May 21st, 1909, the appellant presented a petition in which he prayed that the respondent might be ordered to make an affidavit of documents. It is said that he did this because the respondent had in November 1908 sent the appellant an account for 1314 and 1315 F in which it was stated that respondent had receipts for sums aggregating Rs. 5,325 and a further account in March 1909, for the kharif of 1316 F. also a money-order for Rs. 126 on March 19th, 1909, as the balance then due by him. On the appellant's petition the Court issued notice for the 9th June. The respondent filed a list of his documents on the 2nd June but the appellant, who was not satisfied with that, applied again on June 2nd, that the documents should be produced and the Court ordered the respondent to produce all his documents on the 7th. On the 5th the respondent asked for time till the 9th and even on the 9th did not produce his documents. When he did produce them ultimately he said that he had lost three receipts for sums aggregating Rs. 3,955. He made no attempt to prove this allegation, but he proved that, on May 11th, 1909, he had reported to the Police that he had lost eight receipts for sums aggregating Rs. 1,400 and he produced a witness, named Ibrahim Hossain, who said that respondent had told him at the beginning of May 1909 that he had lost several receipts and suspected that his brother Khairati had carried them off.

It is impossible to hold that the respondent has proved the loss of the three receipts for sums aggregating Rs. 3,955, but the respondent is not bound to prove the loss of the receipts; he is entitled to prove the payments by other evidence if he can. The Court below has held that the payment of several sums not admitted by the appellant has been proved by the evidence of witnesses produced by the respondent. The appellant's Counsel have not troubled themselves to challenge all the items the payment of which has been found to be proved by the Court below. They have confined their arguments to eight items, namely :—

(1) Rupees 1,500, said to have been paid on 25th June 1908.

(2) Rupees 1,350, said to have been paid on 6th April 1907.

(3) Rupees 1,050, said to have been paid on 21st June 1907.

(4) Rupees 150, said to have been paid on 18th August 1907.

(5) Rupees 4,000, said to have been paid on 16th March 1908.

(6) Rupees 100, said to have been paid on 4th May 1907.

(7) Rupees 200, said to have been paid on 3rd May 1907.

(8) Rupees 200, said to have been paid on 4th December 1907.

Two witnesses, Budhu Mal and Behari Lal, were called to prove payment of the first item. Two others, Abul Hasan and Sajjad, were called to prove payment of the fifth item. The payment of the 4th, 6th, 7th and 8th items is supported by one witness in each case and there appears to be no evidence to prove the payment of the 3rd item. It is easy to produce witnesses in this way, and exceedingly difficult to contradict them. We do not propose to examine the statements of the witnesses in detail. There are several circumstances which tend to throw great suspicion on the alleged payments. In the letter which the respondent sent to the appellant with the account of November 1908, it is stated that Rs. 5,325 were paid to the appellant for which receipts were obtained and all the eight items enumerated above are among those which were said to make up the sum of Rs. 5,325. Yet, not a single receipt has been produced for these items. As already stated, there is evidence that the respondent reported to the Police that he had lost eight receipts for sums aggregating Rs. 1,400, but the respondent had not explained what items are included in that amount. Stranger still, the respondent on June 2nd, 1909, stated in his petition of that date that he had in his possession receipts signed by the appellant for the first three items in the above list, yet he did not produce them with his other documents and at trial said that they had been lost. No evidence whatever has been given that any documents were lost after June 2nd.

GOVINDA PILLAY v. MEENATCHI ACHI.

To crown all this, the respondent abstained from giving evidence himself. He put the appellant into the box but did not ask him a word about the alleged receipts nor did he put any question to appellant's son who was examined as a witness for the respondent. After all the evidence had been taken, the respondent put in a petition in which he stated that he had said nothing about the loss of the receipts for the first three items in his report to the Police because he was assured by the witness Ibrahim Husain that they would be returned. Ibrahim Husain did not say this when under examination. The only answer to all this which has been given by the respondent is that he sent full accounts to the appellant in November 1908 and March 1909 and the latter did not give him any reply or dispute the accuracy of the accounts. The appellant contends that he was under no obligation to take any notice of the accounts and that, as a matter of fact, he refused to accept the money-order for Rs. 6-2-3 sent at the time of the first account on the ground that he would not accept payment of part only of what was due to him and refused the money-order sent in March 1909, because the amount due for past years had not been paid. The money-order coupons have been produced bearing the endorsements made by the appellant. It is clear that the appellant gave the respondent full notice that he did not accept the respondent's accounts. He was not under any obligation to do more. In view of the extraordinary conduct of the respondent with reference to the receipts, we should be disinclined to accept any but the strongest oral evidence of the payments which are disputed. The oral evidence which has been given entirely fails to satisfy us that the disputed payments were made.

For the above reasons, we hold that the respondent is not entitled to set-off against the appellant's claim the sum of Rs. 516 or any other sums on account of collection made by the appellant for years preceding 1314*F.* and that the respondent has failed to prove the payment of the eight items in the list given above.

As it is impossible to follow the accounts made up by the Court below, the case must go back to that Court for a fresh finding as to what is due to the appellant.

The Court below will make out a proper account after hearing the parties and submit it to this Court as soon as possible. Further evidence will not be admitted. On return of the finding, ten days will be allowed for objections.

Case remanded.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDERS NOS. 150 AND 151 OF 1910.

October 4, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim and Mr. Justice Spencer.

GOVINDA PILLAY—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MEENATCHI ACHI AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 60 cl. (n) —Right to future maintenance—Crops on land granted to a widow for maintenance—Liability for attachment—Will, construction of—Devise to daughter on death of two widows.

Where land is granted to a widow to be enjoyed by her during her life in lieu of maintenance, what is acquired under the grant is not a right to maintenance, but to retain property or rather the usufruct of that property. The produce of that land, as it accrues, becomes her property and is not exempt from attachment under the provisions of clause (n) of section 60, Civil Procedure Code, 1908.

GOVINDA PILLAY v. MEENATCHI ACHI.

The produce cannot be treated as standing on the same footing as a right to maintenance. The crops are the widow's property and available to answer her debts.

What is interdicted by clause (n) is the attachment of a mere right to future maintenance, and not of a debtor's property or any interest in property though such property or interest might have been granted to the debtor for maintenance.

Munisami Naidu v. Ammani Ammal, 15 M. L. J. 7 and Diwali v. Adaji Ganesh, 10 B. 342, distinguished.

Where land is devised by a Will to two widows of the testator and, on their death to his daughter, the land given to each widow would on her death pass to the daughter.

Appeal against the orders of the Subordinate Judge of Negapatm, in E. P. Nos. 80 and 81 of 1910, in O. S. No. 92 of 1900.

Messrs. K. Srinivasa Aiyangar and C. Krishnamachariar, for the Appellant.

Mr. T. R. Venkotrama Sastri, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The first question argued is whether the crops growing on one veli of the land which, under the terms of the Will, the second defendant, one of the two widows of the testator, is to enjoy for her maintenance, are liable to be attached in execution of the plaintiff's decree. The Subordinate Judge is of opinion that the crops in question are precluded from attachment by virtue of the provisions of section 60, Civil Procedure Code, which by clause (n), exempts a right to future maintenance from seizure in execution of a decree. We shall assume, for the purpose of this argument that the clause would apply whether the right to maintenance is derived under the general Hindu or Muhammadan Law or under an instrument in the nature of deed or Will. But it seems to us that the Subordinate Judge is quite wrong in his view that what is attached in this case can be said to be a right to future maintenance. It may be well that the second defendant is given the land to be enjoyed by her during life in lieu of the maintenance to which she would be entitled as a Hindu widow, but what she acquires under her grant is not a right to maintenance but to certain property or rather the usufruct of that property. The produce of the land, as it accrued, becomes at once her property, and the learned Vakil for the respondents rightly contends that the second defendant might dispose of it in any way she chose. That being so, it cannot be treated as standing on the same footing as a right to maintenance. The crops are her property, and, as such, must be available to answer her debts. What is interdicted by the Legislature is attachment of a mere right to future maintenance and not of a debtor's property or any interest in property though such property or interest might have been granted to him or her for maintenance. The Subordinate Judge relies upon a case of Munisami Naidu v. Ammani Ammal (1), which follows a decision of the Bombay High Court in Diwali v. Apaji Ganesh (2), in support of his view. No doubt there are words in the judgments in the two cases which might be taken to lend some countenance to the proposition accepted by the Subordinate Judge, but, it seems to us; that both the decisions really proceed upon the particular provisions of the instruments with which the learned Judges were concerned.

However that may be, we have no hesitation in holding that clause (n) of section 60 has no application to the present case.

The second question relates to the proper construction on the paragraph of the Will in which the testator provides, that on the death of the two widows the land granted to them would go to his daughter. The Will is not very clearly worded, but, on the whole, we are of opinion, that the intention of the testator was that, on the death of each widow as it happens, the land given to her would pass to the daughter. The Pleader for the appellant does not press his case as regards the land which originally fell to his daughter under the Will, as the decree, in execution of which application is made for attachment, is not against the daughter.

The result is that the Appeal No. 150 will be allowed with costs, and Appeal No. 151 will be dismissed with costs.

Appeal No. 150 allowed.
Appeal No. 151 dismissed.

(1) 15 M. L. J. 7.
(2) 10 B. 342.

BANDEY ALI v. GOKUL MISIR.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 87 OF 1910.

November 25, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Richards, K. C., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

Mirza BANDEY ALI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

GOKUL MISIR AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 43—Former suit for injunction dismissed on ground that plaintiff was not in possession—Second suit for possession whether barred.

Plaintiff sued defendant, seeking a permanent injunction restraining defendant from interfering with his possession. This suit was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff was not in possession. The plaintiff then brought a second suit for possession:

Held, that the second suit for possession was not barred by section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882.

Darbo v. Kesho Rai, 2 A. 356, Sarsuti v. Kunj Behari Lal, 5 A. 345, Mohan Lal v. Bilaso, 14 A. 512, Jibunti Nath Khan v. Shib Nath Chukerbutty, 8 C. 819, 10 C. L. R. 537, referred to.

Letters Patent Appeal from a decision of Mr. Justice Karamat Husain, in Second Appeal No. 715 of 1909, dated 21st of May 1909.

Mr. Muhammad Ishaq, for the Appellant.

Mr. Surendro Nath Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit in which the plaintiff claimed joint possession of a certain share in a grove. The defence was that the suit was barred by section 43 of Act XIV of 1882 having regard to previous litigation between the parties. The previous litigation consisted of a suit in which the plaintiff sued the defendants for a permanent injunction restraining them from interfering with his possession and appropriating the fruits of the grove. There was also a claim for damages. This last mentioned suit was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff was not in possession and that neither injunction nor damage could, therefore, be claimed. The Court of first instance dismissed the present suit. The Court of first appeal reversed the order of Court of first instance and held that the suit was not barred by section 43 The learned Judge of this Court, in a very careful and elaborate judgment, reversed the Court of first appeal and restored the decree of the Court of first instance. The plaintiff comes now in appeal under the Letters Patent. Section 43 of Act XIV of 1882, is as follows:—"Every suit shall include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action but a plaintiff may relinquish any portion of his claim in order to bring the suit within jurisdiction of any Court. If a plaintiff omit to sue in respect of, or intentionally relinquish, any portion of his claim, he shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so omitted or relinquished." If we had to decide the question in the absence of authority, we might have some difficulty in dissenting from the view taken by our learned brother. We think, however, that the authorities show that for a long time it has been accepted in this Court and in other High Courts that the dismissal of suits of this nature on the ground that the plaintiff is not in or has not proved that he is in possession, is no bar to a subsequent suit for possession. As early as the year 1879, a Full Bench of this Court in the case of Darbo v. Kesho Rai (1) decided that the dismissal of a suit for declaration of title on the ground that the plaintiff was not in possession was no bar to a subsequent suit for possession. It is true that the decision in that case was under section 7 of Act VIII of 1859, and it is also true that the judgment in that case is a very short one. The same question arose in Sarsuti v. Kunj Behari Lal (2). In that case the majority of a Court, consisting of Mr. Justice Straight, Mr. Justice Oldfield, Mr. Justice Brodhurst, and Mr Justice Tyrell, decided the same way, namely, that the suit was not barred.

That also was a decision under section 7 of Act VIII of 1859 In this case Sir Robert Stewart, C. J., who was a party to the decision in Darbo v. Kesho Rai (1) dissented. Again, in the case of Mohan Lal v. Bilaso (3) a Bench of this Court composing of Edge, C.J., and Blair, J., decided that the dismissal of a suit for a declaration of title on the ground that the plaintiff was not in possession was no bar to a subsequent suit for possession. The learned Judges followed Jibunti Nath Khan v. Shib Nath Chukerbutty (4). The decision of this Court in Darbo v. Kesho Rai (1) does not appear to have been cited to the Court in

(1) 2 A. 356.
(2) 5 A. 345.
(3) 14 A. 512.
(4) 8 C. 819; 10 C. L. R. 537.

that case. These cases clearly show that it has been the established practice of this Court not to dismiss a suit for possession merely on the ground that a previous suit had been brought for a declaration of title and dismissed on the ground of the plaintiff not being in possession. In the present case, the previous suit was a suit for an injunction, and it was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff was not in possession. In our opinion, no distinction in principle can be drawn between the dismissal of a suit for a declaration of title on the ground that the plaintiff was not in possession and the dismissal of a suit for an injunction on the same grounds. Following the rulings and established practice of this Court, we think that the appeal ought to be allowed. We accordingly allow the appeal, set aside the decree of this Court, and restore the decree of the lower Appellate Court with costs in this Court.

Appeal allowed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 180 OF 1910.

November 15, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Richards, K. C., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

Nawab NURULLAH KHAN—PLAINTIFF APPELLANT

versus

Musammat HAYATUNNISSA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Jagir—Grant—Succession—"Aulad wa ahfad", meaning of.

A grant was made in favour of one K. for life and after him to his 'aulad wa ahfad,' that is, to his issues and descendants:

Held, that the grant was not limited to the grantee's male descendants only.

First appeal from the decision of the Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur, dated the 15th of February 1910.

The Hon'ble Dr. Sunder Lal (with him Mr. Iswar Saran), for the Appellant.

Mr. Abdul Raoof (with him Mr. Ghulam Mujtaba), for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The suit which has given rise to this appeal was brought by the plaintiff-appellant for possession of certain immoveable property. This property forms part of a jagir granted in the year 1819 by the British Government to a Pindari Chief of the name of Karim Khan. He died about the year 1827 leaving two sons, Shamsher Bahadur Khan and Shahamut Khan. After his death the jagir was divided between these sons, the former getting a 7-annas share and the latter of 9-annas share. The plaintiff Nurullah Khan is the son of Shamsher Bahadur Khan and in the suit out of which this appeal has arisen he claims certain property which is now in the possession of the descendants of Mariambai, one of the daughters of Shamsher Bahadur Khan by a wife who was not the mother of Nurullah Khan. The plaintiff's contention is that, under the terms of the grant, and also in accordance with a family custom, the property which originally belonged to Karim Khan was to go to his male descendants and not to his female descendants such as the defendants to this suit. The grant, which is dated the 13th of August, 1819 is in favour of Karim Khan for life and after him to his 'aulad wa ahfad,' that is, to his issue and descendants. There is nothing in the grant itself to limit it to his male descendants Subsequently, disputes arose in regard to the jagir granted to Karim Khan, and in one of the letters to which reference has been made on behalf of the appellant, namely a letter from the Officiating Secretary to the Sudder Board of Revenue, North-Western Provinces, to Secretary to the Government, North-Western Provinces, dated the 12th of May 1846, it was distinctly stated that the property was given to the Pindari Chief Karim Khan rent-free for his life and to his heirs on a quit-rent of Rs. 6,000 per annum. In the year 1862 there was litigation between the plaintiff's mother and one of the widows of Shamsher Bahadur Khan. To this suit the two daughters of Shamsher Bahadur Khan, by that widow were made defendants. That case was referred to arbitration and an award was made which contains this provisions:—"After the death of the Musammat the jagir, estate, will continue to appertain to the family of Nawab Shamsher Bahadur Khan alone." In accordance with this award, two of the daughters of Shamsher Bahadur Khan subsequently obtained a decree for their share. The present plaintiff on attaining majority brought a suit to have the award set aside and to have it declared that he alone was entitled to the property in question.

That suit was dismissed by the High Court on the 17th of March 1873 on the ground that under the grant made in 1819 the jagir was not limited only to the male descendants of Karim Khan and that no family custom had been established which excluded his female descendants from inheritance. In the decree in that case it was provided that the status created by the award to which we have referred above should not be disturbed. It is contended on behalf of the plaintiff that under the award he alone is entitled to the estate upon the death of Mariambai. We are unable to accept this contention as the word therein used is "family," and not male descendants of Shamsher Bahadur. The defendants are certainly members of the family of Shamsher Bahadur, being his granddaughters. The award, therefore, does not hold the plaintiff's claim. As we have already stated, and as was held by the Court in 1873, the grant itself does not limit the right of succession to the male descendants of Karim Khan, and the evidence which in the present case is the same as that adduced in the former suit decided by this Court manifestly does not establish a family custom excluding females. The decision of the Court below is, in our judgment, correct and this appeal must fail. We accordingly dismiss it with costs including fees on the higher scale.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 44 OF 1910.

November 23, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Tudball.

BIHARI LAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

DURGA DAS AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Usufructuary mortgage—Liability of mortgagor and mortgagee—Part of mortgaged property taken out of mortgagee's possession—Mortgagee remaining in possession of the rest for a long time, effect of—Interest—Redemption.

A. executed an usufructuary mortgage in favour of B. in 1880. At the time of the mortgage a suit was pending in respect of a prior mortgage of 1874, by virtue of which a portion of the mortgage property passed out of B.'s hand in 1886. B. remained in possession of the remaining property for over 24 years without taking any steps in respect of the portion which had gone out of his possession under the prior mortgage. In 1910 the mortgagor brought a suit for redemption:

Held, (1) that under the circumstances, mortgagee was not entitled to claim the loss of interest which he had sustained owing to a part of the mortgaged property having gone out of his possession in 1886 under the prior mortgage;

Partab Bahadur Singh v. Gajadhar Bakhsh Singh, 24 A. 521; 29 I. A. 148; Khuda Bakhsh v. Alimunnissa, 27 A. 313, referred to.

(2) that the mortgagor was not entitled to claim a proportionate reduction of the principal money, because the mortgagee was not in a position to deliver to him the entire mortgaged property at the time of redemption.

First appeal from the decision of the Officiating Additional Judge of Aligarh, dated the 20th November, 1909.

The Hon'ble Dr. Sunder Lal, (with him Dr. S. C. Banerji), for the Appellants.

Mr. G. L. Agarwala, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit for the redemption of a usufructuary mortgage made on the 12th of November 1880, by three persons, namely, Mukh Ram Singh, Kanhai Singh and Durjan Singh, in favour of Ram Dayal, Behari Lal and Kishori Lal, the predecessor-in-title of the defendants-appellants. The property comprised in the mortgage was a 10-biswas, 13¼-biswansis, share in the village of Mukimpur. In this property the share of Mukh Ram was 8 biswas and the remainder belonged to the other two mortgagors. The amount secured by the mortgage was Rs. 8,500 and the term of the mortgage was ten years. The plaintiffs are the assignees of the interests of some of the mortgagors. It is common ground that in execution of a decree obtained upon a prior mortgage of 1874 the shares of Kanhai Singh and Durjan Singh, namely, 2 biswas 13¼ biswansis was sold by auction and passed out of the possession of the mortgagees in 1886. The mortgage-deed in suit provides that the rate of interest was 12 annas per cent. per mensem, i.e., Rs. 9 per cent. per annum, that the usufruct was to be taken in lieu of interest, and that the mortgagees were not to claim interest on the mortgage-money, nor were the mortgagors to claim profits of the mortgaged property so long as the mortgage subsisted. A partition took place about the year 1890 and under that partition the property remaining in the possession of the mortgagees was formed into an eight-biswa mahal. The plaintiffs claimed possession of the whole of the mortgaged property and made parties to the suit the persons who had purchased the 2 biswas 13¼ biswansis share mentioned above in execution of the decree passed on the earlier mortgage of 1874. They offered to pay to the defendants Rs. 8,500 the principal amount, of the mortgage. The defendants contended that in addition to that amount they were entitled to be recouped the loss of interest sustained by them by reason of the 2 biswas, 13¼ biswansis share having passed out of their possession. They further contended that as the revenue of the mortgaged property had been enhanced after the mortgage they were entitled under the terms of the mortgage to the difference between the revenue which existed on the date of the mortgage and the enhanced revenue which they subsequently had to pay. They also claimed the costs of the construction of certain indigo vats and the costs of partition proceedings. The fourth item which they claimed was arrears of rent due by tenants up to time when the plaintiffs sought to redeem the mortgage and this item they said they were entitled to, under the terms of the mortgage-deed. The Court below has made a decree in the plaintiff's favour for possession of the 8 biswas share which remained with the mortgagees after the sale of the remainder of the mortgaged property. It has awarded to the defendants the costs of building two vats and arrears of rent for one year only and it has disallowed the other items claimed by the mortgagees-defendants. This appeal has been preferred by the defendants-mortgagees, and the plaintiffs have put forward objections under Order XLI, rule 22 of the Code of Civil Procedure. We will deal, first of all, with the appeal of the defendants. The first item which they claim in the appeal is the item of loss of interest to which we have referred above. As to this, the contention on their behalf is that the amount of the usufruct of the whole of the mortgaged property was equivalent to interest at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum as mentioned in the mortgage-deed; that they have not received and enjoyed the usufruct of the whole of the mortgaged property by reason of a part of it having passed out of their possession in satisfaction of the earlier mortgage of 1874, that they have thus received a smaller amount of usufruct than that which they would have obtained had they been in possession of the whole of the mortgaged property, and that the difference should be made good to them by the plaintiffs who now represent the mortgagors. It appears that a suit on the earlier mortgage of 1874 was pending at the time when the mortgage in favour of the ancestors of the defendants was executed. It is, therefore, clear that they took their mortgage, with full knowledge to the prior mortgage and subject to the result of the litigation then pending. They were thus taking a mortgage of property in regard to which there was considerable risk of its passing out of their possession and of which they were in fact deprived in the year 1886. They have remained content with the usufruct of the remainder of the property for so a long period as 24 years. It is, therefore, reasonable to assume that when they took the mortgage it was understood that the interest on the money advanced by them would be the usufruct of so much of the mortgaged property as would remain in their possession. Had this not been so, the mortgage-deed would have contained a clear and specific provision for the payment of loss in interest. That such was the intention of the parties appears from the fact that when the appellants were deprived of 2 biswas, 13¼ biswansis they acquiesced in the loss of that portion of their security and were content to enjoy the usufruct of the remainder of the property in lieu of the interest payable to them. They are, therefore, not entitled to claim the difference of interest after the lapse of such a long period. This case is very similar to the case of Partab Bahadur Singh v. Gajadar Bakhsh Singh (1) and the case of Khuda Bakhsh v. Alim-un-nissa (2). The principle of those rulings, in our opinion, fully applies to the present case. The Court below was, therefore, right in not allowing this part of the appellants' claim.

BEHARI LAL v. DURGA DAS.

The next item claimed by them in this appeal is the amount of enhanced revenue. The provision in the mortgage-deed relating to revenue is as follows: "If at a future Settlement, the Government revenue or cesses due to Government be assessed at a higher rate and profits be thereby reduced, we shall pay the amount enhanced along with the mortgage-money at the time of redeeming the mortgage. From this clause it is manifest that the mortgagors would be liable at the time of redemption to pay the enhanced revenue only if by reason of such enhancement the profits arising from the property were diminished. It was, therefore, for the defendants to prove that there was reduction in the profits. The Court below was of opinion that they had failed to adduce sufficient evidence to establish a reduction of profits. We think that in this respect also the Court below is right. No doubt, the rent-roll kept up by the Patwari shows that a smaller amount of rent is realized from the property. But at the time of Settlement the Settlement Officer found that the rent-roll was incorrect, and although it showed Rs. 1,165 as the income arising from the whole village in 1288 Fasli, it was in reality something like Rs. 1,815. The learned Additional Judge has given other reasons for the conclusion that the rent-roll is incorrect and that the accounts produced by the defendants cannot be relied on. Had the income arising from the village been so low as appears from the rent-roll and the accounts, it is highly improbable that the appellants would have continued in possession and would not have, shortly after the enhancement of revenue, sought to recover the money due to them. We think that the appellants have failed to establish their allegation that there was a reduction in profits and they have certainly failed to satisfy us that the decision of the Court below on this point is erroneous.

(1) 24 A. 521; 29 I. A. 48.
(2) 27 A. 313.

The next item claimed by the appellants is the item of arrears of rent. The mortgage deed provides that at the time of redemption the mortgagors should pay arrears of rent due by the tenants in the village. The Court below has allowed arrears of rent for one year only. In this respect we think the learned Judge has committed an error: under the terms of the mortgage the mortgagees would be entitled at the time of redemption not only to arrears for the year preceding the date of redemption but to such arrears as could at that time be lawfully recovered from tenants. The object apparently was that at the time of redemption such arrears should be paid by the mortgagors and that they should after redemption recoup themselves by realizing the amount so paid from the tenants from whom it was due. The appellants are, therefore, entitled to arrears for three years. As to the amount of such arrears we have before us the evidence of the defendant Jugal Kishore who after referring to his account-books stated that the total amount due by tenants for the years 1314, 1315 and 1316 Fasli was Rs. 1,338-3-1, out of this sum the Court below has awarded to the defendants Rs. 863-11 1 namely the arrears for 1316 Fasli. In this respect it has accepted the correctness of the accounts of the defendants. There is nothing to show that the statement of Jugal Kishore, corroborated as it is by the entries in his account-books, is incorrect. Therefore, in our opinion, the defendants-appellants are entitled to a further sum of Rs. 474-8-0, namely the difference between the sum of Rs. 1,338-3-1 and Rs. 863 11-1 mentioned above. To the extent of this additional sum of Rs. 474-3 the appellants' appeal must succeed. The appellants also claim interest for the period of the pendency of the suit. This certainly cannot be allowed to them, as they were in possession before the decree was passed. These are the only items which have been claimed in this appeal in the argument before us. As to the objections preferred on behalf of the respondents, the first item is the item of Rs. 1,372-12 6 which the Court below has allowed to the defendants on account of the construction of indigo vats. It is admitted that these vats have been built on a piece of land 3 bighas, 2 biswas in extent, of which a perpetual lease was granted to the mortgagees. This piece of land was excluded from the mortgage, as is manifest from the qabuliat executed by Shib Singh and others to whom a lease of the mortgaged property was granted on the date of the mortgage. As this piece of land is not a part of the mortgaged property, and as the mortgagees are in possession of it, not in their capacity of mortgagees but as lessees under a perpetual lease, they are not entitled under the terms of the mortgage to the costs incurred by them in constructing indigo vats on this land. No doubt, under the terms of the mortgage they would have been entitled to the costs of building vats upon land which formed part of the mortgaged property. But the land on which the vats in question were built not being included in the mortgage the mortgagee's claim in respect of the costs of building these vats ought not to have been allowed. The decision of the Court below on this point must be set aside.

It is further contended on behalf of the plaintiffs-respondents that as they have not been awarded possession of the whole of the mortgaged property, there should be a proportionate reduction in the amount of the mortgage money. This contention is wholly without force. The mortgagees were entitled to recover the whole of the mortgage-money from every part of the mortgaged property which was security for their mortgage. If, by reason of the existence of a prior mortgage, which the mortgagors did not discharge a part of the mortgaged property has passed out of the hands of the mortgagees for no fault of their own and if, in consequence of their own default, the mortgagors are not entitled to get back that part of the property, they cannot claim reduction of any part of the mortgage-money which they have appropriated, and for which the remainder of the mortgaged property is, undoubtedly, mortgagee's security. This objection of the respondent must fail. The result is that the defendants-appellants are entitled to a sum of Rs. 474-8-0 on account of arrears of rent and out of the amount allowed to them must be deducted the sum of Rs. 1,372-12-6 awarded to them for the costs of building vats. If the former amount be set off against the latter there will be a sum of Rs. 898-4-6 by which the amount declared to be due to the defendants-mortgagees by the Court below must be reduced. In substance, therefore, the appeal fails. It is accordingly dismissed with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

The objections of the plaintiffs-respondents are to this extent allowed that the amount decreed to the defendants mortgagees is reduced by Rs. 898 4-6. Having regard to the circumstances of the case, we make no order as to the costs of the objections put forward on behalf of the respondents.

We extend the time for payment of the mortgage-money for six months from this date. For the period antecedent to the date on which the plaintiffs will get actual possession, the profits of the property in the possession of the defendants will be regarded as equivalent to the interest due to them.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1032 OF 1910.

November 28, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Spencer.

CHIDRIE KRISTAPPA—APPELLANT

versus

SIDDAMSETTI YAMANAPPA—RESPONDENT.

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), Sch. II, Art. 31—Suit for a sum due on account—Omission of prayer as to defendant's accountability to plaintiff—Suit of small cause nature—Second appeal.

Where the claim in a Court of first instance was for recovery of Rs. 500 due as per dealings between plaintiff and one M. and there was no prayer that any of the defendants should be made accountable to the plaintiff:

Held, that the suit was of a small cause nature and that no second appeal lay from the decree passed therein.

Article 31 of Schedule II of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act applies to cases where the relationship of the parties is such that one of them is bound to render accounts to the other.

Konduru Ranga Reddi v. Subbiah Setty, 28 M. 394, referred to.

Second appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Bellary, in Appeal Suit No. 14 of 1908, presented against the decree of the District Munsif of Hospet, in O. S. No. 88 of 1907.

Mr. R. Kuppusawmy Aiyar, for the appellant.

Mr. K. Y. N. Adiga, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—A preliminary objection is taken that no second appeal lies in this case, as the suit is of a small cause nature and the amount sought to be recovered in the Court of first instance was less than Rs. 500. This objection must be upheld. The appellant contends that the suit might be treated as one for an account. But we find that it cannot be on a reference to the plaint. The plaint states that Mukamma had money dealings with the plaintiff for the benefit, expenses and trade of the family. These are to be found in the account-books properly maintained by the plaintiff and the prayer is that a decree be passed for the amount due. The plaintiff does not ask that any of the defendants should be made to account to the plaintiff. The suit is not, therefore, one for an account. Article 31 of the second Schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act applies to cases where the relationship of the parties is such that one of them is bound to render accounts to the other. This is substantially what is laid down in Konduru Ranga Reddi v. Subbiah Setty (1), Mr. Kuppuswamy Aiyar, the learned Vakil for the appellants, argues that the defendants, had meddled with the estate of the deceased Mukamma, and that, therefore, they were bound to account to the plaintiff for the properties taken possession of by them. But there is no allegation in the plaint that the defendants had put themselves in such a position that they were bound to account to the plaintiff for the estate of Mukamma. There is no allegation that they became administrators de son tort so as to become liable to account and, as already stated, there is no prayer for an account.

The second appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 28 M. 394.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST APPELLATE ORDER No. 24 OF 1911.

November 29, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim.

PARRY AND CO., BY THEIR AGENT C. H. CARDOZO—APPELLANT

versus

VADIVELU PILLAY—RESPONDENT.

Execution—Application for execution—Order directing attachment of immoveables and dismissing petition otherwise—Subsequent application after lapse of three years—Limitation.

Appellant decree-holder applied in 1900, in execution for attachment and sale of the judgment-debtor's property. The order passed on the application was, "immoveables attached; strike off petition, but the attachment will continue." On a subsequent date he applied for sale of the attached property, but the application was dismissed for non-payment of batta in 1901. In 1909, the present application for execution was made:

Held, that the application was not in continuance of the proceedings of 1900 and was barred.

Cholawadi Kotiah v. Polori Alamelamah, 31 M. 71; 3 M. L. T. 328; 18 M. L. J. 46; Madhabmoni Dasi v. Pamila Lambert, 37 C. 796; 6 Ind. Cas. 537 and Kamaruddin Ahmed v. Jawahir Lal, 27 A. 334; 1 C. L. J. 381; 15 M. L. J. 258; 9 C. W. N. 601; 2 A. L. J. 397; 7 Bom. L. R. 433, distinguished.

Appeal against the order of the District Court of South Arcot, dated 18th September 1910, in Appeal Suit No. 37 of 1910, presented against the order of the District Munsif of Villupuram, dated 22nd October 1909, in E. P. No. 3 (E. P. R. No. 1421 of 1909) in O. S. No 623 of 1900.

Mr. T. R. Vencatrama Sastri, for the Appellants.

Mr. V. Masilamony Pillai, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—We think the view of the lower Courts is right on the question of limitation. In 1900, the decree-holder made an application in which he asked for attachment and sale of the judgment-debtor's property. The order passed on the application was "immoveables attached. Strike off petition, but the attachment will continue." Then, on a subsequent application made for sale of the property attached notice was issued, but the batta not being paid, the second application was struck off in 1901. The present application is made in 1909. The argument on behalf of the appellant is that the application of 1900 is still pending. But we cannot accept that contention. What was apparently intended was that the prayer for attachment should be granted and, in other respects, the application should be refused. If that be the correct meaning of the order in question, as we think it is, there is no force in the contention that the present application is in continuance of the proceedings of 1900, because, in fact, those proceedings had come to an end. In this view of the facts, the rulings reported in Cholawadi Kotiah v. Polori Alamelamah (1); Madhabmoni Dasi v. Pamila Lambert (2) and Kamaruddin Ahmed v. Jawahir Lal (3) have no application.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 31 M. 71; 3 M. L. T. 328; 18 M. L. J. 46.

(2) 37 C. 796; 6 Ind. Cas. 537.

(3) 27 A. 334; 1 C. L. J. 381; 7 Bom. L. R. 433; 15 M. L. J. 258; 9 C. W. N. 601; 2 A. L. J. 397.

MANINDRA NATH v. MOHANUNDA ROY.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 329 OF 1909.

June 8, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

MANINDRA NATH MANDAL AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MOHANUNDA ROY AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS

Arbitration—Award—Insertion of name as arbitrator without knowledge of one party—Submission to proceedings by that party—Whether party can object subsequently—Arbitrator not deciding certain matter—Matter ought to have been brought to arbitrator's notice—Blanks and omissions in award—Rules for calculation given without giving result—Arbitrator—Judicial acts to be jointly done—Ministerial act—Reception of written statement—One arbitrator receiving written statement, whether irregular—Arbitrator refusing to take evidence—Evidence ought to be distinctly tendered—Award not signed at same time and place, whether void—Umpire—Appointment of umpire when difference of opinion among arbitrators—No provision as to umpire—Whether award bad—Death of party, effect of.

The defendants became aware that the name of one K. had been fraudulently entered in an instrument of submission to arbitration, without their knowledge but, they made no protest and accepted the position that he was a validly appointed arbitrator:

Held, that, they were not entitled to repudiate the position they deliberately took up before the arbitrators.

Sheo Nath v. Ramnath, 10 M. I. A. 413 at p. 426; 5 W. R. (P. C.) 21; 1 Ind. Jur. (N. S.) 161, relied upon.

The award of an arbitrator which determines all questions brought before his notice cannot be objected to, notwithstanding there are other matters within the scope of the submission to which his attention has not been drawn. In order to invalidate an award because a particular question was not decided, it must be established that the point was specifically stated and brought to the notice of the arbitrator.

Rees v. Waters, (1847) 16 M. and W. 263; 4 D. & L. 567, relied upon.

Where an arbitrator states rules for calculating the amount of money to be paid, without giving the result of such calculation, the award is sufficiently certain, on the principle that that is sufficiently certain which can be made certain.

Beale v. Beale, (1635) Cro. Car 383, and Strong v. Strong, (1872 9 Cushing 560, relied upon.

An award, therefore, which purports to divide property between two persons by prescribing a rule of division, may well be final though the property in question be not actually divided.

Judicial acts, in order that they may be valid must be jointly performed by all the arbitrators.

Sreenath v. Raj Chunder, 8 W. R. 171, Khelut Chunder v. Tara Chand, 6 W. R. 269, Nandram v. Fakir Chand, 7 A. 523, Thammiraju v. Bapiraju, 12 M. 113 and Harvey v. Shelton, 7 Beav. 455 at p. 462; 13 L. J. Ch. 466, relied upon.

The mere reception of a written statement by one of the arbitrators is not a judicial act.

Harvey v. Shelton, 7 Beav. 455 at p. 462; 13 L. J. Ch. 466, distinguished and explained.

The reception by one arbitrator of the written statement of the defendants in the absence of his colleague and the plaintiffs is not a grave irregularity on his part which of itself would invalidate the entire proceedings.

In order to make out a case entitling a party to impeach an award on the ground that the arbitrators improperly refused to take the evidence of an important witness, the witness must be distinctly tendered to the arbitrators.

Craven v. Craven, 7 Taunt 644: 1 Moor. 403; 18 R. R. 623 and Grazebrook v. Davis, 5 B. & C. 534; 4 L. J. (o. s.) K. B. 321; 8 D. & R. 295, relied upon.

An award is not void even if it is not signed by the arbitrators at the same time and place.

Wade v. Dowling, 4 El. & Bl. 44; 2 C. L. R. 1642; 23 L. J. Q. B. 302; 18 Jur. 728; 2 W. R. 567, not followed.

Bhobosundari v. Makhan Lal, 8 B. L. R. 128 and Muthukutti Nayakan v. Acha Nayakan, 18 M. 22, relied upon.

Jai Mangal Singh In re, 11 W. R. 433; 3 B. L. R. A. C. 82; Joy Mangal Singh v. Mohan Ram Marwari, 12 W. R. 397; 8 B. L. R. 319*n*. and Benode Lal Pakrashi v. Pran Chanda Pakrashi, 11 Ind. Cas. 898; 14 C. L. J. 143, referred to.

A submission to arbitration is not bad, because it omits to provide for the appointment of an umpire in the event of a difference of opinion between the arbitrators.

Gour Chunder v. Sodoy Chunder, 17 W. R. 30, relied upon.

Futteh Singh v. Gango, 4 W. R. 4 and Haradhan v. Radhanath, 10 W. R. 398; 2 B. L. R. (S. N.) 14, explained.

If the intention of the parties to an arbitration is to bind themselves and their representatives-in-interest by the decision of the arbitrators, the reference does not stand revoked merely by the death of one of the parties.

Ranji Ram v. Salig Ram, 11 Ind. Cas. 481; 14 C. L. J. 188, relied upon.

If before the hearing has concluded one of the parties dies his representatives should be brought on the record and made parties to the submission. But where the hearing has terminated before such death and nothing remains for the arbitrators to do but to deliver their award, the award delivered after the death is binding upon the parties and their representatives.

Appeal from the order of the Sub-Judge of Bankura, dated May 25th, 1909.

Babu Satish Chandra Mukerjee, for the Appellants.

Babus Umakali Mukherjee and Joy Gopal Ghosha, for the Respondents.

MANINDRA NATH v. MOHANUNDA ROY.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal under section 104 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1908, against an order made under clause 3 of the second Schedule of the Code. It appears that the parties to this proceeding made a submission to arbitration on the 2nd August 1907. The arbitrators gave their award on the 21st March 1908. On the 15th May following, the respondents before us applied to the Court under clause 20 of the second Schedule of the Code to file the award. Objections were taken by the appellants, and were of all conceivable descriptions. The Subordinate Judge has considered these in detail and overruled every one of them. The defendants have now appealed to this Court, and on their behalf the decision of the Subordinate Judge has been assailed substantially on eight grounds; namely, first, that there was no valid submission to arbitration, because by the fraud of the respondents, the name of Babu Kuloda Prosad Mukerjee was inserted in the submission, whereas it had been agreed upon between the parties that the matters in difference between them should be referred to the arbitration of one gentleman only; secondly, that the arbitrators had decided matters not included in the submission; thirdly, that the award is vague and uncertain and also defective, because the arbitrators had left undecided matters included in the submission; fourthly, that the arbitrators were guilty of misconduct, inasmuch as one of them received a document in the absence of his colleague and of the opposite party; fifthly, that the arbitrators have improperly refused to take important evidence; sixthly, that the award was void, because it was not signed by both the arbitrators at the same time and place; seventhly, that the reference to arbitration was void, because there was no provision made therein for the appointment of an umpire, and eighthly, that the award was void, because it had been made after the death of one of the parties to the submission.

In support of the first ground, it has been contended that the agreement between the parties was that the matters in difference between them should be referred to the arbitration of one person only, namely, Babu Benode Behary Mondal, and that after this had been settled, the plaintiffs-respondents fraudulently inserted in the instrument of submission without the knowledge of the appellants, the name of Babu Kuloda Prosad Mukerjee. The Subordinate Judge has examined the evidence on this part of the case, and has come to the conclusion that the allegation of the appellants has not been established. He has relied upon one very material circumstance; namely, that the appellants, without any objection, submitted to the arbitration of both the gentlemen named. This circumstance shows conclusively that the allegation of the plaintiffs is not true. The conduct of the appellant further shows that if there was any fraud on the part of the respondent, the appellant waived all objections on this ground even after they had been apprised of what had happened. The explanation submitted by the learned Vakil for the appellants is that after the defendants became aware that the name of Babu Kuloda Prosad Mukerjee had been entered in the deed of submission, they did not think it wise to make any protest and accepted the position that he was a validly appointed arbitrator. In our opinion, if the facts are such as stated by the learned Vakil for the appellants, it is no longer open to them to repudiate the position they deliberately took up before the arbitrator [Sheonath v. Ramnath (1).] The first ground is, therefore, unsustainable.

In so far as the second objection taken by the appellants is concerned, it is in fact contradictory in part to the third objection urged on their behalf. It has been argued that the parties agreed to refer to the arbitrators the question of the disputes in respect of certain conveyances and it was never their intention to submit to the arbitrators all disputes between them relating to the estate of Kartik Prosad and Krishna Prosad. The terms of the submission, however, negative this contention. The document of submission states clearly that the arbitrators were appointed to settle the dispute between the parties regarding the properties left by Kartik Prosad and Krishna Prosad, and, in the schedule to the instrument, the whole of the properties left by these two persons is described as the subject-matter of the arbitration. There is no substance, therefore, in the second objection.

In so far as the third objection is concerned, the argument is divisible into two branches. It has been contended, in the first place, that the award is defective, because the arbitrators have omitted to decide the matter in controversy between the parties in respect of the three specified properties. In so far as one of these properties is concerned, namely, the homestead and the adjacent lands, the matter has been decided by the arbitrators, but apparently in respect of the other two properties, namely Baymora and some jungle lands, the matter has not been expressly decided by the arbitrators. On this footing it has been argued by the learned Vakil for the appellants, that the award is bad in its entirety, because the arbitrators have left undecided the question relating to a portion of the matters in difference. But, it must be observed in this connection that it does not appear to have been brought to the notice of the arbitrators that there was any dispute between the parties with regard to these properties. The objection, undoubtedly, was not taken before the Subordinate Judge in the Court below, when the award was assailed on numerous other grounds. Consequently, the principle laid down in the cases of Middleton v. Weeks (2) and Elson v. Rolfe (3) is applicable. That principle is that no objection can be made to the award if the arbitrator determines allegations brought before his notice, though there are other matters within the scope of the submission to which his attention has not been drawn. In other words, as stated in the case of Rees v. Waters (4), in order to invalidate an award for not deciding a particular question, it must be established that the point was specifically stated and brought to the notice of the arbitrators. The first branch of the third contention, therefore, fails.

(1) 10 M. I. A. 413 at p. 426; 5 W. R. (P. C.) 21; 1 Ind. Jur. (N. S.) 161.

In so far as the second branch of the third contention is concerned, our attention has been invited to the fact that there are blanks in two places in the award. It has also been pointed out that in two other places the arbitrators have decided that certain lands are to be held under tenancy right, in respect whereof the rent is left unascertained. Finally, it has been observed that, in another instance, the rent is assessed at one rupee; but it is not specifically stated to whom that rent is payable. It may be conceded that, at first sight, it does appear that the award is open to the objection of vagueness and uncertainty by reason of the defects mentioned. But upon closer examination, it appears that there is no substance in any of these alleged defects.

With regard to the first item, the arbitrators have laid down the principle upon which the sum payable has to be ascertained. The arbitrators have overruled the contention that the darputnidars under the document executed by Brahmomoyee and Umamoyee on the 2nd September 1902 had made payment of the rent alleged by them. The amount of rent payable by the darputnidar to the zemindar can be ascertained without any difficulty from the durputni lease. The arbitrators have also laid down in detail the principle upon which the particular set off has to be allowed, though they have not made out the actual calculation and have left a blank where a particular figure ought to have been inserted in their award. Under such circumstances, we are not prepared to hold that there is any real uncertainty in the award [Higgins v. Willes (5); Hopcraft v. Hickman (6) and Beale v. Beale (7).] The principle is that if the arbitrator has given rules for calculating the amount of money to be paid, without stating the result of such calculation, the award is sufficiently certain, on the principle that that is sufficiently certain which can be made certain [Broom on Legal Maxims, 1911, page 478]. As an illustration of this rule, reference may be made to the case of Beale v. Beale (7), in which an award was made that one party should pay to the other all such money as he had expended in the prosecution of a suit. The award was held to be sufficiently certain, because the amount could be ascertained from the attorney's bill. The principle applicable to cases of this description was lucidly stated by Mr. Justice Cushing in the case of Strong v. Strong (8): "Where it is laid down as a principle of law that an award should be final, the meaning is not that nothing shall remain to be done to complete the execution of the award, but that the thing to be done shall have been determined and defined to a reasonable certainty." The division in that case was

(2) (1613) Cro. Jac. 200.
(3) (1805) 2 Smith 459.
(4) (1847) 16 M. & W. 263; 4 D. & L. 567.
(5) (1828) 3 M. & R. 382.
(6) (1824) 2 S. & S. 130; 3 L. J. Ch. (o. s.) 43.
(7) (1635) Cro. Car. 383.
(8) (1852) 9 Cushing 560.

to be of certain chattels, the property of a partnership, and the learned Judge in applying the above view of the law observed as follows: "It is true that the arbitrators did not themselves actually sever the things to be divided, whether hay, grain, utensils or the like. There is nothing in the submission which requires them to effect such actual severance and mechanical distribution of those things. They adjudged in the award that the things should be divided and they decided in what proportion. In many cases, no more is possible to be done, as in an award for the division of partnership effects, which may happen at the time to be abroad or otherwise not in the personal possession of either party, and of which the quantity or value is not known; or, as in the case of an award concerning objects not in their nature presently divisible or susceptible of division, such as the yet immature crop or fruit of trees; or, as in the case of joint interests not in their nature capable at any time of a material severance, like the property in a ship. All these and many other examples, which readily suggest themselves, would seem to show that an award which purports to divide a property between two persons by prescribing a rule of division may well be final, though the property in question be not actually divided, nay, though it be incapable of division, if the award gives a definite and certain rule for the division, there is no want of power in the laws to apply the rule and enforce its application. Though possible doubt may attach to the doctrine by reason of the dicta in some English cases, yet on the whole, it is admitted in those very cases that if the arbitrator makes "some regulation upon matters of difference," to use the words of Baron Parke or "gives direction" as to what is to be done, according to the language of Lord Abinger, "it is decisive in favour of the award." Again, in the case of Thorp v. Cole (9) reference to extrinsic documents was allowed for the purpose of explaining or determining an amount not named or ascertained in the award otherwise than by reference to such document. The award was that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff's Attorney a certain sum which was paid by him: the bill included charges relating to the plaintiff as well as to another man; the award was sufficiently certain, though it had not determined specifically the plaintiff's share of the bill, for since it was stated that the bill had already been delivered, it could be ascertained by a reference to it.

In so far as the second item is concerned, it has been pointed out that the amount of rent has not been assessed in respect of two properties. It is manifest, however, that the substantial point in controversy between the parties was, whether those lands were to be allowed to be held under tenancy right. The question of the assessment of rent was of a wholly subordinate character and the arbitrators very properly left the amount of rent to be adjusted hereinafter by a proper tribunal.

In so far as the third item is concerned, namely, the party to whom the rent of one rupee was payable, it is clear that the intention of the arbitrators was that the amount should be paid to the holder of the superior interest, that is, the representative of Kartik Prosad and Krishna Prosad. It follows, consequently, that the second branch of the third contention must fail.

In support of the fourth ground urged by the appellants, our attention has been drawn to the circumstance that one of the arbitrators received the written statement of the defendants, now appellants before us, at a time when his colleague and the plaintiffs-respondents were absent. It has been suggested that this was a grave irregularity on the part of the arbitrators, sufficient by itself to invalidate the entire proceeding. In support of this contention, reliance has been placed upon the cases of Khelut Chunder Ghose v. Tara Chand Koondoo (10); Nandram v. Fakir Chand (11) and Thammiraju v. Bapiraju (12). Reference has also been made to the observations in the case of Harvey v. Shelton (13). The cases relied upon are clearly distinguishable and are of no assistance to the appellants. They lay down the proposition that judicial acts, in order that, they may be valid, must be jointly performed [Sreenath v. Raj Chunder (14)]. But the question remains whether the mere execution of a written statement by one of the arbitrators is a judicial act within the meaning of this

(9) 2 C. M. & R. 367; 4 Daul. 437; 5 L. J. Ex. 24.

(10) 6 W. R. 269.
(11) 7 A. 523.
(12) 12 M. 113.
(13) 7 Beav. 455 at p. 462; 13 L. J. Ch. 466.
(14) 8 W. R. 171.

rule. There can be no question, as pointed out by this Court in the case of Moti Lal Ghosh v. Girish Chandra Ghosh (15), that arbitrators have power to do singly acts of a ministerial nature. In the case before us, it is difficult to see how it can be seriously contended that the mere reception of a written statement by one of the arbitrators was a judicial act. The case of Harvey v. Shelton (13), upon which reliance has been placed, was obviously of an entirely different character. In that case, one of the parties to the reference interviewed one of the arbitrators, and discussed the matters in difference between him and his opponents, and the ultimate result of the interview was that the arbitrator in question altered the view he had previously expressed. This was manifestly an improper act on the part of the arbitrator and was by itself sufficient to invalidate the proceeding. The present case is of an entirely different description. In our opinion, there is no substance in the fourth objection taken by the appellants.

In support of the fifth ground, it has been contended that the arbitrators improperly refused to take important evidence. Our intention has been invited to a statement by the arbitrators themselves that they declined to examine Brahmomoyee, although it was suggested by both the parties that she should be examined as a witness. It is clear, however, upon the evidence that the witness in question was not tendered for examination. The arbitrators were invited to go to the house where Brahmomoyee resided and to examine her. In our opinion, they very properly declined to examine the parda-nashin lady as a witness under these conditions. The principle applicable to a case of this description is perfectly well settled. In order to make out a case entitling a party to impeach the award, the witness must be distinctly tendered to the arbitrators. It is not enough to put an abstract proposition to an arbitrator and upon his answer, to decline to give evidence or prefer a claim. The party should tender a specific case and specific evidence [Craven v. Craven (16) and Grazebrook v. Davis (17)]. There is no substance, therefore, in the fifth ground urged by the appellants.

(15) 12 C. L. J. 346; 6 Ind. Cas. 109.
(16) 7 Taunt 644; 1 Moor. 403; 18 R. R. 623.
(17) 5 B. & C. 534; 4 L. J. (o. s.) K. B. 321; 8 D. & R. 295.

In support of the sixth ground, which is of a highly technical character, it has been argued that the award is void, because it was not signed by the arbitrators at the same time and place. In support of this argument, it has been contended that the signing of an award is a judicial act and like other judicial acts it must be performed jointly by the arbitrators concerned; and reference has been made to the cases of Wade v. Dowling (18); Wright v. Graham (19); Anning v. Hartley (20); In re Jai Mangal Singh (21); Jai Mangal Singh v. Mohanram Marwari (22) and Benode Lal Pakrashi v. Pran Chandra Pakrashi (23). In so far as the case of Wade v. Dowling (18) is concerned, no doubt, it supports the contention of the appellants. But we observe that, so far back as 1871, Mr. Justice Phear, in the case of Bhobosundari v. Makhun Lal Dey (24), declined to adopt the English rule on the subject, as not founded upon principles of justice, equity and good conscience. The view taken in the case last mentioned has been adopted by the Madras High Court in Muthukutti Nayakan v. Acha Nayakan (25). The case of In re Jai Mangal Singh (21), the head-note to the report whereof is misleading, is really not an authority in support of the contention of the appellant; while, so far as the decision in Jai Mangal Singh v. Mohan Ram Marwari (22) is concerned, the learned Judges were upon this point equally divided in opinion. With regard to the case of Benode Lal Pakrarhi v. Pran Chandra Pakrashi (23) it is sufficient to observe that the award there was invalidated on the ground that one of the arbitrators had not attended all the sittings and had subsequently signed blank papers upon which the award was drawn up and written out by his colleagues. The position, therefore, is, so far as this Court is concerned, that the opinion expressed by Mr. Justice Norman in Jai Mangal Singh v. Mohan Ram Marwari (22) is in favour of the appellants, whereas the opinion expressed by Mr. Justice Jackson in the same case and the (18) 4 Ellis. & Bl. 44; 2 C. L. R. 1642; 23 L. J. Q. B. 302; 18 Jur. 728; 2 W. R. 567.

(19) 3 Exch. 131; 18 L. R. Ex. 29.
(20) 27 L. J. Ex. 145.
(21) 11 W. R. 433; 3 B. L. R. A. C. 82.
(22) 12 W. R. 397; 8 B. L. R. 319 n.
(23) 14 C. L. J. 143; 11 Ind. Cas. 898.
(24) 8 B. L. R. 128.
(25) 18 M. 22.

view adopted by Mr. Justice Phear in Bhobosundari Dasi v. Makhun Lal Dey (24) is opposed to their contention. [Ardesar v. Secretary of State (26)]. Under these circumstances, we are free to decide the matter as one of principle and we are clearly of opinion that the rule laid down in Wade v. Dowling (18), ought not to be adopted in this country. We may add that even in England the contrary view has some times been maintained. See, for instance, the cases of Little v. Newton (27) and In re Hopper (28). We may further observe that the English rule [Stalworth v. Inns (29), Eads v. Williams (30)] has not been adopted in the American Courts, on the ground that it is of a highly technical character and not conducive to the ends of justice [Maynard v. Fredrich (31)]. It has rightly been remarked that the rule that an award is invalid unless it has been signed by all the arbitrators at the same sitting, is certainly a rule carried to a point beyond what reason would seem to require, and it is more than probable that so rigid a doctrine would throw out many awards which justice would require should be upheld. In the case before us, it is conclusively established that the actual decision is the joint adjudication of all the arbitrators. That decision was subsequently engrossed by one of the clerks and the document in its final form was signed by the different arbitrators on different occasions. That, in our opinion, does not invalidate the award. The sixth ground, therefore, completely fails.

In support of the seventh ground, it has been contended that the submission to arbitration was bad, because no provision had been made therein for the appointment of an umpire in the event of difference of opinion between the arbitrators. In support of this view, reliance has been placed upon the cases of Futteh Singh v. Gango (32); Haradhan Dutt v. Radhanath Shaha (33). The learned Vakil for the appellant has, however, conceded that the contrary view was adopted by this Court in the case of Gour Ohunder Buttacharjee v. Sodoy Ohunder Nundee (34). The first two cases, it may be mentioned, were decided under the Code of 1859 and related to references to arbitration by Courts. In this connection, it is worthy of note that, under section 509 of the Code of 1882, it was expressly provided that in cases of reference to arbitration in pending suits, provision had to be made for the appointment of an umpire in the event of a difference of opinion between the arbitrators. There was, however, no such legislative provision in respect of private submissions by parties. We are unable to hold nor can we discover any intelligible principle upon which we may be reasonably invited to hold that the award is void, though there has been no difference of opinion between the arbitrators, merely because no provision was made for a contingency which has not actually happened. The seventh ground cannot be supported.

With reference to the eighth and last objection taken by the appellant, it has been argued that as one of the parties died before the arbitrators delivered their award, their authority terminated, and the award subsequently delivered was void and inoperative in law. In our opinion, there is no foundation for this contention. The cases of Harakrishna Mitter v Ram Gopal Mitter (35) and Perumalla Satyanarayana v. Perumalla Venkata (36) show that the principle of nunc pro tunc is applicable to proceedings before arbitrators. The learned Vakil for the appellant has, however, contended that these cases are distinguishable, because in each of them, the reference to arbitration had been filed in Court, whereas in the case before us the whole of the proceedings before the arbitrator was upon a private submission. But, clearly, there is no substantial difference in principle between the cases mentioned and the cases before us. As pointed out by the learned Judge of the Madras High Court in Perumalla Satya Narayana v. Perumulla Venkata (36), the rule of the English Common law that a submission to arbitration stands revoked by the death of one of the parties, is

(26) 9 B. H. C. R. 177.
(27) 9 Dowling 437; 10 L. J. C. P. 88; 5 Jur. 246; 2 Man. & G. 351; 2 Scott. N. R. 165.
(28) 2 Q. B. 367 at p. 376; 36 L. J. Q. B. 97; 8 B. & S. 100; 15 L. T. 566; 15 W. R. 443.
(29) 13 M. & W. 466; 2 D. & L. 428; 14 L. J. Ex. 81; 9 Jur. 285.
(30) 24 L. J. Ch. 531; 4 De G. M. & G. 674; 1 Jur. (N. S.) 193; 5 W. R. 98.
(31) (1851) 7 Cushing 247.
(32) 4 W. R. 4.
(33) 10 W. R. 398; 2 B. L. R. (S. N.) 14.
(34) 17 W. R. 30.
(35) 6 Ind. Cas. 170; 14 C. W. N. 759.
(36) 27 M. 112.

not applicable to this country. The test to be applied here is what is the true nature of the submission? Were the matters in difference personal questions in respect whereof it was not intended that the succession in interest of the parties should be affected by the decision of the arbitrators? If the intention of the parties was that not merely themselves but their representatives-in-interest should be bound by the decision of the arbitrators, the reference plainly does not stand revoked merely by the death of one of the parties. [Ramji Ram v. Salig Ram (37)]. If this view is maintained, the only other question that arises, is, whether after the death of one of the parties, any judicial act, such as the hearing of the case, was undertaken by the arbitrators. If the hearing had not been completed it would have been necessary to bring the representatives of the deceased party on the record and to make them parties to the submission. Here, however, the hearing had terminated and nothing remained for the arbitrators to do but to deliver their award. We are of opinion, that the award so delivered is binding upon the parties and their representatives-in-interest. There is no substance, therefore, in the eighth ground urged by the appellant.

The result is, that all the grounds upon which the decision of the Subordinate Judge has been assailed fail, and must be overruled, The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs. We assess the hearing fee at ten gold mohurs.

Appeal dismissed.

(37) 14 C. L. J. 188; 11 Ind. Cas. 481.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1348 OF 1911.

December 9, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shah Din.

JIWA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BUTA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Punjab Pre-emption Act (II of 1905*), ss.* 3, 5—Agricultural land—Urban immoveable property—Character of land to be looked at as on the date of sale and not as before or after sale.

A piece of land was entered in the last Settlement as bara (ghair mumkin) and no Revenue was assessed on it. After the Settlement, however, it was brought under cultivation and was occupied for agricultural purpose for about 15 years. At the date of its sale it was still occupied for these purposes though it was situate in the direction of the recent extension of a town and on the main road connecting the town with its Railway Station:

Held, that, for the purposes of pre-emption, the land was agricultural land and not urban immoveable property.

In determining whether or not piece of land is for pre-emption purposes agricultural land the time to be looked at is the time when the sale was made. The fact that at one time it was ghair mumkin and not assessed to Revenue, that since the date of sale it has been built upon by the vendee or that it lies in the direction of recent extensions of a town and on the main road connecting the town with its Railway Station, is insufficient to alter its character.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Ambala, dated the 18th November 1908, confirming that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Ludhiana, dated the 1st August 1908, dismissing plaintiff's claim.

Dr. Muhammad Iqbal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Vishnu Singh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case, so far as they are material to the decision of this appeal, are as follows:—By a registered deed dated the 5th of July 1907, defendants Nos. 1 to 4 sold the land in suit measuring 3 biswas, which is situate in Mauza Agwar Gujran a suburb of the town of Jagraon, to defendant No. 5 for Rs. 75. The plaintiff, Jiwa, who is a proprietor in the village in question, brought a suit for pre-emption in respect of the land sold alleging, inter alia, that the vendee being a non-proprietor in the village, the plaintiff had a superior right of pre-emption. In answer to the plaintiff's claim the vendee raised several pleas, but, for the purposes of this appeal, it is only necessary to notice one of them, namely, that the land in suit was not agricultural land, that it formed part of the extension of the town of Jagraon, and that, therefore, the plaintiff had no right of pre-emption in respect of it. On the pleadings of the parties, the Court of first instance framed, among others, the following two issues:—

(1) Is the land in suit agricultural land and situate in the village of Agwar Gujran?

(2) Has plaintiff got a preferential right of pre-emption?

On the above issues the Court found in the negative, and, without going into the other issues raised between the parties, dismissed the suit. The following is a summary of the conclusions recorded by the Court in the concluding portion of its judgment on the two issues as set forth above:—

"(1) That abadi Agwar Gujran is part of the town of Jagraon and not a separate village;

"(2) that since the market has been built, the Agwar Gujran portion of the town is being extended as far as the market and the Railway Station, and a bazar is in the course of formation on the station road;

"(3) that a shop for the sale of milk has been built on the land in suit by the vendee, and

"(4) that the land is the site of an old fort and no Revenue is assessed on it."

In an earlier part of the judgment, the Court says that the statement of Milkhi Ram, patwari, shows that the land in suit is situated in the mahal Agwar Gujran and is entered in the Revenue papers as an agricultural land.

This part of the patwari's statement has, as we shall presently see, an important bearing on the question whether the plaintiff has a right of pre-emption in respect of the land in dispute, but the Court has not given due weight to it with reference to the provisions of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, probably on the ground that the land is not assessed to Revenue and because it forms part of the alleged extension of the town of Jagraon.

On appeal, the Divisional Judge agreed with the first Court in holding that the plaintiff had no right of pre-emption regarding the land in suit. The question which the learned Judge propounded to himself was, whether the property in suit could fairly be described as "urban immoveable property" and he answered that question in the affirmative. His reasoning can best be described in his own words: "Jagraon town", says the Divisional Judge, "is enclosed by an ancient wall round which lie several Agwars or suburbs, themselves within Municipal limits, though their lands are outside those limits and form separate Revenue estates. At a distance of a mile or two from the town lies the tahsil, and recently the Railway Station has been built in that direction. The property in suit lies on the main road connecting the town and the station and, appellant tells me, it is nearer the town than the station. The town has for years shown a tendency to extend northwards towards the tahsil and the Ludhiana-Ferozepore road. This tendency will doubtless be increased by the construction of the Railway. The land in dispute is no longer part of the agricultural land of a village but lies in the suburb of a raising town and has now been built upon by defendant."

It seems to me, that in coming to the conclusion that the land in suit is urban immoveable property and, therefore, not subject to the right of pre-emption, the Divisional Judge has overlooked both the statement of the patwari in this case and the provisions of the Punjab Pre-emption Act which bear on the question under consideration. Under section 5 of the said Act, a right of pre-emption always exists in respect of "agricultural land," though it is subject to all the provisions and limitations contained in the Act; and the question for decision in this case is not whether the land in dispute is situate in a village or in a town, but whether it is "agricultural land" within the meaning of section 3 (1) of the said Act. According to section 3, "agricultural land" means land as defined in the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, and in that Act the expression "land" means "land which is not occupied as the site of any building in a town or village and is occupied or let for agricultural purposes or for purposes subservient to agriculture or for pasture, and includes * * * * *" (here follow 5 clauses which it is unnecessary to set out in this place). In sub-section (3) of section 3 aforesaid, "urban immoveable property" is defined as meaning immoveable property within the limits of a town other than agricultural land." With reference to the above definitions it is clear that if the land in suit is agricultural land it is not "urban immoveable property" within the meaning of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, no matter whether it is situate in a town or in a village and the whole discussion in this case as to the recent extensions of the town of Jagraon, or as to the probability of its future extension towards the tahsil and the Railway Station is perfectly irrelevant. It is equally clear that if the laud in question was, at the date of sale and for sometime prior thereto, occupied or let for agricultural purposes or for purposes subservient to agriculture and was not occupied as the site of any building in a town or village, it was agricultural land within the meaning of the Pre-emption Act and was, therefore, subject to pre-emption under section 5 thereof.

JIWA v. BUTA.

On this point the patwari's statement is quite explicit. He says that the land has been cultivated since 1892-1893, and is entered in the Revenue papers as chahi mazrua. The fard attached to the plaint shows that at the last Settlement that land was entered as bara (ghair mumkin) and no Revenue was assessed on it. Since the date of the Settlement, however, the land has been brought under the plough; and it is not disputed that it lies outside the Municipal limits of the town of Jagraon and forms part of the Revenue paying estate of Agwar Gujran which contains a large area of agricultural land, part of which is now being sold and utilised as building sites. If then, the land in suit has been occupied for agricultural purposes for no less than 15 years before suit, and if at the date of sale it was still occupied for the same purpose, it is incorrect to say that, for the purposes of the present litigation, it is urban immoveable property, simply, because at one time it was ghair mumkin and is not assessed to land Revenue or because it lies in the direction of the recent extension of the town of Jagraon and on the main road connecting the town and the Railway Station. The fact that since the date of sale it has been built upon by the vendee is not sufficient to alter its character so as to affect the plaintiff's right of pre-emption; for in a case of this kind in determining whether the subject-matter of suit is agricultural land or not the time to be looked at is the time when the sale was made and not when the suit was instituted. Unless and until it is shown that at the date of sale the land in question had ceased to be agricultural land, as defined by section 3 (1) of the Pre-emption Act, the plaintiff must be held to have a right of pre-emption in respect of it, though obviously he can only exercise it subject to the provisions and limitations contained in the said Act.

It now only remains to point out that the decisions cited in the judgment of the Court of first instance have no bearing whatever on the question under consideration. Kadir Bakhsh v. Ghulam (1); Ram Narain Singh v. Sewak Ram (2); Haider v. Iswar Das (3); Ishwar Das v. Duni Chand (4); Haryallu Mal v. Nathu Ram (5) were all cases decided under sections 9, 10 and 11 of the Punjab Laws Act, which have been repealed by the Punjab Pre-emption Act; and they are, therefore, irrelevant to the present inquiry. Here, there is no question of whether Agwar Gujran is a village or a town, which would have been a question of great importance if section 10 of the Punjab Laws Act had governed the case; the sole question which requires decision in this case with reference to the provisions of the new Act, is whether the land in suit is agricultural land or not, and on that question the decisions cited by the first Court throw no light at all.

Before me the Counsel for the vendee also relied on Muhammad Din v. Shah Din (6) but that decision is wholly inapplicable to the facts of the present case, inasmuch as there it was admitted that at the time of the sale the land in respect of which the plaintiff had preferred his claim was not agricultural land within the meaning of the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1887. In fact, in that case it was held proved that during the last 17 or 18 years the land had been gradually built upon and that at the date of sale there were some 200 buildings standing on it. Besides in that case also, pre-emption was claimed under the provisions of the Punjab Laws Act, and the claim was adjudicated upon with reference to sections 10, 11 and 12 of the said Act.

For the above reasons, I hold that the land in suit was agricultural land at the date of sale and that the plaintiff has a right of pre-emption in respect of it. I, therefore, accept this appeal and remand the case under Order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code, to the Court of first instance for decision on the merits. Stamp on this appeal will be refunded and the other costs will be costs in the cause.

Appeal accepted; Case remanded.

(1) 74 P. R. 1897.
(2) 21 P. R. 1906; 110 P. L. R. 1906.
(3) 22 P. R 1906; 115 P. L. R. 1906.
(4) 27 P. R. 1907.
(5) 51 P. R. 1907; 38 P. L. R. 19 07
(6) 90 P. R. 1907.

PRAYAG NARAIN SINGH v. SUKDEO NARAIN SINGH.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL NO. 449 OF 1910.
July 24, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

PRAYAG NARA N SINGH— DECREE-HOLDER—APPELLANT
versus
SUKDEO NARAIN SINGH—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—RESPONDENT.

Appeal Interlocutory order—Order intermediate between preliminary and final decrees, appeal from, whether competent—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47—Appellate Court—Jurisdiction if can be given by consent of parties.

An agreement between two litigating parties as to the mode of determining the questions in controversy between them, different from the mode prescribed by the Legislature, may be binding upon them. But their mutual consent cannot create a right of appeal where none is allowed by statute, for a right of appeal is a creature of statute.

Pisani v. Attorney General for Gibralter, L. R. 5 P. C. App. 516 at p. 522; 30 L. T. 729; 22 W. R. 900; Sadasiva Pillai, v. Ramalinga Pillai, 15 B. L. R. 383; 24 W. R. 193; 2 I. A. 219, Lane v. Esdaile, (1891) A. C. 210; 60 L. J. Ch. 644; 64 L. T. 666; 40 W. R. 65; Minakshi v. Subramanya, 14 I. A. 160; 11 M. 26 and Golab Sao v. Chowdhury Madho Lal, 2 C. L. J. 384; 9 C. W. N. 956, relied upon.

A preliminary decree was made in a partition suit on the basis of an award of arbitrators. It directed that certain properties should be divided in execution proceedings. On two previous occasions appeals were preferred against orders made in the proceedings on the basis that they fell within the scope of section 47 of the Code and no objection was taken to the competency of the appeals. Another appeal has been preferred against an order made in the execution proceedings, and it is objected that no appeal lies:

Held, that interlocutory orders intermediate between the preliminary and the final decrees, are not appealable and that it is open to the respondents to take exception to the competency of the appeal, notwithstanding the direction given in the preliminary decree and notwithstanding their omission to take exception to the validity of the appeals filed against the previous orders in the so-called execution proceedings.

Appeal from the order of the Sub-Judge of Gaya, dated August 5th, 8th and 9th, 1910.

Babu Umakali Mukherjee and Maulvi Mahomed Mustofa Khan, for the Appellant.

Dr. Rash Behary Ghose and Babu Ganesh Dutt Singh, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against three orders which purport to have been made in course of proceedings in execution of a decree in a suit for partition of joint properties. A preliminary objection has been taken to the competency of the appeal.

It appears that the dispute between the parties was referred to arbitration and on the 21st December 1906, a decree was made on the basis of the award of the arbitrators. The arbitrators appear to have suggested that the properties should be divided in proceedings in execution of the decree except one property which they themselves had divided. The Sub-Judge accepted this suggestion and the result was that the preliminary decree which was drawn up directed that the properties which remained undivided be divided in execution proceedings. Protracted investigations have taken place in the execution proceedings and, on two previous occasions appeals were preferred to this Court against orders made in the proceedings on the basis that the orders fall within the scope of section 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, and were appealable as decrees. On those occasions, no objection appears to have been taken to the competency of the appeals. On the present occasion, however, an objection has been urged that the orders sought to be assailed are not appealable as they are interlocutory orders intermediate between the preliminary decree and the final decree which has not yet been made. The learned Vakil for the respondents has contended that these orders cannot be regarded as decrees; first, because, although they purport to have been made under section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, they could not have been made under that section, and secondly, because, even if they are treated as properly made under section 47, they do not decide any question relating to the rights of the parties and, therefore, do not embody any adjudication which can be challenged by way of appeal. The learned Vakil for the appellant has contended, on the other hand, that it is not open to the respondents to take any objection to the competency of the appeal, because it was by consent of parties that the preliminary decree directed the investigation of all these matters in the course of execution proceedings. In our opinion, the preliminary objection is obviously well-founded, and it is open to the respondents to take exception to the competency of the appeal, notwithstanding the direction given in the preliminary decree and notwithstanding their omission to take exception to the validity of the appeals filed against the previous orders in the so-called execution proceedings.

KARIMAN v. MASITI.

There is no room for controversy that the order embodied in the preliminary decree was irregular, at least to this extent that the parties agreed to have a determination of questions in execution proceedings which ought to have been tried in the course of a pending suit. It does not follow, however, that such an agreement is invalid in law. In fact, the decisions of the Judicial Committee in the cases of Pisani v Attorney-General for Gibraltar (1) and Sadasiva Pillai v. Ramalinga Pillai (2) show that an agreement between two litigant parties as to the mode of the determination of the questions in controversy between them, different from the mode prescribed by the Legislature, may be binding upon them. But it does not follow that the parties can by mutual consent create a right of appeal where none is allowed by statute. Authority is scarcely needed in support of the elementary proposition that a right of appeal is a creature of statute [Lane v. Esdaile (3); Minakshi v. Subramanya (4)] and, if no right of appeal has been allowed by the Legislature, the parties cannot by agreement take matters in controversy to the Appellate Court. This proposition is amply supported by the observations of the Judicial Committee in the case of Pisani v. Attorney-General for Gibralter (1): "It is true that there was a deviation from the cursus curiæ but the Court had jurisdiction over the subject, and the assumption of the duty of another tribunal is not involved in the questions. Departures from ordinary practice by consent are of every day occurrence, but unless there is an attempt to give the Court a jurisdiction which it does not possess or something occurs which is such a violent strain upon its procedure that it puts it entirely out of its course, so that a Court of Appeal cannot properly review the decision, such departures have never been held to deprive either of the parties to the right of appeal." Here, in so far as the parties agreed that the partition was to take place in the course of execution proceedings, they may be held bound by their agreement, but when they invite this Court to hear an appeal which this Court is not competent to hear because no appeal is allowed by law, the conclusion becomes self evident that the agreement does not avail either of the parties. By consent of parties we cannot acquire appellate jurisdiction where none has been created by the statute [Golab Bao v. Chowdhury Madho Lal (5)]. The position, therefore, is incontestable that it is open to the respondents to urge that the appeal is incompetent. But, even if the respondents were not at liberty to take the objection, it would be the duty of the Court to dismiss the appeal which, it cannot be seriously disputed, is incompetent. The result, therefore, is that this appeal is dismissed but there will be no order as to costs.

It will now be open to either of the parties to invite the Sub-Judge to draw up the final decree in the partition suit and, when that decree has been drawn up, it will be open to either of them who may be aggrieved by the result, to prefer an appeal to this Court, and to challenge the propriety of interlocutory orders.

We may add that the matter is not one of form but of substance. In order that a partition decree may be drawn up, the parties have to pay stamp-duty as prescribed by the Legislature. There are obvious advantages also to the parties if a final decree is drawn up because, by reference to the decree, their rights as determined by the partition may be ascertained without any difficulty or likelihood of dispute. On the other hand, if matters are allowed to stand, as they do in the case before us, it would be extremely difficult, if not impracticable, for both the parties to ascertain their precise rights, from the numerous orders recorded in the order-sheet of the Subordinate Judge.

(1) L. R. 5 P. C. App. 516 at p. 522; 30 L. T. 729; 22 W. R. 900

(2) 2 I. A. 219; 15 B. L. R. 383; 24 W. R. 193.

(3) (1891) A. C. 210; 60 L. J. Ch. 644; 64 L. T. 666; 40 W. R. 65.

(4) 14 I. A. 160; 11 M. 26.

(5) 2 C. L. J. 384; 9 C. W. N. 956.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 150 OF 1911.

December 18, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Johnstone.

Musammat KARIMAN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat MASITI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), s. 19—Will

MUHAMMAD v. IMAM KHATUN.

—Probate—Letters of Administration—Legatee's right to administer estate when some executors willing to act—Fitness of executors—Applications for Probate—Parties—Legatee impugning executor's good faith should be made party.

A legatee cannot be allowed to administer the estate of a testator unless all the executors refuse to act. The Court should not consider whether the executors who are willing to act are fit and proper persons for the grant of Probate.

Hara Coomar Sircar v. Doorga Moni Dasi, 21 C. 195, relied upon.

Although a legatee has no title to administer the property, he should be brought on the record of a Probate case as an interested person to safeguard his interests where he impugns the good faith of the executors.

Khettra Moni Dasi v. Shyama Churn, 21 C. 539, followed.

Miscellaneous first appeal from the order of the District Judge of Delhi, dated 27th January 1911, striking out the name of Musammat Kariman from among the petitioners for grant of Letters of Administration of the Will of Musammat Fahiman Jan, dated 23rd July 1910.

Mr. Lakshmi Narain and Lala Sangam Lal, for the Appellant.

Khwaja Kamal-ud din, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—In this case four persons applied for Letters of Administration of the Will of the deceased Musammat Fahiman Jan. The District Judge observed that out of these four, one was Musammat Kariman who is simply a legatee and not an executor, and the three others were out of the 14 executors appointed by the Will. He, therefore, directed that Musammat Kriman's name be struck out, that the names of the remaining executors be added, and that the petition be amended so as to make it an application for Probate and not for Letters of Administration. Against this order Musammat Kariman has filed an appeal, in which she says that she is entitled to Letters of Administration. When this case was before me on 23rd February 1911, Mr. Sangam Lal added this to his prayer, namely, that at least his client should remain a party to the proceedings.

I have now heard both sides. Mr. Sangam Lal refers me to section 19, Act V of 1881, under which Letters of Administration may be given to a legatee in the case of a Will by which no executor was appointed or if the executors appointed refused to act, but this section has no application in the present case, for several of the executors are willing to act. The decision of the Court below is, therefore, correct to the extent that Musammat Karimn cannot be allowed to administer this estate unless all the executors refuse to act. Mr. Sangam Lal suggests that the Court should consider whether the executors who are willing to act are fit and proper persons, but this suggestion is contrary to law, Cf. Hara Coomar Sircar v. Doorga Moni Dasi (1).

On the other hand, I think that Musammat Kariman's name should have remained on the record as a party. She is an interested person and she expresses doubts as to the good faith of the executors. In accordance with Khettra Moni Dasi v. Shyama Churn (2) I, therefore, direct Musammat Kariman's name to be added to the record as a respondent so that she may be able to safeguard her interests, it being understood worthless that she has no title to administer the property.

As appellant's claim has been for the most part rejected, I think she should pay Rs. 10 costs to the opposite party. The appeal is accepted to the above extent.

Appeal partially accepted.

(1) 21 C. 195.
(2) 21 C. 539.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 567 OF 1910.

November 30, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kensington.

MUHAMMAD AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat IMAM KHATUN—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Res judicata—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 158—Dismissal of suit under this section, effect of—Gift of land out of holding to absentee relation—Whether shamilat included—Intention of parties—Status of full proprietor.

The dismissal of a suit under section 158 of the old Civil Procedure Code operates as res judicata in respect of the right of the plaintiff to recover by any subsequent suit the property sued for in the first suit.

The ancestors of plaintiffs and defendants originally owned a joint holding in equal shares. The plaintiffs' branch, however, remained absentees for a long time. Their suit to recover their half share of the holding and of shamilat was dismissed in 1891. In 1897 defendants voluntarily gifted about 29 bighas to the plaintiffs out of the original holding. This area constituted about 1/5th share of the whole holding.

MUHAMMAD v. IMAM KHATUN.

On a subsequent partition of the shamilat land the area falling to the share of the holding was allotted to defendants without giving plaintiffs any share. Plaintiffs thereupon sued for possession of one-half share, of the shamilat area allotted to defendants:

Held, (1) that plaintiffs were not entitled to one-half share, as their suit for the shamilat was dismissed in 1891;

(2) that in considering whether the gift to plaintiffs in 1897 included the corresponding share of shamilat, what the Court had to look to was the intention of the parties and as the mutation proceedings showed that plaintiffs were restored to the position of full proprietors in respect of 1/5th share in the holding, they were entitled to 1/5th share in the shamilat allotted to the holding.

Ram Das v. Amir Shah, 113 P. R. 1901, distinguished.

Second appeal from the order of the Additional Divisional Judge, Shahpur Division, dated 14th July 1909, confirming that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Shahpur, dated the 31st May 1909, dismissing plaintiffs' claim.

Mr. Harris, for the Appellants.

Mr. Nanak Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The parties to this case are related as follows:

The original joint holding of the family was about 146 bighas of which plaintiffs were by pedigree entitled to a half share. Their branch, however, had long been absent from the village and settled some 20 kos away. In 1891 the plaintiffs' branch sued Fatteh for one-half of the holding together with rights in shamilat and this suit was dismissed on the 16th June 1891, under section 158 of the old Civil Procedure Code.

For the time being, this decree disposed of the plaintiffs' rights absolutely and there is no doubt that in any subsequent suit brought by the plaintiffs in respect of either the original holding or of shamilat the decree would be res judicata against them. The position has, however, been altered by the fact that on the 17th August 1897, the defendant's branch voluntarily gifted about 29 bighas to the plaintiffs out of the original holding of 146 bighas. This gift was incorporated in an unregistered deed and was formally attested in mutation proceedings on the 19th June 1898 with the full consent of defendant's branch notwithstanding the fact that plaintiffs' names had by that time been cut out of the record as being no longer, even in name, sharers in the joint holding. It will be observed that this gift, which seems to have been made in recognition of the fact that plaintiffs were entitled to something at any rate, covered almost exactly a one-fifth share of holding in place of the one-half share to which plaintiffs were entitled by pedigree.

The present suit has arisen out of the fact that about 75 bighas of shamilat area have now been allotted to the defendants on partition of the shamilat without giving plaintiffs any share. The plaintiffs have accordingly claimed one-half of the 75 bighas as by pedigree. The suit has been dismissed by both the lower Courts, but the judgment of the lower Appellate Court is brief and hardly discusses the legal aspects of the case.

The greater part of the judgment of the Munsif is taken up with the discussion of the question whether the present suit is res judicata in view of the previous suit of 1891. As the latter suit included shamilat rights, the Munsif's finding of res judicata is correct enough as far as it goes, but it does not go very far. The real point is that in 1897 the defendants surrendered to some extent the advantage which they had obtained in 1891, and of their own accord made a gift of certain land to the plaintiffs. What we have now to consider is whether that gift should be treated as restricted to the area given, or whether the understanding was that the plaintiffs should, to that extent, acquire a footing in the village as full proprietors with rights in the shamilat.

CHERIYONNI v. NHERA POYILE.

The defendants rely as to this on the well known ruling of Ram Das v. Amir Shah (1), which lays down that alienations of land are not to be understood as inclusive of shamilat rights unless these are specifically mentioned. That ruling should certainly be followed in all ordinary cases of alienations, but in the present case I think that what we have to look to is the intention of the parties. The gift of 1897 is really covered by the mutation proceedings and after examining them it seems to me clear enough that the defendant's branch intended that the plaintiffs should be restored to the position of full proprietors though not to the full extent indicated by their share as by pedigree. What defendants had to give was a portion of a joint holding and they did so without any sort of restrictive condition. They put the plaintiffs' branch into the same position as themselves as regards about 29 bighas or one-fifth of their holding.

Having done this act of grace, I do not think that the defendants are justified in now trying to put the plaintiffs on a lower position than themselves as regards the shamilat. The appeal is accordingly accepted and the plaintiffs are given a decree for one-fifth of the area in dispute as being approximately that proportion of the shamilat to which they are entitled in view of their position as owners of about one-fifth of the original joint holding. There is a good deal to be said on both sides in the matter and the plaintiffs ought to have raised the question in partition proceedings instead of waiting till the partition had been effected. The parties will accordingly pay their own costs throughout.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 113 P. R. 1901.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1043 OF 1910.

November 15, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar.

CHERIYONNI alias ANINHAT MOOTHAVAR, STYLED PAYYORAMALA KOTHE RAMAN—APPELLANT

versus

NHERA POYILE PARKUM MINJER PACKER AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Personal covenant—Suit on mortgage—Withdrawal of prayer for sale of hypotheca—Second Appeal, value of, is determined by original value of suit.

A deed of mortgage provided as follows: "If I fail to pay the amount at the prescribed time I agree to your realising principal and interest ... ... by causing sale of my jenmam and all other rights in the properties hypothecated and to pay the deficit, if any, in person." The mortgagee sued on the document and in the course of the trial withdrew the prayer for sale.

Held, (1) that the plaintiff was not entitled to a personal decree for the amount sued for;

Madappa v. Ram Krishna, 13 Bom. L. R. 698; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 1; 15 C W. N. 962; 14 C. L. J. 245 35 B. 327; 12 Ind. Cas 42, distinguished.

(2) that a second appeal lay to the High Court, notwithstanding the withdrawal of the prayer for sale, as the question of whether a second appeal lies is determined by the nature of the suit as originally framed.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of North Malabar, in A. S. No. 222 of 1909, presented against that of the District Munsif of Quilandy, in O. S. No. 856 of 1907.

Mr J. L. Rozario, for the Appellant.

Mr. T. Madhavan Nair, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The first defendant, a Stani, executed a hypothecation-bond in favour of the plaintiff for a debt borrowed for the purpose of paying arrears of Government revenue on properties belonging to the Satnom. The document, Exhibit A., after setting out the purpose for which the loan was taken says: "I shall pay you the said sum of Rs. 200 before 30th Makaram 1078 next and receive back this deed . . . . . If I fail to pay the amount at the prescribed time, I agree to your realising the principal with interest accruing at 15 per cent. a year from the prescribed time so long as it remains unpaid by causing sale of my jenmam and all other rights in the properties hypothecated, and to pay the deficit, if any, in person . . . . " It will be observed that the parties depart from the phraseology ordinarily employed in hypothecation documents, that the amount may be recovered both from the property hypothecated and from the debtor personally and provide that the debt is to be recovered by sale of the hypotheca in the first instance and only the deficit, if any, from the debtor. The debt was borrowed for a purpose which would justify charging it on Stanom property and the purpose is recited in the document.

There is, no doubt, a general covenant to pay the debt within the time specified, which would ordinarily render the covenantor personally liable but the specific stipulation relating to the creditor's rights in case of default shows, in our opinion, that the plaintiff was bound to proceed against the hypotheca before claiming a personal decree against the first defendant. In the plaint he asked for recovery of the debt by sale of the mortgaged property, but subsequently gave up that claim. We must hold that he is not entitled to a personal decree against the first defendant. The case of Madappa v. Rama Krishna (1), relied on by Mr. Madhavan Nair, affords him no help. The Privy Council in that case merely held, on the construction of a particular document, that there was a covenant to pay interest for a disputed period.

Mr. Madhavan Nair also raised a preliminary objection that no second appeal lies in this case, as the prayer for sale of the hypotheca was withdrawn and the amount sued for is less than Rs. 500. But it is the nature of the suit as originally framed that determines the question whether a second appeal is properly maintainable. We reverse the decrees of the Courts below and dismiss the suit with costs throughout.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 13 Bom. L. R. 698; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 1; 15 C. W. N. 962; 14 C. L. J. 245; 35 B. 327; 12 Ind. Cas. 42.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1087 OF 1910.

November 16 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar.

POLINA ACHANNA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

MADIPATI VENKATARAMANA—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Madras Rent Recovery Act (VIII of 1865*)*, ss. 10, 12, 41, 49, 70—Ejection of tenant by illegal order of Revenue Court—Suit for possession and damages under section 12—Suit for damages alone maintainable—'Proceedings', meaning of.

A ryot, who was ejected from his land by an alleged illegal order of a Revenue Court passed under section 10 of Madras Act VIII of 1865, sued the landlord for possession and for damages under section 12 of the Act:

Held, that the suit for possession was not maintainable, but that the suit for damages was.

The expression 'proceedings' in section 49 of the Act is not restricted to proceedings taken by a public Officer or Court.

Raja Cheli Kani Venkatagopala Rayon Garu v. Narayansami Reddi, 27 M. 210 and Velagaleti Ramakrishnaya v. Suramani Bapaya Appa Row, 27 M. 430, referred to.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of Godavari, in A. S. No. 116 of 1908, presented against the decree of the Head Assistant Collector of Rajahmundry, dated 1st June 1908, in Summary Suit No. 3 of 1906.

Mr. P. Narayana Murthy, for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. V. Seshagiri Aiyar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The suit in this case was instituted under section 12 of Act VIII of 1865 for recovery of possession of the land from which the plaintiff, a ryot, was ejected by the land-holder in pursuance of an order obtained under section 10 of Act VIII of 1865, in consequence of the plaintiff's failure to accept a patta which he was directed to accept by the Revenue Court. The plaintiff claimed also damages sustained by him in consequence of the unlawful eviction. The order of eviction was passed by the Revenue Court on the 20th January 1906 and was carried out on the 22nd contrary to the provisions of section 70 of the Act, which enacts that the tenant shall not be evicted before the expiration of thirty days from the date of the order. The District Court held that the suit was not maintainable under section 12 of the Act and in so holding it was right, as that section only provides that no tenant shall be ejected without an order under section 10 or section 41. But the learned Vakil for the appellants contends that as the eviction was unlawful, the suit is maintainable in so far as the claim for damages is concerned, under section 49 of the Act, which provides that "any person deeming himself aggrieved by any proceedings taken under colour of this Act shall be at liberty to seek redress by filing a summary suit for damages before the Collector." This contention must prevail. Mr. Seshagiri Iyer, for the respondent, contends that section 49 is not applicable to the case, as the expression "proceedings" must be understood to mean "proceedings taken by a public officer or a Court," and no proceedings of a public officer are impeached by the plaintiff as improper, and he refers to section 76 which speaks of "a judgment of a Collector in proceedings under this Act." We cannot accept this argument. Section 76 shows no more than that these are "proceedings" under the Act in which Collector may pass "a judgment." It does not show that there are no proceedings in which he would not do so. The Act authorises the land-holder also to take several proceedings without resort to the Collector. He can tender pattas and distrain property for arrears of rent on his own responsibility, and he may be guilty of various illegalities and irregularities in doing so. He may distrain property when there are no arrears, or without properly tendering a patta which the tenant is bound to accept. He may distrain without making a demand of the arrears as required by law. He may act in violation of the various provisions relating to distraint. Suits have been entertained in all these cases: See Rajah Chelikani Venkatagopala Rayon Garu v. Narayanasami Reddi (1), Velagaleti Ramakrishnayya v. Suramani Bapayya Appa Row(2). We must hold that the claim for damages is maintainable. We reverse the decrees of the lower Courts and remand the suit to the Court of first instance for fresh disposal according to law, in so far as it relates to the claim for damages. Each party will bear his own costs throughout up to date.

Decree reversed.

(1) 27 M. 210.
(2) 27 M. 430.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1782 OF 1910.

November 16, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar.

SUBIHA PILLAY AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

VELAPPA NAICKEN AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Vendor and purchaser—Contract for sale—Subsequent sale to other vendees—Specific performance, suit for, by first contracting party—Decree, form of—Subsequent vendees to execute conveyance to plaintiff—Absence of prayer in plaint—Trust—Trusts Act (II of 1882), s. 91—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 33.

Where it is agreed to sell property to one person and it is subsequently sold by the vendor in contravention of the agreement, and the first purchaser brings a suit for specific performance of the contract of sale, the proper form of the decree to be passed in case of plaintiff's success, is not to declare the subsequent sale void, but to direct the subsequent purchaser to execute a conveyance to plaintiff. The Court has power under Order XLI, rule 33, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, to pass such a decree even though the plaint does not contain a prayer to that effect.

The subsequent purchaser in such a case is in law a trustee of the property for the person who has a prior agreement for sale.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of Coimbatore, in A. S. No. 67 of 1910, presented against that of the District Munsif of Udamalpet, in O. S. No. 591 of 1908.

Hon'ble Mr. P. S Sivaswami Iyer, (Advocate-General), for the Appellants.

Mr. T. R. Ramchandra Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The suit is for specific performance of an agreement to sell certain land, entered into between the plaintiff and the first defendant. The latter subsequently sold the land to the second and fourth defendants. The plaintiff asked for a declaration that the sale in favour of defendants Nos. 2 to 4 was void as against him, and for a direction that the first defendant to execute a conveyance of the land in the plaintiff's favour and this is the decree that has been passed by the District Court We accept the finding of the Judge that the plaintiff is entitled to specific performance. The sale to the defendants Nos. 2 to 4 is good in law subject to the plaintiff's rights. Section 91 of the Trusts Act enacts that in such a case the subsequent purchaser is a trustee of the property in law for the person who has a prior agreement for sale. The proper course in such a case would be to direct a conveyance to be executed by the subsequent purchaser. We believe that the practice generally in the Mofussil Courts is to declare the subsequent sale void and to direct the vendor to execute a conveyance. We are not prepared, in the face of the existing practice, to accede to the appellants' contention that the suit should be dismissed on the ground that there is no prayer in the plaint for the execution of a conveyance by defendants Nos. 2 to 4. We have the power, if necessary, to direct the subsequent purchaser to execute the conveyance: See Order XLI, rule 33, of the Code of Civil Procedure. We, however, consider it unnecessary to do so in this case, as there are difficulties arising from the particular facts of the case.

We dismiss the second appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 49 OF 1910.

December 2, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Johnstone and Mr. Justice Shah Din.

PARTAB SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat PANJABU AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Succession—Daughter—Self-acquired property—Collaterals—Burden of proof—Goriwal Jats of Ludhiana District.

The burden of proving that the collaterals of the propositus are entitled to succeed to his self-acquired property in preference to his daughter lies on the collaterals.

Among Goriwal Jats of the Ludhiana District a special custom, contrary to general custom, prevails whereby daughters are excluded by collaterals of the 4th degree as regards succession to self-acquired property.

Musammat Ishar Kuar v. Raja Singh, 9 Ind. Cas. 608; 29 P. R. 1911; 94 P. L. R. 1911; 124 P. W. R. 1911, followed.

Nawab-ud din v. Kami, 12 P. R. 1901; 77 P. L. R. 1901; Rajo v. Karam Baksh, 13 P. W. R. 1908; 11 P. R. 1908; 92 P. L. R. 1908, distinguished.

The fact that a daughter is in possession of the deceased's self-acquired property under a mutation order is not material except perhaps as regards burden of proof.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Ludhiana Division, dated the 1st November 1911, affirming that of the Additional District Judge, Ludhiana, dated the 31st July 1909, dismissing plaintiff's claim.

Lala Lajpat Rai, for the Appellants.

The Hon'ble Mr. Muhammnd Shafi, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The parties to this case are Goriwal Jats of Tahsil Jagraon, District Ludhiana. Plaintiffs as reversioners claim the property left by one Dhannu, while defendants Nos. 1 to 3 are Dhannu's married daughters, as per pedigree table:—

The other defendants are (1) ten plaintiffs in a connected case with which we are not now concerned, and (2) eight mortgagees for the property.

Plaintiffs claimed by right of inheritance on the contention that among Goriwal Jats of Ludhiana daughters are excluded from inheritance by collaterals in the 4th degree, whether the property is self-acquired or not. [The first Court talks of collaterals in the 10th degree and the lower Appellate Court of the 5th degree, but clearly plaintiffs are in the 4th degree, Jogi, being the common ancestor in this case.]

The first Court found that plaintiffs are collaterals of Dhannu as stated above, and this point need not be mentioned again. It then went on to hold that the property in suit was acquired by Diwana and not by Jogi and was, therefore, not ancestral qua plaintiffs. Lastly, remarking that in the Punjab generally daughters succeed to self acquisition in preference to remote collaterals, the Court expressed the opinion that plaintiffs had proved no special custom to the contrary, notwithstanding the entry in their favour in the Riwaj-i-am, and that in equity, collaterals in the "tenth degree" should not be given preference over daughters in such cases.

The suit having been thus dismissed, plaintiffs appealed to the learned Divisional Judge, who upheld the first Court's decision. He laid the onus upon plaintiffs, and this was, no doubt, right enough; and he proceeded to rule that the Riwaj-i-am entry was not sufficient to shift the onus and that the one decided case on the point among these Goriwal Jats, namely, Musammat Ishar Kuar v. Raja Singh (1), decided by the District Judge, Ludhiana, in 1908, did not help the plaintiffs.

The plaintiffs have come up here with a further appeal, which we think must succeed. The lower Appellate Court's judgment was delivered on 1st November 1909 and the appeal against it was laid before a Judge of this Court on 22nd June 1910, who, going upon the general custom of the Province in regard to succession of daughters to non-ancestral property, remarked that, if the property was non-ancestral the decision of the lower Appellate Court was, in his opinion, correct, but that it might be that after all the property was ancestral. This expression of opinion, of course, does not bind us now, the more especially as the Judge had not the benefit of considering the judgment of this Court (Division Bench) in Musammat Ishar Kaur's case (1) mentioned above, which came up here, on first appeal. Then, after an exhaustive examination of the evidence and a careful local inquiry by a Commissioner, it was laid down that among Goriwal Jats of Ludhiana there was a special custom contrary to general custom whereby daughters were excluded by collaterals. In that case the collaterals were related in the 3rd degree, but no stress was laid upon this circumstance, and it is apparent that the conclusion would have been the same had the degree of relationship been the 4th. See Ishar Kaur v. Raja Singh (1) [decided on 13th February 1911, and heard on 6th February 1911, 5 or 6 months after the case now before us first came before the Judge in Chambers.]

(1) 9 Ind. Cas. 608; 29 P. R. 1911; 94 P. L. R. 1911; 124 P. W. R. 1911.

It seems clear to us that we must follow that ruling unless it can be effectually distinguished. Mr. Shafi, besides noticing the difference of one degree in nearness of relationship, takes three points in this connection. First, he points out that there the collaterals were in possession under a mutation, whereas here the daughters have this advantage; next, that there the plaintiff was not a daughter but a daughter's daughter (really a sister's daughter) and, thirdly, that there the original acquirers were two whole brothers, deceased being descendant of one brother and plaintiffs of the other. We cannot see that the first of these points is material except perhaps as regards burden of proof, which we have conceded lies on plaintiffs; and the facts as regards the third point are precisely the same as the present case. The second point alone thus needs examination.

It is true that the plaintiff in Musammat Ishar Kaur's case (1) was a sister's daughter, i.e., daughter's daughter of the penultimate male-holder, but nevertheless the dictum that the daughter herself was not entitled to succeed as a full owner was not obiter, for it was part of plaintiff's case, strongly urged by her learned Counsel, Mr. Shafi, that she was entitled in preference to the collaterals because her mother was by custom entitled to succeed as a full owner. This made it necessary for this Court to consider and decide the question of the relative rights of a daughter and collaterals, and the appeal was decided against the plaintiff expressly on the ground that her mother, even considered as a daughter of a male-holder, was excluded by the collaterals and so a fortiori she was herself excluded. The local inquiry and the investigation in Court were all directed to the ascertainment of the rights of daughters of male holders as such. It is clear, then, that the case cannot be effectually distinguished from the present case.

And we do not think Mr. Shafi has succeeded in showing us that the ruling in that case was unsound. He refers us to section 23 of Rattigan's Digest, but that only states the general custom and here there is, for reasons fully given in the other case which we need not repeat here, a peculiar special custom followed by this section of Jats. Then he points to the Hindu law under which a daughter is an heir but a daughter's daughter is not; but we cannot see how this helps matters when a special custom is proved. Lastly, he quotes a number of rulings, see below* concerning which we offer the following remarks:—

Nawab-ud-din v. Kami (2) is a case of Malak Rajputs of Ludhiana city, and a gift to the daughter had been made. No doubt the Riwaj-i-am was the same as that now before us, but here the tribe is different and there was no gift; and there the learned Judges do not seem to have noticed the remark at page 40 of Mr. Gordon Walker's Volume on Customary Law in Ludhiana, para. 79, to the effect that in such matters no distinction is made between ancestral and self acquired property.

Rajo v. Karam Bakhsh (3) is a case of Ratal Jats of Tahsil Lahore, in which a bequest to a daughter made in presence of collaterals in the 8th degree was upheld.

The other rulings are quoted in order to bring to our notice the warnings given by several learned Judges in them of the danger in relying too much upon statements of custom made by male to the prejudice of females. We are well aware of the danger; but we do not see how the warnings really affect this case. The ruling we elect to follow was based on a large mass of evidence which is not in any way weakened by any consideration of the danger of excessive reliance upon a Riwaj-i-am.

(2) 12 P. R. 1901; 77 P. L. R. 1901.

(3) 11 P. R. 1908, 92 P. L. R. 1908, 13 P. W. R. 1908.

Nawab-ud-din* v. Kami, 12 P. R. 1901; 77 P. L. R. 190 ; Rajo v. Karam Bakhsh, 11 P. R. 1908; 92 P. L. R. 1908; 13 P. W. R. 1908; Maula Bakhsh v. Muhammad Bakhsh, 54 P. R. 1906; Sayad Rahim Shah v. Sayad Husain Shah, 102 P. R. 1901; 119 P. L. R. 1901; Har Narain v. Musammat Deoki, 24 P. R. 1893.

For these reasons, we accept this appeal, and, setting aside the judgments and decrees of the Courts below, we decree plaintiff's claim, but in view of the facts that the ruling we follow was not delivered until February 1911 and that the case, apart from that ruling, was a doubtful and difficult one, we direct that the parties do bear their own costs.

Appeal accepted.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 16 OF 1911.

November 22, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim.

MULLASERI GOPALA MENON—APPELLANT

versus

KRISHEKI KOVILAKNATH MANAVIKRAMAN, alias ANUJAN RAJA AVERGAL—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 273—Execution of decree—Application to execute decree already under attachment, whether an application in accordance with law—Limitation—Decree by first Court reversed on appeal—Restitution, whether enforceable in execution—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 144.

An application for execution of a decree which was dismissed on the ground that the decree itself was already under attachment, is an application in accordance with law so as to save limitation.

Thuchakovil Unni Koya v. Arapayil Pathuti Umma, (1911) 1 M. W. N. 187, 9 Ind. Cas. 786, 9 M. L. T. 312, 21 M. L. J. 577, explained and distinguished.

The right of restitution arising out of the reversal of a decree of an Appellate Court is, under section 144, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, enforceable in execution and no separate suit lies for the purpose.

Appeal against the order of the Subordinate Judge at Palghat, in A. S. No. 761 of 1910, presented against the order of the District Munsif at Alatur, in Miscellaneous Petition No. 1112 of 1910.

Dr. S. Swaminathan, for the Petitioner.

Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The first question argued before us relates to limitation and arises upon the facts. One Seshan Pattar was sued in the District Munsif's Court at Alatur in 1904 by the present appellant, and the latter recovered a decree for payment of money, but the decree was reversed by the Subordinate Judge's Court of Palghat on the 3rd September 1904. Before the judgment of the Appellate Court, however, was passed the appellant had executed the original decree against Seshan Pattar. Then it appears the assignor of the respondent in this appeal instituted a suit in 1906 in the District Munsif's Court at Alatur and attached before judgment the right of Seshan Pattar to the restitution of the property recovered from him by the appellant under the decree of the lower Appellate Court dated 3rd September 1904. The application for execution which the District Munsif found would save limitation, was made by Seshan Pattar's sons on the 30th August 1907. At the time of the application the decree had been attached, as already stated, and the question is whether the application which was dismissed on the ground that the decree was under attachment and could not, therefore, be executed can be regarded as an application according to law as a step-in-aid of execution. The learned Counsel for the appellant has strongly relied in support of his contention that the application was not in accordance with law on the case of Thuchakovil Unni Koya v. Aropayil Pathuti Umma (1). But that was a case in which the attachment was under the second paragraph of section 273 of the Code of 1882. But the provisions of this paragraph cannot be applied to the present case, for it is the same Court, that is, the District Munsif's Court of Alatur which passed the decree sought to be executed and which has to execute the decree of the Subordinate Judge's Court of Palghat which is under attachment. This case would rather seem to be covered by the first part of the penultimate paragraph of section 273, which does not direct stay of the execution of the attached decree. Even if that provision does not apply, the only effect of the attachment would be to prevent alienation. Nor is there any thing in the terms of the order passed on the application for attachment which forbids the decree-holder from proceeding with the execution. We, therefore, hold that the application of the 30th August 1907 was in accordance with law.

(1) (1911) 1 M.W.N. 187; 9 Ind. Cas. 786; 9 M.L. T. 312; 21 M. L. J. 577.

The second point argued by Dr. Swaminathan is that a right of restitution arising out of a reversing decree cannot be enforced in execution. But section 14 of the present Civil Procedure Code, which governs the question, makes it quite clear not only that such a right can be enforced in execution; but that no suit shall lie for the purpose.

The result is that the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1120 OF 1910.

November 30, 1911.

Present:—Sir Arthur Reid, KT., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Rattigan.

HAZARA SINGH AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

HARNAM SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Alienation—Right of collateral in the eleventh degree to contest alienation—Right of succession wider than the right to control alienation.

In the absence of a special custom in his favour, a collateral of the alienor in the 11th degree has no right to object to the alienation.

Arur Singh v. Musammat Lachmi, 75 P. R. 1898 and Khazan Singh v. Relu, 35 P. R. 1906, not followed.

Natha Singh v. Mohan Singh, 93 P. R. 1906: 163 P. L. R. 1906; Hira v. Karam Kaur, 23 P. R. 1907; Sawan Singh v. Harnaman, 162 P. L. R. 1901; Hardassing v. Buta, 94 P. L. R. 1903; Gujar v. Sham Das, 107 P. R. 1887; Mangal v. Chetu, 20 P. R. 1890, relied upon.

The right to succeed, where escheat is the alternative to succession, is far more extensive than the right to control alienation. There is nothing inconsistent in the proposition that a distant collateral, who cannot control alienation, may still have a right superior to the Crown.

The mere fact that the property in respect of which the right of control has been asserted, has descended from the common ancestor of the alienor and the claimant does not, in the absence of a special custom in favour of the latter, entitle him to deprive the alienor of the right to select his successor or representative in estate, where the claimant is a very remote relation. The latter succeeds only to so much of the property as has not been disposed of by the alienor.

Dula Singh v. Wazir Singh, 69 P. R. 1887, relied upon.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Jullundur, dated the 3rd August 1910, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Jullundur, dated the 23rd December 1909, decreeing plaintiff's claim.

Rai Sahib Pandit Sheo Narain and Lala Dharam Chand, for the Appellants.

Rai Bahadur Bakhshi Sohan Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal and No. 1121 of 1910 can be disposed of together, the two suits having been dismissed, on the appeal of the defendants, by the lower Appellate Court on the ground that the plaintiffs' collaterals in the 11th degree of a mortgagor, had no right to control his alienation of his ancestral property.

The authorities cited on either side are Muhammad v. Jahan Khan (1), in which it was held that a well established rule, permitting male collaterals in the tenth degree from a deceased proprietor to contest an alienation by his widow to his sister's son, prevailed among Muhammadan Jats of Gujar Khan Tahsil Rawalpindi.

Dula Singh v. Wazir Singh (2), in which it was held that the collaterals in the tenth degree of a childless Jat landowner of the Batala Tahsil, Gurdaspur, had not discharged the burden of proving that they could control his power of alienating ancestral property.

Powell, J., said:—"A very remote relation may be entitled to the succession rather than that the property should escheat; but it is a well recognized rule that relations, at any rate beyond the fifth, or, possibly, sixth or seventh degree, must show that by custom they are entitled to intervene."

Gujar v. Sham Das (3), in which Plowden, S. J., said:—"It has been found as a rule that collaterals beyond the fifth or at most the seventh degree of relationship are not recognized as entitled to control the action of a sonless proprietor in respect of disposition."

The parties were Sus Jats of the Hoshiarpore District, and it was held that the transferee had not discharged the burden of proving that a grand nephew of the transferor could not contest the transfer.

(1) 119 P. R. 1883.
(2) 69 P. R. 1887.
(3) 107 P. R. 1887.

Mangal v. Chetu (4), in which it was held that among Bajwah Jats of Mauza Babiar, Tahsil Raya, Sialkot, collaterals in the tenth degree could not object to an alienation by a childless proprietor.

Allah Bakhsh v. Buta (5), in which it was held, following the principle laid down by the Full Bench in 1887, that the burden of proving affirmatively that they were entitled to challenge a sale by a sonless Ghuman Jat of Mauza Kala, Sialkot Tahsil, lay on the plaintiffs who had embraced the Mahomedan religion, lived in another village and were collaterals in the eighth degree of the vendor, the vendee being his collateral in the ninth degree, and that they had not discharged the burden.

Arur Singh v. Musammat Lachmi (6), in which it was held that among Dhillon Jats of the Lahore District, collaterals in the ninth degree of the alienor could object to an alienation.

The Division Bench said, referring to the dictum of Plowden, S. J., in Ralla v. Budha (7), at page 230, that the rule in favour of control by collaterals of alienation had been recognized thoroughly since the passing of the Full Bench decision in 1887, above cited, and continued:—"This being the case, all agnates who are heirs by virtue of their relationship have presumably the right of objecting to any act which injures their right of succession and it is difficult to see how an arbitrary line can be drawn in favour of agnates up to a certain degree, and those beyond excluded from the benefit of the presumption."

Khazan Singh v. Relu (8), in which it was held, that among the agricultural tribes of the Punjab there was no definite limit of propinquity up to which kinsmen are to be presumed to have the right to impeach alienations, without consideration or necessity, of ancestral land by a sonless proprietor, and beyond which they are to be presumed not to have it, and that collaterals in the tenth decree of the alienor had this right.

Natha Singh v. Mohan Singh (9), in which it was held that the onus of proving that among Ghuman Jats of the Sialkot Tahsil, collaterals in eighth degree could contest an alienation by a childless proprietor of his ancestral land was on the collaterals, who had failed to discharge it. The Division Bench said:—"It is not necessary to discuss in detail the instances cited on behalf of the defendants. * * * They consist of a number of cases in which it was held that collaterals of a higher degree of remoteness were held incapable of suing, and their value lies in the fact that they show that a numerical limit beyond which collaterals are not competent to sue is fully recognized * * * and they emphasize what has been noted in several rulings of this Court and what is undoubtedly the case that a right to succeed to an estate after the death of the owner does not necessarily infer the right to control its disposal by that owner during his life-time, even under the customary law.

Hira v. Karam Kaur (10), in which it was held that, among Hindu Bhat Jats of the Raya Tahsil, Sialkot, his collaterals in the eighth degree were not entitled by custom to contest an alienation of ancestral property by a sonless proprietor, as being made without necessity or consideration.

Sawan v. Harnaman (11), in which it was held, in a case between Jat Sudas of the Jullundur District, that collaterals in the 10th degree had not discharged the burden of establishing their right to control alienations by a childless proprietor.

Hardas Singh v. Buta (12), in which it was held that among Bajwah Jats of a Tahsil, other than Raya, in the Sialkot District, collaterals in the 11th degree could not interfere with a gift to a maternal uncle.

In some of the cases above cited the provisions of the Riwaj-i-am affected the decision, but the weight of authority is, in our opinion, very strongly opposed to be plaintiffs' alleged right to interfere with the alienations in suit, in the absence of evidence of special custom in his favour. It is true that Arur Singh v. Musammat Lachmi (6) and Khazan Singh v. Relu (8), to which Chatterjee, J., for whose opinion we have very great respect, was a party, indicated a tendency to admit the right of the remotest collaterals to control alienations but our brother Robertson, a party to the later of these two judgments, was also a party to Natha Singh

(4) 20 P. R. 1890.
(5) 79 P. R. 1891.
(6) 75 P. R. 1898.
(7) 50 P. R. 1893.
(8) 35 P. R. 1906.
(9) 93 P. R. 1906; 163 P. L. R. 1906.
(10) 23 P. R. 1907.
(11) 162 P. L. R. 1901.
(12) 94 P. L. R. 1903.

v. Mohan Singh (9) and Hira v. Karam Kaur (10), above cited.

The authorities confirm us in the opinion that the right to succeed, where escheat is the alternative to succession, is far more extensive than the right to control alienation, and there is, in our opinion, nothing inconsistent in the proposition that a distant collateral who cannot control alienation may still have a right superior to the Crown. The mere fact that the property, in respect of which the right of control has been asserted, has descended from the common ancestor of the alienor and the claimant does not, in the absence of evidence of a special custom in favour of the latter, entitle him to deprive the alienor of the right to select his successor or representative in estate, where the claimant is a very remote relation; the latter succeeds only to so much of the property as has not been disposed of by the alienor. In these cases no special custom has been established or even seriously asserted.

For these reasons, we dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 11 OF 1911.

November 28, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim.

KATCHALAI MUDALI—APPELLANT

versus

V. KUPPANNA MUDALI—RESPONDENT.

Mortgage--Prior and puisne mortgagees—Suit by second mortgagee—Joinder of first mortgagee as party—Decree for sale—Non-reservation of rights of first mortgagee, effect of—Whether bars first mortgagee's right to enforce his mortgage.

A decree in a mortgage suit, brought by a second mortgagee impleading a prior mortgagee as party defendant, which directed the sale of the property without reserving the rights of the prior mortgagee, does not, where the latter's right has been admitted, bar a suit by the prior mortgagee for enforcement of his mortgage right. The decree in such suit does not intend that the sale of property is to be in defeasance of the first mortgagee's rights.

Arunachella Reddi v. Perumal Reddi, 9 M. L. T. 90; 21 M. L. J. 635; 9 Ind. Cas. 285, referred to.

Sri Gopal v. Pirthi Singh, 24 A. 429; 29 I. A. 118; 4 Bom. L. R. 827; 6 C. W. N. 889, explained and distinguished.

It is not necessary, in a suit by a puisne mortgagee that the holders of prior mortgages should be made parties and questions relating to their mortgage determined.

Singam Marwari v. Barhamdeo Prasad, 1 C. L. J. 337 at p. 348, referred to.

Appeal against the decree of the District Court of North Arcot, in A. S. No. 228 of 1909, presented against the decree of the District Munsif of Sholinghur, in O. S. No. 1254 of 1907.

Mr. K. C. Desikachariar for the Appellant.

Mr. T. V. Mathukrishna, Iyer, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Here the appellant is a puisne mortgagee and the suit is instituted by the respondent, who is the assignee of a prior mortgagee, for enforcement of that mortgage. It is argued on behalf of the appellant that the decree in the prior suit instituted by the appellant for enforcement of his mortgage which directed the property to be sold in satisfaction of the appellant's mortgage without expressly reserving the right of the respondent, who had been added as a party defendant to that suit, was a bar to the present action. But we do not think there is force in this contention. In the previous suit, the appellant, who was the plaintiff, admitted the present respondent's mortgage and there was no dispute about its priority over the appellant's mortgage. The question at issue in that case was something else. No doubt, the decree made no provision for the respondent's mortgage but that does not necessarily mean that the sale of the property was to be in defeasance of his rights. See Arunachella Reddi v. Perumal Reddi (1). It is not necessary, in a suit by a puisne mortgagee that the holders of prior mortgages should be made parties, and the questions relating to their mortgages be determined: See Singam Marwari v. Barhmadeo Prasad (2).

The learned Vakil for the appellant has, however, strongly relied on the case of Sri Gopal v. Pirthi Singh (3). But, in that case, the object of the suit was to obtain a determination of the rights of the different incumbrancers on the property, and one of the parties failed to set up his alleged incumbrances. It was, therefore, held that he could not enforce it in a subsequent suit. The present case, as we have pointed out, is quite different.

(1) 9 M. L. T. 90; 21 M. L. J. 635; 9 Ind. Cas. 285.

(2) 1 C. L. J. 331 at p. 348.

(3) 24 A. 429; 29 I. A. 118; 4 Bom. L. R. 827; 6 C. W. N. 889.

The appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 283 OF 1910.

July 5, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

DEBI DAS MARWARI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

THE CHAIRMAN OF MOTIHARI MUNICIPALITY—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Municipality—Permanent lessee under Municipality—Exemption from payment of rates—Contract—Onus of proof.

A permanent lessee under a Municipality is not as such exempted from payment of Municipal rates. The case must be governed by the contract. If there is no provision in the lease for any exemption, the lessee must pay the rates which he is under a statutory obligation to pay.

The burden is upon the lessee to establish an exemption from the statute.

Mohanand Sahai v. Said-un-nissa, 8 C. L. J. 525; 12 C. W. N. 154, relied upon.

Appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge of Mozaffarpur, dated July 24th, 1909, reversing that of the Munsif of Motihari, dated March 22nd, 1909.

Babu Sasi Sekhar Bose, for the Appellant.

Babus Lachmi Narain Singh and Satya Charan Singh, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal on behalf of the plaintiff in a suit for declaration that he is not liable to pay Municipal rates under the Bengal Municipal Act. The plaintiff is a lessee under the Municipality and his contention is that he has been exempted from payment of Municipal rates by the proper authority. The Court of first instance decreed the suit, upon appeal the Subordinate Judge has dismissed it. The Courts below have discussed the question whether the plaintiff has been validly exempted from the payment of Municipal rates by a legally constituted authority. In our opinion, no such question arises or requires consideration. The case for the plaintiff is that his rights are regulated by the contract between the parties. That contract makes him permanent lessee under the Municipality. He is liable thereunder to pay for the use and occupation of the land at a specified rate. That rate, again, is liable to be enhanced after a prescribed period. It is further provided that the land is let out for building purposes but restriction is imposed as to the use of the building to be erected. There is also a provision by which the Municipality is entitled to exercise a right of pre-emption. There is no provision in the lease, however, to the effect that the plaintiff will be exempted from the payment of Municipal rates after the erection of buildings on the land demised. The plaintiff is clearly under a statutory liability to pay the rates demanded from him and the burden is upon him to establish an exemption from the statute: [Mohanand Sahai v. Said-un-nissa(1)]. If it was intended by the parties that the plaintiff should be exempted from the payment of Municipal rates, there ought to have been an express covenant in the lease to that effect. In the absence of such a provision we are unable to hold, that under the terms of the contract between the parties, the plaintiff has been exempted from the payment of Municipal rates which he is under a statutory obligation to pay to the Corporation. The conclusion follows that there is no foundation for the claim of the plaintiff and his suit has been rightly dismissed.

The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

This decision, it is conceded, will govern the other appeals, namely, Nos. 289, 290 and 291 of 1910 which are also dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 8 C. L. J. 525; 12 C. W. N. 154.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 810 AND 826 OF 1910.

November 16, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar.

RANGASAMY PILLAI AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

MATHU CHIDAMBARA GURUKAL AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887)

UJAL SINGH v. DEBYA SINGH SARDAR.

Sch. II, Arts 13, 18—Small Cause Suit—Claim for temple emoluments—Takid granting—Emoluments—Trusts—Suit for emoluments and neividhanam—Jurisdiction of Small Cause Court.

A suit for temple emoluments, secured to the plaintiff by the author of a trust by a takid, which was registered on the same day as the instrument of trust itself, both in reality forming part of the same transaction, falls within the purview of Articles 13 and 18 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act; and is not cognizable by a Small Cause Court.

Where a claim for neivedhanam, or rice allowance, is sued for along with a claim for such emoluments, the whole suit is excluded from the cognizance of a Small Cause Court and is triable as a regular suit.

Second appeals against the decree of the District Court of Madura, in A. S. No. 336 of 1909, presented against the decree of the District Munsif of Madura, in O. S. No. 616 of 1907.

Mr. V. C. Seshachariar, for the Respondents.

Mr. M. Narayanswami Iyer, for the Appellants.

JUDGMENT.—One of the claims sued for is the amount due to the plaintiff as hereditary Pujari of the temple. The emoluments are secured to the plaintiff by the author of the trust by a takid which was registered on the same day as the instrument treating the trust itself, and both were in reality part of the same transaction. The claim would fall within the purview of Article 13, and apparently also of Article 18 of the schedule to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. The Munsif was quite wrong in holding that the claim for neivedhanam, or rice allowance would not be tried by him on the regular side. The plaintiff having sued for it along with the emoluments due to him under the takid, the whole suit was triable as a regular suit. The District Judge was wrong in holding that no appeal lay to his Court.

We reverse the decree of the lower Appellate Court and the decree of the Munsif in so far as it relates to neivedhanam. We remand the appeal to the lower Appellate Court for disposal according to law. The lower Appellate Court will dispose of claim both to the salary and to the neivedhanam.

It will either itself record the evidence on the question of the plaintiff's right to the neivedhanam or direct the District Munsif to do so.

The costs of the second appeals will abide the result.

Cause remanded.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2205 OF 1908.

November 29, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Stephen and Mr. Justice Coxe.

UJAL SINGH DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

DEBYA SINGH SARDAR—PLAINTIFF AND THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL—RESPONDENT.

Central Provinces Land Revenue Act (XVIII of 1881), s. 83—Suit for amendment of Settlement Record—Party—Whether Government necessary party.

The plaintiff brought a suit for a declaration that he was the maintenance grant-holder of a certain Mauzah and for the amendment of the Settlement papers in which he had been described as a ticcadar. In the Courts below he obtained the declaration but he omitted to give notice of the suit to Government:

Held, that, the words of section 83 of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act are imperative, and it was the duty of the plaintiff to give notice of his suit to Government.

Appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge of Sumbalpore, dated June 1st, 1908, affirming that of the Munsif of the same place, dated February 28th, 1908.

Babu Dwarka Nath Chakravarti, and Mr. G. Sircar, for the Appellant.

Babu Jogendra Chandra Ghose, for the Respondent.

Babu Ram Charan Mitra, Senior Government Pleader, for the Secretary of State.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the plaintiff brought a suit for a declaration that he was the maintenance grant holder of a certain mauzah in perpetuity on payment of a jama of Rs. 15 per year. His grievance was that he had been entered in the Settlement Record as a ticcadar of a village with a protected status at an annual jama of Rs. 220. In his original plaint, he specifically asked that the Settlement papers might be amended and he might have a declaration in the sense in which he wished. In an additional plaint he prayed that the request for amending the Settlement papers might be excluded from the prayer. In the result he obtained from the first Court an order—a declaration—in the sense in which he wished and an order that the entry in the Settlement Record should be cancelled.

This decision was upheld on appeal. He did not take the precaution of giving notice to Government of his suit which it was his duty to do under section 83, Central Provinces Land Revenue Act. The result was that Government was not represented in this case until it came up to this Court in second appeal. The Government now applies to have the case sent back for a re-hearing and we cannot see our way not to accede to this request. It is urged before us that the suit is not one for the cancellation or amendment of the Settlement under section 83 of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act. We cannot take this view. In the first place, it is prayed that the record be cancelled. In the second place, the relief is obtained and in the third, it is obvious that it would be unjust that the rent payable by plaintiff should be reduced from Rs. 220 to Rs. 15 leaving the zemindar defendant liable to Government as though that rent remained at the figure recorded in the Settlement Record, Rs. 220. We regret that the parties should be put to the additional expenses of a trial which a remand will cause, but the plaintiff is responsible for this inconvenience because he did not do what it was clearly his duty to do under section 83, the words of which are imperative.

The order is that this case be remanded to the Munsif of Sambalpur for a re-hearing. Costs will abide the result.

Case remanded.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 284 OF 1910.

November 29, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Karamat Husain and Mr. Justice Chamier.

TARA CHAND MUKERJI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Mirza AFZAL BEG AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870*), Sch. II, Art.* 17 (VI)—Partition suit—Plaintiff in possession—Claim merely for separation of share—Court-fee payable—Ad valorem Court-fee when payable.

In a suit for partition, where the plaintiff alleges that he is in possession and merely claims partition of the property and separate possession of his share, a Court-fee stamp of Rs. 10 is sufficient. But where the plaintiff is out of possession and claims possession and partition, then he must pay a Court-fee calculated on the value of the share claimed by him.

Reoti v. Lachhmen, A.W.N. (1900), 90, Wali Ullah v. Durga Prasad, 28 A. 340; 3 A. L. J. 181; A. W. N. (1906) 38; Bidhata Rai v. Ram Charitra Rai, 12 C. W. N. 37; 6 C. L. J. 651; 3 M. L. T. 33, followed.

First appeal from the decision of the Subordinate Judge of Dehra Dun, dated the 24th May 1910.

Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, for the Appellant.

Mr. Muhammad Ishaq, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This was a suit by the appellant for partition of a house and its appurtenances in Dehra Dun. The appellant paid a Court-fee stamp of Rs. 10 on his plaint under the Court Fees Act, Schedule II, Article 17 (VI). The respondents pleaded that the Court-fee paid was insufficient. They contended that it should be calculated on the value of the property. The Court below acceded to this contention and appointed a Commissioner to inquire into the value of the property. The Commissioner reported that the value of the whole property was Rs. 22,000 and that the value of the plaintiff's share therein was Rs. 16,500. The Court then held that the plaint should have borne a Court-fee stamp of Rs. 570 and called on the appellant to make good deficiency. The appellant having declined to do so, the Court dismissed the suit. Several decisions were cited in the Court below. We think that it is unnecessary to set them out here. In the case of Reoti v. Lachhman (1) this Court, following decisions of the Calcutta High Court, held that a plaint in which the plaintiff being jointly in possession with the defendant of property prayed that the plaintiff's share might be partitioned was sufficiently stamped with a Court-fee stamp of Rs. 10. To the same effect is the decision of this Court in Waliullah v. Durga Prasad (2). These decisions are supported by a recent decision of the Calcutta High Court in Bidhata Rai v. Ram Charitra Rai (3). In all these cases it has been held that where the plaintiff, as in the present case, alleges that he is in possession and merely claims partition of the property and separate possession of his share, a Court-fee stamp of Rs. 10 is sufficient. But where the plaintiff is out of possession and claims possession and partition, then he must pay a Court-fee calculated on the value of the share claimed by him. The decision of the Court below

(1) A. W. N. (1900) 90.
(2) 28 A. 340; 3 A. L. J. 181; A. W. N. (1906) 38.
(3) 12 C. W. N. 37; 6 C. L. J. 651; 3 M. L. T. 33.

is, in our opinion, erroneous. We allow the appeal and remand the case with directions that it be re-admitted on the file of pending cases and disposed of according to law. The respondents will pay the appellant's costs in this Court including fees on the higher scale.

Appeal allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 1 OF 1911.

July 18, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

E. DALGLIESH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

NANDAN MISSER AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908). O. XX, r. 12—Determination of principle for ascertaining mesne profits—Decree—Appeal.

An order by which a Court determines the principle whereupon mesne profits are to be assessed and directs their ascertainment by a Commissioner, is an interlocutory order in a pending suit and not appealable as a decree.

Puran Chand v. Roy Radhakishen, 19 C. 132 (F. B) and Debendra v. Khirode, 5 Ind. Cas. 272, relied upon.

Surja Pershad Narain v. Reid, 29 C. 622, referred to.

Appeal from the order of the Sub-Judge of Darbhanga, dated December 7th, 1910.

Mr. Sinha and Babu Bipin Behari Ghose, for the Appellants.

Babus Akshoy Kumar Baneriee and Mohendra Nath Roy, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against an order by which the Court below has determined the principle whereupon mesne profits are to be assessed and directed their ascertainment by a Commissioner. A preliminary objection has been taken to the competency of the appeal on the ground that the order in question is not appealable as an order under any provision of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1908 nor is it appealable as a decree.

On the 26th July 1909, the Subordinate Judge decreed the suit in favour of the plaintiffs who thereupon became entitled to obtain possession. The decree also directed that mesne profits would be ascertained after delivery of possession of the land. It is obvious that the decree was made in this form under rule 12 of Order XX of the Code of 1908. That rule provides that where the suit is for recovery of possession of immoveable property and for mesne profits, the Court may pass a decree for possession of the property directing an inquiry as to mesne profits from the institution of the suit until the delivery of possession to the decree-holder. The rule further provides that where the inquiry is directed in this manner, a final decree in respect of the mesne profits shall be passed in accordance with the result of such inquiry. It is clear, therefore, that the proceeding for assessment of mesne profits under rule 12 of Order XX is a proceeding in a pending suit. Consequently, before the final decree has been drawn up, an interlocutory decree, whereby a question of principle is directed, is not appealable. But, on behalf of the appellant reliance has been placed upon the decision in Surja Pershad Narain Singh v. Reid (1), in which it was ruled that an order of this description was appealable as a decree under section 244 read with section 2 of the Code of 1882. It is not necessary for us to consider now whether that decision can be defended on principle or whether it can be reconciled with the earlier decision in Behary Lal Pundit v. Kedar Nath Mullick (2), where it was ruled that an order merely determining a point of law arising incidentally or otherwise in the course of execution proceedings was not a decree within the meaning of section 2 of the Code of 1882 and was not appealable as such. We may point out that even under the Code of 1882 it had been recognised in this Court by a Full Bench in the case of Puranchand v. Roy Radhakishen (3) that proceedings for assessment of mesne profits were proceedings in a pending suit. [See also Debendra v. Khirode (4).] In our opinion it is plain upon rule 12 of Order XX of the Code of 1908 that the order sought to be assailed is an interlocutory order in a pending suit and is not appealable as a decree. It cannot also be disputed that it is not appealable as an order under any provision of the Code. The appeal is, therefore, incompetent.

(1) 29 C. 622.
(2) 18 C. 469.
(3) 19 C. 132.
(4) 5 Ind. Cas. 272.

PARBHU NARAIN SINGH PILLAI v. LALJI SINGH.

The result is that the preliminary objection is allowed and the appeal dismissed with costs. We assess the hearing fee at two gold mohurs.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

EXECUTION SECOND APPEAL No. 731 OF 1911.

December 14, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Karamat Husain and Mr. Justice Chamier.

Sri Maharaja PARBHU NARAIN SINGH —DECREE-HOLDER—APPELLANT

versus

LALJI SINGH AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 230—Decree providing for payment of money from some of the defendants and for sale of mortgaged property in case of other defendants—Nature of decree—Whether such decree is a mortgage decree or a decree for payment of money.

In 1897 a decree was passed against four persons. The decree directed the defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 to pay the amount decreed in certain instalments and then went on to provide that if the money decreed could not be recovered from defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 then it should be recovered from the property mortgaged by the 4th as a surety.

In 1910, the decree-holder made an application to execute the decree against defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3:

Held, (per Karamat Husain, J.) that the decree being a money-decree was barred by section 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882.

Held, (per Chamier, J.) that the decree was not barred by the provisions of section 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, because a decree cannot be split up when different reliefs are given against different defendants.

Execution second appeal from the decision of the District Judge of Benares, dated the 11th March, 1911.

Mr. Beni Madho Ghose, for the Appellant.

Mr. Gulzari Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

KARAMAT HUSAIN, J.—The appellant obtained a decree from the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Arrah against four persons. The operative part of the decree may be rendered as follows: "It is decreed and ordered that the plaintiff's claim against defendant No. 3 be decreed ex parte, and against defendant No. 2 on his admission of the claim, and against defendants Nos. 1 and 4 according to a compromise." The decree goes on further to direct that if the decretal money be not recovered from the defendants Nos. 1—3, then it should be recovered from the property mortgaged by the fourth defendant as a surety. The decree was transferred to Benares. It was passed on the 26th of May 1897 and the application for execution of it was made on the 5th of January 1910. Lalji, one of the respondents in this Court, objected that the decree was barred under the provisions of section 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882. This contention was accepted by the learned Judge, who in his judgment said: "The decree with which I am concerned is, however, a money-decree so far as it affects the appellant and other lessees, and a mortgage-decree, so far as it affects the surety, Lachman Singh." Coming to that conclusion the lower Appellate Court dismissed the application for execution.

In second appeal it is urged by the learned Vakil for the decree-holder that the decree of which execution is sought is a mortgage-decree within the meaning of section 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, Act XIV of 1882. I am unable to accept this contention. The decree so far as the respondent Lalji Singh is concerned, cannot be regarded as a mortgage-decree in any sense of the word. So far as the appellant is concerned, it is a decree for payment of money. I, therefore, would dismiss the appeal with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

CHAMIER, J.—The suit in which the decree now in question was obtained was brought against three lessees, who were defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 and their surety who was defendant No. 4. The decree directed the defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 to pay the amount decreed in certain instalments, and then went on to provide that if the money decreed could not be recovered from defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3, the decree-holder might proceed to bring to sale the property which had been mortgaged to the plaintiff by the surety. The decree-holder made several ineffectual attempts to recover his money in the district in which the decree was passed. Subsequently, the decree was transferred for execution to Benares. By the present application the decree-holder seeks to bring to sale some immoveable property belonging to defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3, or one or more of them. His application has been dismissed on the ground that the decree, so far as defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 were concerned, was a decree for the payment of money within the meaning of section 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882. The lower Appellate Court has accepted the contention and dismissed the application with costs.

JAYANTI KISTAPPA v. JAYANTI CHINNAPIYA.

This is a second appeal by the decree-holder. It is conceded, in accordance with a recent decision of this Court, that section 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1903, does not apply to the case, and that the question for decision is whether the decree held by the appellant is a decree for the payment of money within the meaning of section 230 of the Code of 1882. The decree, in my opinion, cannot by any possibility be described as a decree for money against defendant No. 4. If it is possible to split up the decree into two decrees, then, no doubt, it may be said that the decree is a decree for payment of money against defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 and is a decree for the sale of immoveable property to which the third paragraph of section 230 of the Code of 1882 does not apply. But it seems to me that if a decree can be split up in this way, where different reliefs are given against different sets of defendants, then a decree may be split up also where several distinct reliefs are given against the same set of defendants. I find no justification for this course. The terms of the decree before us undoubtedly go beyond the terms of an ordinary decree for the payment of money as that expression has been interpreted by this Court. It provides for the sale of immoveable property under certain contingencies. In my opinion, the principle on which the case of Pahalwan Singh v. Narain Das (1) was decided applies to the present case, and I would hold that the decree before us is not a decree for the payment of money within the meaning of section 230, and I would allow this appeal, set aside the decree of the Court below, and remand the case for disposal on the merits according to law.

BY THE COURT.—The order of the Court is, that under the provisions of section 98 of the Code of Civil Procedure, this appeal is dismissed with costs which in this Court will include fees on the higher scale.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 22 A. 401.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 50 OF 1911.

November 24, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Wallis.

JAYANTI KISTAPPA—APPELLANT

versus

JAYANTI CHINNAPIYA—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXIV, r. 4(2)—Deposit of amount in Court—Costs, award of—Finding as to which party was most to blame necessary—Demand before suit.

Where, in a suit for the recovery of a debt, the defendant pays the amount in Court under Order XXIV, rule 4 (2), and plaintiff avers that he made demands before suit but defendant denies them, the Court should, to enable it to determine by whom the costs have to be paid, record a finding as to whether plaintiff demanded the amount before suit.

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Bellary in A. S. No. 168 of 1909 presented against the decree of the Court of the District Munsif of Bellary in O. S. No. 269 of 1909.

Dr. S. Sawaminathan, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the plaintiff sued the defendant for a debt, averring in his plaint that the defendant had failed to pay in spite of repeated demands. He also obtained an order for attachment before judgment. Before the attachment issued, the defendant paid the amount sued for into Court and the defendant drew it out. Order XXIV, rule 4 (2) requires that when a defendant pays money into Court and the plaintiff accepts it in full satisfaction, the plaintiff shall present to the Court a statement to that effect, and such statement shall be filed and the Court shall pass judgment accordingly, and in directing by whom the costs of each party are to be paid the Court shall consider which of the parties is most to blame for the litigation. The District Munsif gave the plaintiff his costs, and the Subordinate Judge on appeal reversed this part of the judgment on the ground that the plaintiff should either have made a demand or given sufficient reasons for his failure to do so. The plaintiff in his plaint did allege previous demands which the defendant apparently denied in his written statement.

The Subordinate Judge should have called for a finding on the point before disposing of the case. The decree of the lower Appellate Court must be set aside and the case remanded for disposal according to law. Costs will abide the result.

Appeal allowed.

MADAN MOHAN DEY v. GANGA CHANDRA ROY.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 294 OF 1910.

July 12, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerji and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

MADAN MOHUN DEY—DECREE-HOLDER—APPELLANT

versus

GANGA CHANDRA ROY AND ANOTHER—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Execution of decree—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 179, cl. (4)—Application to Court to take step-in-aid of execution—Deposit of Nazir's travelling allowance, if saves time—Time runs from date of application not from date of order.

To bring a case within clause (4) of Article 179 of Schedule II of the Limitation Act of 1877, it is not sufficient for the decree-holder to show that he has taken a step-in-aid of execution of the decree: he has to establish that he has applied to the Court to take some step-in-aid of execution. The mere payment of Nazir's fees cannot by itself bring the case within the clause.

Radha Prosad Singh v. Sundur Lal, 9 C. 644 and Vijiaragahavalu Naidu v. Srinivasalu Naidu, 28 M. 399, not followed.

Thakar Ram v. Katwari Ram, 22 A. 358 and Sheo Prosad v. Indar Bahadur, 30 A. 179; 5 A. L. J. 258; A. W. N. (1908) 74, followed.

Time runs from the date of the presentation of the application, and not from the date on which the application is disposed of by the Court.

Raj Behari Chakravarti v. Kalihar Gupta, 3 Ind. Cas. 336, 10 C. L. J. 479, relied upon.

Appeal from the order of the Sub-Judge of Tipprah, dated March 21st, 1910.

Babu Satish Chandra Ghose, for the Appellant.

Babu Akshoy Kumar Banerji, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against an order by which the Court below has dismissed an application for execution of a decree made on the 21st June 1893, as barred by limitation. The previous application was made on the 6th April 1906. The present application was presented on the 15th April 1909. It is, therefore, prima facie, barred by limitation, even though it is pointed out that the Court was closed from the 9th to the 14th April 1909. The decree-holder, however, seeks to remove the bar of limitation by reference to a payment of travelling expenses of the Nazir made by him on the 12th April 1906. It appears that in the application of the 6th April 1906, the decree-holder had prayed that a writ might issue for the attachment of the moveable properties of the judgment-debtors and that the Nazir might be deputed for the purpose. The Court thereupon made a conditional order and directed the decree-holder to deposit the travelling expenses of the Nazir. This deposit was made on the 12th April 1906. The learned Vakil for the decree-holder contends, upon the authority of the decisions in Radha Prosad Singh v. Sundar Lal (1) and Vijaraghavalu Naidu v. Srinivasalu Naidu (2), that clause (4) of Article 179 of the Second Schedule of the Limitation Act saves the application from the bar of limitation. In our opinion, this contention is not well-founded and must be overruled.

In order to bring a case within clause (4) of Article 179 it has to be shown by the decree-holder that he has applied in accordance with law to the proper Court to take some step-in-aid of execution of the decree. The learned Vakil for the appellant does not dispute that no written application was made on the 12th April 1906, when the travelling expenses were deposited. But he argues that it may be assumed that on that date an oral application was made on behalf of the decree-holder and the Court was invited to entrust the writ of attachment to the Nazir for execution. This argument is ingenious but obviously unsound. The decision in Radha Prosad Singh v. Sundur Lal (1), no doubt, lays down that the deposit of Nazir's fees is sufficient to bring a case within clause (4) of Article 179, because when the decree-holder makes such a deposit he takes a step-in-aid of execution of the decree. This decision, however, as was explained in Thakur Ram v. Katwaree Ram (3) does not give effect to the plain language of clause (4) of Article 179. To bring a case within that clause it is not sufficient for the decree-holder to show that he has taken a step-in-aid of execution of the decree: he has to establish that he has applied to the Court to take some step-in-aid of execution. The mere payment of Nazir's fees cannot plainly by itself bring the case within clause (4) of Article 179. We may further point out that the view taken in the case of Radha Prosad v. Sundar Lal (1) is contrary to that adopted

(1) 9 C. 644.
(2) 28 M. 399.
(3) 22 A. 358.

in Toree Mahomed v. Mahomed Mabood (4) and Ananda Mohan Roy v. Hara Sundari (5). In so far as the decision in Vijaraghavalu Naidu v. Srinivasalu Naidu (2) is concerned, it may be conceded that it does support the contention of the appellant. There it was ruled by the learned Judges of the Madras High Court that the presentation of what is called a "batta memorandum" is sufficient to bring a case within clause (4) of Article 179. We are unable, however, to accept this view as well-founded on principle. If an application has already been made for the issue of a sale proclamation, the presentation of a subsequent application for the same purpose when the fees are paid, is not, in our opinion, sufficient to extend the period of limitation by virtue of clause (4) of Article 179. No doubt, as has been ruled by this Court in Ambica Pershad v. Sardhari Lal (6), an application by a decree holder for the issue of a sale proclamation is an application by him to the proper Court to take some step-in-aid of execution of the decree. But the mere payment of fees for the issue of a sale proclamation pursuant to an order of the Court on a previous application for the issue of the sale proclamation does not extend the time under clause 4 of Article 179. We may also observe that the view taken in Vijaraghavalu Naidu v. Srinivasalu Naidu (2) has not been accepted in Sheo Prosad v. Indar Bahadur (7). In the case before us, there was an application for the issue of a writ of attachment on the 6th April 1906. The Court, as we have already explained, directed the decree-holder to deposit the travelling expenses of the Nazir. This order was carried out on the 12th April 1906. The result was that the conditional order of the 6th April 1906, was perfected on the 12th April 1906. But it cannot be argued that the effect of this was to make time run from the 12th April 1906. As was ruled in Raj Behari Chakravarti v. Kalihar Gupta (8); time runs from the date of the presentation of the application and not from the date on which the application is disposed of by the Court. In the case before us, the application was made on the 6th April 1906 and time ran from that date.

(4) 9 C. 730; 13 C. L. R. 91. (5) 23 C. 196.
(6) 10 C. 851.
(7) 30 A. 179; 5 A. L. J. 258; A. W. N. (1908) 74.
(8) 10 C. L. J. 479; 3 Ind. Cas. 336.

The result, therefore, is that the order made by the Court below is affirmed and this appeal dismissed with costs. We assess the hearing fee at two gold mohurs.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1714 OF 1910.

November 17, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar.

YIMANI SITARAMA SASTRULU—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

GORA RAMUDU AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS RESPONDENTS.

Madras Act (III of 1895)—Whether applicable to Gadala service inam—Palanquin bearing service, sale of —Public policy.

Madras Act III of 1895 does not apply to a Gadala service inam.

Sreeramudhu Yarranna v. Donhira Kannamma, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 354; 21 M. L. J. 962; 10 M. L. T. 561; 12 Ind. Cas. 457, referred to.

The sale of a service inam, the service consisting of bearing a palanquin of the zemindar, is not contrary to public policy.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of Vizagapatam, in A. S. No. 871 of 1909, presented against the decree of the District Munsif of Chodavaram, in O. S. No. 405 of 1908.

Mr. S. Sreenivasa Iyengar, for the Appellant.

Mr. V. Ramesam, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Madras Act III of 1895 has no application to a Gadala service inam. See Sreeramudhu Yarranna v Donhira Kannamma (1). The service is that of a palanquin bearer to the zemindar. The sale of such an inam is not contrary to public policy. We reverse the decree of the lower Appellate Court and restore that of the District Munsif with costs both here and in the lower Appellate Court.

Appeal allowed.

(1) (1911) 2 M. W. N. 354; 21 M. L. J. 962; 10 M. L. T. 561; 12 Ind. Cas. 457.

GHANSHAM SINGH v. TEG BAHADUR SINGH.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 219 OF 1910.
November 29, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Karamat Husain and Mr. Justice Chamier.
GHANSHAM SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus
TEG BAHADUR SINGH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Widow—Gift—Donee paying debt of donor's husband—Suit to set aside the gift by presumptive heir—Declaration that debt paid by donee was a charge upon the property, whether could be made in the suit.

A Hindu widow made a gift of her husband's property in favour of B. After the gift was made B. paid certain debts which were due from the husband of the widow who made the gift. A. the presumptive heir to the widow's husband brought a suit to have the deed of gift declared void and ineffectual as against him. B. pleaded that the debts which he had paid might be declared a charge upon the property:

Held, that B. was not entitled to such a declaration in this suit, as the question whether B. was entitled to a charge in the property was irrelevant in the present suit.

If B. was hereafter held to be entitled to retain possession after the death of the widow it will not be because he had any title to the property under the deed of gift but because being lawfully in possession under the gift during the life-time of the widow, he discharged a debt which was binding on the reversionary heir.

Mahomed Shamsoolhuda v. Sewakram, 22 W. R. 409; 2 I. A. 7; 14 B. L. R. 226; distinguished.

First appeal from the decision of the Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, dated 29th March 1910.

The Hon'ble Mr. Moti Lal Nehru, for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Dr. Sunder Lal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Ram Rikha Singh died in 1893, leaving him surviving his mother Ganga Kunwar and his widows, Ajudhia Kunwar and Hardei and the names of all the three women were entered on the Revenue Records. In February and September 1902, the three ladies transferred parts of the estate of Ram Rikha Singh to the defendant Ghansham Singh. In October 1905, Ganga Kunwar died. In the present suit, instituted in September 1909, the plaintiff, who claims to be one of the presumptive reversionary heirs of Ram Rikha Singh, prayed that the deeds of gift of February and September 1902 might be declared void and ineffectual so far as he is concerned and he also prayed for possession of one-sixth share in the property. The claim for possession has been dismissed and the correctness of that part of the decree is not challenged. The defendants pleaded in the Court below that if the plaintiff was entitled to a declaration that the deeds of gift were void and ineffectual as against him, that declaration should be limited by a proviso that he was entitled to a charge on the property to the extent of certain debts of Ram Rikha Singh, which had been paid by him. The Court below held that the question whether the defendant was entitled to a charge on the property in respect of the debts of Ram Rikha Singh paid by him was irrelevant in the present case and it gave the plaintiff a declaration that the two deeds of gift were void and ineffectual as against the person or persons on whom the property might devolve on the death of the ladies. The defendant has appealed contending that the declaration in favour of the plaintiff should be limited in the way stated above and the plaintiff has filed a cross-objection with regard to the order made by the Court below as to costs. We may dispose of the cross-objection at once by saying, that inasmuch as the plaintiff's claim for possession of part of the property has been dismissed, he was fortunate in being allowed any costs. In support of the defendant's contention we have been referred to the case of Mahomed Shamsoolhuda v. Sewakram (1). In that case a Hindu widow conveyed for value to a bona fide purchaser certain property which she had inherited from her husband. There was a mortgage on the property made by the last male owner which the purchaser paid off after taking possession of the property. In a suit brought by the son of a deceased daughter of the last male owner for a declaration that the widow had power to alienate the property for her life only, and that after her death he would be entitled to the property, it was held that the declaration should be limited by the proviso that he would be entitled to recover the property only on paying to the purchaser of the amount spent by him on redeeming the mortgage. That case differs materially from the present case for there the plaintiff was entitled to a vested remainder and it was possible for the Court to declare that the plaintiff or his heirs would be entitled to possession on the death of the widow. In the present case the plaintiff is only a presumptive reversionary heir who may never be entitled to possession of the property. The learned Advocate for the defendant appellant admitted that his client could probably not now maintain a suit for a declaration that he was entitled to a charge on the property in respect of the debts of Ram Rikha Singh paid by him; but he maintained that his client would be materially prejudiced if the deed of gift were declared to be void as against the plaintiff and the defendant were not at the same time declared to have a charge on the property on account of the payment by him of the debts of Ram Rikha Singh. It seems to us, as it seemed to the Court below, that the question whether the defendant is entitled to a charge on the property and will be entitled to retain possession after the death of the ladies until he is reimbursed the sums expended by him, has nothing to do with the question whether the deeds of gift are valid, and that the suggested proviso in favour of the defendant will not really be a proviso to or in any way limit the declaration made in favour of the plaintiff but will be a substantive declaration of an entirely different right. If the defendant is hereafter held to be entitled to retain possession after the death of the widow, it will be not because he has any title to the property under the deeds of gift but because, being lawfully in possession under the deeds of gift during the life-time of the ladies, he discharged a debt which is binding on the reversionary heirs of Ram Rikha Singh. For these reasons, we think that the Court below is right in refusing to make any declaration in the present suit with regard to the right of the defendant to a charge on the property in respect of the debts of Ram Rikha Singh paid by him. The appeal and the cross-objection are dismissed with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

(1) 22 W. R. 409; 12 I. A. 7; 14 B. L. R. 226.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL NO. 530 OF 1910.

December 5, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Caspersz and Mr. Justice D. Chatterjee.

SHUKURUDDIN CHOWDHURY—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—APPELLANT

versus

Rani HEMANGINI DEBI AND OTHERS—DECREE-HOLDERS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Non-transferable occupancy-holding—Sale in execution with consent of co-sharer landlord—Consent after sale, of non-consenting landlord.

An occupancy-holding which is not transferable by custom, can be sold in execution with the consent of the landlord.

Ananda Das v. Ratnakar, 7 C. W. N. 572, relied upon.

But that consent must be by the whole body of landlords.

The landlords may consent even after the sale.

Dwarka Nath v. Tarini Sankar, 11 C. W. N. 513; 5 C. L. J. 294; 34 C. 199, relied upon.

Where a decree-holder applied for the sale of a non-transferable occupancy-holding in execution of a money-decree, with the consent of co-sharer landlord to the extent of 15¼ annas and an order for the sale of that share of the holding has been made, the High Court did not think it necessary to interfere, as the non-consenting landlords may give their consent after the sale.

Appeal from the order of the Sub-Judge of Bogra dated July 4th, 1910, affirming that of the Second Munsif of Bogra, dated January 29th, 1910.

Babu Mohini Mohan Chakravarti, for the Appellant.

Babu Priya Sankar Mazumdar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The decree-holder applied for the sale of a non-transferable occupancy-holding in execution of a money-decree on the allegation that the landlords had given their consent. The raiyat judgment-debtor objected and the learned Munsif found that the consent was not by all the landlords but by co-sharers to the extent of 15¼ annas only and made an order for the sale of that share of the holding. That order has been affirmed by the lower Appellate Court.

It has been held that an occupancy-holding which is not transferable by custom can be sold with the consent of the landlord. See Ananda Das v. Ratnakar (1). That consent, however, must be by the whole body of landlords. It is contended that the result of the order of the lower Courts would be a sale of a part of a holding and a consequent sub-division of the holding without the consent of the whole body of landlords. As regards the sale of a part of a holding there is some diversity of opinion and the matter has been referred to a Full Bench in another case. As regards the sub-division of the holding, that would not be a necessary consequence of the sale and the non-consenting landlords would not be bound to recognize the sub-division. It has also been held that the landlord may consent even after the sale; see Dwarka Nath v. Tarini Sankar (2). So that here the non-consenting landlords may give their consent after the sale. In any case the decree-holder takes the risk and in the present state of the law the purchaser will purchase at his peril. We do not think it necessary to interfere and we accordingly dismiss this appeal but without costs.

(1) 7 C. W. N. 572.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 11 C.W.N. 513; 5 C. L. J. 294; 34 C. 199.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 24-5 OF 1911 AND CIVIL RULE No. 5356 OF 1911.

November 29, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Stephen and Mr. Justice Coxe.

Raja RAGHUBIR SAHI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Maharajah Sri PROTAP UDOY NATH SAHI DEO—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI of 1908), ss. 87, 224—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 100—Second Appeal—Order under s. 87 of Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act.

There is no second appeal from a decree of the Judicial Commissioner of Chota Nagpur made on appeal from an order under section 87 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act.

Appeal from the decree of the Judicial Commissioner of Chota Nagpur, dated July 13th, 1911, reversing that of the Assistant Settlement Officer of Ranchi, dated August 31st, 1910.

Mr. B. C. Mitter, for Mr. S. P. Sinha, with Babus Provash Chandra Mitter, Surendra Mohan Mallik and Harihar Prasad Singh, for the Appellant.

Mr. A. Chowdhury and Babu Jogesh Chandra Dey, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

S. A. No. 2485 OF 1911.

STEPHEN, J.—This matter comes before us on appeal and also on a Rule. The appeal was from a decree of the Judicial Commissioner of Chota Nagpur sitting on appeal from an order under section 87 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act.

A preliminary objection is taken by the respondent that no second appeal lies in this case, and this contention, we think, must succeed. Sub-section (2) of section 87 of the Act enacts that an appeal shall lie in the prescribed manner and to the prescribed officer from decisions passed under sub-section (1). By an order of the Local Government, which has power to act in this matter, the prescribed officer is the Judicial Commissioner, and it is argued that an appeal lying to him from a decision of a Revenue officer there can be no second appeal. It is admitted that the provisions of section 100, Civil Procedure Code, must be excluded either expressly or by implication. There is no express exclusion in this Act, but we think, on looking at the frame-work of this Act, that it is intended that no second appeal should lie to this Court. An appeal is provided for, as we have said, in sub-section (2) of section 87, and if there is to be a further appeal we must then look to the provisions of section 224 of the Act, which lays down that "A second appeal shall lie to the High Court, under Chapter XLII of the Code of Civil Procedure, from an appellate decree passed by the Judicial Commissioner under this Chapter, or from any order passed by him on appeal under section 215, sub-section (3)". We are of opinion that section 87 has been deliberately excluded from its scope, we are led further to this conclusion by a consideration of the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act from which this Act has been very closely adopted. Reading section 87 with section 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, it seems to us that it is by implication provided that there shall be no second appeal in cases arising under that section.

We, therefore, hold that there is no second appeal in this case.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

COXE, J.—I agree. It appears to me that clause (2) section 87, read with section 264, sub-section (1), clause (8) is tantamount to an express provision of law within the meaning of section 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that these appeals should be heard by the prescribed officers and should not be heard by officers other than those. I only desire to state that in the case of Mohunt Padmalav Ramanuja Das v. Lukshmi Rani (1), to which we have been referred, there is nothing that in any way limits the scope of section 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act in so far as it relates to suits between landlord and tenant.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

RULE No. 5356.

We have then to consider this Rule. The Rule was on the opposite party to show cause why the decision complained of should not be set aside. The decision arrived at was that the petitioner was a tenant for life and not possessed of a tenancy of a hereditary nature. It is argued on his behalf that the Judicial Commissioner acted without jurisdiction in deciding this question. Under section 81, however, it is the duty of the Settlement Officer under section 87 to decide the matters contained in section 81, paragraph (b). It, therefore, was clearly his duty to decide the question which he has decided and we cannot see that there is any room for the contention that he has acted without jurisdiction.

The Rule is discharged without costs.

Rule discharged.

(1) 12 C. W. N. 8.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

EXECUTION SECOND APPEAL No. 662 OF 1911.

November 23, 1911.

Present:—Sir George Knox, KT., Judge, and Mr. Justice Griffin.

LALMAN AND OTHERS—DECREE-HOLDERS—APPELLANTS

versus

KALKA PRASAD AND ANOTHER—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Decree—Execution—Attachment—Malikana allowance payable from Government Treasury—Whether can be attached—Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871*)*, s. 11.

A malikana allowance payable from a Government Treasury is an allowance of the nature of a pension and is not liable to be attached in execution of a simple money-decree.

Execution second appeal from the decision of the District Judge of Banda, dated the 23rd of May, 1911.

Mr. Pearelal Banerji, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of an application made by the decree-holders to execute a money-decree held by them. The mode in which the assistant of the Court is required is set out as being by attachment of a malikana allowance. Both the Courts below have disallowed the application. It is contended before us that Order XXXIV, rule 14 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not bar the present application. It was that order and that rule which the lower Appellate Court held to be sufficient reason for disallowing the application. We have examined the record of the suit and we find both from it and from the application for execution that the property which the decree-holders seek to attach is a malikana allowance payable from a Government Treasury. Such allowance is of the nature of a pension and by Act XXIII of 1871, section 11, no money which is due or which is to become due on account of any pension or allowance shall be liable to seizure, attachment, or sequestration by process of any Court in British India at the instance of a creditor or in satisfaction of a decree or order of Court. It has not been shown to us that the malikana allowance which the decree-holders seek to attach is of any kind other than that contemplated by section 11 of Act XXIII of 1871. In the absence of such proof we see no reason to interfere and dismiss the appeal.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 1971 AND 2550 OF 1908.

December 18, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Carnduff.

IN No. 1971

RAJENDRA NARAIN SAHA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

ASHUTOSH SANYAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

IN No. 2550

ASHUTOSH SANYAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAJENDRA NARAIN SAHA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Ejectment—Raiyat inducted by trespasser—Good faith—Judgment of affirmance by Court of Appeal, contents of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 31—Local investigation, application for—Refusal—Discretion.

RAJENDRA NARAIN SAHA v. ASHUTOSH SANYAL.

The general rule of law is, that no one can confer on another any right which is not his, and the case of a raiyat inducted into a piece of land by a trespasser, is an exception to it.

Binode Lal Pakrashi v. Kalu Pramanik, 20 C. 708 (F. B)., referred to.

But the exception should not be extended to a case where there is shown to have been an absence of good faith on the part of either the trespasser or the raiyat.

Peary Mohan Mondal v. Radhika Mohun Hazra, 8 C. W. N. 315 at p. 319; on appeal, 5 C. L. J. 9, and Upendra Narain Bhattacharya v. Protab Chandra Pardhan, 8 C. W. N. 320 at p 321, referred to.

Where the Court below has delivered a good judgment, it may be difficult, if not impossible, for the Appellate Court to support it with independent reasons; and, in such a case, there is nothing to be gained by mere repetition or paraphrase, and an expression of concurrence with the finding of the Court below may be sufficient. But there must, of course, be at least enough in the appellate judgment to show that the Court of appeal has really applied its mind to the case and formed an opinion of its own on the points arising in it.

A suit was instituted on April 28th, 1906, the issues were settled on November 21st, and after several adjournments, the case was set down for May 11th, 1907, when an application for a local investigation was for the first time made, but was refused. The case was disposed of on August 12th.

Held, that the Court's refusal of the application, as it was filed too late, was not such an arbitrary exercise of discretion as can properly be interfered with on second appeal.

Appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge of Pabna, dated July 6th, 1908, modifying that of the first Munsif of Pabna, dated August 12th, 1907.

IN No. 1971.

Babu Shib Chandra Palit, for the Appellant.

Babus Mohini Mohan Chakravarti, Krishna Kamal Maitra and Biraj Mohan Majumdar (for the Deputy Registrar), for the Respondent.

IN No. 2550.

Babus Mohini Mohan and Gopal Chundra Das, for the Appellant.

Babus Shib Chandra Palit and Biraj Mohan Majumdar (for the Deputy Registrar), for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—These two appeals arise out of an action in ejectment brought by certain patnidars in respect of seven plots of land alleged to be situate in their putni. For present purposes the defendants may be said to be, first, the Sanyals, who are admittedly the holders of a permanent tenure in the patni described in the judgments of the Courts below as a jama held in kaimi raiyati or kaimi jote right, and, secondly, the actual cultivators, who have been inducted by the Sanyals and are in occupation of some of the plots as the latters' tenants. Both the lower Courts have dismissed the suit as regards plots 3, 4, part of 5, and 7. As regards the remainder, the appellate decree is to the effect, that, as the Sanyals have failed to prove that these lands are included in their under-tenure, the suit should be decreed against them; but that the actual cultivators are entitled to remain in occupation as tenants of the plaintiffs, and the suit should be dismissed in so far as they are concerned. Against this decree the plaintiff patnidars have preferred S. A. No. 1971 of 1908; while S. A. No. 2550 of the same year is on behalf of two of the defendant Sanyals, who object to the finding that they have no right to intervene as rent-receivers between the cultivators and the patnidars.

I take up first the appeal of the patnidars, whose main contention is that the tenants inducted by the Sanyals, found by both Courts to have been trespassers in respect of plots 1, 2, part of 5 and 6, should themselves be evicted as trespassers. The ruling of the Full Bench of this Court in Binode Lal Pakrashi v. Kalu Pramanick (1) is, of course, relied upon by the other side; but it is urged that that ruling ought not to be extended to a case such as this.

No doubt, the Full Bench decision referred to, introducing, as it did, an exception to the general rule of law that no one can confer on another any right which is not his, should be carefully limited, and I think it clear that it ought not to be applied where there is shown to have been an absence of good faith on the part of either the trespasser or the person inducted by the trespasser. In this connection, I need not do more than refer to Peary Mohan Mondal v. Radhika Mohan (2) affirmed on appeal in 1904—See Peary Mohan Mondal v. Radhika Mohan (3) and Upendra Narain Bhattacharya v. Protab Chandra Pardhan (4). In Binode Lal Pakrashi's case (1) there was, so far as I can see, no trace of mala fides anywhere: the possession of the trespassers had been main-

(1) 20 C. 708.
(2) 8 C. W. N. 315 at p. 319.
(3) 5 C. L. J. 9.
(4) 8 C. W. N. 320 at p. 321.

tained by a Criminal Court in a proceeding under section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and it was never suggested that their tenants had acted otherwise than honestly. Similarly, in Mohima Chandra Shaha v. Hazari Pramanik(5), the decision in which was the subject of the reference to, and was affirmed by the Full Bench in Binode Lal Pakrashi's case(1) the defendants tenants had been let into occupation by the Collector before the plaintiff's success in proving, in a suit against the Government, that the land was a reformation on the site of their original estate.

But in the case before me now no imputation of bad faith is cast upon the cultivators inducted by the Sanyals, and the only foundation for any such imputation against the Sanyals is the remark in the judgment of the learned Munsif that "the Sanyal defendants are trying to include some more land in their admitted holding." This, in my opinion, is not sufficient. The question raised by the pleadings was one of parcel or no parcel, the Sanyals (who admittedly held an under-tenure in the patni) asserting that these plots were included in their under-tenure: but it does not follow from their failure to discharge the burden of proof resting on them that their claim was a dishonest one; and dishonesty is surely not to be presumed. As they had failed, it was quite correct on the part of the first Court to say that they were "trying to include some more land." But I cannot read this remark as tantamount to the finding that they knew that what they were claiming was no part of their under-tenure. On the contrary, the findings of fact point in the opposite direction: for it appears that the Sanyals have been in possession of these parcels "for many years" without paying any additional rent for them to the patnidars; that their tenants have, as such, been holding them "for a long time;" and that a dispute regarding them had led, in 1903, to a proceeding under Chapter XII of the Code of Criminal Procedure and an order of attachment under section 146. In these circumstances, I am disposed to think that the case may well be held to be within the scope of the Full Bench ruling, that the defendants in actual occupation are, therefore, raiyats within the meaning of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, and that they have most justly been left undisturbed as tenants liable to pay rent to the plaintiffs.

It is next contended on behalf of the patnidars that the judgment of the lower Appellate Court amounts to nothing beyond an expression of concurrence with the finding of the Court of first instance, and can, therefore, hardly be called a judgment at all A remand is, consequently, suggested as necessary. As to this, I find, that although the Subordinate Judge has disposed of much of the case by referring to the "detailed reasons" given by the first Court, he has added the remark that the plaintiff's Pleader "could scarcely assail, with any show of reason, any of the findings of the learned Munsif," and he has gone on to discuss what he has described as "the only point he (the Pleader) had made out." Where the Court below has delivered a good judgment, it may be difficult, if not impossible, for the Appellate Court to support it with independent reasons; and, in such a case there is nothing to be gained by mere repetition or paraphrase. There must, of course, be at least enough in the Appellate judgment to show that the Court of Appeal has really applied its mind to the case and formed an opinion of its own on the points arising in it: but that is the only rule that I can venture to lay down on the subject. In this case, having read both judgments, I am satisfied that the learned Subordinate Judge has dealt with the appeal with intelligence; and I think that his judgment fulfills the requirements of the rule I have indicated above.

Then it is urged, with special reference to plot 3, first, that the judgment of the lower Appellate Court is unintelligible, and, secondly, that both Courts were wrong in refusing to order a local investigation, as prayed for by the plaintiffs.

As to former complaint, the passage attacked reads as follows:—"On the first point (i. e., the point whether plot 3 formed a portion of the plaintiff's estate) it would appear from the deposition of the plaintiff's gomasta that the zemindar Khirod Govinda examined by the defendants, has not a portion in Chota Salika Mauza in question. As stated by the learned Munsif in detail, the plaintiff's evidence is not sufficient to find that this plot 3 is comprised in his Saham or portion of the Mauza."

(5) 17 C. 45.

The words, as committed to paper, are certainly open to the criticism passed upon them,—so much so, indeed as to raise the suspicion that there must be something wrong. And a reference to the deposition alluded to at once makes it clear that the Judge intended to say "got" when he wrote "not." The whole then becomes quite intelligible, and no fault can be found with it.

As to the local investigation, it appears that the suit was instituted on the 28th April 1906, the issues were settled on the 21st November 1906, and after several adjournments, the case was set down for the 11th May 1907, when an application for a local investigation was, for the first time, made. Now, the mere fact that the case was not ready for final hearing on that day, and was, as a matter of fact, not disposed of till the 12th August following, does not make the Munsif's refusal on the ground that the application had been "filed at too late a stage" such an arbitrary exercise of discretion as can properly be interfered with on second appeal. I must, it seems to me, look at the matter as it stood and presented itself to the Munsif on the 11th May 1907, and not in the light of what subsequently happened; and, so regarding it, I am quite unable to hold that the Munsif was acting at all arbitrarily.

There remains the Sanyals' appeal. The argument on their behalf is that the first Court, having found that they have been in possession of some of the parcels "for a long time ought to have gone further and found how long precisely they had held possession, and whether they had not thereby acquired a title to be left undisturbed on the principle explained in Ishan Chandra Mitter v. Raja Ram Ranjan Chakrabutty(6). The short answer to this is that the Sanyals set up no such case and the learned Munsif would have been in error had he made it for them.

The result is that each of these appeals must be dismissed with costs.

Appeals dismissed.

(6) 2 C. L. J. 125.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 451 OF 1911.

December 21, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Karamat Husain and Mr. Justice Chamier.

GENDAN LAL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BABU RAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. I, r. 9—Applicability of the rule—Hindu Law—Mortgage—Suit against joint Hindu family for sale of mortgaged property—One of the members not made defendant within limitation—Objection as to non-joinder taken at earliest opportunity, effect of—Dismissal of suit—Limitation.

G. sued C. and others, members of a joint Hindu family, on foot of a mortgage for sale of the mortgaged property. G., however, did not implead an infant of the defendants' joint family as party to the suit within limitation. An objection as to non-joinder was taken at the earliest opportunity:

Held, that under the circumstances the entire suit should be dismissed as time-barred.

Balwant Singh v. Aman Singh, 7 A. L. J. 852; 7 Ind. Cas. 712; Jaddo Kuer v. Sheo Shanker Ram, 7 A. L. J. 945; 7 Ind. Cas. 902; Gurivayya Ganda v. Dattatraya Anant, 28 B. 11; Thakurmani Singh v. Dai Rani Koeri, 33 C. 1079, Imam Ali v. Baijnath, 33 C. 613; 10 C. W. N. 551; 3 C. L. J. 576, referred to.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge of Shahjahanpur, dated 16th February 1911.

The Hon'ble Mr. Moti Lal Nehru, (with him Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji), for the Appellant.

Mr. Govind Prashad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

CHAMIER, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the appellant upon a mortgage, made in favour of his father by one Mendhai Singh. The defendants to the suit are the three sons of the mortgagor who is dead. Bismillah Begam who purchased a portion of the mortgaged property after the mortgage, and five members of the family of one Baldeo Sahai, deceased, who purchased another portion of the property after the mortgage. The Munsif decreed the claim against the sons of the mortgagor and against Bismillah Begam but dismissed it as against the remaining defendants on the ground that the plaintiff had failed to implead Bishambhar Nath, the son of the defendant Ram Chandar, who was a member of the joint family to which defendants Nos. 5 to 9 belong. That decision was affirmed by the District Judge who agreed with the Munsif that Bishambhar Nath was a necessary party to the suit and that the provisions of Order I, rule 9 could not avail the plaintiff as Bishambhar Nath had no specific share in the property. I may mention here that both Courts have held that the plaintiff can have made no proper inquiry regarding the members of the family to which Bishambhar Nath belongs. They note the fact that the plaintiff lives in the same quarter of the city as the defendants do and it seems that both Courts were of opinion that if the plaintiff had made inquiries he would have come to know of the existence of Bishambhar Nath though he was only 9 or 10 months old at the date of the institution of the suit.

In second appeal it is contended that a decree should have been made, at all events, for sale of the interests of the members of the family who are parties to the suit. The question is one of considerable importance in view of the passing of Act IX of 1908, which, so far as the Province of Agra is concerned, reduced the period of limitation for a suit of this kind from 60 years to 12 years. Before that Act was passed it was the practice in suits of this kind either to add the necessary parties or to allow the plaintiff to withdraw the suit with permission to bring another suit. One or other of these courses could generally be adopted as most suits were instituted well within limitation. The present suit, like thousands of others was instituted on August 6th, 1910, almost the last day of limitation under the Act of 1908 and the non-joinder of Bishambhar Nath was not brought to the notice of the Court till after the period of limitation for bringing a suit against him had expired, although the objection was taken at the first possible moment. The question what should be done in such circumstances seems to have been decided in three different ways in Shahjahanpur and it is probable that there have been similar conflicting decisions elsewhere. In some cases the claim has been dismissed in accordance with the ruling in Gulam Kadir Khan v. Mustakim Khan (1), in others where the party omitted was a minor the claim has been decreed on the ground that he was sufficiently represented by his father or some other adult member of his family or party to the suit and in others, decrees have been made for sale of the interest of the portion to the suit.

We have been referred to a large number of rulings but the precise question which we have to decide does not appear to have been the subject of any reported decision since the passing of the Code of Civil Procedure 1908, whereby section 85 of the Transfer of Property Act was repealed. The last mentioned section provided that, "subject to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure (1882), section 437, all persons having an interest in the property comprised in a mortgage must be joined as parties to any suit" under this Chapter relating to such mortgage: Provided that the plaintiff has notice of such interest. When that section was in force, if a plaintiff failed to implead a child like Bishambhar Nath in a suit like this not having notice of his existence and for any reason the child could not be added as a party, as for instance when the objection was taken at a very late stage, the practice was to allow the suit to proceed and if the claim succeed to make the usual decree for sale. It often happened that the absent member of the family was unable to challenge the decree or sale held in pursuance of it effectively, see for example the cases of Balwant Singh v. Aman Singh (2) and Jaddo Kuer v. Sheo Shankar (3) and cases there cited. The result was often the same where the failure of the plaintiff to implead a member of a family of whose existence and interest he was aware was discovered by his opponent or by the Court after the suit had been decreed. In cases other than those in which Hindu families were concerned and in some cases where such families were concerned it was held that the person who ought to have been but was not impleaded did not lose his right to redeem the mortgage.

Order XXXIV, rule 1 which has taken the place of section 85 of the Transfer of Property Act provides that "subject to the provisions of this Code all persons having an interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption shall be joined as parties to any suit relating to the mortgage." There is nothing in the rule corresponding with the last nine words of section

(1) 18 A. 209.

(2) 7 A. L. J. 852; 7 Ind. Cas. 112.

(3) 7 A. L. J. 945; 7 Ind. Cas. 902.

58 of the Transfer of Property Act, and the rule is made subject not merely to Order XXXI, rule 1, which corresponds with section 437 of the old Code, but to all the other provisions of the Code. Under the present law it would appear that the decision of the Court upon an objection as to non-joinder in a case of this kind must be the same whether the plaintiff had or had not notice of the existence of the person whom he omitted to implead. It must often happen that no amount of diligence will enable the plaintiff in a suit upon a mortgage to ascertain all the persons who ought to be joined. This is a consideration which should not be lost sight of in determining what the duty of Court is when it is discovered that a person who ought to have been made a party, has not been impleaded.

It was suggested that no question of limitation would have arisen if either of the Courts below had made Bishambhar Nath a party or if we were to do so now and the ruling in Guruvayya Gonda v. Dattatraya Anant (4) was referred to. But all that was held in that case was, that a plea of non-joinder of a necessary party may be waived and that if fresh parties are joined merely for the purpose of safe-guarding the rights subsisting between them and others claiming generally in the same interest the determination (by application of the provisions of section 22 of the Limitation Act) of the date of institution of the suit as regards such freshly joined parties does not ordinarily affect the right of the original plaintiff to continue the suit. In the present case the plea of non-joinder was taken at the first possible moment and the decision in that case does not go the length of holding that a suit for sale may be continued against a person who, having a share in the property, ought to have been but it was not made a party when that person is made a party after the period of limitation for a suit against him has expired. A stronger authority in favour of the plaintiff in the decision in Thakurmani Singh v. Dai Rani Koer (5), where the Court held that the fact that an infant grandson of the plaintiff in a suit on a mortgage and a purchaser of a portion of the mortgaged property had been made parties to the suit after limitation had expired, was not fatal to the suit. The ruling in Guruvayya Gonda v. Dattatraya Anant (4) cited above, was referred to as authority for the decision regarding the infant plaintiff but does not appear to me to go to that length. It seems to me that Order I, rule 10 (5) would have applied if either of the Courts below had made Bishambhar Nath a party to the suit and that the suit is as against him barred by limitation. It is, therefore, useless to have him made a party now.

We have not been asked to hold nor, in my opinion, is it possible to hold in his absence that he is sufficiently represented by his father Ram Chandar. If the objection had not been taken and the interests of the whole family had been sold and a suit had been brought by Bishambar Nath to recover his share or to redeem the property it might have been held that he was sufficiently represented by his father. At this stage it is impossible to hold that Order XXXIV, rule 1 is subject to the other provisions of the Code, one of which is that no suit shall be defeated by reason of the misjoinder or non-joinder of parties and the Court may in every suit deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it (Order I, rule 9). The case presents no difficulty where the interest of the person who ought to have been but has not been made a party is separate from the interests of the parties to the suit. In such a case the Court can order the sale of the interest of the parties for recovery of a proportionate amount of the mortgage-money as was done in Imam Ali v. Baijnath (6), and other cases. But where the interest or the person who ought to have been but has not been made a party to the suit is inseparable from the interests of the persons who have been made parties it is not practicable to deal with the claim as regards the interests of the persons before the Court. In a case like the present one, it is impossible to say for what amount the shares of the members of the family who are parties to the suit are liable and the appellant is not entitled to throw the burden of the whole mortgage upon the undivided interests of the members of the family before the Court against their will. Had the members who are parties taken the objection at a later stage the Court, on becoming aware of the existence of Bishambar Nath, might have made a decree for the sale of the undivided interests of these members for the recovery of the whole debt and left the purchaser at auction to work out his rights by partition as is done where the undivided interest of a member of a joint family is attached and sold in execution of a money decree.

(4) 28 B. 11.
(5) 33 C. 1079 at p. 1093.
(6) 33 C. 613; 10 C. W. N. 551; 3 C. L. J. 576.

The conclusions at which I have arrived, not without considerable hesitation are that Bishambar Nath is necessary party to the suit that the suit as against him was barred by limitation when the objection on the score of non-joinder was raised, that although ordinarily it is the duty of the Court in a case like this to deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties before it, in the present case it is impossible to do so and the only alternative is to dismiss the suit. If the view that I have taken is correct, it seems probable that innocent parties may suffer hardship in some cases. But all possibility of hardship will be avoided if plaintiffs bring their suits well within the prescribed period of limitation for all objections on the score of misjoinder or non-joinder of parties must be taken at the earliest possible opportunity and if not so taken, must be deemed to have been waived. (Order I, rule 13). In the present case the plaintiff followed the previous practice of bringing his suit at the last possible moment and has himself to thank for the result.

I would dismiss this appeal with costs.

KARAMAT HUSAIN, J.—I fully agree with my learned brother in the order proposed by him. What we have to decide is whether we have to dismiss the appeal for non-joinder of Bishambhar Nath (a member of the Hindu joint family of which Babu Ram and others also are members) who was a necessary party under Order XXIV, rule 1 or to decree it dealing with the rights and interests of the defendants before us in the joint family property under Order I, rule 9. Order XXIV, rule 1 is no doubt subject to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure including Order I, rule 9 but Order I, rule 9 has no application to the case before us. Where the rights and interest of the parties actually before the Court are such as can be dealt with it in its discretion can do so. This, however, pre-supposes that the rights and interests of the parties actually before the Court are so defined and separable from the rights and interests of the parties which are not before it as to have adjudication in respect thereof possible without affecting the rights and interest of the parties not before it. In an action upon a mortgage for sale of a joint family property when some of the members of the joint family are made defendants their rights and interests in the joint family property are neither defined nor separable from the rights and interests of those members of the joint family who are not before the Court. In such circumstances, the Court cannot possibly proceed under Order I, rule 9 to deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it.

What has already been stated shows that non-joinder of Bishambar Nath is fatal to the suit of the plaintiff inasmuch as in his absence the rights and interests of other members of the joint family in the joint family property cannot be dealt with under Order I, rule 9. The appeal must, therefore, be dismissed with costs.

BY THE COURT.—Order of the Court is that the appeal be dismissed with costs which in this Court will include fees on the higher scale.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 222 OF 1910.

November 20, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim.

RAMASAMI REDDI—APPELLANT

versus

LAKSHMIAMBAL AMMAL AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXIV, r. 4—Suit for recovery of debt—Deposit of amount in Court by defendant—Costs, award of—Discretion of Court.

DWARKA NATH v. PRALHAD RAM.

In a suit for the recovery of a debt, where the amount has been deposited in Court, the Court has a discretion as to the disposal of costs.

Appeal against the decree of the District Court of South Arcot, dated 12th September 1910, in A. S. No. 130 of 1910, presented against the decree of the District Munsif of Panrut, in O. S. No. 111 of 1910.

Mr. C. V. Anathakrishna Iyer, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. Narayanasawmi Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—We think the order of the District Judge is right. Order XXIV, rule 4 gives the Court a discretion as to the disposal of costs in a suit for the recovery of a debt, where the amount claimed has been deposited in Court.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2877 OF 1908.

December 13, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Carnduff.

DWARKANATH MISSER—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

PRALHAD RAM TEWARI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Chota Nagpur Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act (I B. C. of 1879), s. 124—Chota Nagpur Tenancy (Amendment) Act (V B. C. of 1903), s 35—Resumable under-tenure—Sale at auction—Sale before Tenancy Amendment Act—Effect of sale—Costs—Second Appeal.

Under section 124 of the Chota Nagpur Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1879, as it stood originally, a resumable under-tenure could not be sold in execution of a rent-decree, but the right and title of the judgment-debtor could be sold. That section was repealed by section 35 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1903. The repealing enactment came into force on November 4th, 1903, and its section 1, sub-section (3) declared it applicable to all cases pending on the date of its commencement so far as might be.

A resumable under-tenure was sold at an auction-sale in execution of a rent-decree, on August 18th, 1903:

Held, that, the repealing enactment could not affect the sale concluded before its commencement; that section 124 as originally passed applied, and that the purchaser purchased only the right and title of the defaulting under-tenure-holder.

The High Court will not interfere in second appeal with the discretion exercised by a lower Appellate Court on a question of costs.

Appeal from the decree of Sub-Judge of Ranchi, dated August 27th, 1908, modifying that of the Munsif of Ranchi, dated April 11th 1908.

Babu Bipin Behari Ghosh, for the Appellant.

Babu Nagendra Nath Ghosh, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal relates to a resumable under-tenure formed out of an eight-annas share of Mauza Moro in Chota Nagpur. The original under-tenure-holders had mortgaged half of it to the respondent plaintiff, and had given him an usufructuary lease thereof at a moiety of the rent due to the superior landlord, the Maharaja of Chota Nagpur. On the 18th August 1903, the appellant-defendant purchased what may, for the present, be called the whole under-tenure at a sale held in execution of a decree for arrears of its rent obtained by the Maharaja under the Chota Nagpur Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act of 1879 (Bengal Act I of 1879); while the respondent-plaintiff purchased, on the 15th July 1905, the half mortgaged to him at a sale in execution of a mortgage-decree which he had secured against his mortgagors. So far, then, this was the position of affairs. From March 1903 till July 1905, the defendant was the under-tenure-holder, from whom the whole of the rent of the under-tenure was due to the Maharaja; whereas the plaintiff was the defendant's sub-lessee of half of the under-tenure, and was bound to pay the defendant half of the said rent. In July 1905, however, the parties became equal co-sharers, and thereafter each of them was responsible for a moiety to the superior landlord.

In 1906, the Maharaja sued the defendant for the entire rent of the years 1902 to 1904 (roughly), and obtained a decree, which the plaintiff paid in order to prevent the sale of the under-tenure in execution. Again, in 1907, a similar decree for the rent of 1905 was obtained against the defendant and similarly satisfied by the plaintiff. The suit out of which the present appeal arises, was subsequently brought by the plaintiff for the recovery from the defendant of half of the rent thus discharged by the plaintiff for the years 1902 to 1905, the plaintiff further claiming, for reasons which will presently appear, the whole instead of a moiety, of the rent which he had paid for the year 1904

DWARKA NATH v. PRALHAD RAM.

In the Court of first instance the Munsif allowed the claim for half of the rent throughout, and refused the further claim for the other half of the rent of 1904; but the Sub-Judge, on appeal, allowed the latter also, and the first of the two points taken before me is that he was wrong in law in so doing.

As has been shown already, the respondent was in 1904 the sub-lessee of the appellant in respect of half of the under-tenure and bound to pay him half the rent thereof; and this liability he discharged—or, rather, was compelled by suit to discharge. The appellant, however, failed on this part to pay the rent due for 1904 to the superior landlord: a decree therefor was obtained by the Maharaja against him; and the respondent had to pay the decretal amount in order to save the under-tenure from sale. In these circumstances, the respondent sought to recover that amount in full from the appellant, and it seems to me that he was clearly entitled to do so. The arrear for 1904 had fallen due before the respondent's purchase in 1905; so that the respondent was, in regard to it, only the mortgagee in possession, whereas the appellant stood in the shoes of the mortgagors, the original under-tenure-holders. The only person bound to pay the Maharaja's rent for 1904 was, therefore, the appellant, whom the Maharaja accordingly sued and obtained a decree against. The respondent's mortgage-interest then became liable to be defeated by the threatened sale under the law, as amended by sections 34 and 35 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1903 (Bengal Act V of 1903), which had, for the first time, rendered a resumable under-tenure saleable, subject to the superior landlords' right of resumption, in execution of a rent-decree. The respondent had, therefore, to protect himself by depositing the whole of the rent decreed, and, as he thereby protected the appellant also, he was surely entitled to get it all back from the latter. I agree, therefore, with the lower Appellate Court, and I think that there is neither law nor logic in the Munsif's decision awarding the respondent one-half, and not the whole.

The only other ground of appeal relates to a set off, which the Court of first instance allowed, but the lower Appellate Court disallowed the appellant. The Maharaja had sued the original under-tenure-holders for the rent of the years 1899 to 1901, a period anterior to the purchase of either the appellant or the respondent, and he had obtained a decree. This decree the appellant had satisfied on the 17th March 1906, in order to prevent the sale of the under-tenure on that date, and he sought in the present suit to set off half the decretal amount so paid by him against the respondent's claim for contribution.

Now, as has been set forth above, the appellant purchased this resumable under-tenure at an auction sale held on the 18th August, 1903, in pursuance of the provisions of the Chota Nagpur Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act of 1879. But, under section 124 of that enactment, as it stood originally, such an under-tenure could not be sold at all in execution of a decree for arrears of rent, and all that could be sold, with the sanction of the Commissioner of the Division, was the right and title of the judgment-debtor in it. By section 35 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1903 (Bengal Act V of 1903), section 124 of the original Act was, no doubt, repealed. But the repealing enactment did not come into force till the 4th November 1903; and, although its section 1, sub-section (3), declared it applicable, not only to all proceedings instituted after its commencement, but also, "so far as might be to all cases pending in any Court or before any officer on the date of such commencement," it cannot possibly, in my opinion, be held to have in any way affected an auction-sale concluded before that date. The learned Vakil for the appellant has referred to the well known exception in favour of enactments merely regulating procedure and practice to the ordinary rule against retrospective effect laid down by section 8 of the Bengal General Clauses Act, 1899 (Bengal Act I of 1899); but there seems to me to be no cogency in his argument and I have no hesitation in saying that the learned Sub-Judge has arrived at the right conclusion. Section 124 of the Act of 1879, as originally passed, applied: whence it follows that the appellant's purchase on the 18th August 1903, was a purchase of, at most, only the right and title of the defaulting under-tenure-holders, and did not carry with it any charge in respect of the arrears of rent owed by them. Nor could the respondent incur any such liability by his purchase in July 1905, in execution of his mortgage decree. The liability for the arrears of 1899 to 1901 was a purely personal liability, which continued to rest on the mortgagors, the original under-tenure-holders and the appellant's payment was a purely voluntary payment which benefited them alone. Ergo, the appellant's claim by way of set-off has, in the view which I take of the case, been rightly rejected.

There remains only the respondent's cross-objection to the order depriving him of his costs in the Court of first instance. I am not prepared to interfere on a special appeal with the discretion exercised by the lower Appellate Court in a matter of this kind.

The result is, that this appeal is dismissed with costs, and the cross-objection is similarly disallowed.

Appeal and Cross-objection dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 929 OF 1910.

November 28, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim.

VARIANGATTIL PAKSSERI RAMAN MENON, KARNAVAN OF THE TARWAD—APPELLANT

versus

SANKARA SUBBA PATTAR'S SON, CHANDRA SEKHARAN PATTER AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Indemnity mortgage—Sub-mortgage—Amendment of plaint—Discretion of Court.

Plaintiff mortgaged his property to 1st defendant, who sub-mortgaged it. After discharge of mortgage, plaintiff was sued by sub-mortgagee for his amount and a decree was obtained against plaintiff. Plaintiff filed an appeal against that decree and while it was pending, instituted the present action against 1st defendant for indemnity, praying for the amount of the decree or, in the alternative, for the deposit of the amount in Court. After the institution of the suit and during the pendency of this second appeal plaintiff satisfied the sub-mortgagee's decree and prayed for the amendment of his plaint by mention of that fact:

Held, that though plaintiff's suit for indemnity, while he had not sustained the loss, was not sustainable, he was entitled to the alternative prayer for deposit in Court;

Patti Narayanamurthy Iyer v. Marimuthu Pillai, 26 M. 322, Pundi Doraisami Tevar v. Lakshmanan Chetty, 14 M. L. J. 285, and In re Richardson, (1911) 2 K. B. 705; 80 L. J. K. B. 1232, referred to.

(2) that the amendment prayed for, should be allowed.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of South Malabar, in A. S. No. 60 of 1910, presented against the decree of the District Munsif of Chowghat, in O. S. No. 845 of 1908.

Mr. C. V. Anantha Krishna Iyer, for the Appellant.

Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The position in this case is somewhat curious. The plaintiff in the suit mortgaged certain properties to the father of the 1st defendant for about Rs. 1,000, and the mortgagee, for about Rs. 700, executed at sub-mortgage.

The plaintiff, after the execution of the sub-mortgage, paid off the mortgage, and then the sub-mortgagee, in a suit to enfore his sub-mortgage, recovered a judgment against the present plaintiff for the amount of the sub-mortgage. The present plaintiff in this suit, who was a defendant in the suit of the sub-mortgage, appealed against the decree, but, pending the appeal, instituted the present action against the first defendant and his son, the second defendant, for a decree for payment to him of the amount decreed in the sub-mortgagee's suit or for an order directing the defendants to deposit the amount in Court for payment to the plaintiff. Now, the decisions of this Court lay down that a person cannot maintain a suit for indemnity unless he has actually incurred the loss against which he seeks to be indemnified. Patti Narayanamurthy Iyer v. Marimuthu Pillay (1) and Doraisami Tevar v. Lakshmanan Chetty (2) show that it would debar the plaintiff from obtaining a decree for the payment of the amount decreed against him. But, the case of In re Richardson (3) shows that in equity a plaintiff in a case of this nature may still be entitled to a relief in the nature of the alternative remedy asked for in his plaint. The learned Vakil for the appellant further states, that since the institution of the second appeal, his client has satisfied the decree obtained by the sub-mortgagee and he asks for leave to amend the plaint so as to enable him to obtain

(1) 26 M. 322.
(2) 14 M. L. J. 285.
(3) (1911) 2 K. B. 705; 80 L. J. K. B. 1232.

decree for the amount so paid to him. We think this is a proper case in which the amendment should be allowed. The effect of such amendment will enable the plaintiff to obtain, in the present state of facts, a remedy more complete than he was entitled to on the date of the institution of the suit. But it would not, in our opinion, be a case of converting one cause of action into another, and under the new Code of Civil Procedure, the powers of the Court to allow amendment are very wide. We think, by allowing the amendment, the question at issue between the parties will be completely disposed of and would obviate the necessity for a fresh suit. We, therefore, set aside the decree of the lower Courts and order that the plaintiff may be allowed to amend his plaint by alleging that he has paid the amount sought to be recovered from the defendants to the sub-mortgagee. The District Munsif will, on receiving the amended plaint proceed to dispose of the suit according to law. The defendant will be at liberty to file additional written statement in so far as it may be occasioned by the amendment, and the parties will be permitted to adduce such fresh evidence as may be necessitated by the amendment. The costs of the 2nd and 3rd defendants incurred in this Court will be paid by the plaintiff. The costs in the Court of first instance will be costs in the cause.

Cause remanded.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 167 OF 1910.

November 28, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim and Mr. Justice Spencer.

SUBBARAYA IYER AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAMSAWMI PILLAI—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 257 A, 244—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47, O. XX, r. 11—Execution of decree—Arrangement between parties substantially adding to decree—Sanction of Court—Execution after coming into force of Civil Procedure Code, 1908—Enforceability.

Order XX, rule 11, and section 47 of the new Civil Procedure Code, 1908, has altered the law contained in section 257 A of the old Code, and renders legal arrangements between parties after decree, which provide for a distinct benefit to one of them, and treats proceedings under section 244 of the old Code as a suit.

In the course of execution proceedings, the parties came to an arrangement, while the old Code was in force, whereby. in consideration of defendant being given time, plaintiff was to get higher interest and was given liberty to proceed against defendant's person. This arrangement having been sanctioned by Court the plaintiff applied to enforce it after the Code of 1908 came into force:

Held, that plaintiff was entitled to enforce it.

Venkatagiri Iyer v. Sadagopachariar, 14 M L.J. 359 and Palaniappa Chattiyar v. Sayari Naidoo, 18 M.L.J. 548; 4 M. L. T. 233, held to have lost its force with the repeal of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882.

Sheo Gulam Lall v. Beni Prasad, 5 C. 27; 4 C. L. R. 29; Durga Prasad Banerjee v. Lalit Mohan Singh Roy, 25 C. 86 and Thakoor Dyal Singh v. Sarju Pershad Misser, 20 C. 22, followed.

Appeal against the order of the District Court of Trichinopoly, dated 21st September 1909, in E P. No. 51 of 1909, in O.S. No. 28 of 1903.

Mr. B. Sita Ram Row, for the Appellants.

Mr. G. Annajee Row, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In the course of executing the decree in Original Suit No. 28 of 1903 on the file of the District Court of Trichinopoly, obtained upon a deed of hypothecation, the parties entered into an agreement whereby the second defendant was given time to satisfy the decree on condition of his paying interest at 12 per cent. per annum instead of 9 per cent. per annum and the decree was made executable against the person of the second defendant as well as by sale of the hypotheca. The Court sanctioned the arrangement under section 257 A of the Code of Civil Procedure on July 26th, 1905. On August 2nd, 1909, the plaintiff's legal representatives sought to execute the decree for the unpaid balance by arresting the second defendant. The District Judge dismissed the application, relying on the ruling in Venkatagiri Iyer v. Sodagopa Chariar (1). It was held in that decision that the Court's sanction of an agreement between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor by which the former is benefited does not make it a part of the decree, but the decree-holder must bring a separate suit to enforce it. Bashyam Iyenger, J., pointed out that a Court has no power to vary or add to its decrees after they are passed except under particular provisions of law and he quoted in support of his view the opinion of the Privy Council in

(1) 14 M. L. J. 359.

KOSURI RAJAGOPAL v. DATLA RADHAYYA.

Kotagiri Venaatasubbamma Row v. Vellanki Venkatrama Row (2), that subsequent variations of decrees unless made under section 206 or section 623, Civil Procedure Code, were ultra vires. Their Lordships of the Privy Council observed at the same time that it was open to the Court to treat such a compromise as a rule of Court and to stay all further proceedings in the decree against the third defendant who alone compromised in that case with the plaintiffs except for the purpose of enforcing the compromise.

Now, in the present instance the compromise was sanctioned by the Court at a time when the Code of 1882, was in force and compromises of this nature after suit were declared by section 257A to be void unless made for consideration and with the sanction of the Court.

When execution against the person of the second defendant was applied for in 1909, the Code of Civil Procedure of 1908 was in force and the old section 257A had dropped out. Further, the old section 210 had reappeared as Order XX, rule 11 in a new form containing a provision for a Court after the passing of a decree where and in so far as it is a decree for the payment of money, ordering the postponement of payment of the amount decreed on such terms as to the payment of interest as it thinks fit. Lastly, section 47 of the new Code of Civil Procedure, corresponding to section 244 of the old Code, had an additional clause added to it, which permits Courts, subject to objections that may be raised on account of limitation or jurisdiction, to treat proceedings under this section relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of a decree as a suit or a suit as a proceeding.

With this alteration of the law the ratio decidendi of the decisions in Venkatagiri Iyer v. Sadagopachariar (1) and Palanippa Chettiyar v. Sayari Naidoo (3) has lost its force.

We find no difficulty in following the decisions in Sheo Golam Lall v. Beni Prosad (4); Durga Prasad Banerjee v. Lalit Mohan Singh Roy (5) and Thakoor Dyal Singh v. Sarju Pershad Misser (6) and we think accordingly that the second defendant who had the benefit of the arrangement for delay in execution and the order passed sanctioning it, is not at liberty to resile from that arrangement.

The lower Court's order is reversed and the case will be sent back to the District Judge for proceeding with the execution application.

The respondent will bear the appellant's costs in both Courts.

Appeal allowed.

(2) 24 M. 1.
(3) 18 M. L. J. 548; 4 M. L. T. 233.
(4) 5 C. 27; 4 C. L. R. 29.
(5) 25 C. 86.
(6) 20 C. 22.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1284 OF 1910.

November 30, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Spencer.

KOSURI RAJAGOPAL RAJA AND OTHERS —APPELLANTS

versus

DATLA RADHAYYA AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Contract—Provision for benefit of third parties—Right of such third parties to enforce the provision in their favour.

Where, at a partition between the members of a joint Hindu family, provision is made for the female members of the family the latter are entitled to enforce the same and sue upon it:

Defendants Nos. 3 and 5 entered into a deed of partition whereby their mother was to get certain land which was to be taken by her daughters after her death. The mother having died, plaintiff, one of three daughters, sued for her third-share of the said land:

Held, that plaintiff was entitled to succeed.

Shuppu Ammal v. Subramaniam, 33 M. 238; 19 M. L. J. 739; 4 Ind. Cas. 1083; Arumuga Goundan v. Chinnammal, 14 M. L. T. 214; 21 M. L. J. 918; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 524; 12 Ind. Cas. 185, Rakhmabai v. Moreshwar, 6 Bom. L. R. 421, Protab Narain Mukerjee v. Sarat Kumari Debi, 5 C. W. N. 386, referred to.

Second appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Kistna, at Ellore, in A. S. No. 223 of 1907, presented against the decree of the District Munsif of Narsapur, in A. O. No. 235 of 1908.

Mr. Prakasam, for the Appellants.

Mr. Ramesam, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff and defendants Nos. 1 and 2 are sisters of defendants Nos. 3 to 5. By an instrument of partition entered into between defendants Nos. 3 to 5 it was stipulated that certain land was to be enjoyed by the mother of the parties for her life and to be taken by her daughters, that is the plaintiff and defendants Nos. 1 and 2, after her death. The mother is now dead. This suit by the plaintiff is to recover one-third of that property, defendants Nos. 1 and 2 being entitled to the remaining two-thirds.

Defendants Nos. 3 to 5, the brothers, contend that the plaintiff not being a party to the partition instrument has no cause of action for the recovery of the property. They plead that by a subsequent arrangement soon after the partition they cancelled the allotment to the mother and sisters. It was suggested during the course of the argument here that the partition deed never became operative, but we do not read the written statement as raising this question. The issue was whether the arrangement was subsequently cancelled. The lower Appellate Court has given the plaintiff a decree and defendants Nos. 3 to 5 are the appellants in this Court.

We are of opinion that the decision appealed from is right. To the general rule that persons who are not parties to a contract have no right of action based on it, there are several exceptions. The Privy Council has recently pointed out that the rule must be applied to this country with considerable exceptions. In that case a Muhammadan wife was held entitled to sue upon a contract entered into between her father and her husband's father before the marriage. We are of opinion that where at a partition between the members of a joint family provision is made for female members of it, it must be held that as the contract was entered into for the benefit of those who are provided for by the instrument of partition, they are entitled to the benefit of it and to sue upon it. This principle has been affirmed by this Court in Shuppu Ammal v. Subramaniam (1). See also Arumuga Goundan v. Chinnammal (2). The decisions of other High Courts have also affirmed the principle. See Rakhmabai v. Govind Moreshwar (3); Protab Narain Mukerjee v. Sarat Kumari Debi (4).

The exceptions are not confined to cases where one or other of the parties to the contract can be said to have made himself a trustee for strangers who claim to sue on it. In Pollock on Contracts four exceptions are stated. The third class of exceptions according to the learned author is the case of trusts. Then he mentions another and distinct class. To quote his own words: "Closely connected with the cases covered by the doctrine of trusts but extending beyond them, we have the rule of equity by which special favour is extended to provisions made by parents for their children." In Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. VII, page 344, section 711, the case of marriage settlement is treated as included in the case of trusts. Sir Frederick Pollock's classification commends itself better to us. It may be observed that the general statement in Halsbury's Laws of England that another exception to the rule is recognized in cases where the contract is intended to secure a benefit to a person who is not a party to it will cover cases which are not comprised in trusts. It is usual amongst Hindus to allot portions to sisters at a partition between brothers. In the document in this case the provision for the plaintiff and her sisters is stated to be for Pasum Kunkumam. We find no difficulty in holding that sisters are within the equity of a family settlement amongst Hindus. The allotment of the land in this case was made for the benefit of the plaintiff and her sisters. They are persons for whom it was the moral duty of the parties to the instrument to provide. We are of opinion, therefore, that the plaintiff's right to sue was rightly upheld.

We dismiss the second appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 33 M. 238; 19 M. L. J. 739; 4 Ind. Cas. 1083.
(2) 10 M. L. T. 214; 21 M. L. J. 918; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 524; 12 Ind. Cas. 185.
(3) 6 Bom. L. R. 421.
(4) 5 C. W. N. 386.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1308 OF 1909.

December 20, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Carnduff.

GANAPAT MARWARI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

BALMAKUND BEHARA AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Property in hand of a member of Hindu family—Presumption that property is joint—Nucleus of family property—Manager of family doing banking business, powers of—Second Appeal—Point of law—Misconstruction of piece of documentary evidence—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 100.

GANAPAT v. BALMAKUND.

Where it is proved that there was a nucleus of joint Hindu family property, any property in the hands of a member of such family should be presumed to be family property.

Ram Persad Singh v. Lakhpati Koer, 30 C. 231 at p. 244; 7 C. W. N. 162; 30 I. A. 1, Gonnu Singh v. Bhagwati Koeri, 3 Ind. Cas. 234 and Dwarka Prosad Raghubir v. Jamna Das Gordhan Das, 13 Bom. L. R. 233; 9 Ind. Cas. 948, referred to.

A person who, on behalf of a joint Hindu family carries on the family banking business as manager thereof can, not only enter into contracts and give discharge so as to bind his co-parceners, but may also sue and be sued alone without the other members of the family being joined with him in the suit.

Kishen Parshad v. Har Narain Singh, 38 I. A. 45; 15 C. W. N. 321; 13 C. L. J. 345; 9 Ind. Cas. 739; 8 A. L. J. 256; 9 M. L. T. 343; 21 M. L. J. 378; 13 Bom. L. R. 359; 33 A. 272; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 195, relied upon.

The misconstruction of a piece of documentary evidence is not a mistake of law sufficient to concede a second appeal.

Nowbut Singh v. Chatterdharee Singh, 19 W. R. 222, followed.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Cuttack, dated May 25th, 1909, reversing that of the Sub-Judge of Sambalpore, dated February 13th, 1907.

Babu Jogendra Chandra Ghose, for the Appellant.

Babus Sarat Chandra Ray Chaudhuri and Biraj Mohan Mazumdar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This was a suit brought by the two plaintiffs for the recovery of Rs. 1,000 admittedly deposited by their deceased brother Radhasham Behara, with a banker. In the Court of first instance it was found that the money was not joint family property; that therefore, Radhasham's widow being alive, the plaintiff had no right to sue; and that the money had, in fact, been re-paid. As a result, the suit was at first dismissed. The learned District Judge has, however, reversed all the above findings and decreed it; and the defendant-banker has now preferred this second appeal.

The District Judge's decision is attacked mainly with reference to the law he has enunciated as to the presumption in favour of a Hindu family being joint and property in the hands of a member of it being family property. He has, it is said, gone too far in throwing the onus entirely on the appellant and holding that it is to be presumed, not only that Radhasham was joint with his brothers, the respondents, when the money was deposited by him, but also that the deposit was derived from joint funds. The contention is that, in circumstances such as those of the present case, the ordinary presumption of Hindu law does not arise; and in support of it I am referred to Ram Pershad Singh v. Lakhpati Koer (1) and Gannu Singh v Bhagwati Koeri (2). In these cases this Court, undoubtedly, expressed the opinion that, when there is separate residence, separate messing and separate worship among the members of a Hindu family, the presumption based on the theory of the normal condition of such a family "can hardly be said to hold good" or, in the words used in the latter case, "falls to the ground;" the contrary presumption then arises; and it rests on the party who alleges continuance of indivision in spite of severance in these particulars to establish his allegation. Now, in each of these instances this Court was dealing with the facts in a regular appeal, and what was held was simply this, that the facts found as to cesser of commensality and so forth, being themselves inconsistent with the normal state of a Hindu family, were sufficient, prima facie, to show separation and shift the burden of proof on to the side asserting that the family had nevertheless remained joint. Jointness is, I imagine, becoming almost daily less and less the rule, and the presumption and re-consideration is, amid the changing conditions, and in response to the natural demands of a progressive society, steadily losing strength, in the sense that it is more and more easily rebutted as time advances. It may well be that it will disappear altogether some day—perhaps at no distant date; but I can find no authority either in the ruling cited or elsewhere, such as to justify me in holding to-day that there are cases in which it does not exist at all and is not, so to speak, the starting point. On behalf of the appellant it has, indeed, been conceded that no fault can be found with the learned District Judge's initial observation that the onus of proving that the three brothers were not joint lay upon him. But it is argued that the Judge misdirected himself when he proceeded to lay it down that it was also to be presumed that the money deposited was derived from joint funds, and that he was wrong in dismissing the suit because the defendant had failed to prove affirmatively that it was self-acquired property. In this connection reference is made to the case of Dwarka Prasad Raghubir v. Jamna Das Gordhan Das (3) in which Beaman, J., has held "that it is not a presumption of the Hindu law that every member of a joint Hindu family, found to be in possession of property at his death, has necessarily acquired that property as a member of the joint family and so imprinted upon it the character of joint Hindu family property." But the learned Vakil for the appellant has overlooked the fact that Mr. Justice Beaman at once goes on to observe, that "before that presumption can be made it lies upon the party so alleging to prove that there was at least a nucleus of joint family property out of which the property ultimately acquired by an individual member may be said to have grown." Here it is obvious, and cannot be denied, that there was such a nucleus; and, therefore, the Bombay case really does not help the appellant. My conclusion, then, is that the learned District Judge made no mistake in this connection and that his findings of fact conclude this part of the appeal.

(1) 30 C. 231 at p. 244; 7 C. W. N. 162; 30 I. A. 1.
(2) 3 Ind. Cas. 234.

It is next contended, that even if the family were joint and Radhasham acting as manager, his discharge in respect of the sums paid before his death was good and sufficient to bind the family: and the appellant relies for support upon the recent decision of the Judicial Committee in Kishen Parshad v. Har Narain Singh (4), by which it has been settled that the manager on behalf of a joint Hindu family of the family banking business can not only enter into contracts and give discharges so as to bind his co-parceners, but also sue and be sued alone without the joinder of the other members of the family. This contention seems to me to be right: otherwise, no bank could with safety honour cheques drawn by its Hindu clients against their deposits, and business on modern lines would be impossible. But, unfortunately for the appellant, the lower Appellate Court has found that his plea of re-payment has not been proved, and he is again concluded by a finding of fact which, so far as I can see, cannot be questioned on second appeal.

The last point made is as to the construction placed on a certain ekrarnama (Exhibit I) upon which the learned District Judge has relied as proving, "almost, if not quite, conclusively" that the brothers were joint a fortnight before the death of Radhasham. In this document, which was signed by all three brothers, it was agreed that "there having been serious disputes about the partition of the whole of their moveable and immoveable joint properties and there having been no settlement about the said partition" a panch was to be appointed to settle the dispute by arbitration. This, it is argued, instead of indicating jointness on the date of the document, points to their having already been some sort of a partition regarding which disputes calling for settlement by arbitration had arisen. It may be that there is something to be said for this construction; but it has long since been established—see the well-known and frequently cited ruling of Couch, C. J., and Glover, J., in Nowbut Singh v. Chutterdharee Singh (5)—that the misconstruction of a piece of documentary evidence such as this is not a mistake of law upon which a second appeal will lie. Moreover, the suggestion that the ekrarnama ought to be construed in this way is made for the first time in the course of the argument before me, the theory of the defence having hitherto been that it was an agreement to separate which at once operated as a separation. For all these reasons, I find myself unable to yield the point.

In the result I am of opinion that this second appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(3) 13 Bom. L. R. 133; 9 Ind. Cas. 948.

(4) 38 I. A. 45; 15 C. W. N. 321; 13 C. L. J. 345; 9 Ind. Cas. 739; 8 A. L. J. 256; 9 M. L. T. 343; 21 M. L. J. 378; 13 Bom. L. R. 359; 33 A. 272; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 395.

(5) 19 W. R. 222.

EMPEROR v. QADIR BAKHSH.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 1452 OF 1911.

December 9, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shah Din.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

QADIR BAKHSH—ACCUSED.

Cantoment Code, 1899, s. 94—Notice not specifying the nature and extent of repairs whether legal.

Section 94 of the Cantonment Code contemplates that the owner should know the precise nature and extent of the repairs which, in the opinion of the Cantonment authority, he should execute in the interests of the safety of the occupier or of the public. Therefore, a notice under the section which does not state at all what kind of repairs the Cantonment authority requires the owner to make to the houses specified in the notice is illegal.

Case reported by the Sessions Judge, Lahore Division, with his No. 1201 of 1st November 1911.

FACTS.—The facts of this case are as follows:—

By an order dated 30th November 1910, a notice purporting to be under section 94 of the Cantonment Code was issued to Mr. Qadir Bakhsh, Tahsildar of Batala, owner of houses, Nos. 85, 86, 87, 88, 89; 90, 91, 120, 121 and 396, situated in the Lahore Cantonments, requiring him to repair or demolish these houses and level the site within 15 (fifteen) days, they being reported to be in a ruinous condition.

The accused, on conviction by Major W. T. Barry, Cantonment Magistrate, Lahore, exercising the powers of a Magistrate of the 1st Class in the Lahore District, was sentenced, by order dated 10th May 1911, under sections 94, 104 of the Indian Penal Code, to a fine of Rs. 15 for non-compliance with the order.

Note—Fine realised.

The proceedings are forwarded for revision on the following grounds:—

(1) The Cantonment Magistrate did not issue his order on the grounds that the condition of the houses constituted a public danger. The notice, therefore, under section 94 of the Cantonment Code was legally invalid:—Vide Wazirullah v. Crown (1).

(2) The prosecution was not instituted for over three months as required by section 284 of the Cantonment Code.

For these reasons I recommend that the conviction be quashed.

Mr. Fazl-i-Hussain, for the Accused.

(1) 1 P. R. 1906 Cr., 48 P.L. R. 1906, 3 Cr. L. J. 43.

ORDER.—After hearing Mr. Fazl-i-Husain who appears in support of the recommendation made by the Sessions Judge under section 438, Criminal Procedure Code, for the reversal of the sentence passed by the Magistrate on Mr. Qadir Bakhsh, I think that the conviction of the accused in this case is illegal and must be set aside. Section 94 of the Cantonment Code, 1899, as amended, under which the Secretary of the Lahore Cantonment Committee issued notice to the accused on the 30th November 1910 runs as follows:—

"Where any building..... is in the opinion of the Cantonment authority in a ruinous state..... .....the Cantonment authority may, by notice in writing, require the owner or occupier thereof forthwith either to remove the same, or to cause such repairs to be made as it may think necessary for the safety of the occupier or of the public..... ..... The words of the section which I have italicised show that in the notice which the Cantonment authority issues to the owner or occupier of the building alleged to be in a ruinous state, the Cantonment authority has to state the nature of the repairs to be made by the owner or occupier which it may think necessary for the safety of the occupier or of the public, as the case may be. As laid down in Petman v. King-Emperor (2), a notice under section 94 of the Cantonment Code must give the owner the option of removing a building or making adequate repairs and in regard to the option of making repairs the section contemplates that the owner should know the precise nature and extent of the repairs which, in the opinion of the Cantonment authority, he should execute in the interests of the safety of the occupier or of the public.

The notice dated the 30th November 1910 which was issued to the accused in this case was as follows: "It having been reported to the Cantonment authority that your houses (of which the numbers are given in the heading of the notice) are in a ruinous condition. I am directed to request you within 15 days of the service of this notice to repair or demolish these houses and level the site."

In the above notice it is not stated at all what kind of repairs the Cantonment authority required the owner to make to the houses specified in the notice; and on this ground alone the notice was, in my opinion, illegal. That being the case, the accused was not liable to be prosecuted under section 104 of the Cantonment Code, and his conviction is bad in law. I, therefore, set aside the conviction and the sentence and direct the fine, if realised, be refunded.

(2) 23 P. R. 1905 Cr., 168 P.L.R. 1905, 3 Cr.L.J. 301.

IMPERATOR v. RINO.

Conviction set aside.

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 123.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 37 OF 1911.

July 17, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Crouch, A. J. C.

IMPERATOR

versus

RINO valad SOBHDAR—ACCUSED.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860*)*, ss. 201, 202—Causing evidence of offence to disappear—Positive destruction of evidence not necessary—Burying corpse with marks of violation—Offence under section 202 not included under s. 201—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898*)*, s. 238.

The offence under section 202 of the Penal Code is not a minor offence included under section 201, for an essential ingredient of the offence under section 202, is the legal duty of the accused to give information and this is no part of the offence under section 201. Consequently, an accused against whom a charge under section 201, is framed cannot be convicted of an offence under section 202 without a charge under the latter section being framed against him.

In order to support a finding that the accused has caused evidence to disappear, it is not necessary to prove the positive destruction of evidence.

The burial of the corpse of a murdered man if done with the intention of concealing the fact that there were marks of violence on it might be an offence under section 201.

Mr. Mulchand, for the Appellant.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The accused was tried by the Additional Sessions Judge, Hyderabad, on a charge undersection 201, Indian Penal Code, in that he knowing or having reason to believe that Chutta Kapri had been murdered (1) caused evidence of the offence to disappear by burying the body, and (2) gave false information as to the cause of death to the Tappedar.

The Additional Sessions Judge found the coused not guilty of this offence, but convicted him without framing a charge of an offence under section 202, Indian Penal Code.

The Additional Sessions Judge was clearly wrong in treating section 202, as a minor offence included under section 201, for an essential ingredient of the offence under section 202 is the legal duty of the accused to give information, and this is no part of the offence under section 201. Section 238, therefore, does not apply and a charge under section 202, should have been framed.

For this reason alone, we must under section 232, reverse the conviction and sentence and order a re-trial.

We are not satisfied, however, with the order of acquittal under section 201.

The Additional Sessions Judge appears to have thought that some evidence of positive destruction of evidence is necessary to support a finding that the accused has caused evidence to disappear. This is not so—the burial of a corpse of a murdered man if done with the intention of concealing the fact there were marks of violence on it might be causing evidence of the commission of the offence to disappear. The Sessions Judge has also omitted to notice the statement of Soniat that the accused stood over her with a stick and made her wash the blood stained clothes. On the other branch of the charge under section 201, there is the evidence of the Tappedar that the accused gave him false information which he recorded in his register. The Sessions Judge has dealt with this part of the case in an equally unsatisfactory manner. He does not say that he disbelieves the Tappedar but merely remarks that the evidence is not conclusive.

We set aside the order of acquittal under section 201, and direct that the accused be re-tried for offences under sections 201, 203 and 202, Indian Penal Code. The accused to be re-arrested unless he gives bail himself in Rs. 1,000 with one surety in Rs. 1,000 to appear in the Sessions Court, Hyderabad, on the 1st September.

Re-trial ordered.

MUTHUVARAPU SESHIAH v. GATRAM RAMIAH.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 14 OF 1910.

November 1, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim and Mr. Justice Spencer.

MUTHUVARAPU SESHIAH—APPELLANT

versus

GATRAM RAMIAH—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 195—Sanction for prosecution—Forgery—Document put in Court—Absence of judicial inquiry—Preliminary inquiry whether necessary before giving sanction—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 463, 471, 475, 476.

Per Abdur Rahim, J., (whose opinion was the judgment of the Court under section 36 of the Letters Patent)—Where a document has been filed in Court by a party, about whose genuineness or otherwise there is no judicial inquiry, the Court should not accord sanction to prosecute the party for having filed a forged document. The Court must make some preliminary inquiry and satisfy itself that there is a prima facie case for prosecution.

Per Spencer J., Contra.—Where a document was judicially before the Court and was produced in a proceeding in Court within the meaning of section 195, clause (c) of the Criminal Procedure Code, it was competent to the Court to exercise its powers under section 195.

Section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code, does not require any inquiry as a necessary antecedent to the grant of sanction.

Ambika Prasad Singh v. Emperor, 35 C. 820, 8 Cr. L. J. 398, explained.

Akhil Chandra De v. Queen-Empress, 22 C. 1004; Bapuram Surma v. Gouri Nath Dutt, 20 C. 474, referred to.

An inquiry, if held under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, need not be a judicial inquiry.

Queen v. Nujum Ali, 6 W. R. 41, Cr., followed.

Appeal against the order of the District Court of Guntur, in O. P. No. 110 of 1903, presented against the order of the District Munsif of Ongole, in C. M. P. No. 1017 of 1908 in O. S. No. 340 of 1908.

Mr. T. Prakasam, for the Appellant.

Mr. C. R. Subramanya Aiyar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

ABDUR RAHIM, J.—I think in this case the order of the District Judge granting sanction must be set aside. The petitioner filed a suit on a promissory-note bearing a certain date. He afterwards withdrew the suit with the permission of the Court, before any summons or notice was taken out for the defendant. The defendant made an application for sanction for the prosecution of the plaintiff under sections 463, 471, 475 and 476 of the Indian Penal Code. The District Munsif refused sanction, but the District Judge has set aside that order and granted sanction. There has been no inquiry into the question whether the promissory-note is forged. The suit was not heard, and no evidence has been taken as to the genuineness or otherwise of the note. The defendant has filed an affidavit stating that the promissory-note was a false document and that he owed no money. The plaintiff, on the other hand, insists that it is genuine and was executed for proper consideration.

The District Judge says that, because the stamp used did not come into use on the alleged date of the promissory-note, it must at least have been ante-dated. But the plaintiff gives an explanation as to how such a stamp came to be affixed on the note. He says that the defendant himself fraudulently affixed the stamp in question in order to evade his liability. There has been no inquiry as to which of the allegations is correct, and there is nothing like a judicial finding that the promissory-note is forged. A Court before granting sanction, ought to be satisfied that there is at least a prima facie case for prosecution, and the person to be prosecuted must have had an opportunity of showing that the document on which he based his suit is true and genuine. I do not wish to lay down that the inquiry must be in any particular form. But there must be some inquiry and the Court granting sanction must be satisfied on evidence that the document used in Court is false. There are, no doubt, cases in which it has been held, that where a suit has been properly tried, there need not be any fresh inquiry as to the character of the document already found to be false. But I am not aware of any case in which it has been held, that when a suit has not been tried at all, sanction may be granted for the prosecution of the plaintiff in respect of a document filed by him in Court without its being found on proper inquiry held for the purpose that there are sufficient grounds for holding the document to be a forgery. On this ground the sanction ought, in my opinion, to be set aside, and it is, therefore, unnecessary for me to consider the question whether the District Munsif is right in holding, on the authority of Ambika Prasad Singh v. Emperor (1), that there has been no user in this case within the meaning of section 471, Indian Penal Code.

(1) 35 C. 820; 8 Cr. L. J. 398.

MUTHUVARAPU SESHIAH v. GATRAM RAMIAH.

SPENCER, J.—The promissory-note alleged to be forged in this case bore the signature of the promisee over a postal and revenue stamp of a kind which was not introduced into circulation until after the date of the document upon which it was used. Prima facie, an offence of forgery was committed by some one in respect of it.

As a suit was brought on the promissory-note and the note was put into Court with plaint, it was "produced" in a proceeding in a Court within the meaning of clause (c) of section 195, Criminal Procedure Code. The words 'produced or' in the section were added when the Code of Criminal Procedure was amended, and have to be read apart from the words "given in evidence" which follow.

It was, no doubt, the intention of the party to use the document in evidence in his suit, though owing to the withdrawal of the suit before issue of notice to the defendant, it was not actually put in evidence. There was, therefore, ground for the Court which had the matter brought to its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding [vide Akhil Chandra De v. Queen-Empress (2)] to consider that an offence under section 471, Indian Penal Code, had been committed.

The case of Ambika Prasad Singh v. Emperor (1) was a case in which the person producing the document was not a party but a third party who merely filed certain rent receipts in Court through his Mukhtear, and the High Court held that the evidence that he had anything to do with them was very weak.

It is contended that the Court according sanction should have held some preliminary inquiry before passing orders under section 195. The section does not require any inquiry as a necessary antecedent to the grant of sanction. The connected section 476, which has not been applied to this case, speaks of the Court "making any preliminary inquiry that may be necessary". In Baperam Surma v. Gouri Nath Dutt (3) it was held, that "although it may sometimes well be that a preliminary inquiry ought to be held, the adoption of a rigid rule to that effect would simply introduce into the criminal procedure in this country a new stage as a matter of imperative necessity.

* * * * * *

* * * * * *

We do not think that such a practice is rendered imperative by the law and it is not desirable that it should be necessary and in every case indroduced". In making these observations, their Lordships dealt with the case as one under section 476. Taking the order to be a sanction under section 195, they found no reason for interfering at all.

In the present case, the District Munsif who heard the application was of opinion that this was not a case in which a preliminary inquiry would serve any purpose, and I consider, that in the exercise of his discretion he was entitled to form that opinion.

There was nothing to prevent him from taking judicial notice of the fact that the promissory-note alleged to be forged was filed in his Court along with the plaint, and he had also before him the affidavits and petitions produced by either side. Any inquiry that may be held under this section need not even be a judicial inquiry [vide Queen v. Nujum Ali (4)]. The District Munsif and the Judge who heard the application, were also entitled to draw any inference that might arise from the documents before them and to come to a conclusion whether the explanation offered by the counter-petitioner was probable and one that might reasonably be accepted. Actual proof might be left to the trial. They had only to see if a prima facie case had been established.

I am of opinion that the sanction should stand and that the application should be dismissed.

ABDUR RAHIM, J.—My learned brother would uphold the order of the District Judge. Under section 36 of the Letters Patent, the order granting sanction is set aside.

The respondent will pay the costs of this application.

Order reversed.

(2) 22 C. 1004.
(3) 20 C. 474.
(4) 6 W. R. 41 Cr.

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 153.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION APPLICATION No. 83 OF 1910.

August 10, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C. and Mr. Crouch, A. J. C.

BODOMAL KISHINCHAND—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 157, 520—Bank-note—Property passes by delivery to bona fide purchaser for value—Erroneous disposal of currency-note—Power of superior Court to order re-payment of equivalent—"Any further order that may be just."

Property in a bank-note passes, like that in cash, by delivery and a party taking it bona fide and for value is entitled to retain it as against a former owner from whom it has been stolen.

Miller v. Race, 1 S. L. C. 468, relied upon.

Where currency-notes or current coins have been erroneously disposed of under section 517 of the Criminal Procedure Code, a superior Court may order the re-payment of an equivalent under section 520 of the Code.

The intention of the Legislature in adding to section 520 the words "and make any further orders that may be just" was to enable a superior Court to give effect to an order setting aside the order of the Court of first instance, by directing the restitution of the property if the order of the Court of first instance has been carried out.

Mr. Tahilram Maniram, for the Applicant.

JUDGMENT.

CROUCH, A. J. C.—This is an application to revise an order passed by the Sessions Judge, Hyderabad, under section 520, Criminal Procedure Code.

The applicant had produced some notes stolen from Lieutenant Porteous, and alleged that he had changed them, in all good faith for the accused. The Magistrate when convicting the accused had ordered that the notes should be given to Mr. Porteous.

The applicant then applied to the Sessions Court, but that Court dismissed the application on the ground that the notes were no longer in Mr. Porteous' possession or under his control.

I am of opinion that the learned Sessions Judge has misunderstood the law.

Property in a bank-note passes, like that in cash, by delivery, and a party taking it bona fide and for value is entitled to retain it as against a former owner from whom it has been stolen. [Miller v. Race (1)]. If, therefore, the learned Judge was satisfied that applicant had given consideration for the notes, and secured them honestly, he should have modified or altered the order of the lower Court.

(1) 1 S. L. C. 468.

He should also have made "any further order that might be just." Possibly, an order for restitution against Mr. Porteous might be necessary if complete justice was to be done to the applicant. The intention of the Legislature, in adding to section 520, Criminal Procedure Code, the words, "And make any further orders that may be just" was obviously to enable a superior Court to give effect to an order setting aside the order of the Court of first instance, if that order has been carried out by directing the restitution of the property. (See notes to section 520, Agnew and Henderson's Criminal Procedure Code). But, in making an order for restitution, the Court is not restricted by the terms of section 517, or by any limited definition that may be given to the word "restitution:" it can make any order that may be just; and, where Currency-notes, or current coin, have been erroneously disposed of under section 517, the re-payment of an equivalent might, in justice, be ordered.

I would reverse the order of the Sessions Court, and return the case with instructions to hear the application and decide the same according to law

PRATT, J. C.—I concur.

Order reversed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 248 OF 1911.

November 13, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar.

LAKSHMINARAIN APURAM SUBRAMANYA PATTAR KRISHNIER—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 409, 477*A*—Separate breaches of trust and falsifications of accounts on different dates—Joint trial—Illegality—Crimina Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 234.

The accused was charged at one trial under section 409, Indian Penal Code, for criminal breach of trust in respect of Rs. 432 made up of five sums of money entrusted to him at different dates in 1910 and of five separate falsifications of accounts on different dates under section 477A, Indian Penal Code:

Held, that each breach of trust and falsification was a distinct offence and the trial of these five distinct offences at one trial was illegal.

CHANGAL HALAPOTO v. BASARMAL.

Subramanya Aiyar's case, 25 M. 61 and Kari Viswanathan v. Emperor, 30 M. 328; 5 Cr. L. J. 341, 2 M. L. T. 177, 17 M. L. J. 141, referred to.

Appeal against the order of the Court of Sessions of the South Malabar Division, in Case No. 14 of the Calendar for 1911.

Mr. T. Subramanaya Aiyar, for the Appellant.

Mr. C. F. Napier, Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the appellant has been convicted under section 409, Indian Penal Code, for criminal breach of trust by a Public servant in respect of Rs. 432, made up of five sums of money entrusted to him at different times during the year 1910, and he has also been convicted of five separate falsifications of accounts, under section 477 A, Indian Penal Code, each falsification being in respect of one of the five sums misappropriated. We are of opinion that each of these five separate falsifications was a distinct offence and that the trial of these five distinct offences (to say nothing of the criminal breach of trust) was illegal with reference to section 234, Criminal Procedure Code, and vitiates the whole trial by Subramania Iyer's case (1).

The present case is in all essentials exactly on all fours with the case of Kasi Viswanathan v. Emperor (2), in which reasons for the decision are fully stated that the proper course to be followed in cases like the present is clearly pointed out.

The appellant's Vakil argues that on the merits the appellant could not be convicted under section 409, Indian Penal Code, as it was not his duty to receive the money and he relies on the cases reported in 1 Weir's pages 465 to 466. He contends that, in these circumstances we ought not to order a re-trial. We do not think it necessary at this stage to decide whether a conviction under section 409, Indian Penal Code, could be sustained, as the objection, even if valid, would not prevent the accused being punishable under sections 406 and 403, Indian Penal Code.

We, therefore, set aside the conviction as the trial was illegal and we direct the appellant to be re-tried by the Sessions Judge in accordance with law.

Case remanded.

(1) 25 M. 61.
(2) 30 M. 328; 5 Cr. L. J. 341; 2 M. L. T. 177; 17 M. L. J. 141.

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 122.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION APPLICATIONS NOS. 37, 39 40, 41 AND 42 OF 1911.

July 13, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Crouch, A. J. C.

Haji CHANGAL HALAPOTO AND OTHERS —APPLICANTS

versus

BASARMAL CHANGOOMAL—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 378—Theft—Fish in open water—Feræ naturæ—Incapable of possession.

Fish in open and unenclosed water are feræ naturæ. They are not capable of possession and hence cannot form the subject of theft.

Bhagiram Dome v. Abar Dome, 15 C. 338, followed.
Queen v. Sheikh Adam, 10 B. 139, distinguished.

Only such moveable property which is capable of possession can be the subject of theft.

Mr. Wadhumal Udharam, for the Applicants.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

PRATT, J. C.—This is an application praying that this Court will reverse the order of the Honorary Magistrate, 2nd Class of Moro, taking cognizance of a complaint of theft as against the applicant.

The allegation in the complaint is that the accused stole fish from the Indus and from Dhands connected with the Indus, in respect of which the accused had received a license to fish from Government.

Now, the complainant admits that the fish are in open and unenclosed water, and, therefore, do not fall within the ruling in Queen v. Sheikh Adam (1), which lays down that when restrained of their natural liberty fish are capable of being possessed, being no longer feræ naturæ, but feræ domitæ.

The Indian Penal Code, no doubt, makes no express distinction between animals feræ naturæ and those that are domesticated, but under the definition of theft the property which is the subject of theft is only moveable property which is capable of possession. The very fact that the fish in this case were feræ naturæ, i.e., free to go of their own accord, shows that no one could be in possession of them. This was so decided in

(1) 10 B. 139.

Bhagiram Dome v. Abar Dome (2), where it was held that the owner of a fishery right in Public River is not in possession of the fish in that river and that the infringement of his fishing right is not theft.

The complaint discloses no offence and we, therefore, reverse the order made under section 204 by the Magistrate.

Order reversed.

(2) 15 C. 388.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 500 OF 1911.
CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 374 OF 1911.
November 27, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim.

ISMAIL GHAMI AMMAL—PETITIONER

versus

KATIMA ROWTHER AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 145—Dispute as to possession—Possession of Receiver.

When a Receiver has been appointed by Court for certain properties, his possession should, for the purposes of section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, be regarded as possession on behalf of the party who might ultimately be found by the Magistrate to be in possession immediately before the date of the Receiver's appointment.

Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Isakapaili Subbiah, 26 M. 410 and Joyanti Kumar Mukherjee v. Middleton, 27 C. 785; 4 C. W. N. 526, referred to.

Criminal Revision petition against the order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Karur, dated 30th June 1911.

Mr. W. Barton, for the Petitioner.

Dr. S. Swaminathan, for the Respondents.

ORDER.—We think, that in the state of facts which are founded in this case the possession of the Receiver appointed on the 4th April 1909, may, for the purpose of section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, be properly regarded as possession on behalf of the party who should ultimately be found by the Magistrate to be in possession immediately before the 4th April, just as, for purposes of limitation, the possession of the Receiver is held to be the possession of the party entitled to possession, Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Isakapalli Subbiah (1) and Joyanti Kumar Mookerjee v. Middleton (2).

(1) 26 M. 410.
(2) 27 C. 785; 4. C. W. N. 562.

To hold otherwise would be to hold that neither of the parties nor the Receiver is in possession and this would lead to the very scramble for possession and probable breach of peace which it is the purpose of the law to prevent. We must, therefore, dismiss this petition.

Petition dismissed.

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 129.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 54 OF 1911.
July, 19 1911.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C.

IMPERATOR

versus

Haji ALU AND ANOTHER—ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 233, 239—Joint trial of persons charged with giving false evidence in same judicial proceedings is illegal—"Same transaction"—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 193—Perjury—Contradictory statements not absolutely irreconcilable—Oaths Act (X of 1873), ss. 8, 9, 10, 11—Criminal trial.

The joint trial of two or more persons charged with giving false evidence in the same judicial proceedings is not permissible under section 239 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

The false evidence given by one witness is a transaction complete in itself and not connected with false evidence given by another witness even though in the same case and on the same point.

Queen-Empress v. Moharaj, 16 W. R. Cr. 47; Queen-Empress v. Anant Ram, 4 A. 293, Queen-Empress v. Kotha Subha Chatti, 6 M. 252; Queen-Empress v. Nathu Shaikh, 10 C. 405, Emperor v. Krishnarao, 4 Bom. L.R 53, followed.

Such a joint trial is more than an irregularity; it is an illegality which vitiates the whole trial.

Subramaniya Iyer's case, 25 M. 61, followed.

A person should not be convicted under section 193 of the Penal Code for making contradictory statements when the statements are not absolutely irreconcilable.

Queen-Empress v. Bankatram, 28 B. 533, relied upon.

The provisions of sections 8, 11 of the Oaths Act do not apply to criminal proceedings.

Queen-Empress v. Murarji Gokaldas, 13 B. 389, relied upon.

Mr. Mulchand Maghanmal, for the Appellant.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The two accused were examined as witnesses before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate in a proceeding under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code.

In re ADALA YERRIVADU.

They are alleged to have made contradictory statements and have been tried and convicted for offences under section 193, Indian Penal Code.

The joint trial of the two accused could only be legal under section 236, Criminal Procedure Code.

That section requires that the offences should have been committed in the same transaction. But as said in the case of Queen-Empress v. Moharaj (1), "The lie told by a witness is none-the-less his own particular lie because other witnesses have about the same time told similar lies; and it is each man's own lie and not his neighbour's that can alone be used against him." The false evidence given by one witness is a transaction complete in itself and not connected with false evidence given by another witness even though in the same case and on the same point. This had been decided in many cases and by all the High Courts—

Queen-Empress v. Anant Ram (2), Queen-Empress v. Kotha Subba Chetti (3), Queen-Empress v. Nathu Sheikh (4), Emperor v. Krishnarao (5).

The procedure adopted was, therefore, in contravention of the provisions of section 233 and, under the ruling of the Privy Council in Subramania Iyer's case (6), this is more than an irregularity—it is an illegality which has vitiated the trial.

I do not order a re-trial as the statements do not appear to me absolutely irreconcilable, see on this point Queen-Empress v. Bunkatram (7). The first statements seem to refer to what the accused knew by repute and the second statements to what the accused knew of their own personal knowledge.

I would also remark for the guidance of the Magistrate that the provisions of sections 8—11 of Oaths Act do not apply to criminal proceedings; see Queen-Empress v. Murarji Gokuldas (8).

I reverse the conviction and sentences and direct the accused to be released from their bonds.

Conviction and sentence reversed.

(1) 16 W. R. Cr. 47.
(2) 4 A. 293.
(3) 6 M. 252.
(4) 10 C. 405.
(5) 4 Bom. L. R. 53.
(6) 25 M. 61.
(7) 28 B. 533.
(8) 13 B. 389.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 569 OF 1911.
CASE REFERRED No. 119 OF 1911.
December 14, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Spencer.

In re ADALA YERRIVADU—ACCUSED.

Criminal trial—Accused of poor wits—Lunacy, inquiry into—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), Ch. XXXIV.

Where a Magistrate finds an accused to be of poor wits and wanting in apprehension of the serious consequences of his acts, he should hold an inquiry under Chapter XXXIV, Criminal Procedure Code, into the question whether the accused is a lunatic either at the time of the trial or was a lunatic when he committed the offence of which he is charged.

Case referred for the orders of the High Court under section 438, Criminal Procedure Code, by the District Magistrate of Vizagapatam, in his letter, dated 6th September 1911.

Mr. M. D. Devadass, for the Accused.

Mr. John Adam, Crown Prosecutors in support of the Reference.

ORDER.—The Sub-Divisional Magistrate, in his order, says the accused is a youth of poor wits, clouded all the more by his born infirmity, and never knew or apprehended that such serious consequences would ensue. And, again, in his letter of reference, he says that he was not able to make the accused understand anything or to understand anything from him, and that he appeared to be utterly ignorant of the grave consequence of his act.

These observations make us doubt whether, as a matter of fact, the accused was not a lunatic at the time of the trial and also at the time that he committed the act which is charged as an offence against him.

The Sub-Divisional Magistrate should hold an inquiry into the question whether the accused was a lunatic at either of these times under Chapter XXXIV, Criminal Procedure Code. If he finds that he was not a lunatic on either of the occasions, he will then, as required by section 341, Criminal Procedure Code, try the accused or commit him to the Sessions Court for trial.

If he convicts him, he will then make a report to this Court under that section.

Case remanded.

MR. MCGILL v. MR. BYRNE.

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 133.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION APPLICATION No. 7 OF 1911.

July 26, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C.

MR. McGILL—APPLICANT

versus

MR. BYRNE—OPPONENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 499, exception 9—Defamation—Allegation made in a petition of divorce—Absolute Privilege, rule of, inapplicable in India—English cases not to be referred for guidance—Practice—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 122, proviso.

In construing the provisions of the Indian Penal Code, the Code is not to be frittered away by reference to English cases laying down a different principle.

Bank of England v. Vagliano, (1891) A. C. 107; 60 L. J. Q. B. 145; 64 L. T. 353; 39 W. R. 657; 55 J. P. 676, Norendra Nath v. Kamal Basini, 23 C. 563; 23 I. A. 18, relied upon.

The English rule of absolute privilege in cases of defamation does not apply proprio vigore in India.

Where a certain statement made in a petition for divorce filed in Court is alleged to amount to defamation, the case must be decided not with reference to the rules of English law but with reference to section 499 of the Indian Penal Code.

Isuri Prasad Singh v. Umrao Singh, 22 A. 234; Emperor v. Ganga Prasad, 29 A. 685; A. W.N. (1907) 235; 4 A. L J. 605; 6 Cr. L. J. 197, followed.

Allegations which are made in a petition for divorce filed by the accused after his wife has left his house, and in the truth of which he has a reasonable belief, fall within the 9th exception to section 499.

Mr. Dipchand Chandhumal, for the Applicant.

The Assistant Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—Byrne, the accused in this case, had filed a petition of divorce from his wife in which he had made the complainant Mc'Gill, the co-respondent.

The petition was withdrawn and Mc'Gill then filed a complaint in the Court of the City Magistrate charging Byrne with defamation in respect of statements in his petition alleging acts of adultery between Mrs. Byrne and himself.

The Magistrate without recording evidence has held that the statements are absolutely privileged and has, therefore, discharged Byrne.

In this application McGill prays that this Court will order further inquiry into the case.

The rule of absolute privilege on which the Magistrate has relied is one extracted from English case law. It finds no place in the Indian Penal Code. And, though the Magistrate's judgment displays great industry and learning, it is affected with the vice condemned in the remarks of Lord Herschell in the Bank of England v. Vagliano (1) and cited with approval by the Privy Council in Norendra Nath v. Kamal Basini (2). The Penal Code is not to be frittered away by reference to English cases laying down a different principle for such a practice would, as pointed out by Lord Herschell, have the effect of frustrating the very object for which the Code was enacted.

That the English rule of absolute privilege does not apply proprio vigore in India is apparent from the provisio to section 132 of the Indian Evidence Act; for if it did, that proviso would be superfluous. On this point I agree with the statement of the law contained in the judgment of Aikman, J., in Isuri Prasad Singh v. Umrao Singh (3) and in Emperor v. Ganga Prasad (4).

The case must be decided with reference to section 499 of the Indian Penal Code and, in my opinion, the complaint makes it so clear that the case falls within the 9th exception that there is no reason for this Court to interfere.

The allegations were made in a petition for divorce filed by the accused after his wife had left his house. It was clearly made for the protection of the accused's interests. The issue then is, were the allegations made in good faith? Section 105, Indian Evidence Act, puts the onus of showing this on the accused but he may discharge this by pointing to facts admitted in the complaint. The accused on the strength of the facts alleged took divorce proceedings against his wife. It is fair to presume that he would not have done this unless he had a reasonable belief in the truth of those facts. This shifts the onus back to the complainant and the complaint makes no suggestion of express motive beyond the somewhat ridiculous statement that the

(1) (1891) A. C. 107; 60 L. J. Q. B. 145; 64 L. T. 353; 39 W. R. 657; 55 J. P. 676.

(2) 23 C. 563; 23 I. A. 18.

(3) 22 A. 234.

(4) 29 A. 685; A. W. N. (1907) 235; 4 A. L. J. 605; 6 Cr. L. J. 197.

accused was a a friend of his mother-in-law.

I refuse the application.

Application refused.

(s. c. 16 C. W. N. 46.)

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 211 OF 1911.

April 19, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Holmwood and Mr. Justice Sharfuddin.

MEHER SARDAR AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Misdirection—Trial by jury—Right of private defence, when commences—Trespassers carrying away crop—Police Station of distance of nine miles—Rulings cited to jury.

The right of private defence of property commences when reasonable apprehension of danger to the property commences; and if persons have begun to cut and carry away one's crop, it cannot be said that he is bound to go nine miles to fetch the Police. It was, therefore, misdirection on the part of the Judge to leave it to the jury to say whether the fact that the thanah was only nine miles distant from the place of occurrence, did not take away the right of private defence. The same consideration applies to the remedies in the Civil Court if the Judge refers to them.

No rulings or authorities are even to be cited by the Judge to the jury, nor are they to be asked to differentiate or form any opinion whatever on any authorities. Such procedure constitutes misdirection.

Appeal against the conviction and sentence passed upon the accused by the Sessions Judge of Khulna, dated February 13th, 1911.

FACTS.—The case for the prosecution was that the complainant and his brother Barkatulla went to cut paddy from a certain plot of land, when the seven accused with others came to the field with lathis; that the accused asked complainant to desist from cutting the paddy; that the complainant did not mind their request; that an altercation ensued, and that under order of Meher, the other accused struck the complainant's men and the complainant's brother was so much beaten that he fell down and shortly after died.

The Police Station was at a distance of nine miles. The accused having been sentenced under sections 147 and 326, Indian Penal Code, appealed to the High Court.

Babu Jyotish Chandra Hazarah, for the Appellants.

Mr. Sultan Ahmed, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from the conviction and sentence passed by the learned Sessions Judge of Khulna upon seven persons. Agreeing with the unanimous verdict of the jury, he found them guilty under section 147, Indian Penal Code, and directed that they be rigorously imprisoned for one year and six months each under that section. The accused Kader Sardar and Kobil were further found guilty by the jury under section 326 and they were sentenced to be rigorously imprisoned for three years under that section, the sentences were to run concurrently with those passed under section 147.

The jury found incidentally that possession whether rightly or wrongly was with the first accused Meher Sardar and, therefore, following the direction of the Judge they must have found that Meher Sardar and his party had the right of private defence against the taking of their crops. They were, therefore, justified in using sufficient force to get rid of these people and prevent their stealing their crops and the learned Judge clearly misdirected the jury when he left it to them to say whether the fact that the Police Station was only nine miles off the place of occurrence did not take away their right of private defence; for the right of private defence of property commences when reasonable apprehension of danger to the property commences and if persons have begun to cut and carry away your crop it cannot be said that you are bound to go nine miles to fetch the Police. The reasonable apprehension of danger to the property having commenced the right of private defence has also commenced. The same consideration applies to the remedies in the Civil Court to which the learned Judge referred. The cutting and the removal could not have been prevented at the moment by the institution of any suit, and the learned Judge practically directed the jury that by taking the law into their own hands they formed themselves into an unlawful assembly and it is on this misdirection that the jury have found them all guilty under section 147. We notice that he has cited and commented on a number of rulings of this Court and told the jury that it was for them to say whether any of those rulings are exactly on all fours with the circumstances of the present case. This is also a misdirection. No rulings or authorities are ever to be cited to the jury nor are they to be asked to differentiate or form any opinion whatever on any authorities. It is for the Judge and the Judge only to tell the jury what the law is, and before he tells them what it is he may consult as many authorities as he pleases and those authorities are, no doubt, binding upon him. The minds of the jury should never be confused by having a number of conflicting authorities or indeed any authorities laid before them. In this case the Judge not only confused the jury by laying before them a number of conflicting authorities and leaving it to them to choose between them but as we have seen he has misdirected them as to the law of the right of private defence. We have no doubt that the accused persons had the right of private defence in this case and that they did not exceed it except in so far as certain persons fractured the skull of one Barkatulla with lathis. This was a wholly unnecessary proceeding and quite unjustified. But as the assailants were exercising the right of private defence they cannot have formed members of an unlawful assembly.

The convictions and sentences under section 147, Indian Penal Code, against all the appellants must, therefore, be set aside and they must all be acquitted and released with the exception of appellants Nos. 3 and 4, Kader Sardar and Kobil alias Kobeluddi, who have been further convicted by the jury under section 326 on the finding that it was they who struck Barkatulla the two blows on the head which the medical evidence shows fractured his skull. In so doing, they undoubtedly exceeded the right of private defence and the verdict of the jury must be upheld. But we think the sentence must be reduced to one of eighteen months' rigorous imprisonment in each case.

We accordingly direct that the accused Kader Sardar and Kobil alias Kobeluddi be sentenced to eighteen months' rigorous imprisonment under section 326, Indian Penal Code. The other appellants will be discharged.

Appeal allowed.

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 135.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REPORT No. 52 OF 1911.

July 27, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Crouch, A. J. C.

IMPERATOR—COMPLAINANT

versus

ABDUL LATIF—ACCUSED.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 441, 447—Criminal trespass—Entry on land in exercise of bona fide right.

If a person enters on land in the possession of another in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right but without any intention to intimidate, insult or annoy the person in possession or to commit an offence, his act does not amount to criminal trespass although the accused may have no right to the land.

Emperor v. Budh Singh, 2 A. 101, followed.

Mr. Tahilram Maniram, for the Complainant.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is a report by the District Magistrate requesting this Court to interfere in revision with an order of the 2nd Class Magistrate, Matiari, taking cognizance of a case of criminal trespass against one Abdul Latif.

The facts are that the accused who had for the last year and a quarter been claiming the right to take water from the complainant's land made an entry thereon for the purpose of exercising that right. The complainant then filed a complaint charging the accused with an offence under section 447. The complaint nowhere alleges that the accused was actuated with the intention referred to in section 441, nor does the Magistrate state this in his order issuing process on the complaint. The case clearly falls within the rule laid down in Emperor v. Budh Singh (1), that "if a person enters on land in the possession of another in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right but without any intention to intimidate, insult or annoy the person in possession or to commit an offence then, although he may have no right to the land, he cannot be convicted of criminal trespass."

We reverse the order of the Magistrate taking cognizance of the case.

Order reversed.

(1) 2 A. 101.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 1134 OF 1911.

December 9, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shah Din.

PIR BAKHSH—CONVICT—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 411—Stolen property produced by accused from a jungle—Whether such production sufficient to sustain conviction—Evidence—Proof.

Where an accused produced the stolen property from a nullah in a jungle, which was neither in his possession nor under his control: Held, that such production was insufficient to establish his guilt under section 411, Indian Penal Code.

Petition for revision under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, of the order of the Sessions Judge at Rawalpindi, dated 15th July 1911, upholding the order of the Magistrate, 1st Class, Murree, dated 26th June 1911, convicting the petitioner.

Mr. Badr-ud-Din, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the stolen property, consisting of rolls (thans) of cloth is alleged to have been produced by the petitioner from a hole in a nullah in a jungle not far from his house in Mauza Mussiari, but the evidence on this point is, in my opinion, interested and unsatisfactory, and I am not prepared to believe it. Besides the complainant himself, three constables have been produced in support of this story, but their evidence cannot be considered as independent. Of the two villagers, Nur Ahmad and Gama, who support the Police in this respect, the former was considered unreliable by the Magistrate (see the note recorded by him at page 87 of the record) and the latter is a witness of an ordinary type. Mir Khan, Lambardar, who was admittedly present at the time when the alleged production of the stolen property took place, but who was not produced by the prosecution, was summoned and examined by the Magistrate suo motu, and his evidence is in direct contradiction of that given by the complainant and the constables, as he clearly says that the petitioner never produced any stolen property at all. The Magistrate disbelieved him, but I can see no reason whatever why he should be disbelieved, and no reason has been assigned by the Magistrate in support of his view. I hold, therefore, that it is not proved that the petitioner produced the stolen property as alleged by the prosecution.

Even, however, if the petitioner did produce the property as alleged, the fact that he produced it from a place in the jungle which was neither in his possession, nor under his control, is sufficient for holding that his guilt under section 411, Indian Penal Code, is not established. [See Ala Bakhsh v. Emperor (1) and Queen-Empress v. Gobinda (2)]. The petitioner's house was searched twice, but nothing incriminating was found therein.

I accept this revision, set aside the conviction and sentence of the petitioner and acquit him. He will be discharged from his bail.

Revision accepted.

(1) 92 P. L. R. 1902. (2) 17 A. 576.

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 136.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 56 OF 1911.

July 27, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Crouch, A. J. C.

BAKSHALI—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 193—Perjury—Accused charged with making a particular false statement—Conviction on the strength of accused's previous contradictory statements—Secondary evidence of statement made by a person not called as witness.

Where the prosecution undertakes to prove that a particular statement made by a person accused of an offence under section 193 of the Penal Code, is positively untrue, the accused cannot be convicted merely on the strength of contradictory statements previously made by him.

A fact in issue cannot be held proved by secondary evidence of statements made by a person who is not called as a witness and who is held by the Magistrate himself to be a liar.

Appeal from the decision of the First Class Magistrate, Mirpur Bathoro.

Mr. Wadhumal Oodharam, for the Appellant.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—Appellant has been convicted under section 193, Indian Penal Code, of making the following false statement on solemn affirmation in the course of the trial of Umar walad Jakhio Dario, for the offence of escaping from unlawful custody. "We (meaning himself and Jaro) did not recognise the other."

"The other" referred to is the said Umar Jakhio, and the questions in issue are,—

In re ARULANANTHAM.

(1) Was the other thief seen by appellant Umar Jakhio?

(2) Did appellant recognise him ?

The evidence in this case is precisely similar to that in the case of Imperator v. Jaro (1). For the reasons given in my judgment in Jaro's appeal, I hold the first fact in issue not proved.

As to the 2nd issue Ghulam states:—"I can't say how long Bakshali knew Umar Dario. Bakshali has never told me that he knew Umar Dario before. I cannot say if Bakshali knew Umar Dario before or not. I can't say if Bakshali saw the faces of the thieves or not." This is the only direct evidence on record.

The evidence upon which appellant is convicted is frankly admitted by the trying Magistrate to be the "accused's own statements made at different times." That is to say, the facts in issue are held to be proved by secondary evidence of statements made by a person who is not called as a witness, and who is held by the Magistrate himself to be a liar. Even if we treat all these statements as admissions and strictly relevant, what weight can fairly be attributed to them? It must be urged that the appellant has been certainly shown to have made a false statement in one or other of his contradictory depositions, but the prosecution took on itself to prove that a particular one of these statements was positively untrue. Proof that such statement was false must consist of reliable evidence, and the Court is not justified in treating obviously unreliable evidence as good merely because the accused was himself responsible for it.

Had the original order under section 476 been in proper form, setting out clearly the statement alleged to be false, the Magistrate would have probably discovered, either that a clear case could be made out by including in the charge two contradictory statements and alleging that one or other was false, or else that there was no reasonable chance of proving the case against the accused at all. If the proper procedure had been followed, either there would have been no trial at all, or a conviction would have resulted as a moral certainty.

The appellant is acquitted.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 5 S. L. R. 54; 12 Ind. Cas. 646.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 537 OF 1911.

CASE REFERRED No. 96 OF 1911.

November 23, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Spencer.

In re ARULANANTHAM PILLAI—ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 250—Information of offence to Village Magistrate—"Institution of proceedings"—Compensation.

Information given to a Village Magistrate cannot be regarded as information given to the Police of an offence within the meaning of section 250, Criminal Procedure Code, even where the Village Magistrate is bound to report the offence to the Police.

King-Emperor v. Thammana Reddi, 25 M. 667; Sessions Judge of Tinnevelly v. Sivan Chetti, 32 M. 258; 5 M. L. T. 269 (F. B.); 9 Cr. L. J. 170; 1 Ind. Cas. 187, explained and followed.

Where a person who gave information to the Village Magistrate of theft was directed to pay compensation to the accused, who was acquitted of the charge:

Held, that the award of compensation was wrong as the case was not instituted by complaint or on information within the meaning of section 250, Criminal Procedure Code.

Case referred for the order of the High Court under section 438, Criminal Procedure Code, by the Sessions Judge of Ramnad, at Madura, in his letter, dated 7th September 1911, No. 8507.

Mr. P. R. Grant, in support of the Reference.

ORDER.—In this case the second class Magistrate awarded compensation to the accused, who was acquitted on a charge of theft. The complainant gave to the Village Magistrate information of the theft, and the Village Magistrate made a report to the Police. The 2nd class Magistrate took congnizance of the offence on the report of the Police. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate set aside the order awarding compensation on the ground that the case was not instituted by "complaint" as defined in the Criminal Procedure Code or upon information given to a Police officer or to a Magistrate, the Village Magistrate not being a Magistrate within the meaning of section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code (see sub-section 1). In this view, the Sub-Divisional Magistrate was, in our opinion, right. The only person to whom the complainant gave information was the Village Magistrate. He cannot be regarded as having given information to a Police officer, although the Village Magistrate was bound to report the occurrence to the Police. King-Emperor v. Thammana Reddi (1) is exactly in point. Its authority is, in no way, affected by the case of the Sessions Judge of Tinnevelly Division v. Sivan Chetty (2). That case decided only that when information is given to a Village Magistrate, it might, in certain cases, amount to an institution of criminal proceedings on a charge of an offence. That has no bearing on the question whether information given to a Village Magistrate can be regarded as information given to the Police to whom he was bound to report. We are of opinion, therefore, that there is no ground for interference. The record will be returned to the Sessions Judge.

Record returned.

(1) 25 M. 667.
(2) 32 M. 258; 5 M. L. T. 269 (F. B.); 9 Cr. L. J. 170; 1 Ind. Cas. 187.

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 137.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION APPLICATION No. 84 OF 1911.

August 3, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Crouch, A. J. C.

IMPERATOR—PROSECUTOR

versus

BHOJRAJ CHELLARAM—APPLICANT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 437, 556—Section 556 applicable to proceedings under section 437—"Try any case"—"Personally interested"—Magistrate presiding at meeting of Municipal Board sanctioning prosecution—Jurisdiction—Order for further inquiry.

The expression "try any case" in section 556 of the Criminal Procedure Code is wide enough to include any stage of a judicial proceeding in which the question of the guilt or innocence of an accused is finally adjudicated on. Consequently, the section applies to the proceedings under section 437 of the Code.

Emperor v. Mohan Lal, 27 A. 25, distinguished.

A Magistrate who presided at a meeting of the Municipal Board which directed the prosecution of the accused, is disqualified from making an order for further inquiry against the accused under section 437 of the Code. The Magistrate must be deemed to be personally interested within the meaning of section 556 of the Code.

Mr. Achalsing M. Advani, for the Applicant.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

PRATT, J. C.—This is an application for revision of an order made by the District Magistrate, Upper Sind Frontier, directing further inquiry into the case of the applicant who had been discharged by a Subordinate Magistrate.

The charge against the accused-applicant was of an offence of criminal breach of trust of Municipal monies and the prosecution had been instituted by order of the General Board of the Municipality.

One of the grounds urged before us is that the District Magistrate having presided at the meeting of the General Board which directed the prosecution had no jurisdiction to make an order for further inquiry under section 437, Criminal Procedure Code.

The Public Prosecutor contends, in the first place, that the disqualification under section 556, Criminal Procedure Code, applies only to a Magistrate who tries or commits the case for trial; and, in the second place, that if the section applies the case is covered by the explanation.

In the case of Emperor v. Mohan Lal (1) it was doubted whether the word 'try' could be applied to proceedings under section 435 where the Magistrate was not empowered to pass orders, but merely to report the case for the order of the High Court. The distinction there suggested does not arise in the present case for the Magistrate's order under section 437 has the effect of setting aside the order of discharge. The Magistrate has held a judicial proceeding which has ended in an order prejudicial to the accused. The expression "try any case" is, in my opinion, wide enough to include any stage of the judicial proceeding in which the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused is finally adjudicated on. The construction does not force to the words of the section and is in accord with the intention of the Legislature which was to enact the rule that no man can be Judge in his own cause.

I would, therefore, hold that the section does apply; and the question then arises whether the explanation covers the case. Under that explanation a Magistrate is not deemed to be a party as personally interested in any case by reason only that he is a Municipal Commissioner or otherwise concerned therein in a public capacity. But the illustration makes it clear that the effect of the section is only partially to relax the rule that no man is to be a judge in his own cause. A Collector who qua Collector is interested in the protection of the fisc may as Magistrate try an offence against the Excise Laws. He is not disqualified "by reason only" that he is a Collector. But if in his capacity as Collector he has directed the prosecution, he is disqualified from trying the case not by reason of the fact that he is the Collector, but by reason of the further fact that he has constituted himself the Prosecutor. So in the case of Emperor v. Risheshar (2), where the Magistrate as President of the Octroi Sub-Committee directed the prosecution of an accused for evading the payment of Octroi, it was held that the Magistrate was disqualified from trying the case even though the accused had consented to be so tried.

(1) 27 A. 25.

Here the Magistrate presided at a meeting of the Municipal Board which directed the prosecution. It may be that he did not speak or vote at the meeting—but the fact remains that he attended a meeting where the question was debated and the prosecution ordered and he has, therefore, placed himself personally to some extent in the position of a prosecutor. The case is on this point on all fours with the cases of the Queen v. Milledge (3), and the Queen v. Lee (4), where it was held that the mere presence of a borough justice at the meeting of the Town Council which resolved upon the prosecution disqualified him from trying the case. Section 258 of the Public Health Act, 1875, enacts that no Justice of the Peace shall be deemed incapable of acting in cases arising under this Act by reason of his being a member of any Local Authority and Field, J., said as to this section that it had not the effect of enabling a person to act as Prosecutor and Judge in the same matter.

I would, therefore, reverse the order of the Magistrate as being made without jurisdiction.

CROUCH, A. J. C.—I concur.

Order reversed.

(2) 32 A. 635; 7 A. L. J. 749; 7 Ind. Cas. 291; 11 Cr. L. J. 447.
(3) (1879) 4 Q. B. D. 332; 48 L. J. M. C. 139; 40 L. T. 748; 27 W. R. 659.
(4) (1882) 9 Q. B. D. 394; 30 W. R. 750; 47 J. P. 118.

(S. C. 5 S. L. R. 179.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION APPLICATION NOS. 22, 23 AND 24 OF 1911.

August 25, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Crouch, A. J. C.

KARAM BAHADIN AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 423 (c), 439, 514, 515—Order forfeiting bond—Revision—High Court—Jurisdiction to revise District Magistrate's order under section 515—Interpretation of Statutes—Curtailment of the jurisdiction of a Superior Court.

The jurisdiction of a Superior Court cannot be taken away except by express words or necessary implication.

Tulsidas v. Virbussapa, 4 B. 624, followed.

The general power of revision vested in the High Court is not taken away by the power of revision given to the District Magistrate under section 515 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

The High Court has, under sections 439 and 423 (c) of the Code, power to revise an order passed by a District Magistrate under section 515 or by any Magistrate under section 514 of the Code.

Mr. Isarsing Hazarising, for the Applicants.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application to revise an order of the District Magistrate, Karachi, dismissing an appeal against an order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate forfeiting, under section 514, Criminal Procedure Code, applicant's bond for appearance in his Court and confirming the penalty to the extent of one-half the amount stated in the bond.

Reference has been made to the cases of In re Nilmadhub Gopal (1) and In re Nurul Huqq (2), where it has been held that the High Court has power to reverse such orders. These cases, however, were decided with reference to the provisions of the Codes of 1861 and 1872 and are no longer of any authority.

Our jurisdiction under the present Code is very wide, and sections 439 and 423 (c) give us power to revise this order. This general power is not taken away by the power of revision given to the District Magistrate by section 515. As said in Tulsidas v. Virbussapa (3), the jurisdiction of

(1) 19 W. R. Cr. 1.
(2) 3 C. 757.
(3) 4 B. 624.

DUR MAHOMED v. ALLAHDINO.

a superior Court canot be taken away except by express words or necessary implication. Here there is no implication against our jurisdiction for it might be concurrent with that conferred on the District Magistrate.

It is not necessary, however, for us to consider the merits of the case for it is not denied that the District Magistrate dismissed the appeal of the applicant without giving him the hearing to which he was entitled under the proviso to section 421 (1) of the Criminal Procedure Code.

We, therefore, reverse the order of the District Magistrate and direct him to re-hear and dispose of the appeal according to law.

Order reversed.

Advocate High Court
Jammu & Kashmir
Srinagar

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 190.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION APPLICATION No. 112 OF 1911.

September 21, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Fawcett, A. J. C.

DUR MAHOMED valad MITHO—APPELLANT

versus

ALLAHDINO valad ALIM KHAN—OPPONENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 528—Notice, necessity of—Order without notice not illegal—Practice.

Section 528 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not make it incumbent on a Magistrate to issue notice before making an order. But in many cases it would be improper to take action under the section without issuing notice.

Where the Magistrate himself considers that the case is a fit one to give the accused an opportunity to show cause against an order under section 528, no order should be passed unless the accused has had sufficient time to make an effective representation in the matter.

Application against the order of the District Magistrate, Larkhana.

Mr. Achalsing M. Advani, for the Applicant.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The applicant filed a complaint in the Court of the Resident Magistrate, Larkhana, on the 1st March and on the 3rd July made an application to the District Magistrate for transfer of the case to the mukhtyarkar and First Class Magistrate for reasons personal to the Resident Magistrate.

The District Magistrate recorded the following order on the 3rd July:—"Owing to allegations, which there is no time to sift, that the Resident Magistrate, Larkhana, is (largely by the force of circumstances) to some extent interested, or commonly believed to be interested in the case of Imperator v. Dino (Indian Penal Code, section 494), that case is hereby transferred to the Court of the mukhtyarkar and First Class Magistrate, Larkhana. As the case is fixed for July 5th, the Magistrate should inform the other side they may object on July 4th" and then on the 5th July confirmed the order, as there had been no appearance for the accused.

The complainant has applied to us under section 439 to cancel this order.

It is objected that no notice was issued to the accused before the order of transfer was made. Section 528 does not make it incumbent on the Magistrate to issue notice; but there are many cases in which it would be improper to take action under the section without issuing notice. The District Magistrate himself considered that this was such a case for he gave the accused an opportunity to show cause against the order. But it is admitted that the time allowed was too short for the accused to make any effective representation in the matter. On this ground alone we think it necessary to reverse the order of the District Magistrate and to order him to dispose of the application on its merits and after hearing the accused.

Order reversed.

MANGHIRMAL v. VITHAL RAM.

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 107.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 34 OF 1909.

July 13, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., Mr. Crouch, A. J. C., and Mr. Fawcett, A. J. C.

Missir MANGHIRMAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Missir VITHALRAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Yajman Vritti—Nature of property—Impartible and inalienable—Custom recognizing partition and alienation—Burden of proof—Partition, essentials of—Enjoyment of vrit by rotation—Will of a share of a vrit—Succession to vrit.

A. and B., members of a joint Brahmin family, entered into an agreement in 1805 whereby the vritti was declared to be common, half the produce to be taken by A. and half by B. In 1857, the descendants of A. and B. made a further agreement by which they divided up their Yajmans into groups and each member was to administer to each group turn by turn. The later document recited that the parties previously used to enjoy the vrit jointly, but from the date of the document they divided it among themselves to be enjoyed by a system of rotation according to the different quarters of the town. The proceeds of the vrit were enjoyed by the members of the family per stirpes and not per capita. In 1905, C., the sole representative of B.'s branch, died bequeathing his share of the vrit to his sister's son and the son of his brother's daughter:

Held, (by the Court), that there had been no such partition of the vrit as to entitle C. to alienate his share. C. had no exclusive right in his share of the vrit which he could bequeath by Will to persons who would have no right to it as survivors of a joint family. Consequently, on C.'s death, his share devolved by succession to the surviving members of the family.

In order to effect partition, it is not sufficient that the co-parceners should alter the mode of holding their property. They must alter and intend to alter their title to it; they must cease to be joint owners, and become separate owners.

In every case of alleged partition, the question is one of intention, namely, whether the intention of the parties, to be inferred from the instruments which they have executed and the acts they have done, is to effect a division such as to alter the status of the family.

Doorga Pershad v. Kundun Kaswar, 13 B. L. R. 235; 21 W. R. 214; 1 I. A. 551 (P. C.), followed.

The legal effect of a document cannot be controlled or altered by evidence of the subsequent conduct of the parties.

Bulkishen Das v. Ram Narain Sahu, 30 C. 738 at p. 752; 7 C. W. N. 578, followed.

It is a well-recognized principle of Hindu Law that vrit is both impartible and inalienable.

The burden of proving a custom in derogation of ordinary Hindu Law rests upon him who asserts it.

There exists no general custom recognizing the partition of vrit and its restricted alienation to persons standing in the line of succession.

As a general principle, vrit is neither alienable nor partible. Alienation is prohibited on the ground of public policy, and because it includes a right of personal service. But a distribution of duties by a system of rotation has been recognized as permissible; so also the relinquishment of duties by one member in favour of other members of the family. The old text law has been modified by custom in particular families; but whenever such custom is alleged, it must be proved.

Rajaram v Ganesh, 23 B. 131, followed.

Gur Sobhraj v Gur Chandiram, 1 S. C. Sel. D. 353; Sukhlal v. Bihari Lal, 2 S C. Sel. D. p. 413, overruled.

Mancharam v. Pranshankar, 6 B. 298; Sitaram Bhat v. Sitaram Ganesh, 6 B. H. C. R. 250; Sukhlal v. Biharilal, 2 S. C. Sel. D. p. 413; Mitta Kunth Audhicarry v Neerunjun Audhicarry, 14 B. L. R. 166; 22 W. R. 437, distinguished.

Trimbak v. Lakshman, 20 B. 495, referred to.

Vrit has a two-fold aspect; from the point of view of the Brahmin who collects it may be merely money, but from the point of view of the yajmans, it connotes priestly services.

In dealing with the right of vrit, the Court must bear in mind that it is dealing not only with a right to collect fees but also with a priestly office.

(Per Pratt, J. C., dissenting):—The vrit in suit was not only partible but had actually been the subject of partition.

It would take but slight evidence to displace the rule of Hindu Law that vrit is impartible and inalienable, and such evidence was supplied by judicial decisions recognizing the partition and alienation of vrit and by the previous agreements in the family of the parties.

Appeal from the decision of the First Class Sub-Judge, Sukkur.

Mr. Mathradas Ramchand, for the Appellants.

Mr. Dipchand T. Ojha, for the Respondents Nos. 1 to 3.

JUDGMENT.

PRATT, J. C.—The plaintiffs are the descendants of one Khanchand. Nauram, who died in 1907, was the sole surviving descendant of Khushalchand, the brother of Khanchand.

Nauram was admittedly separate in estate from the plaintiffs and he made a Will leaving his property to the first three defendants who are his sister's sons.

Part of the property so bequeathed by Nauram was a vritti, or religious office.

The plaintiffs claimed that the vritti had not been the subject of partition, that it was property that was impartible and inalienable; and that they were entitled to it by right of survivorship. They sued for a declaration of their right, and for an injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with the vritti.

The lower Court found that the plaintiffs and Nauram enjoyed the vritti as tenants-in-common, and that Nauram was competent to bequeath his share to the defendants who were Brahmins like himself.

In appeal the main ground urged is that by Hindu Law vrittis are impartible and inalienable.

No doubt, this is the ancient rule of Hindu Law, but it is a rule that has been very largely superseded by custom and usage.

In regard to religious offices attached to temples and Inats, the Privy Council have said that the only law to be observed is that to be found in custom and usage: Greedharee Doss v. Nundo Kessore Dass (1) and Genda Puri v. Chatar Puri (2).

It would take but slight evidence, therefore, to displace the rule of Hindu Law—and such evidence is supplied in the present case (1) by judicial decisions recognizing the custom of partition and of alienation within limits in respect of similar offices; (2) by Exhibit 13-A.

These judicial decisions are Mitta Kunth Audhicarry v. Neerunjun Audhicarry (3), Sitaram Bhat v. Sitaram Ganesh (4); Mancharam v. Pranshankar (5), Rajaram v. Ganesh (6), and, lastly, the second case of Gur Sobhraj v. Gur Chandiram (7).

The last case is the most important as it refers to a similar office in the same town. The District Judge of Shikarpur made a decree for partition of this vritti which was not even appealed against on the ground that the vritti was impartible.

Further, it is clear that the parties themselves have in the past dealt with this vritti as if it were partible. Exhibit No. 13-A is a deed of partition made 50 years ago between Khanchand and his issue and Khushalchand and his issue by which the town is divided into parishes in which each serve in rotation. The mode of partition is very similar to that made by the decree of the District Judge in the case of Gur Sobhraj v. Gur Chandiram (7). It is contended that this is not a partition, but merely an agreement as to mode of enjoyment. There is no force in the contention, however, for the division is made not per capita but per stirpes. Nauram, at his death, was in sole possession of half the vritti while the other half was divided among the six or eight descendants of Khanchand.

It is clear, therefore, that the vritti in suit is not only partible, but that it has actually been the subject of partition.

The object of the rule of impartibility was to maintain the dignity of the office. Once that has been encroached upon and the office divided among the cadets of the family, the reason for the rule against alienation also ceases. There can be no objection to the separate sharers alienating their shares, provided the alienees are persons of the priestly caste and competent to perform the religious duties of the office. Although there is no evidence of an alienation in this particular family, there is no reason from excluding them from the custom of restricted alienation recognized in the decisions already referred to and which are relevant on this point under sections 13 and 40 of the Indian Evidence Act. The alienation in the present case has been, as in the case of Mancharam v. Pranshankar (5), to persons standing in the line of succession.

I would, therefore, confirm the decree of the lower Court and dismiss this appeal with costs.

CROUCH, A. J. C.—The parties in this case are Brahmins, and descendants of one Shangan. As far back as Sambat 1882 (about A. D. 1825), the family had a considerable connection of yajmans in Shikarpur from whom vrit was derived. It is not disputed that the connection belonged to the family as joint property, and would, in the ordinary course, have devolved like ordinary joint property in a Hindu family; that is to say, on the death of any one of the joint owners there would be survivorship to the still living male members.

In Sambat 1882, the family of Shangan was represented by two brothers, Khushalchand and Khanchand. By a written agree-

(1) 11 M. I. A. 405 at p. 428; 8 W. R. 25 (P. C.).
(2) 9 A. 1; 13 I. A. 100.
(3) 14 B. L. R. 166; 22 W. R. 437.
(4) 6 B. H. C. R. 250.
(5) 6 B. 298.
(6) 23 B. 131.
(7) (1890) 1 S. C. Sel. D. 353.

ment Exhibit No. 13-A, they partitioned all the family property. The concluding sentence of the agreement referred to the vrit:—"The vrit is common, half to be taken by Missir Kanumal Sobhraj and half by Khushalrai Tarachand Rupchand."

In Sambat 1914 (about 1857) a further agreement was made between "Kewaram Surtimal Khushaland" and "Sobhraj Kimatrai Kanchand" (by which was apparently meant Kewaram's son Surtimal and Sobhraj's son Kimatrai) the purport of which is given by the following extracts:—

"Formerly, we used to enjoy the vrit of Chabrias jointly between ourselves. From the above date we divided it between ourselves by quarters (neighbourhoods). Every one will go to his own quarter for the performance of any ceremonies. No one will go to the quarter of any other. After the year is over they will change turns. After every twelve-months the quarters are to be exchanged between them. If the one who has turn for that year is not present there and the one who has not got his turn for that year is there, the latter shall recover the same from the yajman and give it to the one who has turn for that year. For one year it is the turn of Missir Sobhraj for the quarter. Next year we shall get it as our turn, and we shall give our quarters. After the year is over the quarter will be exchanged between them."

In 1905, Nauram, who was then the sole representative, according to Hindu ideas, of Khushalchand's family, died leaving a Will whereby he bequeathed his share of the vrit to his sister's son and the sons of his brother's daughters.

The question at issue is whether Nauram had at the time of his death, such exclusive right in a half share of the vrit that he could bequeath it by Will to persons outside the family of Khushalchand, who would have no right to it as survivors of a joint family.

In all litigation touching vrit, it is usual for the parties to treat it as property. But vrit has a two-fold aspect; from the point of view of the Brahmin who collects it, it may be merely money, but from the point of view of the yajmans it connotes priestly services; and it is the duty of the Court to bear this two-fold aspect in mind, and remember that it is dealing not only with a right to collect fees, but with a priestly office.

If the right to collect vrit attach to a Brahmin because he belongs to a certain family—and it was thus that Nauram exercised his right—there must be a corresponding right in the yajmans that the person demanding the vrit belongs to that family. No right can be alienated unless the correlative duty can also be transferred. Hence, prima facie, no right to collect vrit can be alienated; and we start with a well recognized principle of Hindu Law that vrit is both impartible and inalienable. This principle is recognized in Rajaram v. Ganesh (6), where Ranade, J., refers to "the text law which admittedly prohibits both partition and alienation," and in Mancharam v. Pranshankar (5), where Melvill, J., says: "No doubt, hereditary offices, whether religious or secular, are treated by the Hindu text-writers as naturally indivisible."

Again, the right to collect vrit which attaches to the member of a particular family in return for religious administration is a right of personal service. Such a right is not ordinarily alienable, and "compulsory alienation of vritti by way of sale in execution of decrees has been disallowed in all cases as being not only opposed to Hindu Law and public policy, but as against the provisions of section 266, Civil Procedure Code, as being rights of personal service," [Per Ranade, J., Rajaram v. Ganesh (6)].

It is contended that the old text law has, in practice, been greatly modified, in many instances by custom What the custom is, in any particular case, is a question of evidence; and there can, I think, be no doubt that the person who bases his claim on allegations of custom, differing materially from the old law, must prove it. In Genda Puri v. Chatar Puri (2), their Lordships state:—"In determining who is entitled to succeed as 'mohant,' in such a case as the present, the only law to be observed is to be found in custom and practice, which must be proved by testimony, and the claimant must show that he is entitled, according to custom." "By force of custom, a limited right of partition and alienation may be established, and the custom must be ascertained by evidence in each class of cases:" Rajaram v. Ganesh (6). "The custom or usage of the particular family must be substantiated by evidence:" Rajeshwar Mullick v. Gopeshwar Mullick (8).

MANGHIRMAL v. VITHALRAM.

Several cases have been cited as establishing a custom that vrit is partible and alienable. Before dealing with these cases, it is desirable to point out that a mere distribution of the duties of priest among the living members of a family does not amount to partition. Each member is not thereby made a separate and absolute owner of a divided share in what may be termed the family practice. Nor can it, in view of the clear principles of law prohibiting partition and alienation, be presumed that any member intends, by such distribution, to permanently relinquish his duties towards a certain number of the yajmans, or to permanently alienate his rights of survivorship. There is an essential difference between agreeing to hold the vrit, when collected, in separate shares, and the permanent partitioning of all the rights and duties connected with the vrit.

In Mitter Kunth Audhicarry v. Neerunjun Audhicarry (3) the parties sought partition of the right to worship an idol. The Court (per Couch, C. J.), held that there was nothing which "compelled the Court to say that they should be obliged to perform the service jointly and to undergo the many inconveniences which might arise from such a state of things," and ordered that it be determined by lot in what order the several parties should worship the idol.

In a case reported in a note on page 168 of the same volume, partition is defined as "a right to enjoy his own right separately."

In Mancharam v. Pranshankar (5), it was said:—"No doubt hereditary offices, whether religious or secular, are treated by the Hindu text-writers as naturally indivisible; but modern custom, whether or not it be strictly in accordance with ancient law, has sanctioned such partition as can be had of such property, by means of a performance of the duties of the office, and the enjoyment of the emoluments by the different co-parceners in rotation."

In Trimbak v. Lakshman (9), the right of the several members of a family to exercise a religious office in turn was recognised.

(8) 34 C. 828 at p. 833; 11 C. W. N. 782.
(9) 20 B. 495.

In Gur Sobhraj v. Gur Chandiram (7), it was held that the enjoyment of vrit by certain Gurs in Shikarpur should be by rotation, the priests forming each class holding the different parishes in yearly rotation.

None of the cases above cited support the contention that the right obtained by a particular member of the family on so-called partition by a system of rotation gives him a divided share which he can alienate to a stranger.

In Sitaram Bhat v. Sitaram Ganesh (4), the sale of an hereditary priestly office to one next in succession from the vendor to such office was recognized, it being held that "the grandfather did nothing more than relinquish his right in their favour."

In Sukhlal v. Biharilal (10), no right to partition was in issue; there was a question of succession only. It was held, that among the Thakurs of Shikarpur, daughters and daughters' sons might inherit vrit and have the priestly duties performed by deputy. It appears that these duties could be performed by any banya who took to a religious life.

I have now, I believe, dealt with all the leading cases which have been relied on as showing that vrit can be partitioned and alienated. We find that the law may be thus summarised. As a general principle vrit is neither alienable nor partible. Alienation is prohibited on the ground of public policy, and because it includes a right of personal service. But a distribution of duties by a system of rotation has been recognized as permissible; so also the relinquishment of duties by one member in favour of other members of the same family. The old text law has been modified by custom in particular families; but wherever such custom is alleged, it must be proved.

Mr. Dipchand contends that the history of Shangan's family shows that they have been living as separated members for over half a century, and he relies on Murari Vithoji v. Mukund Shivaji (11) to support the contention that long enjoyment in separate shares is evidence of an agreement to partition. He relies on the two documents above abstracted.

Now the first document, Exhibit No. 13-A,

(10) (1902) 2 S. C. Sel. D. 413.
(11) 15 B. 201.

states in clear terms, that the vrit is common, and that a further document was necessary 32 years afterwards, sufficiently proves that there was no final partition in 1825. By the second document the parties did nothing more than divide up their yajmans into groups, and agree that each member should administer to each group turn by turn. No member entirely abandoned his rights as regards a single yajman and no yajman lost his general right to demand priestly services from the family generally. It was expressly declared, that in the absence of any member whose turn it was to attend a particular yajman, some other member of the family should attend. So far as the priestly duties were concerned, they were merely distributed among those who had a right, and were under an obligation, to perform them. The only thing that became the absolute separate property of any member was the vrit that he actually recovered. Such agreement is perfectly good, it is in the interests of the yajmans. But I can find nothing in the document which in any way supports the theory that Nauram acquired rights which he could alienate to strangers. Enjoyment for many years under this agreement in no way proves that he had such rights.

There can be no doubt that the devisees under Nauram's Will are technically strangers, and the devise cannot be upheld unless it be conceded that the rights which the Will purported to deal with were absolutely within the testator's power of disposal.

It may be urged that some of the reported cases seem to assume that after a partition by a system of rotation, the turn of each member would devolve by succession on his sons. This may be so, and there would be nothing contrary to the spirit of the Hindu Law of succession to joint property, and nothing in conflict with the interest of the yajmans, if such rights of succession were recognized.

The right of plaintiffs to an injunction, in the event of their claim being allowed, was not disputed in the lower Court. In Mancharam v. Pranshankar (5), the right to injunction in such cases was recognized. And see also Vithal Krishna Joshi v. Anant Ram Chandra (12).

I would, therefore, reverse the decree of the lower Court. I would hold that the vritti was enjoyed by plaintiffs, defendants Nos. 4, 5 and 6 and Naoo jointly, that plaintiffs and defendants Nos. 4, 5 and 6 had a right of survivorship to it, that Naoo was not competent to devise the vrit by Will to defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 and would grant an injunction to plaintiffs against defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 in the terms prayed for. I would order defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 (respondents Nos. 1, 2 and 3) to pay all costs in both Courts.

PRATT, J. C.—Referred for decision to Mr. Fawcett, Additional Judicial Commissioner, under the Proviso to section 9 B.

FAWCETT, A. J. C.—In this case the main point for determination seems to me to be not whether the vritti in question is partible or impartible, but whether (assuming it to be partible) there has in fact been an actual partition under which Nauram was entitled to devise by Will his right to appropriate a half share of the produce of the vritti as if it were his own exclusive property. The learned Judicial Commissioner holds that there has been such a partition under the deed Exhibit No. 38, whereas Mr. Crouch says, he "can find nothing in the document which in any way supports the theory that Nauram acquired rights which he could alienate to strangers."

In the previous deed of 1825, Exhibit No. 13-A, the vritti is expressly declared to be common, half the produce to be taken by Sobhraj who is now represented by the plaintiff's branch of the family, and half by Khusalchand, of whom Nauram was the sole surviving descendant in the male line. The main question is whether Exhibit No. 38 converts this joint tenancy into a tenancy in common, so that there was a separation in interest and in right, or whether it simply alters the mode of enjoyment of the vritti half and half, without any definite discontinuance of the joint interest.

The document itself does not contain anything which necessarily indicates a separation in interest and in right. It merely provides for a division of yajmans into groups to be administered to alternately year by year, in such a way that each of the two co-sharers would get an approximately equal amount of produce in each consecutive series of two years. It does not by this arrangement necessarily do more than provide for the particular mode of enjoyment by which the two co-sharers should share half and half in accordance whith the provision in Exhibit No. 13-A.

(12) 11 B. H. C. R. 6.

At the same time, it might, of course, amount to a partition and separation in interest and in right. But, as said in Mayne's Hindu Law, 6th Edition, section 495, at page 651, "it is not sufficient that they (the co-parceners) should alter the mode of holding their property. They must alter, and intend to alter their title to it. They must cease to become joint owners, and become separate owners." As laid down by the Privy Council in the case of Doorga Pershad v. Kundan Koowar (13), the question in every case like this is one of intention, namely, whether the intention of the parties to be inferred from the instruments which they had executed and the acts they had done, was to effect a division such as to alter the status of the family. On this point the document Exhibit No. 38 is unfortunately ambiguous. There is nothing in it which says in clear terms that the joint tenancy of the vritti under Exhibit No. 13-A was to cease and each party was in future to have a separate share in it. All that is said on this matter is as follows: "Formerly, we used to enjoy the 'vritti' of Chabrias jointly between ourselves. From the above Miti and Sambat we divided it between ourselves by quarters (neighbourhoods). For this purpose this agreement is written." I do not think that this can be taken as an implied agreement that the joint tenancy was to cease. The antithesis is, I think, only intended to be between (1) a division of the proceeds of the vritti "between ourselves" by halving them in the ordinary way, and (2) a division of them by dividing the yajmans into two separate groups as it is done by the document: and is not intended to distinguish between a joint and a separate enjoyment. If the latter had been intended, I think, that having regard to the status and education of the parties, clear language to that effect would have been used. In the absence of such language, or of any other clear indications to the same effect, I think the ordinary presumption in favour of the continuance of a personal relation or state of things continuous in its nature [illustration (d) to section 114, Evidence Act] should be given effect to.

(13) 13 B. L. R. 235; 21 W. R. 214; 1 I. A. 551 (P. C.).

If the yajmans had been divided into two groups and one allotted for the exclusive administration of each co-sharer, there would have been more ground for assuming that a complete separation in interest and right was intended. But in this case, as pointed out in Mr. Crouch's judgment, "no member entirely abandoned his rights as regards a single yajman," and the arrangement is quite consistent with the continuance of the previous joint tenancy. This also meets the contention of respondents' Pleader that the vritti could not have been partitioned in any other way than that adopted in Exhibit No. 38.

The document also clearly does not purport to partition the vritti of out-stations, (i. e., of yajmans residing in the villages of Khanpur and Rustom), as to which it is distinctly provided that "one who receives it will divide it half and half." The joint tenancy, therefore, continued as regards this part of the vritti: and this strengthens the presumption that it continued in respect of the Shikarpur vritti. The Will also recites that the produce of the Amritsar vritti when both parties are at Amritsar together, "is appropriated half and half by each one of us." Again, as regards the Shikarpur vritti, the testator himself says in the Will that "I, the executant, and the progeny of the deceased Missir Sobhraj (i. e, the plaintiffs), have a joint claim to the moiety of the produce of the vritti." It does not, therefore, seem that the deceased really thought the joint tenancy had ceased, but only, that in spite of it he had an exclusive right to a half share in the produce, which he could devise by Will.

The fact that the division of the income of the vritti is made not per capita, but per stirpes does not, in my opinion, suffice to show that an actual separation in interest and estate was intended. I think I am right in saying that this is a common basis on which co-parceners in a joint Hindu family divide the family income, and the first deed Exhibit No. 13-A, which expressly declared the vritti to be joint, also enjoins a distribution on the same basis.

No doubt, under Exhibit No. 13-A, there was a partition of the rest of the family estate, but the recital therein as to the vritti rebuts any presumption that might otherwise arise in favour of the vritti also being partitioned.

The Sub-Judge in his judgment relies on the fact that the plaintiffs have made a further division of the vritti inter se by assigning certain yajmans to each branch, but it is quite clear that no such act on their part can affect the status of the parties under Exhibit No. 38. As laid down in the Privy Council case of Balkishen Das v. Ram Narain Sahu (14), the legal effect of such a document cannot be controlled or altered by evidence of the subsequent conduct of the parties.

I, therefore, concur with Mr. Crouch in holding that there has been no such partition of the vritti as to entitle the deceased Nauram to bequeath his share of the proceeds to the defendants Nos. 1 to 3. Upon his death his share, as being joint property, devolved by succession on the plaintiff and defendants Nos. 4 to 6.

In this view of the case it is not necessary to decide the issue, discussed in the other judgments, as to whether a vritti like the present one is partible and alienable, or not. As, however, the point has been fully argued before me, I may briefly express my views for what they are worth. With due deference, I do not think the decisions cited in the learned Judicial Commissioner's judgment can be taken as authorizing the recognition by the Courts of a general custom of partition and restricted alienation, (e. g., to persons standing in the line of succession), in the case of vrittis or other priestly offices. This is directly contrary to the conclusion, arrived at by Ranade, J., in Rajaram v. Ganesh (6), after reviewing all the cases in question, that "in the case of private alienations.....no general custom can be pleaded in such matters," and that "by force of custom, however, a limited right of partition and alienation might be established, and the custom must be ascertained by evidence in each class of cases" pages 136-7). It is also opposed to the general rule that the onus of proving a custom in derogation of ordinary Hindu Law rests upon him who asserts it. No doubt, some of the cases on the subject go a long way towards recognition of such a custom, especially the case of Mancharam v. Pranshankar (5). But that case is distinguishable on the ground that the widow of the testator, who was his next heir, expressed her acquiescence in the bequest to his sisters' son, and it would seem from the preamble of the report that it had been found as a fact that there had been a prior partition of the priestly office [cf. Rajeshwar Mullick v. Gopeshwar Mullick (8)]. In any case, the rule laid down by Ranade, J., in Rajaram v. Ganesh (6) seems to me the proper one to follow. No doubt, in the cases reported in Gur Sobhraj v. Gur Chandiram (7) and Sukhlal v. Biharilal (10) vrittis were held to be partible and inheritable by daughters and daughters' sons: but the point of law now under consideration is not discussed and they cannot be treated as authorities against the adoption of the views taken in Rajaram v. Ganesh (6). There is an old case, reported in the Sadar Court Reports for 1870, Civil Rulings, page 77, in which the Court of the Commissioner in Sind held (at page 91) that there was no ground for distinguishing between vritti and other family property. But this is based on an opinion of Sir Thomas Strange, which at any rate, as regards the partibility and alienability of religious offices, is now admitted to be against the Hindu text law. And that case shows that the Soomace Punchayet of the Thakoors at Shikarpur did distinguish between 'vritti' or income arising from religious fees and other property (page 87), so that the distinction does not appear to be a novel one in Sind. On general grounds, I think that the Courts should lean against rather than in favour of, the partibility and alienability of vrittis like that in the present suit,

(1) because this is in consonance with the rule in Hindu Law on the subject.

(2) because of the two-fold aspect of vrit referred to in Mr. Crouch's judgment, and

(3) because, as stated in Trimbak v. Lakshman (9) the process of partition and alienation "might go on with each generation, frittering away the income and rendering the service wholly ineffective."

For the above reasons, I concur in the order proposed by Mr. Crouch.

Appeal allowed.

(14) 30 C. 738 at p. 752; 7 C. W. N. 578.

VARADAYYA CHETTY v. MUNUSAMI CHETTY.

(s. c. 10 M. L. T. 514.)

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL SUIT No. 140 OF 1911.

November 2, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Bakewell.

M. VARADAYYA CHETTY AND ANOTHER —PLAINTIFFS

versus

C. MUNUSAMI CHETTY AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 92, scheme suit —Parties—Suit by two worshippers of temple—Petition by other worshippers to be made parties—Jurisdiction.

A suit brought by two worshippers of a temple under section 92, Civil Procedure Code, for removal of trustees and framing a scheme is a representative suit. The fact that the sanction of the Advocate-General has been obtained does not change the character of the suit and it is open to the Court to add other worshippers as parties if it be shown that the plaintiffs are not prosecuting the suit to the advantage of the persons they profess to represent.

The plaintiffs as two worshippers of Srinivasa Perumal temple at Choolai, Madras, brought this suit under section 92, Civil Procedure Code, with the sanction of the Advocate-General, for the removal of trustees for framing a scheme and other reliefs. Three other worshippers took out this notice of motion to be made parties on the ground that the plaintiffs do not represent them and that the suit was instituted in collusion and at the instance of one of the defendant-trustees and that, therefore, they should be on the record to conduct the suit in the interests of the temple.

Mr. P. Venkataramana Rao, for the Applicants.

Mr. T. Ethiraja Mudaliar, for the Plaintiffs.

Messrs. Venkatasubba Rao and Radhakrishnaiya, for the 1st Defendant.

Mr. A. Suryanarayana, for 2nd Defendant.

Mr. T. Ethiraja Mudaliar, for 2nd Plaintiffs.—I take a preliminary objection that this application does not lie. The suit having been instituted with the sanction of the Advocate-General under section 92, Civil Procedure Code, the applicants cannot be made parties. There is no provision of law under which they come in. I refer to Order I, rule 8, clause (2), Civil Procedure Code, and no such provision is made in section 92, Civil Procedure Code. The decision in Abdul Rehman v. Cassum Ebrahim (1) is in point. There a fresh defendant was added after the institution of the suit and the suit against the added defendant was held not to be maintainable. [Bakewell, J. Were there any reliefs prayed for against him?] Yes. This application is also premature. The proper time for the application to come in, is when the suit is decided and it is referred to Chambers for a scheme. The Court can allow them to intervene if it thinks necessary to do so. Till then they have no voice in the suit I rely on the following passage in In re Hyde Park Place Charity (2):—"I think it is of the extremest importance that in these charity cases that which I believe has been the uniform practice should be maintained, namely, that when in a matter of this kind the trustees apply to the Court by originating summonses for a scheme and make the Attorney-General a party, that is the properly constituted proceeding and no application to be added as a party ought to be listened to before an order has been made for the scheme."

[Bakewell, J.—There the Attorney-General was a party. The Advocate-General is not a party here.] He has given the sanction. [Bakewell, J.—That would not make him a party.] Even after the suit is referred to Chambers for a scheme leave to intervene is granted sparingly; 52 E. R. 187.

Mr. P. Venkatramana Rao, for the Applicants. A suit instituted under section 92, Civil Procedure Code, by two worshippers of a temple is a suit of a representative character. Before the enactment of the present Civil Procedure Code, suits of this nature could be brought by all the persons interested in the temple or by two or more under section 30 of the old Code corresponding to Order I, rule 8 of the present Code or under section 539 of the old Code corresponding to section 92 of the present one. Monmotha Nath Das v. Harish Chandra Das (3).

[Bakewell, J.—What do you say to clause 2 of section 92, Civil Procedure Code?] That does not alter the character of the suit. For the position that the suit is representative I refer to Budree Das Mukin v. Choonee Lal Johwry (4). Also Best, J., in Subbayya v. Krishna (5). In a representative suit it has

(1) 13 Bom. L. R. 583; 11 Ind. Cas. 726.

(2) (1911) 1 Ch. 678 at p. 685; 80 L. J. Ch. 593.

(3) 33 C. 905; 10 C. W. N. 867.

(4) 33 C. 789; 10 C. W. N. 581.

(5) 14 M. 186 at p. 209.

always been the practice to add parties if they say that the plaintiff does not represent them or for any sufficient reason. In (1910) Yearly Practice, Volume I, page 159, the rule is stated thus:—"In a representative action brought by one or more persons purporting to represent a class, any member of that class who objects to such representation and for that or other reasons desires to intervene may apply by summons to be added as a co-defendant and may be so added without the plaintiff's consent." The decision in Abdul Rehman v. Cassum Ebrahim (1) has no application to this case. Besides, it has overlooked a decision of a Division Bench of that Court in Dhanjibhoy Raghoo v. Meherally Morarji (6).

[Bakewell, J.—You can read the affidavits]

ORDER.—The learned Vakil for the plaintiffs has argued that this application does not lie, and is premature, on the ground that the suit has been instituted with the sanction of the Advocate General and that the proper time for the applicant to intervene is when a scheme for the management of the charities is before the Court. I think that the suit is a representative suit brought by two of the worshippers on behalf of the whole body of worshippers of the temple, that the fact that sanction has been obtained for its institution does not change the character of the suit in any way and that such an application as the present will lie if it be shown that the plaintiffs are not prosecuting the suit to the advantage of the persons they profess to represent.

The applicants have failed to show that the plaintiffs are not prosecuting the suit bona fide and in the interests of the applicants and other worshippers. All that appears from the affidavits is that the 1st defendant has his own party which the applicants represent. As regards the desire of the applicants to be present at the settlement of a scheme, the present application is premature and my order is without prejudice to any application that parties may be advised to make when a scheme is before the Court.

Application is dismissed with costs of plaintiff and 2nd defendant (two sets).

Application dismissed.

(6) 9 Bom. L. R. 901.

(S. C. 10 M. L. T. 526.)

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 330, 331 AND 334 OF 1906.

February 26, 1909.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Sankaran Nair.

KARIPPALA alias VARIPAYUR MANAKKAL NARAYANAN NAMBUDRIPAD AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MUCHAI MANAKAL SANKARAN NAMBUDRIPAD AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Malabar law—Temple—Uraima of Karnavan of a tarwad—Renouncement of Karnavanship—Renewal of lease—Bona fides.

When the Karnavan of a tarwad is as such the Uralan of a Devasom, and he renounces his Karnavanship, he ceases to be the Uralan also. The Uraimaship is incident to the Karnavanship and unless the Uraimaship is expressly reserved in such cases it passes to the next Karnavan.

A renewal of a lease of Devasom properties is not binding on the Devasom if it is not granted bona fide in the usual course of management.

Second appeals against the decrees of the District Court of South Malabar in Appeal Suits Nos. 461, 462 and 465 of 1905 presented against the decrees of the Court of the District Munsif of Alatur, in Original Suits Nos. 62, 61, and 71 of 1904.

Messrs. C. R. Sundara Iyer, and Kunjunni Nair for the Appellants.

Messrs. J. L. Rozario and C. V. Ananthakrishna Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The father of the second plaintiff has renounced the Karnavanship of the family of which he was the head, and we are of opinion that when he ceased to be Karnavan of his family he ceased to be Uralan of the Devasom of which the Karnavan was always the trustee. The Uraimaship is incident to the Karnavanship and unless the Uraimaship is expressly reserved in such cases it passes to the next Karnavan.

The second plaintiff as the Karnavan of the family is, therefore, also a trustee of the Devasom.

The renewals of the leases are not binding on the Devasom as they were not granted bona fide in the usual course of management.

These second appeals are dismissed with costs.

Appeals dismissed.

[s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 537.]

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 733 OF 1910.

November 14, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar.

MALAPPURATH PARAMADHATHIL NARAYANA NAMBI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

CHANNAZHI KRISHNAN MOSSAD AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIV, r. 1—Suit for redemption of trust properties—Parties—Non-joinder of trustees—Bad and fatal to the suit—Agreement between trustees vesting management in one—Effect on the capacity of other trustees.

One of three Uralas alone cannot institute a suit for redeeming a Kanom without making the other two parties to the suit.

Although by agreement the ordinary management of the trust is vested in one trustee, the agreement does not deprive the other trustees of their office of trustees.

Ramanathan v. Marugappa, 27 M. 192, referred to.

Second appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge's Court of South Malabar at Calicut, in Appeal Suit No. 677 of 1909, presented against the decree of the Court of the District Munsif of Parapanangadi, in Original Suit No. 306 of 1908.

Mr. K. P. M. Menon, for the Appellant.—The arrangement among the Uralers does not affect their right as trustees and the other Ularers are necessary parties. Ramanathan v. Murugappa (1). The suit is, therefore, bad for non-joinder of parties and should be dismissed.

Mr. M. Kunjunni Nair, for the Respondents:—The objection was not taken in the lower Court and so should not be allowed to prevail. If necessary, we are prepared to make them parties now and the suit may be remanded with the necessary directions to the lower Court.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff, one of three Uralers of a temple, instituted the suit for redeeming a Kanom without making the other two Ularers parties. The defendant raised the objection of non-joinder of the other trustees, besides contesting the suit on the merits. The pleas relating to the merits of the case have been decided in favour of the plaintiff, but we are of opinion that the suit was badly framed by the other Uralers not being made parties. Order XXXIV, rule 1, Code of Civil Procedure, is quite clear on the point. It is contended that by a karar entered into between three trustees, the plaintiff was entitled to the sole executive management at the time of the plaint and that the karar expressly authorised the executive trustee for the time being to institute suits on behalf of the temple. The effect of such a karar has been fully explained in the judgment of this Court in Ramanathan v. Murayappa (1). The karar does not deprive the other trustees of their office of trustee though the ordinary management is confided to one only. This being so the provision authorising one of several trustees alone to represent the temple in suits cannot be given effect to. The other trustees are certainly interested in the property sought to be redeemed and are necessary parties. The plaintiffs now ask that they may be made parties. We accede to this request. The decrees of the lower Courts are set aside, and the suit remanded to the Court of first instance for trial de novo after making the other Uralers defendants in the suit. The plaintiff must make the necessary amendment of the plaint within two weeks after the order reaches the Court. The plaintiff must pay all costs of defendants Nos. 2 and 4 up to date.

Suit remanded.

(1) 27 M. 192.

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 125.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL SUIT No. 108 OF 1910.

July 17, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Fawcett, A. J. C.

Haji MANSOOR—PLAINTIFF

versus

MIN SAHEBDIN AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS.

Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 158—Application to set aside award—Limitation runs from date of submission of award and not from date of notice—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Sch. II, para. 15—Interpretation of statutes—Plain meaning—Assumption as to fixity of law—Hardship.

The period of limitation under Article 158 of the Limitation Act, 1908, for making an application to set aside an arbitration award is 10 days computated from the time when the award is submitted to the Court, and not from the time when the notice of the submission of the award is served on a party.

MANSOOR v. MIN SAHEBDIN.

Bulli v. Gianchand, (1897) Sind S. C. R. 1, overruled.

Gulam Khan v. Mahomed Hassan, 29 C. 167, followed.

The language of a codifying enactment must receive its natural meaning, without any assumption as to its having probably been the intention to leave unaltered the law as it existed before.

Norendra Nath Sircar v. Kamal Basini Dasi, 23 C. 563; 23 I. A. 18, followed.

The argument of hardship resulting from a plain interpretation of a Statute is always a dangerous one to listen to. If, in all cases of ordinary occurrence, the law, in its natural construction, is not inconsistent or unreasonable or unjust, that construction is not to be departed from merely because it may operate with hardship or injustice in some particular case.

Ram Narain Roy v. Baij Nath Malla, 29 C. 36, Edalji Shaporji v. Talsidas Sunderdas, 2 B. H. C. R. 270 at p. 275, referred to.

Mr. Tarachand, for the Plaintiff.

Mr. Kalumal, for the Defendant.

JUDGMENT.—The matters in difference in this suit were referred to the sole arbitration of Haji Baharudin Haji Dilawarkhan, under clause 3 of Schedule II of the Civil Procedure Code, by an order of this Court on the 26th September 1910.

The arbitrator submitted his award to the Court on the 4th October 1910, and notice thereof was issued to the parties on the 10th idem in accordance with clause 10 of the same Schedule II. Plaintiff's Pleader admits receipt of this notice on the next day.

On the 18th October 1910, the plaintiff filed objections to the award on the ground of alleged misconduct of the arbitrator, and on the 26th October 1910 he put in some additional objections on the same ground. The question, therefore, arises whether this application to set aside the award under clause 15 of Schedule II of the Civil Procedure Code is not time-barred under article 158 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, which prescribes a period of ten days from the time "when the award is submitted to the Court."

The plaintiff's Pleader contends, that in spite of the clear words of column 3 of Article 158, limitation begins to run only from the time of giving of notice (i. e., the 10th October 1910), and in support of this cites the decision to that effect of Whitworth, J., in Buli v. Gianchand (1).

That decision proceeds mainly on the ground that in the Limitation Act of 1871, the corresponding article (155), in prescribing the time when the period of limitation should begin to run, added the words "and notice of the submission has been given," etc., and though those words were omitted in Article 158 of the Limitation Act of 1877, (as also in the present Act of 1908), this was explained by the new provision in the Civil Procedure Code of 1877, requiring the Court to give notice of the filing of the award, so that "the change made in 1877, appears to have been merely a transfer of the provision as to notice from the Limitation Act to the Procedure Code."

With due deference, I think that such a construction of the plain words in column 3 of Article 158, is entirely inadmissible and erroneous. It virtually adds words to the Article, which not only are not there, but (as already pointed out) have been deliberately omitted since 1877. And, had this omission been merely due to oversight, it would presumably have been corrected in the Act of 1908, since attention has been called to the point by reported cases like those at Ram Narain Roy v. Baij Nath Malla (2) and Ghulam Khan v. Mahomed Hassan (3), Sm. Nobin Kally Dabee v. Ambica Churn Banerjee (4). Thus, in Article 169, regarding an application for the re-hearing of an appeal heard ex parte, the Limitation Act of 1908, adds words allowing limitation to run not only from "the date of the decree in appeal," as before, but also "where notice of the appeal was not duly served, when the applicant has knowledge of the decree" (cf. also Article 164).

Again, such a construction is opposed to the ruling of the Privy Council that "the language of a codifying enactment must receive its natural meaning, without any assumption as to its having probably been the intention to leave unaltered the law as it existed before," Norendro Nath Sircar v. Kamal Basini Dasi (5). It may be added that the Privy Council have also (although this exact point was not then before them) held that under Article 158, "the period of limitation for an application under the Code to set aside an award is a period of 10 days

(1) (1897) Sind S. C. R. 1.

(2) 29 C. 36.
(3) 29 C. 167.
(4) 5 C. W. N. 813.
(5) 23 C. 563; 23 I. A. 18.

only from the time when the award is submitted to the Court exclusive of the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the award (Limitation Act section 12)," Ghulam Khan v. Mahomed Hassan (3).

In this case no question arises as to the exclusion of the time required for obtaining a copy of the award, as the plaintiff did not apply for such copy until the 18th October 1910, i.e., after the period of limitation prescribed by Article 158 had expired. It is further argued that a strict construction of Article 158 may lead to hardship and virtually deprive a litigant of the right which the law gives him of applying to set aside the award, e. g., if he only receives notice after the period of 10 days from its submission has expired. It may be that in such a case the maxim "lex non cogit ad impossibilia" might be applied, so as to avoid a strict construction of the Article; but it is sufficient to say that in the present case no such consideration arises, as, had the plaintiff acted with due diligence, he had sufficient time to enable him to apply to set aside the award within the prescribed period of limitation. And, as stated in Maxwell on the Interpretation of Statutes, 3rd Edition, pages 286, 287, "the argument of hardship is always a dangerous one to listen to," and "if, in all cases of ordinary occurrence, the law, in its natural construction, is not inconsistent, or unreasonable, or unjust, that construction is not to be departed from merely because it may operate with hardship, or injustice in some particular case." This rule applies with all the more cogency in this instance, seeing that the Legislature has deliberately omitted words formerly in the Article, which would obviate the possibility of such hardship. The Legislature has probably considered a speedy and final termination of the dispute of sufficient importance to outweigh this consideration of hardship, for the reasons given in Edalji Shaporji v. Talsidas Sunderdas (6) and Ramnarain Roy v. Baijnath Malla (2).

It may be added that, if necessary, the possibility of any such hardship can probably be obviated by a rule under sections 125, 126 and 128 (2) (i), of the Civil Procedure Code delegating to the Registrar the power of issuing notices under clause 10 of Schedule II, to the Code, on his own authority and directing him ordinarily to issue such notices on the same day that the award is submitted to the Court.

(6) 2 Bom. H. C. R. 270 at p. 275.

I accordingly hold on the first issue that the objections raised by the plaintiff to the award are time-barred, and his application to set it aside is refused. In accordance with the award, I pronounce judgment in favour of plaintiff for the recovery of Rs. 150 from the defendant (I omit the qualifying words in the award "within one month from the date hereof" under clause 12 (b) of Schedule II, as that date has already expired), subject to the payment therefrom to Government of the sum of Rs. 100 due as Court-fees under Order XXXIII, rule 10, and dismiss the suit as regards the plaintiff's claim to partition. Each party to bear his own costs.

Copy of the decree to be forwarded to the Collector under Order XXXIII, rule 14.

Objections disallowed as time-barred.

[s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 538.]

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 775 OF 1910.

November 15, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar.

PERINCHERI KOVUMMAL PACKRICHI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

PERINCHERI KOVUMMAL KEENHACHA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Muhammadan Law—Marumakkatayam Law—Marriage gifts—Effect of death or divorce of the wife.

Among the Marumakkatayam Moplahs of Malabar, gifts are often made to the husband of a girl given in marriage, as a contribution for the maintenance of herself and her children and on her death or divorce such gift becomes void.

Under the Muhammadan Law, the members of the natural family are under no obligation to maintain a girl after marriage even if she is divorced. And the above rule of Marumakkatayam Law as to such gifts would not apply when the parties are governed by the Muhammadan Law.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of North Malabar, in Appeal Suit No. 32 of 1909, presented against that of the Court of the District Munsif of Badagara in Original Suit No 811 of 1903.

Mr. V. Ryru Nambiar, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff claims to recover one-half of the property which was given to the defendant's husband under Exhibit I by the plaintiff's mother and the plaintiff. The ground on which the plaintiff's title is based is that prior to the death of the defendant's husband, he divorced her and that according to the law by which the parties are governed, the gift became void in consequence of the divorce. The contention apparently is that the property then reverted to the donors, and as they held it as the heirs of the plaintiff's father, the plaintiff and the defendant, who is her sister, are entitled to it in equal shares. The document says that the property is given to the donee as stridhanam, though the word means woman's property and the gift was to a man. It would appear that amongst the Marumakhatayam Moplas of Malabar, gifts are often made to the husband of a girl given in marriage, apparently as a contribution towards the maintenance of the girl and her future children. It was held in Second Appeal No. 1746 of 1895, that such gift became void on the death or divorce of the girl. Now according to Marumakatayam Law, the tarwad is bound to maintain the woman of the tarwad even after the marriage, and, if property is given to a husband for the support of his wife, it stands to reason that, when he divorces her he should give back the property of the donor. The parties in this case are governed by the Muhammadan Law, not by the Marumakhatayam Law. A girl when married passes over to her husband's family under the Muhammadan Law. There is no obligation on the members of her natural family to maintain her after her marriage, even if she is divorced. There is no reason, therefore, for presuming that a rule of construction applicable to a stridhanam gift to a husband where the parties are governed by the Marumakkatayam Law is applicable to such an instrument where the parties are governed by the Muhammadan Law. The plaintiff did not allege any usage amongst Moplas governed by the Muhammadan Law according to which the gift would become void on the defendant's divorce. There is nothing in Exhibit I itself restricting the interest of the decree in any manner. If the gift was really intended for the benefit of the defendant herself and not her husband, the plaintiff would still have no title.

No doubt, it appears that a stridhanam gift in favour of the plaintiff's husband was held to convey only a limited estate to him. But the document is not before us and we do not know what its terms were. The result is that we must hold that the plaintiff has not succeeded in proving her title. We reverse the decree of the Courts below and dismiss the suit. The parties will bear each her own costs throughout.

Decree reversed.

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 140).

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL SUIT No. 297 OF 1908.

August 7, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Fawcett, A. J. C.

MATHRADAS RAMCHAND—PLAINTIFF

versus

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL—DEFENDANT

Railways Act (IX of 1890), s. 109—Railway Administration—Power to reserve separate accommodation for particular classes of passengers—Power to remove passenger trespassing into a reserved compartment—Interpretation of statutes—Express powers granted to a Company—Exclusion of other powers by implication—Master and servant—Servant acting outside the scope of his authority—Liability of master—Secretary of State for India—Liability for illegal removal by Railway servant—Assault—Removal by threat of force—Forcible removal.

A Railway Administration has power to reserve separate compartments for European and any person who is not a European is not entitled to travel in such reserved compartment There is nothing inherently illegal in the provision of separate accommodation for Europeans and Indians. Section 109 of the Railways Act implies a general power of reservation of a compartment for passengers of a particular class, community or race

A mere verbal threat to use force if the person threatened persists in a particular course of conduct does not amount to an assault.

Birbul Khatifa v. Emperor, 30 C. 97 at p. 100, relied upon.

The removal of a person by a threat to use force is 'a forcible removal.'

The Railway authorities have no power to remove a passenger from a compartment which is reserved for the use of another passenger or class of passengers.

Where a statute confers powers upon a Company, which the Company as owner of property could have exercised without statutory power, the powers expressly given should be treated as defining and limiting the right conferred and as implying a prohibition of the more extensive rights which the Company might have by virtue of its ownership of property.

MATHRADAS v. SECRETARY OF STATE.

Pratab Daji v. Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway, 1 B. 52 at p. 56, referred to.

Great Northern Railway Company v. Horrison, (1854) 23 L. J. Exch. 308 at p. 310; 10 Ex. 376; 2 C. L. R. 1136; 2 W. R. 626; London Association of Shipowners v. London and Indian Docks, (1893) 3 Ch. 242; 2 R. 23; 67 L. T. 238; 7 Asp. M. C. 195, relied upon.

Where the servants of a Government Railway Administration have no power to remove a passenger and in removing him have acted outside the scope of their authority, the passenger has no cause of action against the Secretary of State for India who is not liable for such acts of his servants.

Pulton v. The London and South Western Railway Co., (1866-67) 2 Q. B. 534; 8 B. and S. 616; 36 L. J. Q. B. 294; 17 L. T. 11; 16 W. R. 309, followed.

For the previous stages of this litigation see 2 Ind Cas. 273; 3 S. L. R. 59 and 11 Ind. Cas. 58; 5 S. L. R. 82. The suit was at first dismissed by Pratt, A. J. C. as not maintainable against the Secretary of State. On appeal the order of dismissal was set aside and the cases remanded for trial on the merits.

Mr. Isarsing Hazarasing, for the Plaintiff.

R. B. Teck Chand Oodhavdas, for the Defendant.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff who is a Pleader at Hyderabad sues the Secretary of State for India in Council for damages for his forcible removal by a Sergeant of Police, acting under the instructions of the Station-Master at the Karachi Cantonment Station, from a compartment, reserved for Europeans only, on the train by which he was travelling as a second-class passenger to Hyderabad on the 25th May 1908. The plaintiff alleges that such reservation was wrongful, and that "by inflicting upon the plaintiff the indignity of forcible removal by reason of his nationality from one compartment to another, the North-Western Railway Administration have acted ultra vires and illegally and have caused annoyance and pain of mind to the plaintiff, for which he claims Rs. 1,000 damages." (Plaint, paragraph 7).

The defendant in his written statement denies the alleged forcible removal, alleging that the plaintiff moved voluntarily on being requested to do so and arrangements made for his luggage to be removed by a licensed cooly. It is also denied that the action of the Railway Administration in providing separate accommodation for Europeans and Indians was illegal, or that the plaintiff was caused the annoyance or pain of mind alleged. The defendant further pleads that if there was any wrongful removal by the Railway Police under the orders of the Assistant Station-Master, the defendant is not responsible for such acts of their servants.

Certain allegations are made in the plaint as to the inferiority in fittings and comfort of the compartment reserved for Indians to the one reserved for Europeans; but at the time of framing the issues, plaintiff's Pleader dropped any claim he might have for damages for the discomfort of travelling in an inferior carriage and stated that he confined his cause of action to the alleged assault by the Police Sergeant acting under the instructions of the Station-Master. The following issues were accordingly settled.

1. Is the assault proved?
2. Was the board reserving the compartment affixed at the City Station or at the Cantonment Station?
3. Was the plaintiff not entitled to travel in the carriage which he entered at the City Station i. e., had the Administration power to reserve the carriage for Europeans?
4. Was the assault justifiable?
5. Is the defendant liable for an assault committed by the Station-Master or the Sergeant of Police or both?
6. To what damages, if any, is the plaintiff entitled?

As to the first issue, I do not think any actual assault by the Police Sergeant is proved. Plaintiff's own account is that the Police Officer in question "asked me to vacate saying he was authorized to evict me by force. I asked him if he was prepared to use force. He said 'yes.' He then took up a small bag of mine, and I had no other go but to follow him to the compartment, which he said was reserved for Indians. He was close to me when he said he was prepared to use force. He had also a small cane in his hand" (Exhibit No. 6, L 61-70). Assuming this to be what actually occurred, it does not amount to an assault as defined either in section 351 of the Indian Penal Code or in the ordinary English Common-law. There was no actual attempt or preparation to use immediate force on the person of the plaintiff, nor any gesture showing an intention to use such immediate force; there was merely a verbal threat to use force, if the plaintiff persisted in a particular course of conduct. And this is clearly laid down not to amount to an "assault" [Underhill's Law of Torts, 7th Edition, article 102 at pages 291-2; explanation to section 351, Indian Penal Code; Birbal Khatifa v. Emperor (1)].

But, I think, it is really immaterial whether the act of the Police Sergeant amounts to an assault or not. The word "assault" is not used in the plaint, where the cause of action is spoken of as a "forcible removal;" and I take it that at the time of framing issues, the former word was intended merely as a synonym, without any idea of plaintiff's being tied down to prove an assault, in the strict legal sense in which that word is used. On the pleadings, there is no doubt that plaintiff bases his claim to damages on the alleged tort committed by his being wrongfully compelled to move from the one compartment to the other, and defendant has joined issue on that basis. I accordingly think the words "compulsory removal" should be substituted for "assault" in issues Nos. 1 and 4, and proceed to decide them as if such substitution had been made.

Was the plaintiff, then, compelled by threat of force to move, from the compartment reserved for Europens into that reserved for Indians? This I find in the affirmative. The Police Sergeant, Mr. Lincoln, no doubt, denies having told the plaintiff that he was authorized and prepared to use force (Exhibit L. 1. 77). But it is difficult to believe that the plaintiff, who had persisted in declining to vacate the compartment, although requested to do so by the Station Masters at both the City and the Cantonment Stations and who, as the former says, was evidently "bent on travelling in this European compartment" (Exhibit B. 1. 75), at once climed down on the mere appearance of the Police Sergeant and raised no objection when the latter requested him to move. The fact that the Police Sergeant had armed himself with a written order from the Station-Master to remove the plaintiff also renders it probable that he would express his readiness to use force, if necessary, and goes to contradict his assertion that, if the plaintiff had persisted in refusing, he would not have removed him, but merely taken his name and address (Exhibit L. 1. 58). The plaintiff is also corroborated by the two witnesses, Messrs. Naigamwalla and Sukhramdas (Exhibits Nos. 6 and 9), as to the Sergeant telling him that, if he did not move, he would use force. In all the circumstances, I cannot accept Mr. Lincoln's account of what happened, which is, I think, tainted by a desire to exculpate himself and the Railway Co., and I hold it proved that he did threaten to use force, should the plaintiff persist in declining to move from the compartment.

A good deal of evidence has been given on the point whether the Police Sergeant himself moved the plaintiff's hand-bag from the one compartment to the other (as the plaintiff alleges) or whether this was done by a station cooly (as the defendant asserts). The evidence on the point is directly conflictory and it is somewhat difficult to decide which side is telling the truth. But it seems to me quite immaterial who removed the bag. Even if the Police Sergeant did it, this would not constitute an "assault" on the plaintiff and the point is only relevant as a possible indication whether plaintiff's removal was voluntary or compulsory. On the whole, I do not think it is proved that the Police Sergeant did in fact take the bag himself. The probablities are against it and it is noticeable that plaintiff's witnesses Naigamwalla and Sukhramdas only say they think the Sergean took the bag (Exhibit Nos. 6, L. 24) (Exhibits Nos. 8, 1, 42), while his witness, Mr. C. P. Mehta says he saw his luggage taken out by coolies (Exhibits Nos. 14, 1, 17). On the other hand, there is little doubt that the plaintiff was anxious to get his luggage personally removed by some responsible officer, probably because he thought this would be a visible sign of forcible removal. Thus, the Station-Master at the Cantonment Station says the plaintiff told him he would not move into the other compartment, unless he (the Station-Master) removed his bag (Exhibits Nos. 6, 1. 17, and the witness Rustomji (Exhibits Nos. 15, 1. 18) says the plaintiff told him that he had refused to come out until the Police Sergeant had moved his bag. But it does not follow that the Police Sergeant accepted this invitation of the plaintiff to "tread on the tail of his coat."

Issue No. 2.—This is not really necessary for the decision of the case, as, if the reservation of the compartment for Europeans was illegal, the affixing of a board notifying such reservation would not make it any the less illegal: and, similarly, if plaintiff was informed by an authorized officer of the Railway Co., that the compartment was reserved for Europeans, the fact of a board not being affixed would not alter the case, if his occupation of the compartment was wrongful. The point seems only relevant in so far as it may affect the question of damages. But as evidence has been given on the subject, I record my finding that a board reserving the compartment for European gentlemen was in fact affixed to it before the plaintiff entered it at the City Station. The orders issued by the Traffic Superintendent of the Railway at Lahore regarding the reservation of these compartments (Exhibit C.) mention the "necessary carriage boards" and require the District Traffic Superintendent, Karachi, to "see the boards are returned on corresponding trains," i. e., in this case the "7-up" between Karachi and Lahore, by which the plaintiff travelled. The District Traffic Superintendent, Karachi, in turn directed the Station-Masters, Karachi City, to see to this (Exhibit D.). Accordingly there is a presumption that the boards were affixed to the respective European and Indian compartments when the train was made up at the City Station; and the evidence does not rebut this presumption. The guard, William Lawrence, and the Assistant Station Master, Robert Samuel, who asked the plaintiff to move into the other compartment at the City Station, swear that there was a proper board on each of the two compartments. On the other hand, the evidence of the two witnesses for the plaintiff who were at the City Station with him is very indecisive. Vishindas says "I think no board was put on the compartment at the City Station" (Exhibits Nos. 8, 1, 68). Sukhramdas says there was a board on the Indian compartment, and he does not remember if there was a board on the European compartment (Exhibits Nos. 91, 103, 113); in view of this, his subsequent statement that at first there was no board and he thinks the Assistant Station-Master told his clerk to get one put on (ib 1. 1. 120—125) obviously cannot be relied on. Admittedly, there was a board on the compartment, when the train was at the Karachi Cantonment Station, and I entirely disbelieve the plaintiff's statement that, as soon as the train stopped at that Station, somebody came and put on the board there (Exhibits Nos. 7, 1.36). There is no other evidence in support of this assertion, and plaintiff admits that he drew no one's attention to it, although according to his account the two witnesses Vishindas and Sukhramdas were with him then in the compartment (ib, 1. 1. 40, 111).

(1) 30 C. 97 at p. 100.

Issues Nos. 3 and 4 can be dealt with together. In defendant's written statement, paragraph 6, there is a clear denial that the action of the Railway Administration in providing separate accommodation for Europeans and Indians was illegal; but there is no express pleading that the forcible or compulsory removal of the plaintiff was legal, and in fact Mr. Tekchand's main contention for the Secretary of State is that, it was illegal and that the defendant is, therefore, not liable in respect of it under the ordinary law of master and servant. Of course, if this is so, it is unnecessary to decide the 3rd issue, as the cause of action is the "forcible removal" and not the "provision of separate accommodation."

I think, then, it will be best to determine first whether plaintiff's compulsory removal was in fact illegal, even if he was in wrongful occupation of the European compartment. In support of this, Mr. Tekchand points out that the Indian Railways Act, 1890, confers express powers of removal in certain cases, e. g., sections 110 (2), 117 (1), 118 (2), 119, 120 and 122 (2), but gives no such power of removal in the cases dealt with in section 109 (1), which includes that of a passenger, who has "entered a compartment which is reserved by a Railway Administration for the use of another passenger," refusing to leave it when required to do so by any Railway servant. This certainly does give rise to a legitimate inference that the Legislature intended to restrict the interference of a railway servant in such a case to prosecution of the offender under that section and to debar him from removing him should he persist in his refusal to leave. But this is not necessarily conclusive, because, where a statute confers powers upon a Company, which the Company as owner of property could have exercised without statutory power, the powers expressly given may either be treated (1) as superfluous, or (2) as purposely inserted in order to define, that is limit, the right conferred, and as implying a prohibition of the exercise of the more extensive rights which the Company might have by virtue of its ownership of property: see Maxwell's Interpretation of Statutes, 3rd Edition, page 439. For instance, in this case, if the plaintiff was a mere trespasser in the European compartment and had no right to be in it, was the Railway administration debarred from removing him in exercise "of the right which the law accords to every proprietor to remove a trespasser, using only such force as may be necessary for the purpose?" I take the words in inverted commas from the judgment of Sargent, J., in the case of Pratab Daji v. Bombay Baroda and Central India Railway (2), where this very point (though in a different form) arose but was not decided. It was there said, however, that the argument against the Company being able to treat the plaintiff in that case as a "trespasser" derives some support from the remarks of Coleridge, J., at the conclusion of the judgment in Great Northern Railway Company v. Harrison (3); and in London Association of Shipowners v. London and Indian Docks (4), it was held that the latter of the two alternative modes of construction mentioned above (i.e., the restrictive one) is the true mode of regarding statutory powers conferred on bodies created for public purpose, and authorized to acquire land for such purposes. A Railway Company is such a body and the fact of the rights of the Company which made this railway having been acquired by the Secretary of State in Council under the Indian Guaranteed Railways Act, 1879, (see Gazetteer of the Province of Sind, Volume A, page 345), of course, makes no difference. I think, then, that Mr. Tekchand's argument as to removal being illegal in a case falling under section 109 is sound. In this view of the law, I must decide the 4th issue (as amended by me) in the negative.

Otherwise I should have been strongly inclined to hold that plaintiff's compulsory removal, assuming him to have been a trespasser in this European compartment, was justifiable and legal. The ordinary rule under English Law is that "a trespasser, or a licensee whose license has been revoked, may be removed from the premises of a Railway Company, and if he resists, reasonable force may be used to expel him" (see Earl of Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume IV, article 106, at page 63, citing Wood v. Lidbitter (5) and Butler v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Railway Co. (6). As already pointed out, the Bombay High Court in Pratab Daji's case (2) applied the same rule to the case of the forcible removal of a passenger travelling without a ticket. The objections to a forcible entry by a rightful owner, which arise under the Statute of 5, Richard II (referred to in Pollock's Law of Torts, 7th Edition, pages 376-8) do not apply to India [cf Bandu v. Naba (7), and Mayne's Criminal Law of India, 2nd Edition, pages 528 532], unless, at any rate, the force is used by a member of an unlawful assembly as defined in section 141 of the Indian Penal Code. The case of Bayley v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Railway Co., (8), on which plaintiff's Pleader strongly relies, also presupposes the power of removing a passenger from a train under a general authority to remove trespassers (see per Willes, J., at page 419).

As regards the 3rd issue, I cannot see anything inherently illegal in the provision by a Railway Administration of separate accommodation for Europeans and Indians, as was done in this case. Such a distinction may be invidious and undesirable, but that does not make it illegal. So long as sufficient accommodation is provided for both classes, and apart from any specific provision to the contrary in the Railways Act, 1890, a railway administration, as the owner of the rolling stock and Manager of the carrying business on the line necessarily has power to set apart particular compartments for the exclusive use of each class if it thinks fit to do so. Then, is there anything in the Railways Act to the contrary? Section 109 seems clearly to imply a general power of reservation of a compartment for the use of particular passengers by a Railway Administration. Mr. Isarsing for the plaintiff argued

(2) 1 B. 52 at p. 56.
(3) (1854) 23 L. J. Exch. 308 at p. 310; 10 Ex. 376; 2 C. L. R. 1136; 2 W. R 626.
(4) 1893) 3 Ch. 242; 2 R. 23; 67 L. T. 238; 7 Asp. M. C. 195.
(5) (1845) 13 M. N. W. 838; 14 L. J. Ex. 161; 9 Jur. 187.
(6) (1888) 21 Q. B. D. 207 at p. 211; 57 L. J. Q. B. 564; 60 L. T. 89; 36 W. R. 726; 52 J. P. 611.
(7) 15 B. 238 at p. 241.
(8) (1871-72) L. R. 7 C. P. 415.

that it only contemplates the case of a reservation for a passenger who has already entered into a contract with the Railway Administration to have the compartment reserved for his use. But I do not think there is any good ground for reading such a restriction into the section. Why should it not also cover the case of an Administration reserving a compartment for the use of a particular class of passengers, who have not been actually booked, but who, it may be anticipated, will join the train during its journey, e.g., workmen, volunteers, school-children, pilgrims or passengers proceeding to a particular place? And a reservation for particular communities or races seems prima facie to be on exactly the same footing.

Mr. Isarsing, however, distinguishes the last case as offending against section 42 (2) of the Act, i.e., he says it amounts to an "undue preference" or partiality in favour of European passengers. If, however, they are given exactly equal and similar accommodation, I do not see how this can be the case. And any how this is an objection which I am precluded from taking cognizance of by section 41 of the Act. So far as this particular suit is concerned, I must consider the legality of the act complained of under the ordinary law, apart from any objection to such legality that may be taken under any provision of Chapter V of the Railways Act, which includes section 42: for, otherwise, the suit becomes one instituted for something done in violation or contravention of such provision, within the meaning of section 41. It is, therefore, not open to me to consider whether in this particular case the Indian compartment was inferior in comforts, etc., to the European compartment, and if so, whether there was "an undue preference" in favour of the European passengers within the meaning of section 42 (2), so as to make the reservation of the one compartment for Europeans illegal. Any cause of action which plaintiff might have had in respect of this objection was also dropped at the time of framing issues and he is not, therefore, entitled to rely on this plea in support of his contention that the reservation of the compartment was illegal.

It may be added that there is nothing in section 47 of the Act which requires that the power of reservation should be exercised by or in accordance with rules under that section, though, no doubt, the power of reservation can be controlled and restricted by rules under that section. At present however, the general rules regarding the carriage of passengers contain nothing on the subject (see General Statutory Rules and Orders, Volume III, pages 1448-1462). Section 64, which requires reservation of compartments for females, also clearly does not prohibit such reservation for other classes.

I, therefore, find on the 3rd issue that the Railway Administration had power to reserve the compartment for Europeans and the plaintiff was not entitled to travel in it.

As regards the 5th issue, Mr. Tekchand contends, on the authority of Poulton v. The London and South Western Railway Co. (9) that, as the Railway Administration had no power to remove the plaintiff on the assumption that he was in wrongful occupation of a seat in the European compartment, there could be no authority implied from them to the Station-Master or Police Sergeant to remove him and defendant is, therefore, not liable for this act of theirs. That case is cited in all the leading text books on Torts, and the proposition in question appears to be still good law. I can see nothing to differentiate the present case, in view of my finding on the 4th issue. There is certainly no evidence which otherwise tends to establish any such implied authority. The instructions issued in regard to the reservation in question (Exhibits C and D) contain no directions as to the course which should be taken in the event of Indian gentlemen entering the European compartment or vice versa and there is nothing to show that any action in such cases beyond prosecution under section 109 of the Railways Act was intended. In the cases cited by Mr. Isarsing, such as Bayley v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Railway Co. (10), it was held that there was evidence from which an implied authority to remove passengers travelling in wrong compartments might be found; and were it not for the view I take as to the effect of section 103 of the Railways Act, I should unhesitatingly follow

(9) (1866-67) 2 Q. B. 534; 8 B. and S. 616; 36 L. J. Q. B. 294; 17 L. T. 11; 16 W. R. 309.

(10) (1872) L. R. 8 C. P. 148; 42 L. J. C. P. 78; 28 L. T. 366.

those cases in the present instance. For, apart from that view, and the law as laid down in Poulton's case (4) cited above, I think that the act of the Station-Master and Police Sergeant in removing the plaintiff was unquestionably done within the scope of their employment as servants of the defendant. But the fact that the Indian Legislature puts a prohibition on removal in such a case as the present differentiates it from the analogous English cases relating to the forcible removal of passengers and puts it on a par with Poulton's case (4) regarding a Railway Co.'s power to arrest. Even, however, if my view as to the effect of section 109 is erroneous, my finding that, otherwise, the removal of the plaintiff as a trespasser was justifiable leads to the same result that plaintiff is not entitled to recover any damages from the defendant.

It was argued by Mr. Isarsing that the preliminary issue decided in the Appellate Court's judgment of 27th April 1911, remanding the case for trial under Order XLI, rule 23, precluded this Court from any further consideration of the 5th issue. It is true that in his order of 2nd October 1908, Mr. Pratt directs the case to be put down "for hearing of the 5th issue," but it is quite clear from both his judgment of the 15th February 1909 and that of the Appellate Court that the only point discussed and decided on that issue was the general liability of the Secretary of State in Council in a suit for damages for the Tort of his servant, having regard to the terms of 21 and 22 Vict., c. 106, sections 42 and 65, and the question of the defendant's liability in this particular case under the ordinary law of master and servant was left entirely untouched. The latter point clearly arises on the issue and pleadings and I accordingly hold that there is no bar to my deciding it. In any case, it is involved in the general issue No. 6.

For the above reasons, I am of opinion that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover any damages from the defendant and dismiss his suit with costs, including those reserved as "costs in the cause" by the Appellate Court's decree.

In order to make this judgment complete, I think it right to give a finding on the 6th issue on the assumption that my view of the law is wrong, and that (a) the removal of the plaintiff by the Station-Master and Police Sergeant was wrongful, and (b) the defendant is liable for their acts in so removing him. No special damage as the result of this wrongful act is alleged or proved by the plaintiff. Nor do I think that the annoyance and pain of mind, on which the plaintiff bases his claim for damages, was such as to entitle him to substantial damages. Any indignity he suffered was mainly of his own seeking, and there is nothing in the evidence which points to the Railway servants and the Police Sergeant having acted towards him in a discourteous or impolite manner. Nor do I think that a Pleader like the plaintiff would really suffer much pain of mind in an encounter of this kind; and, so far as his reputation is concerned, it has probably been enhanced in the opinion of his friends by his conduct, which succeeded in getting the orders for the reservation of such European and Indian compartments withdrawn. There was no doubt, some unpleasantness caused to the plaintiff in his being publicly compelled to move from the one compartment to the other, but, having regard to all the circumstances, I think damages to the extent of Rs. 50 would amply compensate himself for this. Had I, therefore, found in his favour on the 5th issue, I should have awarded him Rs. 50, and proportionate costs. I do not think it is a proper case for full costs as the plaintiff has undoubtedly exaggerated his claim and made allegations (e. g., as to the removal of his hand bag by the Police Sergeant and the overcrowding of the Indian compartment) which are not substantiated by the evidence.

Suit dismissed.

(s. c. 16 C. W. N. 44.)

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL RULE No. 4784 OF 1911.

September 5, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Woodroffe and Mr. Justice Teunon.

ABDUL KARIM ABU AHMED KHAN GHAZNAVI AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—PETITIONERS

versus

ABDUS SOBHAN CHOUDHRY AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act of V 1908), s. 92—Power of

DOULATRAM v. HALO KANYA.

Government to authorise Sub-Judge to try suit pending before District Judge.

A notification directed by a Local Government to a particular Sub-Judge empowering him to try a particular suit pending in the Court of a District Judge is not a notification contemplated by section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908.

Rule against the order of the Sub-Judge of Mymensingh, dated the August 15th, 1911.

FACTS.—A suit under section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code was instituted in the District Judge's Court at Mymensing. The Local Government by a notification empowered Babu Behari Lal Chatterjee, Subordinate Judge of Mymensing to try that suit. The District Judge then transferred the suit to the said Sub-Judge. The defendants contended that the notification was illegal, that the Government had no power to authorise a Court to try a part-heard case not to empower a Court to try a particular suit. The Sub-Judge overruled the objections.

The defendants then obtained this Rule.

Dr. Rash Behary Ghose (with him Babu Akhil Bandhu Guha), for the Petitioners.

Mr. B. Chakravarti (with him Babu Umesh Chandra Ghosh and Nares Chandra Sen Gupta), for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.

WOODROFFE, J.—This Rule must, I think, be made absolute, because the notification of the 12th July 1911 was not such a notification as was contemplated by section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It was a notification directed to a particular Judge and purported to deal with a particular litigation, and that litigation was, at the date of the notification, already pending in the Court of the District Judge. It follows that the Subordinate Judge of Mymensingh was not competent to try or dispose of the suit and the District Judge had no power to transfer the suit to a Court which was not then competent to dispose of it. In, however, making this Rule absolute I desire to make it clear, in order to avoid any possible objection in future, that the District Judge has, notwithstanding anything that has hitherto been done, power to try this suit. The result of our holding that the Subordinate Judge was not competent to try the suit is that the District Judge effected nothing by his order of transfer and, therefore, the suit remained where it was originally instituted. The District Judge, therefore, has jurisdiction to try the suit, and we think, having regard to the circumstances of the case and also to the waste of time that has been involved by reason of the infructuous proceedings in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, that this case should be heard as soon as possible; that is to say, as soon as the Judge can conveniently hear it.

We may also say, having regard to the statements made to us, that if there is pressure of work in the Judge's Court, an application may properly be made by him for assistance in carrying on his work as District and Sessions Judge.

In the circumstances of the case, the Rule is made absolute without costs.

Let the record and this order be sent down at once.

Rule made absolute.

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 155.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REFERENCE No. 27 OF 1911.

August 16, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Crouch, A. J. C.

DOULATRAM VALABDAS—PLAINTIFF

versus

HALO KANYA AND ANOTHER—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 16—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 15, O. XXXVII—Jurisdiction of Karachi Small Cause Court—Suit under O. XXXVII not exceeding Rs. 1,000—Exclusive jurisdiction of Small Cause Court—No jurisdiction conferred on Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court by O. XXXVII—Interpretation of Statutes—Meaning clear—Intention of Legislature.

All suits on negotiable instruments in which the plaintiff desires to proceed summarily must be filed in Courts having appropriate local and pecuniary jurisdiction.

The Karachi Small Cause Court has exclusive jurisdiction to try all suits on negotiable instruments when the subject-matter of the suit does not exceed Rs. 1,000. Even if such a suit is brought under the provisions of Order XXXVII of the Civil Procedure Code, the Small Cause Court has exclusive jurisdiction. Section 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act bars the jurisdiction of the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court to entertain such a suit.

Ramsing v. Kirkbride, Sel. D. Sind Sadar Court Vol. 1, page 83, followed.

Duff v. Fisher, S B. L. R. Ap. 10; Hameedoola v. Mohamed Asghur Hossain, 6 C. 499; 7 C.L. R. 471, distinguished.

Order XXXVII refers only to the mode of trial it does not confer on the Courts specified therein jurisdiction to try suits which they are not otherwise competent to try.

When the meaning of an Act is clear and free from ambiguity, it is idle to speculate as to the intention of the Legislature.

Reference made by Fawcett, A. J. C., under Order XLVI, Civil Procedure Code.

ORDER OF REFERENCE.

FAWCETT, A. J. C.—Plaintiff sues upon a promissory-note for Rs. 65 passed by the defendants at Karachi on the 8th January 1911, and claims Rs. 77 (including interest to date of suit) and his costs of the suit and interest from date of suit to payment.

Such a suit is cognizable by the Small Cause Court at Karachi, which, under Government Notification No. 5237, dated 27th July 1894, Bombay Local Rules and Orders, Volume I, page 493, has jurisdiction upto Rs. 1,000 (Act IX of 1887, section 15). I have, therefore, raised an issue whether the suit is cognizable by this Court in view of the terms of section 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887, which enacts that,—

> "Save as expressly provided by this Act or by any other enactment for the time being in force, a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes shall not be tried by any other Court having jurisdiction within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes by which the suit is triable."

Mr. Ferro, who argued the point for the plaintiff with great clearness and conciseness, relies mainly on the words "all suits upon bills of exchange, hundis or promissory-notes may, in case the plaintiff desires to proceed hereunder, be instituted," &c., which appear in rule 2 (1) of Order XXXVII of the Civil Procedure Code. The question, then, is whether the use of the word "all" amounts to an express provision that the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind may take cognizance of such suits even though they may be cognizable by the Small Cause Court at Karachi.

The following considerations seem to me conclusive against this view:—

(a) Section 15 of the Code provides that "every suit shall be instituted in the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it." There is no exception in favour of suits falling under Order XXXVII. (The Small Cause Court is, of course, of a lower grade than the Judicial Commissioner's Court, both because it is subordinate to the latter (section 3 of the Code) and has a less extensive jurisdiction: Mohanlal v. Viru Punja (1).

(b) Similarly, section 20 makes no exception in favour of such suits. The words "subject to the limitations aforesaid" refer to "the pecuniary or other limitations prescribed by any law" mentioned in section 16, and these limitations would include section 15 of the Code and section 16 of Act IX of 1887.

(c) Section 4 of the Code enacts, that "in the absence of any specific provision to the contrary, nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect any special or local law now in force or any special jurisdiction ..... conferred ..... by or under any other law for the time being in force." The mere use of the word "all" in Order XXXVII, rule 2, cannot reasonably be construed as "a specific provision to the contrary" according to the specific provisions of section 16 of Act IX of 1887.

(d) The last consideration applies with still greater force, now that the provisions in the Code regarding summary procedure in certain suits such as the one in question are placed in the First Schedule as "rules" which can be altered under Part X of the Code. Section 128 (1) provides that any new rules "shall be not inconsistent with the provisions in the body of this Code;" and, though this does not affect Order XXXVII, which under section 121 has effect "as if enacted in the body of this Code," yet the natural presumption is that the rules in Schedule I were not considered to contain anything inconsistent with the general provisions in the body of the Code. Order XXXVII, it may be noted, merely contains rules falling under clause (f) of section 128 (2), which impliedly brings such rules under the bar against inconsistency enacted in section 128 (1).

(e) Order XXXVII, rule 7, which enacts that "save as provided by this Order, the procedure in suits hereunder shall be the same as the procedure in suits instituted in the ordinary manner," clearly points to the Order being intended merely to regulate the procedure in suits otherwise within the jurisdiction of the Court, and not to extend that jurisdiction or rather to remove any bar to its jurisdiction such as that contained in Act IX of 1887, section 16.

(1) 12 B. 169.

(f) The Legislative history of Order XXXVII is also opposed to any such intention as the last. It clearly shows, for instance, that the use of the word "all" in Order XXXVII, rule 2(1), is of a purely accidental nature, so to speak, and cannot have been intended to have the special significance now sought to be attached to it. The Order is derived, through Chapter XXXIX of the Codes of 1877 and 1882, from the Act V of 1866, which in turn is based on the English Summary Procedure on Bills of Exchange Act, 1855, (18 to 19 Vict. c. 67), section 1 of the last named Act says "from and after the 24th of October 1855 all actions upon Bills of Exchange or promissory-notes..... may be by writ of summons," &c. Section 2 of Act V of 1866 adopts the same language with slight changes to adapt it to the circumstances in India, viz., "from and after the first day of May 1866, all suits upon Bills of Exchange, hundis or Promissory-Notes.....may," etc. And the words "all suits upon Bills of Exchange, hundis or Promissory-Notes" have accordingly reappeared in the Codes of 1877, 1882 and 1908, just as the words "all actions" survive in the corresponding Order III, rule 6, of the Rules of the Supreme Court in England. In the circumstances, there does not appear to be any sufficient ground for attaching a hidden significance to the word "all." The expression is merely equivalent to "an action" or "a suit," and does not affect the question of jurisdiction.

(g) It is also to be noted that when Act V of 1866 was enacted, Act XI of 1865 was in force and had only been passed under a year previously. Section 12 of this Act contains a provision in even more sweeping terms than section 16 of Act IX of 1887, viz., "Whenever a Court of Small Causes is constituted under this Act, no suit cognizable by such Court shall be heard or determined in any other Court having jurisdiction within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Court of Small Causes." If, therefore, the Legislature had intended to over-ride this provision as regards suits upon negotiable instruments, they would surely have done so in some clear and specific language, and not by the mere introduction of the word "all" in section 2 of Act V of 1866.

In my opinion, therefore, rule 2 of Order XXXVII cannot be construed as enacting an exception to section 15 of the Code and section 16 of Act IX of 1887. And, even if it can be so construed, it only does so impliedly and not expressly, as must be done in order to bar the operation of the latter enactment.

Two extraneous arguments by which it was sought to support the suggested construction of the words "all suits" in Order XXXVII, rule 2, may be briefly noticed. First, it was said that the Legislature in the Code of 1877, as in that of 1882, authorized this summary procedure in suits on negotiable instruments "in the Court of the Judge of Karachi," probably in view of the commercial activity and importance of Karachi, and that it can scarcely have intended to exclude all suits in which the claim amounted to Rs. 1,000 or under. Against this, however, there is the fact that section 12 of Act XI of 1865 was on the Statute book prior to the conferment of this power on the Court of the Judge of Karachi, and from the Government Notification of 23rd June 1866, Bombay Local Rules and Orders, Vol. I., page 489, fixing the territorial limits of its jurisdiction, it appears that a Court of Small Causes at Karachi with exclusive jurisdiction in suits of this kind up to Rs. 500 at any rate (sections 3 and 12 of Act XI of 1865) was also in existence prior to the conferment of such power. The rule enacted in section 15 of the Civil Procedure Code has also been in force since the Code of 1859, see paragraph 1 of section 6 of that Code. In these circumstances, the general presumption against ousting an established jurisdiction (cf. Maxwell on the Interpretation of Statutes, 3rd Edition, page 178) obviously has no application. It may also be pointed out that the Legislature left it open to the Local Government to confer similar powers on the Small Cause Court at Karachi [section 538 (e) of the Codes of 1877 and 1882], should that be considered desirable: and, so far as I am aware, it is still possible to confer such powers on that Court by an amendment of rule 1 of Order XXXVII under section 125 of the Code. The words "have been already applied" in clause (d) of that rule were clearly necessary in order to limit the rule to the particular Courts in which the order had effect at the time of its enactment, and do not presumably affect the power of altering the rule I conferred by sections 122 and 125.

Then, reliance was placed on the established practice existing for many years of this Court exercising jurisdiction in such cases, and the maxim "optimus interpres rerum usus." But, as pointed out by Lord Watson, cited in Hardcastle on Statutory Law, 3rd Edition, page 92, in Trustees of Clyde Navigation v. Laird (2), this maxim has little, if any, application to the construction of a recent Statute, which he says he feels bound to construe "according to its own terms, when these are brought into controversy, and not according to the views which interested parties may have hitherto taken." In this case, the Pleaders and parties who prefer having such suits tried in this Court under the summary procedure, are really "interested parties" of the kind referred to by Lord Watson, and the practice has presumably been established, because the point of jurisdiction was never raised before the Court. Even now the defendant's Pleader supports Mr. Ferro's arguments and does not seek to have the suit decided against the plaintiff on this point. And as pointed out by Jenkins, C. J., in Manilal v. Vanmaladas (3) the principle of stare decisis, while of undoubted value in its bearing on the law of property, is not of the same importance in the department of procedure.

As a matter of fact, however, the only reported decision of the Sadar Court on this point is in favour of the view taken above. In Ramsing v. Kirkbride (4), Birdwood, J., holds that the provisions of Chapter XXXIX of the Code of Civil Procedure (corresponding to Order XXXVII of the present Code) "seem to affect matters of procedure only. It was not apparently the intention of the Legislature to extend the jurisdiction of any Courts or to place any limitation on the exercise of any existing jurisdiction. The special procedure seems to be provided only for cases which would ordinarily be instituted in any of the selected Courts, if there were no such procedure." That was a case in which the bar to the District Judge's jurisdiction arose under section 5 of Bombay Act XII of 1866, read with sections 15 and 17 of the then Code of Civil Procedure: but the reasoning applies equally (or rather a fortiori) to the bar so strongly enacted in section 16 of Act IX of 1887.

The case of Duff v. Fisher (5), from which Birdwood, J., dissented, is not necessarily a ruling to the contrary, because the High Court of Calcutta has, under section 12 of its Letters Patent, full original jurisdiction except "in cases falling within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court at Calcutta, in which the debt or damage, or value of the property sued for, does not exceed one hundred rupees," and there was no provision in Act XXVI of 1864 corresponding to section 12 of Act XI of 1865. But, in any case, it is not a ruling to which much weight can be attached, in view of the facts that the suit was undefended and no reasons are given for the decision. The Judge also, in allowing the plaintiff his costs, seems clearly to have overlooked the provisions of section 9 of Act XXVI of 1864.

The case of Ko Shoay Doon v. Shoay Gan (6) may also be referred to as showing that the Small Cause Court at Rangoon, constituted under Act XI of 1865, was held to deprive the Recorder's Court at Rangoon of jurisdiction in suits cognizable by the Small Cause Court under that Act, in spite of an unrepealed enactment that "save as in this Act provided, no Court other than the Recorder's Court shall have or exercise any Civil jurisdiction whatever within the limits" of its jurisdiction.

Another case which may be cited in support of the construction put by Birdwood, J., and myself on Order XXXVII and the words "all suits", as in no way affecting or extending jurisdiction, is Re Mill's Estate (7). Order LV, rule 1, of the Supreme Court Rules provides that "the costs of or incident to all pro-

(2) (1882-83) 8 App. Cases 658 at p. 673.
(3) 29 B. 621; 7 Bom. L. R. 644 (F. B.).
(4) Sel D. Sind Sadar Court Vol. I page 83.
(5) 8 B. L. R. App. 10.
(6) 6 B. L. R. 196; 14 W. R. 331.
(7) 34 Ch. D. 24; 55 L. T. 465; 35 W. R. 65; 51 J. P. 151; 56 L. J. Ch. 60.

DOULATRAM v. HALO KANYA.

ceedings in the Supreme Court..... shall be in the discretion of the Court or Judge," and in that case it was held that the rule was intended only to regulate the way in which costs were to be dealt with in cases which the Court had, either by statute or independently, jurisdiction to deal with costs, and that it gave the Court no jurisdiction to order payment of costs in cases where, before the Judicature Acts, it would have had no jurisdiction to do so.

For the above reasons, I am of opinion that the jurisdiction of this Court in this suit is barred by section 16 of Act IX of 1887, as also by section 15 of the Code of Civil Procedure, but as there is room for possible doubt in the matter, and in view of the long standing practice under which such suits have been dealt with by this Court and the desirability of an early authoritative decision on the point, I submit the record to the Judicial Commissioner's Court in its High Court capacity for decision of the point of jurisdiction raised.

In continuation of my reference of 17th instant, under Order XLVI, rule 6, Civil Procedure Code, in Suit No. 140 of 1911, and with reference to paras. 4 (g) and 6 thereof, I beg to submit the following observations regarding the establishment of the Karachi Small Cause Court, which (I said) appears to have been in existence at any rate in 1866. As a matter of fact, it is stated in Hughes' "Gazetteer of the Province of Sindh" (1874) to have been "established in August 1861, for the adjudication of suits of the value of Rs. 500 and under" (page 354). This was under Act XLII of 1860, section 1, but as the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council had not been obtained, a special Act to validate prior proceedings in the Court had to be passed, viz., Act IV of 1864. The preamble of this shows that the actual date on which the order constituting the Court was passed was 5th July 1861. Under section 3 of Act XLII of 1860, the Small Cause Court had jurisdiction in suits of the kind now in question of a value not exceeding Rs. 500 and the jurisdiction of the Court under section 4 of that Act, as to the residence of the defendant within the local limits of the Court's jurisdiction, was specially enlarged by section 1 of Bombay Act VIII of 1863 to the extent subsequently adopted in section 8 of Act XI of 1865. Act XLII of 1860 also contains a section 6 in almost identical language with that of section 12 of Act XI of 1865, excluding the jurisdiction of other Courts in any suit cognizable by a Small Cause Court within the same jurisdictional local limits. The arguments in my reference based on the fact that the Small Cause Court at Karachi had exclusive jurisdiction in suits such as this one (No. 140 of 1911), if of a value not exceeding Rs. 500 prior to the enactment of Act V of 1866, are, therefore, considerably strengthened.

Mr. L. P. Ferro, for the Plaintiff.

Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, Amicus Curiæ.

JUDGMENT.

PRATT, J. C.—This suit was filed for the recovery of Rs. 65 in this Court in its District Court Jurisdiction under Order XXXVII. The learned Additional Judicial Commissioner feeling a doubt as to whether the suit was not cognizable by the Court of Small Causes has referred the question to this Court in its High Court jurisdiction under Order XLVI, rule 6.

The Small Cause Court of Karachi has jurisdiction up to Rs 1,000 and the suit is not one of the classes of suits enumerated in the Second Schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, IX of 1887.

Under section 15, therefore, the Small Cause Court, Karachi, has, "subject to the provisions of any enactment for the time being in force" jurisdiction to try the suit.

It is contended that Order XXXVII is an enactment which deprives the Small Cause Court of the jurisdiction which it would otherwise have under section 15.

Order XXXVII is applied by rule 2 to certain specified Courts; and rule 2 enacts that all suits on negotiable instruments may, in case the plaintiff desires to proceed summarily, be instituted by presenting a plaint in the usual form and by taking out a summons in a special form adapted to the summary procedure which is described in clause 2 of the rule. This rule gives jurisdiction to the Courts to which the order applies to try the specified class of suits by a summary procedure. The jurisdiction refers to the mode of trial and no jurisdiction is conferred to try suits that the specified Courts are not otherwise competent to try. In this interpretation of the rule I concur with that put by Birdwood, J., on the corresponding provisions of the Code of 1882 in the case of Ramsing v. Kirkbride (4). The learned Judge said "it was not apparently the intention of the Legislature to extend the jurisdiction of any Courts or to place any limitation on the exercise of any existing jurisdiction. The special procedure seems to be provided only for cases which would ordinarily be instituted in any of the selected Courts if there was no such procedure." Order XXXVII, rule 2, does not in any way determine in what Court the suit should be instituted and in no way controls the provisions of section 15 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887.

The suit being cognizable by the Court of Small Causes, all other Courts are deprived of jurisdiction by section 16 of the Act for there is no express provision restoring jurisdiction as an instance of such an express provision reference may be made to section 6 of the Deccan Agriculturists' Relief Act XVII of 1879.

Mr. Rupchand in his able arguments referred to the case of Hameedoolah v Mohamed Asghur Hossein (8). It was there held that the following words in section 7 of the Copyright Act as amended by Act XII of 1876—"if any person shall infringe any copy-right the offender shall be liable to a suit in the highest local Court exercising original Civil Jurisdiction" had the effect of transferring jurisdiction in such suits from the Court of Small Causes. But here the section designates the particular Court in which the suit will lie and in so doing expressly confers jurisdiction on that Court. On the other hand, Order XXXVII does not designate any Court for the purpose of conferring jurisdiction to try or to take cognizance of a particular class of suit, but merely for the purpose of exercising a special procedure. The very fact of its position in the first Schedule to the Code of Civil Procedure shows that the Legislature regarded it as a minor matter of procedure not affecting the competency or jurisdiction of the Courts.

It was also urged that Act V of 1866—from which Order XXXVII and the corresponding provisions of the Codes of 1882 and 1877 were adopted—was enacted after the constitution of the Courts of Small Causes; that the object of the Act was to provide for suits on negotiable instruments a more expeditious remedy than that available in the Small Cause Courts; and that, therefore, the Legislature must have intended to withdraw such suits from the cognizance of the Courts of Small Causes. But when the Acts are clear and free from ambiguity it is idle to speculate as to the intention of the Legislature. There are, moreover, many fallacies in this argument. Act V of 1866 makes no reference to Small Cause Courts either in the preamble or the body of the Act. It merely enacted for the Presidency Towns the procedure of the English Bills of Exchange Act, 1855. The Act, therefore, scarcely affected the Small Cause Courts, for in the Presidency Towns the Small Cause Courts Acts of 1864 and 1882 do not exclude the jurisdiction of the High Courts to which alone Act V of 1866 at first applied. The jurisdiction of the High Courts in the Presidency Towns is only excluded as to Small Cause Court suits of the value of Rs. 100 and under by their Letters Patent. This fact probably explains the case of Duff v. Fisher (5) where the Calcutta High Court tried a suit on a promissory-note for Rs. 500. Again, the summary procedure is not necessarily more expeditious than the procedure of the Small Cause Court—for if leave to defend is given the suit is tried in the regular form and the decree is not final, but is subject to appeal. Again, the Act was extensible to Small Cause Courts. So there could have been no design to exclude their jurisdiction. As to this, it is said that the very fact that Act V of 1866 was applied to the District Court and not to the Small Cause Court, Karachi, shows that the Legislature did not consider the latter Court to have jurisdiction. But, so far as I can ascertain, Act V of 1866 was never applied to Sind at all. It certainly did not apply in 1874,—see section 3 and Schedule I of the Laws Local Extent Act XV of 1874; and it was superseded in 1877 by the Code of Civil Procedure. That Code applied the procedure to the High Courts to which Act V of 1866 applied and to the Courts to which it had already been extended. The Court of the Judge of Karachi was apparently added, as that was the highest Court of original Civil jurisdiction in Karachi. Ever since then the District Court seems to have assumed exclusive jurisdiction in all suits on negotiable instruments and so the question of extending the procedure to the Small Cause Court was never raised.

(8) 6 C. 499; 7 C. L. R. 471.

Lastly, Mr. Rupchand referred to the practice in England where the County Courts exercise the summary procedure under the Bills of Exchange Act while the High Court exercises a similar procedure under Order III, rule 6 and Order XIV, rule 1 of the Rules of the Supreme Court of Judicature. But no useful inference can be drawn from the practice of the English High Court because its jurisdiction is not excluded by the County Courts.

For these reasons, I would order the referring Court to return the plaint for presentation to the Small Cause Court, Karachi.

CROUCH, A. J. C.—I, also, am of opinion that this Court has no jurisdiction to try a suit on a negotiable instrument for an amount less than Rs. 1,000, even though the suit be filed under Order XXXVII, and that the plaint should be returned for filing in the Court of Small Causes.

It is beyond dispute that such suits of which the value does not exceed one thousand rupees are cognizable by the Court of Small Causes, Karachi. Unless, therefore, there be some express provision in the Civil Procedure Code or some other enactment, no such suit of which the value does not exceed one thousand rupees can be tried by this Court in its original jurisdiction. (Sections 15 and 16, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887).

Order XXXVII, rule 2, states that all suits upon negotiable instruments may, in case the plaintiff desires to proceed thereunder, be instituted by presenting a plaint in the form prescribed; but the summons shall be in form No. 4 in Appendix B.

Now, "prescribed" means "prescribed by Rules and Forms contained in the First Schedule, or made under section 122, or section 125, Civil Procedure Code," [section 2 (16) and (18), Civil Procedure Code]. There is no special form of plaint prescribed for suits filed under this order, and the "form prescribed" must mean, therefore, the ordinary Form. In Act V of 1866 section 2, also, the plaint had to be "in the Form prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure." The summary procedure commences with a special Form of summons. The disjunctive 'but", following "in the Form prescribed," in rule 2, marks the commencement of the explanation how the summary procedure under this order differs from the ordinary procedure. The suit commences in the ordinary way by a plaint in the prescribed Form being filed, but, if the plaintiff so desire and request, the Court will proceed with that suit in a particular way. The operation of the rule does not commence until after the institution of the suit; all questions affecting the actual institution of the suit are left unaffected by it.

Taking rule 2 by itself, it has absolutely general application. The order is silent as to where a suit should be instituted; it does not purport to deal with the question; it, in no way, modifies or purports to modify the ordinary law. We must assume, therefore, that all suits on negotiable instruments in which plaintiff desires to proceed summarily must be filed in Courts having appropriate local and financial jurisdiction.

If, then, a suit on a hundi for Rs. 500 be filed in the Court of Small Causes, Karachi, with a request that the summons be issued in Form 4, why should not that Court comply? The answer is, of course, to be found in rule 1. So far as that Court is concerned, Order XXXVII does not exist; for rule 1 limits its application, in Sind, to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner.

If such a suit be presented to this Court, on what grounds can a plaintiff demand its admission? Under Order VII, rule 1, the plaint must contain a statement of the facts showing that the Code has jurisdiction. What facts can be alleged? Prima facie, the Court has no power to try the suit. Rule 2 of Order XXXVII confers none; rule 1 merely limits the application of rule 2. The bare assertion that the suit is filed under Order XXXVII cannot possibly create a right. All that plaintiff can do under the order is to file a suit in the prescribed Form and request the Court to issue a particular kind of summons. The extensive privileges given to a plaintiff by the order have as their foundation the issue of a summons in Form 4. But the right to issue such summons is conferred on the Court; hence it is that in Rule 1, which defines the scope of the order, its application is limited to certain specified Courts. The Order does nothing more than confer on certain Courts the power to proceed in a certain class of suits, after they have been filed in the ordinary way.

There seem to be no facts which a plaintiff can allege as showing that this Court has jurisdiction.

It has been urged by Mr. Rupchand that the history of summary procedure on negotiable instruments support his contention that this Court was intended to have jurisdiction over all suits on negotiable instruments irrespective of their value.

If, however, we refer to Act V of 1866, the first Legislative enactment on the subject we find nothing which serves to establish his theory. Section 2 runs as follows:—

"From and after the first May 1866, all suits upon Bills of Exchange, hundis, or Promissory-Notes commenced in any High Court within six calendar months after the same shall have become due and payable, may, in case the plaintiff shall desire to proceed under this Act, be commenced as hereinafter is mentioned; (that is to say) the plaint shall be in the form prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure; but the summons shall be in the form contained in the Schedule to this Act etc."

It is clear that this Act had a very limited application; it applied only to suits of a special kind "commenced in a High Court;" it did not purport to modify ordinary law determining in what Court a suit should be commenced. It merely conferred on High Courts the power to proceed in a summary way with a certain class of suits after they had been instituted.

Plaint ordered to be returned.

[s. c. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 519.]

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 70 OF 1910 AND CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 245 OF 1910.

November 7, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim and Mr. Justice Spencer.

KOMMA SOMAKKA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

KODIDALA PEDDA RAMIAH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), ss. 24, 43—Order directing a third party to pay a certain sum to the minor's guardian, not warranted by any provision of the Act—Jurisdiction—Order not to be treated as a decree in a suit—Scope and nature of jurisdiction conferred by the Act discussed.

On an application under sections 24 and 43 of the Guardians and Wards Act by the guardian of a Hindu female minor praying for permission to give the minor in marriage to a certain person, and for an order directing the step-mother of the girl, who was in possession of her deceased father's estate, to pay Rs. 800 for the expenses of the marriage, the District Judge, without framing any issue and taking any evidence, sanctioned Rs. 300. Against this order, the step-mother presented both a Civil Miscellaneous Appeal and a Civil Revision Petition to the High Court:

Held, that so much of the order as directed the appellant to pay Rs. 300 to the petitioner for purposes of the minor's marriage was not warranted by any provision of the Guardians and Wards Act, and that it was made without jurisdiction under the said Act and, therefore, must be set aside under section 115, Civil Procedure Code.

The power vested in the District Court under the Guardians and Wards Act is totally dissimilar to its powers as a Court of ordinary Civil Jurisdiction. An order purporting to be made under, but which in fact is not warranted by, the provisions of that Act cannot be treated as a decree in a suit. The two jurisdictions are totally distinct, though exercisable by the same official. It is not a case of exercise of the same jurisdictoin by different forms of procedure.

The jurisdiction or power conferred upon the District Court by this Act is of a very special and limited character, and the procedure prescribed under the Act, which is of a summary character, is very different from the procedure laid down by the Civil Procedure Code for the trial of suits.

Sadasiva Pillai v. Ramalinga, 2 I. A. 219; 24 W. R. 193; 15 B. L. R. 383; Pisani v. Attorney-General of Gibralter, L. R. 5 P. C. 516; 30 L. T. 729; 22 W. R. 900; Ledgard v. Bull, 9 A. 191; 13 I. A. 134; Gurdas Singh v. Rashbehary Singh, 36 C. 193; 5 C. L. J. 611; 1 Ind. Cas. 913, distinguished.

Appeal and Petition under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code against the order of the District Court of Cuddapah, dated 26th November 1909, in First Appeal No. 127 of 1909 (O. P. No. 32 of 1909).

Mr. L. A. Govindaraghava Iyer, for the Appellant.

Mr. T. V. Seshagiri Iyer, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

ABDUR RAHIM, J.—In this case we are asked to revise, by way of appeal or under section 115, Civil Procedure Code, an order made by the District Judge of Cuddapah upon a petition presented to him under sections 24 and 43, Guardians and Wards Act, by the guardian of a certain Hindu female minor praying for permission to give the minor in marriage to a certain person mentioned in the petition, and for an order directing the appellant in this appeal, who is the surviving widow of the father of the minor girl and in possession of his estate, to pay Rs. 800 for the expenses of the contemplated marriage. The appellant appeared in answer to the notice and pleaded, that under the circumstances mentioned in her counter-petition, she was not liable to make any payment, and that the proposed marriage was not suitable. She took no objection to the jurisdiction of the District Court to make any order against her on the petition, and after hearing the Pleaders on both sides the Court passed this order:—"The petition is allowed with costs. Rupees 300 is sanctioned; Fees Rs 5." The order, having regard to the prayer in the petition, has the effect of directing the counter-petitioner to pay Rs. 300 and costs to the guardian. No issues were framed and no evidence appears to have been taken and apparently none was adduced by either party.

The first question argued is, that the order is bad for want of jurisdiction and must be set aside on that ground. Now, there can be no doubt that so much of the order as directs the appellant to pay Rs. 300 to the petitioner for purposes of the minor's marriage is not warranted by any provision of the Guardians and Wards Act. This is conceded by Mr. Seshagiri Iyer, who appeared for the respondent. But he contends that as the District Court could have in a suit properly framed for the purpose passed a decree to the same effect, this order cannot be said to have been passed without jurisdiction but at the worst there was only an irregularity in the way the Court assumed jurisdiction, and, as no objection was taken to the course adopted at the time, it must be deemed to have been waived and the order cannot now be impeached for want of jurisdiction or on the ground of irregular exercise of jurisdiction. He does not, however, contend, and very rightly, that, if the order is without jurisdiction altogether, either waiver of objection or consent on the part of the appellant to the course followed could make the order valid. There can be no doubt that the District Court which passed the order appealed against could have in a regularly instituted suit passed a decree against the appellant to substantially the same purport. At the same time, the power vested in the District Court under the Guardians and Wards Act is so totally dissimilar to its power as a Court of ordinary Civil Jurisdiction that I think it will be going much too far to say that an order purporting to be made under, but which in fact is not warranted by, the provisions of that Act can be treated as a decree passed in a suit. The two jurisdictions are wholly distinct, though exercisable by the same official. It is not a case of exercise of the same jurisdiction by different forms of procedure.

The whole scheme of the Guardians and Wards Act, generally speaking, is to entrust to the District Court the duty of looking after the welfare of the minor's person and property, and for this purpose it gives it power to appoint a guardian to have charge of the minor's person and property as the most feasible mode of discharging its duty. The guardian is really the hand of the District Court, and is to act under its advice, control and constant supervision. The Act does not profess to give the District Court any power or authority over persons or other than the guardian or the minor except in so far as it deals with the question as to who is the proper person to be appointed guardian or whether a particular guardian should be removed or not and for the purpose of restoring the ward to the custody of the guardian. Otherwise, the enforcement of rights or claims of the ward or against the ward is left to be regulated by ordinary proceedings by suits, and the Act does not provide any machinery for deciding upon or enforcing any such claims, though so far as the guardian is concerned the District Court is vested with very wide disciplinary power over him in order that it may enforce the orders passed against him under the Act. The jurisdiction or power conferred upon the District Court by this Act is of a very special and limited character, and the procedure prescribed under the Act, which is of a summary character, though appropriate for the determination of questions arising therein, is very different from the procedure laid down by the Civil Procedure Code for the trial of suits. That being so, can we uphold an order such as this, which purports to be made under, but is not in fact warranted by, the provisions of that Act as a decree passed in a suit? After the best consideration I have been able to give to the matter, my conclusion, as already indicated, is that the question must be answered in the negative.

KOMMA SOMAKKA v. KODIDALA PEDDA RAMIAH.

In dealing with the question certain facts must be borne in mind. In the first place, the order in question in this case is impeached in the course of the same proceedings by way of appeal and not collaterally, as when a party who has allowed a decree or order to become final impugns its validity for the first time when it is sought to be enforced in execution or wishes to re-open the question in a subsequent proceeding, treating the previous adjudication as null and void. Then, this is not a case in which the parties expressly agreed that the Court should adopt the particular course alleged to be beyond its power, or where one party by his conduct has estopped himself from raising the question of validity of a particular proceeding. Here all that happened was, the appellant failed to object to the District Court dealing with the matter by proceeding under the Guardians and Wards Act. Again, the District Court purported to make the order in exercise of a jurisdiction conferred on it by a special statute very different in its nature, scope and the way in which it is to be exercised, from its jurisdiction as a Court of ordinary Civil Jurisdiction. It is not, therefore, a case in which a Court purports to act in the exercise of a particular jurisdiction, but adopts a form of procedure prescribed for one department of that jurisdiction rather than another.

If these facts be borne in mind, the present case is easily distinguishable from the class of cases relied on by Mr. Seshagiri Iyer. For instance, in the case of Sadsiva Pillai v. Ramalinga Pillai (1) the question was whether mesne profits which accrued after the decree and were not expressly provided for in it could be recovered from the respondent in the appeal before the Judicial Committee in execution or only by a separate suit. It appeared that the respondent had executed bonds to account for mesne profits after the date of the decree in accordance with an order which was not objected to either in the first instance or by way of appeal, and their Lordships held that the liability to account was made "a question relating to the execution of the decree" or that, at all events, the respondents by their own agreement and subsequent conduct were estopped from saying that the mesne profits in question were not payable under the decree according to the principle laid down in Pisani v. Attorney-General of Gibralter (2). On the question whether the order was without jurisdiction, they observe:—"The Court had a general jurisdiction over the subject-matter though the exercise of that jurisdiction by the particular proceeding may have been irregular." The Court in that case was in fact exercising its ordinary Civil Jurisdiction, though by means of a proceeding prescribed for the execution of decrees and not for the trial of suits. The principle thus enunciated by the Privy Council has no application, therefore, to this case. Nor is this a case, as I have already pointed out, of estoppel. In Pisani v. Attorney-General of Gibralter (2) the Attorney-General had filed an information claiming for the Crown certain land which belonged to a deceased person as escheat for want of heirs. The defendants put forward their several claims to the land, and on the motion of the Attorney-General, when he found that he failed to establish the claim of the Crown, it was agreed among all the parties that the rights of the defendants as between themselves should be declared whatever might be the event of the suit regarding the claim of the Crown. By the decree it was declared that the lands had not escheated to the Crown and that a certain Will of the deceased was valid. On appeal being preferred to the Judicial Committee from that decree, a preliminary objection was taken to the competency of the appeal on the ground that the decree, so far as it declared the rights of the defendants, must be treated as an award of an arbitrator. It was held that the agreement was binding, but the preliminary objection was overruled on the ground, that though the course adopted by consent was a deviation from the cursus curiæ; yet, as the parties meant to keep themselves in curiæ and the Judge clearly so understood them, there was an appeal. The Court had jurisdiction over the subject and the assumption of the duty of another tribunal was not involved in the question. They then point out that departures from ordinary practice by consent are of frequent occurrence, and that unless there is an attempt to give the Court a jurisdiction which it does not possess, or something occurs which is such a violent strain on its procedure that it puts it entirely out of its course, so that the Court of Appeal cannot review the decision, such departures have never been held to deprive either of the parties of the right of appeal. Mr. Seshagiri Iyer has not raised any question as to our power to revise the order. Then, is not this a case of assumption by one tribunal of the duties of another? As I have tried to show, the powers and the duties of the District Court under the Guardians and Wards Act are wholly dissimilar to its powers and duties as a Court of Civil Jurisdiction, and, when it acts under such special statute, it must, in my opinion, be regarded to be acting as a tribunal other than a tribunal of general Civil Jurisdiction. When, as here, the difference between the two jurisdictions is not one merely of form but of a radical nature having regard to their scope, subject-matter, and the rules regulating their exercise, the fact that both are vested in one and the same tribunal would not make an order which is made in the exercise of one jurisdiction liable to be regarded as it was properly made in the exercise of the other jurisdiction.

(1) 2 I. A. 219; 24 W. R. 193; 15 B. L. R. 383.

(2) L. R. 5 P. C. 516; 30 L. T. 729; 22 W. R. 900.

KOMMA SOMAKKA v. KODIDALA PEDDA RAMIAH.

In Ledgard v. Bull (3), another judgment of the Privy Council, all that is laid down is, that in a suit tried by a competent Court the parties, having without objection joined issue and gone to trial upon the merits, cannot subsequently dispute the jurisdiction on the ground of irregularity in the initial procedure, which, if objected to at the time, would have led to the dismissal of the suit. But in this case, as I view the matter, the liability of the appellant never formed the subject of trial by the District Court as a Court of general Civil Jurisdiction. The same answer applies to the case reported in Gurdas Singh v. Chandrikh Singh and Chandraikah Singh v. Rashbehary Singh (4), in which the learned Judges discuss at length the distinction between inherent absence of jurisdiction and irregular assumption of jurisdiction.

I think the proceeding in question ought also to be set aside on the ground that it is such a violent strain on the procedure that it puts it entirely out of its course, so that the Court of Appeal cannot review the decision. I may observe here that the course adopted by the District Court not being by agreement of the parties, there could be no question of its acting as arbitrator so as to deprive either party of his right of appeal. If the case had been tried as a suit under the Civil Procedure Code, it would have to be tried in the Court of the District Munsif, and the parties would then have a right of successive appeals to the District Court and to the High Court. There is no authority to which our attention has been drawn which would justify us in saying, that because the appellant did not take objection to the course adopted by the District Court, he must be taken to have waived such rights of appeal as he would have had, if the matter had been properly tried as an action. If the proceeding in question were to be treated as one under the Guardians and Wards Act, there would be no appeal, as it is not covered by section 47, and, if it be regarded as a decree in a suit tried by the District Court in its ordinary Civil Jurisdiction, then we must hold that by mere failure to object to the District Court dealing with the matter under the Guardians and Wards Act, the appellant has deprived himself of the right of second appeal, which otherwise he would have had. This I am not prepared to hold in the absence of express authority. Further, if the matter had been tried as a civil action, issues would have had to be framed and there would have been a proper judgment and a decree. As it is, there are no issues, no judgment, and no decree, and it is difficult to see how we can properly revise the order of the District Court on the merits.

All this shows that the procedure of the District Court is so completely outside the ordinary course of trial of civil actions that it must be held to be without jurisdiction. Besides, even if it were possible to treat the order as a decree in an action it would be liable to be set aside on the ground that there has been no proper trial; but as I am of opinion that the order has been made without jurisdiction under the Guardians and Wards Act, it must be set aside under section 115, Civil Procedure Code. I would, therefore, allow the Civil Revision Petition and set aside the order of the District Court in so far as it directs the counter-petitioner in that Court to pay Rs. 300 with costs in this Court and leave each party to bear his own costs in the District Court.

(3) 9 A. 191; 13 I. A. 134.
(4) 36 C. 193; 5 C. L. J. 611; 1 Ind. Cas. 913.

SPENCER, J.—Assuming that the District Judge intended his order, "The petition is allowed with costs. Rupees 300 is sanctioned. Fees Rs. 5-0-0", to be tantamount to a money-decree for Rs. 300 and costs and executable as such against the respondent, I agree with my learned brother, whose judgment I have had the advantage of reading, that the order was irregular and without jurisdiction, although the question before us is not covered by authority and presents some difficulty.

In the petition, presented under section 10 of the Guardians and Wards Act, for the appointment of a guardian for the minor, it was stated that the property left by the minor's father devolved on his second wife, the respondent, and is in her enjoyment, and that the minor has no property whatever.

It was not alleged at the hearing of the present appeal, that the minor has any separate estate. Her step-mother has, it appears, a widow's estate and she has only an expectancy. It is possible that the District Judge in passing orders about the minor's marriage may have lost sight of the fact that there was no fund under the control of the Court out of which the marriage expenses might be defrayed, and this surmise is rendered probable by the use of the word "sanctioned" instead of "decreed." If the minor had property of her own and if the District Judge only intended to fix the amount which in his opinion was a suitable amount to spend on the minor's marriage, there would clearly have been nothing beyond his competence in the order passed. The petition under sections 23 and 47, however, contained a prayer to direct the respondent to pay Rs. 800 for marriage expenses, and both parties have construed the order as a direction to her to pay a sum of Rs. 300. Treated as such, the Guardians and Wards Act gave the Judge no power to make the order, and I agree that it should be set aside as without jurisdiction, the parties to bear their own costs in the District Court, and the respondent to bear his own and the appellant's costs in this Court.

Appeal allowed.

(S. C. 5 S. L. R. 168.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 23 OF 1909.

August 16, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Fawcett, A. J. C.

SOBHOMAL KHAIRAJMAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

POHUMAL RANGALMAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Partnership—Partner's authority—Act of one partner when binding on the firm—Acceptance of hundi—Transaction not incidental to business of firm—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s 251—Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), ss. 30, 93, 106—Hundi—Liability of drawer—Notice of dishonour—Oral demand after maturity.

A partner's act binds the firm only if the other partners have in fact authorized or ratified it or if it is done in the course of carrying on the partnership business in the usual way.

The acceptance of a hundi by a partner, will in the absence of express authority, bind the firm only if it is for a transaction incidental to the business of the firm.

Bunarsee Doss v. Gholam Hossein, 13 M. I. A. 358; 13 W. R. (P. C.) 29, relied upon.

Where the business of a partnership is buying grain from zemindars for re-sale through commission agents and does not include lending money to zemindars, the acceptance of a hundi by one of the partners for guaranteeing a loan to a zemindar would not bind the firm.

The drawer of a hundi is not liable if due notice of dishonour is not given him.

The fact that the payee of a hundi met the drawer 1½ or 2 months after its maturity and demanded payment is not a sufficient compliance within the provisions of sections 93 and 106 of the Negotiable Instruments Act.

Second appeal from the decision of the First Class, Sub-Judge, Sukkur, varying the decree passed by the Sub-Judge, Jacobabad.

Mr. Lalchand Chuharmal, for the Appellants.

Mr. T. G. Elphinston, for the Respondent No. 1.

Mr. Wadhumal Udharam, for the Respondent No. 3.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff sued as holder and payee of hundis drawn in his favour by defendant No. 6 on the firm of the first five defendants. The hundis had been accepted at the time they were made by defendant No. 5, who was gumasta partner of the first four defendants in their shop at Vali Mahomed's village.

The first four defendants pleaded that the fifth defendant had no authority to accept the hundis on their behalf.

SOBHOMAL v. POHUMAL.

The 6th defendant pleaded payment to the 5th defendant and alleged that he had not received notice of dishonour. He also alleged an express agreement by the plaintiff not to hold him liable.

The Court of first instance decreed the suit against the fifth defendant who has not appealed but dismissed the suit as against the defendants Nos. 1—4 and 6. That Court held that defendant No. 5 had no express authority to bind the firm by his acceptance; and that he had no implied authority or the acceptance was not within the scope of the partnership business. As to the 6th defendant it held that the agreement not to hold this defendant liable had been admitted by the plaintiff.

The lower Appellate Court decreed the suit against defendants Nos. 1—4 and 6.

Defendants Nos. 1—4 have appealed to this Court and defendant No. 6 has filed cross-objections claiming to be discharged by this payment to the 5th defendant.

Now as to defendants Nos. 1—4 the only issue is whether defendant No. 5 had authority to bind them by his acceptance of the hundi. This authority might be either express or implied but on neither can we extract any definite finding from the judgment of the lower Appellate Court.

As to express authority, the Judge says that there is ground for presuming that defendants Nos. 1—4 were aware of the transaction from the commencement. This is apparently a finding of express authority, but in the next few lines it is argued that the suit should not fail merely because express authority is not proved.

Similarly, as to implied authority the Judge says "the plaintiff wanted security and so procured the acceptance of the firm to protect himself", and then as to the firm says, "the firm had dealings with Mahomed Ali, defendant No. 6, and his family and Radho, defendant No. 5 accommodated Mahomed Ali for reasons best known to him; for aught we know, it was an advance against future deliveries of grain". These sentences import no finding that the guarantee of the loan or the accommodation was within the scope of the partnership business—for there can be nothing more indecisive than the phrase "for aught we know."

Ordinarily, we would remand the appeal for a clear finding on the issue as to authority, but section 103 of the present Code empowers us to decide questions of fact. And as the material on record is sufficient, and as we have the assistance of the careful judgment of the Court of first instance, we proceed to give judgment on the question of authority.

The law on the point is well-settled. Every act of a partner binds the firm and the other partners if it is within (1) his actual or (2) his implied authority, i. e., (1) if the other partners have in fact authorized or ratified it, or (2) if it is done in the course of carrying on the partnership business in the usual way—unless the person dealing with the partner knows in fact that he has no authority to bind the firm in the particular transaction, i. e., knows that his apparent or implied authority is not his actual or express authority. This is the law as enacted in section 251, Indian Contract Act.

Now, the plaintiff sued on an averment that defendant No. 5 had express authority. Defendant No. 5 and the other partners deny this—and we cannot infer it from the mere fact of the presence of defendants Nos. 1 to 4 at Jacobabad the day before the hundis were drawn and accepted.

Defendant No. 5 had, therefore, no express authority and the question remains as to whether he had implied authority. This will depend upon whether the hundis were drawn for the business of the partnership and whether defendant No. 5 usually drew hundis for that business.

The business of the partnership was buying grain from zemindars for re-sale through commission agents. It is admitted that defendant No. 5 used to draw hundis, and this he would have to do in order to pay for grain purchased. But the case here was totally different. It was the guarantee of a loan to a zemindar. As to this, defendant No. 5 has said:—"We did not lend money to zemindars on interest—we adopted this policy to avoid unpleasantness with them as we live in their villages." If lending money to zemindars was no part of the business of the partnership, it is difficult to see how guaranteeing such a loan could be an incident of the business. Defendant No. 5 can give no instances of acceptances of hundis of other zemindars.

Mr. Elphinston contends that being a mercantile business, the defendant No. 5 had implied authority to draw and accept bills. This is true, but the leading case on the point, Bunarsee Doss v. Gholam Hossein (1), makes it clear that the acceptance must "for a transaction incident to the business of the firm." As to this Mr. Elphinston contends that the bill was accepted for the accommodation of a client of the partnership. But the very term accommodation implies a departure from the usual course of business for the indulgence of the client. It is doubtful, moreover, whether defendant No. 6 was really a client. His grain had been purchased by the firm "scarcely once or twice" (Exhibit No. 129).

The hundis were, no doubt, a renewal of old hundis accepted by defendant No. 5, but as these old hundis have not been produced and there is no evidence that defendant No. 5 was authorized to accept them—this fact makes no difference to our conclusion.

We find that the acceptance of the hundis was not within the implied authority of defendant No. 5, and we are fortified in this view by (1) the omission to enter the transaction in the accounts of the firm, (2) the fact that the hundis were payable at the Jacobabad shop where defendant No. 5 was not a partner, and (3) by the delay in filing the suit. We agree with the Court of the first instance that plaintiff's delay in filing the suit was due to his knowledge that the acceptance was not binding on the firm.

As to defendant No. 6, it is not necessary to consider the agreement set up by him for he must succeed on the ground that he did not receive due notice of dishonour. The plaintiff should have proved this notice in order to make this defendant liable under section 30 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. The only evidence on the point is that of plaintiff who says he met defendant No. 6, 1½ or 2 months after the maturity of the bills and that he demanded payment. This is not a sufficient compliance with the provisions of sections 93 and 106 of the Act.

We, therefore, vary the decree of the lower Appellate Court and confirm that of the Court of first instance. All costs in this Court and the lower Appellate Court on the plaintiff.

Decree varied.

(1) 13 M. I. A. 358; 13 W. R. (P. C.) 29.

(s. c. 10 M. L. T. 551; 16 C. W. N. 122.)

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE FOR THE NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES, ALLAHABAD.

November 1, 1911.

Present:—Lord Macnaghten, Lord Robson, Sir John Edge and Mr. Ameer Ali.

JIT SINGH AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS

versus

MAHARAJ SINGH—RESPONDENT.

Privy Council Practice—Fresh point.

It is not usual to allow a point to be raised on appeal to the Privy Council which has not been discussed in the Court below, and upon which their Lordships have not got the assistance of the Court below.

Ex parte Appeal from a judgment and decree of the High Court at Allahabad, dated the 20th of February 1907, which set aside a decree of the Subordinate Judge of Shahjahanpur, dated the 18th March 1904, which dismissed the claim of the plaintiff (the respondent) with costs. On appeal, the High Court decreed his claim for the property in suit, a portion of which was in the possession of the defendants (the appellants).

FACTS.—The appellants stated their case as follows:—

The question for determination in the appeal is whether the father of the respondent, named Khangar Singh, died before or after the death of one Ummed Kunwar, a Hindu widow, whose name during her lifetime was recorded in the Revenue Registers in respect of the property in suit.

On the 11th September 1903, the plaintiff filed the suit (No. 119 of 1903) giving rise to the appeal and in his plaint he alleged as follows:—

Harhar Singh, Himmat Singh and Bahadur Singh were three full brothers, the sons of Nehchal Singh. They separated in the lifetime of Harhar Singh and a large property fell to his share. After his death his widow Ummed Kunwar obtained possession of his property as a Hindu widow. She died on the 15th of March, 1892, and the two sons of her daughter, named Khangar Singh and Bishun Singh became the heirs and owners of the property in equal shares.

Khangar Singh, the father of the plaintiff, died on the 20th July 1892, and his estate devolved on the plaintiff, who asked the defendants to deliver the possession of the property left by the husband of Ummed Kunwar, but they refused to deliver possession.

The plaintiff further alleged that he was entitled to possession of half the entire property left by the husband of Ummed Kunwar, and that to meet necessary expenses he had sold half of his said half share to one Musammat Bed Kunwar, under a sale-deed, dated the 4th of September, 1903, and thus made her the owner thereof. He, therefore, prayed that he might be put in absolute possession of the property to which he was entitled by right of inheritance from Khangar Singh, the daughter's son of Harhar Singh, whose representative the plaintiff was.

In addition to the six original defendants who were members of the family, the defendants Nos. 7 and 8 were added as mortgagees of part of the property in suit.

In reply to the plaint, written statements were put in on behalf of most of the defendants. It is, however, now necessary to indicate only the defence put in by the first defendant Jit Singh. He pleaded inter alia that Khangar Singh, the father of the plaintiff, predeceased Ummed Kunwar and that, therefore, the plaintiff had no right to the property in dispute; that Himmat Singh, Bahadur Singh, Harhar Singh and Nirmal Singh were all members of a joint Hindu family; that the name of Musammat Ummed Kunwar had been entered in the papers only for her consolation and satisfaction on account of her being a widow, and that Harhar Singh's daughter died childless and that the father of the plaintiff was not her son. The Subordinate Judge framed the following seven issues for trial:—

(1) Is the claim bad for misjoinder of parties?

(2) Is the plaintiff a grandson of Harhar Singh's daughter?

(3) When did Khangar Singh die?

(4) Were the three brothers separate from one another and whether Harhar Singh was joint or separate from Nirmal Singh?

(5) How was Nirmal Singh in possession of the properties in dispute, and since when has he been in possession of them?

(6) Whether Jit Singh is in possession of any part of the property which belonged to Harhar Singh?

(7) How long has Dhram Kunwar been in possession of the share of mouza Khera Ruth, Mahal III, and what was the nature of her possession?

On the 18th of March, 1904, the Subordinate Judge delivered his judgment and decree by which he dismissed the suit with costs. He decided the third issue ("when did Khanger Singh die") against the plaintiff by finding that the oral evidence produced by the plaintiff did not prove that Khangar Singh died after Ummed Kunwar, and, in view of this finding, he held that it was not necessary to decide the remaining issues.

The plaintiff appealed from the decree of the Subordinate Judge to the High Court at Allahabad, and his appeal was admitted by an order, dated the 9th of July 1904. It was numbered 170 of 1904, and was heard with what the High Court in their judgment, dated the 20th February 1907, termed "connected appeals," which were numbered 263, 264, 279 and 289. The two learned Judges of the Court who heard the appeals stated that they arose out of three suits numbered respectively 119 of 1903, 45 of 1904, and 52 of 1904. The Suit No. 119 of 1903 was filed, as above stated, on the 11th September 1903. The Suits Nos. 45 of 1904 and 52 of 1904 were instituted in that year. It is not disputed that the Suits Nos. 45 and 52 were tried together by consent upon the same evidence and on the 30th August 1904, were decided by the same Subordinate Judge who on the 18th March 1904, decided the Suit No. 119 of 1903, (the present suit) but it is submitted that it is clear that the latter suit was tried independently of the other two suits.

The learned Judges of the High Court pointed out that the Subordinate Judge on the issue, whether Khangar Singh did or did not predecease Ummed Kunwar, came to the conclusion in the suit of Bed Kunwar (Suit No. 52), that "Khangar Singh survived his grand-mother," a conclusion opposed to his finding in Maharaj Singh's suit (Suit

No. 119), and with reference to the same issue they remarked later on in their judgment. "Here, too, the oral evidence is conflicting and, as mentioned above, the learned Subordinate Judge has come to two opposite conclusions on this issue. It is admitted that Ummed Kunwar died on the 15th March 1892. On behalf of Maharaj Singh and Bed Kunwar reliance is placed on the report of a patwari, dated 22nd September 1892, in which the date of Khangar's death is given as 29th July 1898. In his latter judgment the learned Subordinate Judge refers to this as one of the pieces of evidence which has led him to change his mind. But, in our opinion, this report of the patwari as to the date of Khangar's death is unreliable. There is evidence, printed at pages 18 and 19 of First Appeal No. 263, which, in our opinion, shows that Khangar Singh was dead on the 4th of July, 1892."

The learned Judges then referred to evidence not in the record of the present suit and concluded their judgment in case No. 264 of 1904, as follows: "Under these circumstances, we are unable to say that the latter conclusion arrived at by the learned Subordinate Judge as to the time of Khangar's death is wrong. Upon the findings at which we have arrived in concurrence with the Court below, that Court was justified in decreeing one half of the claim of Bishun Singh and the suit of Bed Kunwar, and the appeals filed against the decrees in these suits must fail. That Court should have decreed the claim of Maharaj Singh and his appeal must prevail."

The result of this decision was that the following order was made by the Court in the appeal of Maharaj Singh (No. 170 of 1904), the respondent in the present appeal:—

"This is the appeal of Maharaj Singh in the suit brought by him which was dismissed by the Court below. For the reasons stated by us in our judgment in First Appeal No. 264 of 1904, decided to-day, this appeal must prevail. We accordingly decree the appeal, set aside the decree of the Court below, and make a decree in favour of Maharaj Singh on the same terms as the decree made by the Court below in the suit of Bed Kunwar, No. 52 of 1904. The appellant will get his costs here and in the Court below. The costs in this Court will include fees on the higher scale."

The defendants Jit Singh and Musammat Dharam Kunwar, thereupon, appealed to His Majesty in Council.

Mr. G. E. A. Ross, for the Appellants:—

The question is whether Khangar Singh died before or after the death of Ummed Kunwar. The Subordinate Judge held that the plaintiff failed to prove that Khangar Singh died after Ummed Kunwar. But the High Court on appeal came to a different conclusion and held that the lady predeceased Khangar Singh, In arriving at this conclusion the High Court relied upon the evidence recorded in two other cases, in which both Courts in India found that Khangar Singh died after the death of Ummed Kunwar. The High Court erred in relying upon the evidence not actually recorded in this case. There is nothing to show that the parties in this case ever agreed to treat the evidence recorded in the other two cases as the evidence in this case.

[LORD MACNAGHTEN:—It seems that the findings on the question are concurrent. Their Lordships cannot hear any argument on that point.]

There is another point, viz., that the plaintiff, who is the respondent here, is not entitled to bring the suit during the lifetime of his uncle Bishun Singh. It is a question of pure law and the appellants are entitled to raise it, though it is not discussed in the Court below.

[LORD MACNAGHTEN:—The point was not raised in the Court below and we cannot allow you to raise it here.]

Questions of law are sometimes allowed to be raised here for the first time. Points of limitation, for example, have been so raised.

[LORD MACNAGHTEN:—That is by statute. The Court can deal with a question of limitation, even though the parties do not raise it.]

JUDGMENT.

LORD MACNAGHTEN:—It is not usual to allow a point to be raised here on appeal which has not been discussed in the Court below, and upon which their Lordships have not got the assistance of the Court below.

MANGHANMAL v. FERNANDEZ.

On this ground their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that this appeal should be dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellants:—Messrs. Barrow, Rogers and Nevill.

Appeal dismissed.

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 181.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT NO. 311 OF 1910.

August 28, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Fawcett, A. J. C.

MANGHANMAL LALCHAND—PLAINTIFF

versus

T. A. FERNANDEZ—DEFENDANT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), ss. 2(7), 14—Suit against Public Officer without prior notice—Dismissal of suit—Subsequent suit after notice—Exclusion of period taken up by first suit—"Good faith"—"Cause of a like nature"—General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 3 (20)—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 80.

A. brought a suit on 7th April 1909, for damages for certain acts done by B. in his official capacity in July and August 1908. The suit was dismissed on 30th May 1910 as not being maintainable for want of prior notice to B. A. thereupon gave B. the required notice and instituted the present suit for the same relief on 16th September 1910. A. claimed to exclude from the prescribed period of limitation the period during which the first suit was under trial:

Held, that A. was not entitled to the exclusion of this period under section 14 of the Limitation Act.

In view of the well-known and old standing procedure requiring previous notice to a Public Officer of an intended suit in respect of acts purporting to be done by such Public Officer in his official capacity, and the clear and unqualified terms of section 80 of the Civil Procedure Code, A. could not be said to have acted in good faith in bringing the previous suit within the strict definition of the term in section 2 (7) of the Limitation Act or even the wider sense attached to the term in section 3 (20), of the General Clauses Act.

Mathura Singh v. Bhawani Singh, 22 A. 248 at p. 253, doubted.

Obiter dictum.—The want of notice under section 80, Civil Procedure Code, is not a "cause of a like nature" with defect of jurisdiction within the meaning of section 14 of the Limitation Act.

Mr. Hirdaram, for the Plaintiff.

Mr. E. Raymond, for the Defendant.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff sues to recover Rs. 10,000 as damages on account of malicious prosecution, defamation and other injurious acts alleged to have been committed by the defendant, who was then mukhtiarkar and 2nd Class Magistrate, Kotri, in July and August 1908.

A previous suit brought by the plaintiff for the same relief and on the same causes of action on the 7th April 1909, was dismissed by this Court on the 30th May 1910, as not being maintainable for want of the prior notice to defendant under section 80, Civil Procedure Code.

The present suit was instituted on the 16th September 1910 after giving the prescribed notice and is admittedly time-barred, unless the period of $13\frac{3}{4}$ months during which the first suit was under trial is excluded under section 14 of the Limitation Act. The question whether it should be so excluded has accordingly been argued as a preliminary issue.

There are a good many rulings bearing on the point at issue, but I do not think it will serve any useful purpose to discuss them in detail. The main question, in my opinion, is whether the former suit, in which no notice had been given under section 80, Civil Procedure Code, can properly be said to have been "prosecuted in good faith" by the plaintiff: and on such a point each case must be mainly decided on its own merits.

Under the definition in section 2 (7) of the Act, "nothing shall be deemed to be done in good faith which is not done with due care and attention." This is a stricter definition than the one adopted in section 3 (20) of the General Clauses Act, 1897, under which "a thing shall be deemed to be done in "good faith" where it is in fact done honestly, whether it is done negligently or not." For, if a thing is done "negligently," it cannot be said to have been done "with due care and attention," even though it may be done "honestly." In view of this, it is, at least, open to question whether Strachey, C. J., is correct in saying that the principle which underlies section 14 "is, broadly speaking, the protection against the bar of limitation of a man honestly doing his best to get the case tried on the merits, but failing, through the Court being unable to give such a trial"; Mathura Singh v. Bhawani Singh (1). That would, no doubt, be so, if the definition of "good faith" in the General Clauses Act, 1897, applied to section 14, but, as pointed out above, a different and a stricter definition applies to it.

However, even giving the plaintiff the benefit of the other definition of "good faith",

(1) 22 A. 248 at p. 253.

I think it is clear that he cannot be said to have been honestly doing his best to get the case tried on its merits in the former suit. In view of the well known and old standing procedure requiring previous notice to a public officer of an intended suit in respect of acts purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity, and the clear and unqualified terms of section 80 of the Civil Procedure Code, the plaintiff must have known that he ran a very considerable risk of his suit being dismissed for want of such notice. The probabilities of his being successful in his contention that no such notice was required, were very small; and if he deliberately chose to run such a risk instead of giving the required notice before it became too late to bring his suit within the prescribed period of limitation he has only himself to blame and cannot be held to have acted honestly or with due care and attention. The plaintiff appears to have deliberately refrained from giving such notice because he thought this would give him an advantage in his suit, having regard to the allegations of malice made against the defendant, and this is remarked on in the following passage of Mr. Crouch's judgment dismissing the suit:—

"The Court is asked to deprive defendant of his privileges in order that plaintiff may have a chance of proving that he is not entitled to them, and in order that he may, further, in the attempt to prove it do all the mischief from which the Legislature desires to give public officer's protection."

Such conduct cannot be said to have been "honest."

It is stated that the plaintiff obtained the best legal advice available before deciding to bring his suit without prior notice under section 80, Civil Procedure Code: but even if this be so, I do not think it makes any difference in a case like this, where the law is so plain.

In view of this finding, it is unnecessary to consider whether the want of notice under section 80, Civil Procedure Code, was a "cause of a like nature" with defect of jurisdiction; but I should be inclined to hold that it was not such a cause, having regard to the facts that the operating cause for dismissal was due entirely to plaintiff's own laches and deliberate disregard of the provisions of that section. It is on a different footing to misjoinder of parties or of causes of action (Explanation III to section 14), where there may well be a bona fide mistake on the part of a plaintiff.

For the above reasons, I hold that the suit is time-barred and dismiss it with costs.

Suit dismissed.

(s. c. 10 M. L. T. 554.)

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE COURT OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.

July 27, 1911.

Present:—Lord Macnaghten, Lord Shaw, Lord Mersey, Lord De Villiers and Lord Robson.

HADDINGTON ISLAND QUARRY Co., LTD., AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS

versus

ALDEN WESLEY AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS.

Redemption, suit for—Power of sale—Duties of mortgagee and purchaser—Inadequacy of price.

In pursuance of a power of sale in a mortgage-deed the property was sold by the mortgagee. In a suit for redemption against the mortgagee and the purchaser the mortgagor alleged that the sale was very disadvantageous but gave no hint to the defendants that they would be called upon at the trial to meet a charge of either corruption or collusion or to meet the case that the price was so low as in itself to be evidence of fraud:

Held, that under these circumstances, the failure of the defendants to produce counter-evidence as to the value of the property did not justify a finding of the lower Court in effect that the sale was fraudulent.

A mortgagee is not a trustee of the power of sale. It is a power given to him for his own benefit, to enable him the better to realize his mortgage-debt. If he exercises it bona fide for that purpose, without corruption or collusion with the purchaser, the Court will not interfere, even though the sale be very disadvantageous; unless indeed, the price is so low as in itself to be evidence of fraud.

Appeal from a judgment of the Court of Appeal, dated January 10th, 1911, reversing a decree of Morrison, J., dated May 7th, 1910, which dismissed the respondents' action.

Sir R. Finlay, K. C., and Mr. Rowlatt, for the Appellants.

Mr. Higgins, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

LORD DE VILLIERS.—This is an appeal against a judgment of the Court of Appeal of British Columbia reversing a judgment of Morrison, J., in the Supreme Court, which dismissed the plaintiff's action with costs.

HADDINGTON ISLAND QUARRY CO. LD. v. ALDEN WESLEY.

The plaintiffs were the mortgagors and personal representatives of mortgagors of a certain quarry known as Haddington Island, and the defendants were the assignees of the mortgage and purchasers of the quarry, the sale to the latter having been effected by virtue of a power of sale conferred on the mortgagees by the indenture of mortgage. The statement of claim contained several claims, but the claims to which the arguments before their Lordships were mainly directed were for a cancellation of the conveyance to the purchasers, and for a declaration that the plaintiffs were entitled to redeem the mortgage. The grounds upon which these claims were based were that the assignment of the mortgage did not vest in the defendant Company any interest or title to the mortgage; that there had not been a due registration either of the assignment or of the conveyance; that the defendant Company had no right to exercise the power of sale; that no demand had been made on the mortgagors for payment and no notice given to them of the intended sale, and that the defendant Company did not use its best exertions, or indeed any exertions to obtain the best price for the said Haddington Island alleged to have been sold by it as aforesaid, and that the purchase price alleged to have been paid by the defendant Walker or the defendants MacDonald, Wilson, and Snider, was a very inadequate price for the said property. At the close of the trial the learned Judge made the following observations:—"The whole transactions seem to me to have been quite valid and regular, and you cannot disturb the defendant; but I have some misgivings as to the assignment to Fulton. Outside of that, I would not hesitate to give judgment. I think the same was valid and the other points I am satisfied on, but I have some misgivings on that point. There is an obvious misprint as the assignment, the validity of which is denied was made by and not to Fulton who was Commissioner of Lands. The mortgagee was one Macaulay, who had assigned the mortgage to a previous Commissioner of Lands and the point now made by the plaintiffs was that the title to the mortgage did not vest in the defendant Company as assignee inasmuch as the Commissioner had not obtained the authority of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to assign the bond. The Judge, after considering the question, decided that it could not be raised without making the Attorney-General a party. He accordingly dismissed the action with costs. On appeal to the Court of Appeal the Chief Justice and Mortin, J., confined themselves entirely to the question whether the sale had been made by the defendant Company with due regard to the interest of the mortgagors. Galliher, J., also discussed that question but he made a few observations upon another question raised in the Court of Appeal, namely, whether an arrangement made before the date of assignment by the Government with the mortgagors under which the Government was to receive the royalty due to the mortgagors on stone taken from the quarry and apply the same in reduction of debt would have debarred the Government from exercising the power of sale. If the Government had no right to sell the property the assignees would equally be debarred from selling it. Upon this point the learned Judge said: "Taking all arrangements which finally culminated in the agreement of July 12th, 1894, and reading that agreement, it appears to me it goes no further than to provide for an application of the royalty on such stone as should be supplied thereunder on the mortgage. This was done, and although we find credit for stone supplied for the Empress Hotel, I treat that merely as a sum received and applied in due course on the mortgage. This was the last credit given and some two years before, the mortgage was assigned to the defendant Company so that even if that is treated as a payment under a special agreement the mortgagors were for a long time subsequent thereto in default and the government could deal with the mortgage as they saw fit due regard being had to the interest of the mortgagors. Their assigns could, of course, do likewise." He agreed, however, with the other members of the Court of Appeal that the sale had not been made with the due regard to the interests of the mortgagors and the sale was accordingly ordered to be set aside and the plaintiffs were allowed to redeem.

Their Lordships entirely agree with the view that what took place between the Government and the mortgagors before the assignment was not sufficient to deprive the assignees of the right to exercise the power of the sale contained in the indenture. The real question, therefore, to be decided in this appeal is whether, in view of the findings and of the evidence given at the trial, the Court of Appeal rightly decided that there was such a reckless disregard of the interests of the mortgagors as would justify the setting aside of the sale.

The parties against whom the action was brought were not only the assignees of the mortgage, but also the purchasers of the property.

The sale was effected by virtue of a power which is in the following terms:—"If the mortgagors make default as to any of the covenants or provisos herein contained, the principal hereby secured shall at the option of the mortgagee, his heirs or assigns, forthwith become due and payable, and in default of payment the powers of sale hereby given may be exercised, provided that the said mortgagee, on default of payment for one month may on one month's notice, enter on and lease or sell the lands. And provided also that, in case default be made in payment of either principal or interest for two months after any payment of either falls due, the said powers of leasing or selling of any of them may be acted upon without any notice .....Provided that, in default of the payment of the interests hereby secured, the principal hereby secured shall become payable." Ostensibly, therefore, the mortgagees acted within their powers in selling the property, and the purchasers are entitled to the full benefit of their purchase unless it be alleged and proved that they acted in collusion with the vendors, or that the price was so low as in itself to be evidence of fraud or collusion. Unfortunately, from first to last there is no allegation in the statement of claim charging the purchasers with fraud or collusion or bad faith or knowledge of the existence of facts which would invalidate the sale. The allegations that the defendant Company, that is to say, the vendors, did not use any exertions to obtain the best price for the land, and that they sold it to the purchasers at a very inadequate price, are quite consistent with perfect good faith on the part of the purchasers, and yet these are the only allegations from which it could possibly have been inferred that at the trial attempts would be made to charge them with collusion or want of good faith. At the trial the evidence was mainly directed towards establising those grounds of claim which have since been practically abandoned. Incidentally, Alden House, one of the plaintiffs, was asked what the value of the property was and his answer was: "Well it is worth at least $20,000 at the very least. We were offered $ 30,000 for it once." As this amount is far in excess of the price for which the property was sold, namely, $3,250, it is contended that the sale should not be allowed to stand, but, in the absence of any notice to the defendants that the alleged inadequacy of price would be relied upon as proof of fraud or collusion on their part, they should not be prejudiced by their failure to produce counter-evidence as to value. The evidence as to the value given on behalf of the plaintiffs was of the most flimsy nature. Huson said that they had been offered $ 30,000 for the quarry, but did not produce the person who had made the offer. Nor did the plaintiffs produce any expert or, indeed, any other evidence in support of Huson's casual statement as to value. If the property was so valuable early in 1908, there is no satisfactory explanation why it was not sold and the proceeds of the sale applied towards redemption of the mortgage. It is clear from the correspondence that, as far back as January 1908, Huson knew that there was a prospect of the property being immediately sold for the amount of the original mortgage-debt, but, although he protested against such a sale, he made no attempt to find the means of paying the Government the sum of $ 1,150, which was all that was then still owing for principal and interest. Under the indenture of mortgage, the mortgagors were at liberty to pay the debt after three months' notice in writing to the mortgagee or his assigns, or upon the payment of three months' interest in lieu of notice. No such notice appears to have been given, nor interest tendered either to the Government or to the defendant Company after it had, in March 1908, obtained from the Government an assignment of the mortgage. The defendant Company accordingly sold the property for $ 3,250 and it now holds the balance after payment of capital and interest, at the disposal of those entitled thereto. The trial Judge was perfectly satisfied as to the validity of the transaction. In the notice of appeal to the Court of Appeal, although other grounds of alleged invalidity are fully stated, not a word is said as to fraud or collusion. But the Court held, in effect, that the sale was fraudulent. Among the cases cited by Galliher, J., was that of Warner v. Jacob (1) where Kay, J., summing up the authorities is reported to have said: "The result seems to be that a mortgagee is, strictly speaking, not a trustee of the power of sale. It is a power given to him for his own benefit, to enable him the better to realize his mortgage-debt. If he exercises it bona fide for that purpose, without corruption or collusion with the purchaser the Court will not interfere, even though the sale be very disadvantageous, unless indeed the price is so low as in itself to be evidence of fraud." In the present case the statement of claim alleged in effect, that the sale was very disadvantageous, but it gave no hint to the defendant that they would be called upon at the trial to meet a charge of either corruption or collusion or to meet the case that the price was so low as in itself to be evidence of fraud. Under these circumstances, their Lordships are unable to attach the same importance as was attached by the Court of Appeal to the circumstance that the defendants produced no evidence as to the value of the property, nor are they prepared to dissent from the finding on the facts by the learned Judge at the trial. They will, therefore, humbly advise His Majesty that the judgment of the Court of Appeal should be reversed and the judgment of Morrison, J., restored. The respondents will bear the costs of this appeal and the costs incurred in the Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court.

Solicitors for the Appellants: Messrs. Gard Rook & Co.

Solicitors for the Respondents: Messrs. Maddison Stirling, Humm & Davies.

(1) (1882) 51 L. J. Ch. 642; 20 Ch. D. 220; 46 L. T. 656; 30 W. R. 721.

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 184.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 4 OF 1904.

September 5, 1910.

Present:—Mr. Fawcett, A. J. C.

HEMANDAS BAMRAKHIOMAL—PLAINTIFFS

versus

CHELLARAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of of 1908*), s.* 151, O. XX, r. 3—Interlocutory judgment—Right of successor to re-consider— Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908*), s.* 92 (2), interpretation of—Retrospective effect—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882*), s.* 539—Scheme suit instituted before passing of new Code—Bar under section 92 (2)—General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 6, scope of—Interpretation of Statutes—Procedure Acts.

A Judge has power to reconsider an interlocutory judgment delivered by his predecessor on any issue before the final disposal of the case, if interlocutory judgment is based on an erroneous assumption or hypothesis.

Balwant v. Secretary of State, 32 B. 432, at p. 437; 10 Bom. L. R. 531, followed.

Chinku v. Utamchand, 2 S. L. R. Civil 59 at p. 62, relied upon.

Where a provision in an enactment is in its nature declaratory, the presumption against construing it retrospectively is inapplicable.

Attorney-General v. Theobald, (1890) 24 Q. B. D. 557; 62 L. T. 768; 38 W. R. 527; Steel v. M'Kinlay, 5 App. Cas. 754 at pp. 781-2; 43 L. T. 358; 29 W. R. 17, relied upon.

Where the Legislature allows an interval of time between the passing of an enactment and its commencement so that steps might be taken for avoiding any hardships arising from the change of law, the inference is that the enactment was intended to have retrospective effect.

The operation of section 6 of the General Clauses Act is limited to cases in which the change in the law is the result of a mere repeal of the old enactment and does not extend where it is due to an addition to it.

Jagodanund v. Amritalal Sircar, 22 C. 767 at p. 781, followed.

Steele v. M'Kinlay, 5 App. Cas. 755 at pp. 781-2; 43 L. T. 358; 29 W. R. 17, relied upon.

The Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, contains no saving of pending suits from its operation. The general intention of retrospectivity is indicated by the special savings of pending arbitration proceedings and the present right of appeal.

The provisions of sub-section (2) of section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure are of a declaratory nature inserted with a view to settle the point whether the provisions of the corresponding section 539 of the former Code were mandatory or not; consequently, they operate retrospectively.

Abdul Rehman v. Kassum Ebrahim, 13 Bom. L. R. 583 at p. 588; 11 Ind. Cas. 726, referred to.

The Ydun, (1899) B. 236, relied upon.

HEMANDAS v. CHELLARAM.

A suit for removal of certain trustees and for the proper administration of a trust instituted without the sanction of the Advocate-General would be barred under section 92 (2) of the new Code even if the suit was instituted in 1904.

In 1904, the point whether the provisions of section 539 of the old Civil Procedure Code were mandatory or merely directory was a most doubtful one for the province of Sind and a plaintiff cannot be said to have had in 1904, an indubitable right to bring a scheme suit without the sanction of the Advocate-General or other office authorized under section 539.

The subsequent ruling of the Judicial Commissioner's Court Sind in 1907, Radhibai v. Kundanmal, 1 S. L. R. 155, cannot properly be said to operate retrospectively so as to vest in plaintiff a right at the date of the institution of suit which he did not possess in the state of the laws then existing as interpreted by the Bombay High Court or the Sind Sadar Court.

Tricumdas v. Khimji, 16 B. 626, Sayad Hussein v. Collector of Karia, 21 B. 257, referred to.

Mr. E. Raymond, for the Plaintiffs.

Mr. Hirdaram Mewaram, for the Defendants.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff, who is a brother of the late Shewaram Ramrakhiomal, and a beneficiary under his Will, sues the four executors of the estate, alleging that they or rather the first three, have been guilty of failure to discharge their duties and acts of bad faith and misconduct, showing them to be unfit to act as executors or trustees, and seeks a decree ordering the removal of the first three defendants and directing defendant No. 4, who is also a brother of Shewaram, to administer the trust singly or appoint new trustees in place of the first three defendants, to render full and true accounts and give such other and further relief as to the Court may appear fit, fair and reasonable under the circumstances of the case.

The first three defendants deny the alleged acts of misconduct, etc., and also plead that the plaintiff has no right of suit.

The following issues were accordingly raised on the 9th February 1904:—

1. Is plaintiff entitled to sue?

2. Is his suit barred by section 539, Civil Procedure Code?

2. Have defendants Nos. 1 to 3 been guilty of the acts mentioned in paragraph 7 of the written statement?

4. Are there pecuniary circumstances as stated in paragraph 8?

5. Should they for these causes, or for failure to submit accounts be removed?

6. What further orders should be passed as regards the estate?

On the 1st June 1909, the first two issues were argued for preliminary decision. The first was, however, abandoned by defendants' Pleader. On the 2nd June 1909, Mr. Knight, A. J. C., delivered an interlocutory judgment in which he finds the second issue in the negative on the ground that, under the ruling in Radhibai v. Kundanmal (1), the provisions of section 539 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882, which was in force when the suit was instituted, were merely directory and not mandatory. He further holds that the issue must be decided by section 539 of the old Code, not by section 92 of the new one, "for, a subsequent alteration of the law cannot deprive plaintiff of a substantive right that he enjoyed when he filed his suit."

Since then, no further progress has been made with the trial of the suit, the proceedings being stayed pending the decision of the case in which the validity of the Will is contested on the ground that the property dealt with in it was joint family property. That case was decided by the Appellate Side of the Court on the 24th June 1910, and on the 14th instant I refused to allow any further stay of the proceedings.

It seemed to me, however, that the view of Mr. Kinght as to the non-applicability of section 92 (2) of the Code of 1908 to the suit, was open to question, and I have, therefore, had the point fully argued before me.

Mr. Raymond for the plaintiff contended that I had no power to re-open an issue already decided by Mr. Knight: but it is to be noted that the issue actually decided was only, whether the suit was barred by section 539 of the Code of 1882. Strictly speaking, his remarks regarding the non-applicability of section 92 (2) of the Code are obiter dicta. But, even taking this point as impliedly included in the issue, I think I clearly have power to re-consider the matter, if I find that part of the interlocutory judgment to be based on an erroneous assumption or hypothesis. In support of this I would refer to the remarks of Batchelor, J., in Balwant v. Secretary of State (2); see also the case of Chinku v. Utamchand (3), where a fresh finding on a issue already decided by the Judge's predecessor was upheld by the Appeal Court. Order XX, rule 3, of the Civil Procedure Code, to which Mr. Raymond referred, does not apply to this case, because Mr. Knight's interlocutory judgment is not a judgment containing the grounds of a decree in the suit so as to constitute it a judgment of the kind referred to in that rule, see definition of "judgment" in section 2 (9) of the Code. On the other hand, it would be ridiculous for me to go into the merits of the suit and record evidence which will probably take up a large amount of time, if I thought that the suit was bad for want of the sanction prescribed by section 92 of the Code, and that all the time and trouble involved in its trial on the merits would eventually be wasted. Section 151 of the Code, applies to enable the Court to do what is necessary to prevent such an abuse of its process.

(1) 1 S. L. R. 155.
(2) 32 B. 432 at p. 437; 10 Bom. L. R. 531.
(3) 2 S. L. R. Civil 59.

Mr. Raymond relies on the view taken by Mr. Knight that, at the date of the institution of the suit, the plaintiff had a substantive right to bring it without any such sanction as that required under section 92, and that sub-section (2) of that section cannot, therefore, operate retrospectively to deprive him of such right. But, is it the case that plaintiff really had any such definite right? At the time he brought his suit in 1904, there does not appear to have been any authoritative decision by the Sadar Court in Sind on the point whether the provisions of section 539, Civil Procedure Code, were mandatory or merely directory, as to which there has been such conflict of opinion. But, in so far as the decisions of the Bombay High Court are generally followed in this Province in preference to those of other High Courts (see per Beaman, J., at page 592 of Sind Sadar Court Selected Decisions, Vol. II; where this is stated to have "always been the practice" of the Sadar Court), the view then in force must be taken to have been that adopted by the Bombay High Court in the cases of Tricumdass v. Khimji (4) and Sayad Hussein v. Collector of Karia (5), rather than that subsequently adopted by the Calcutta High Court and followed by this Court in 1907. At any rate, the point was at most a doubtful one, and the plaintiff cannot be said to have had, or thought he had, an indubitable right to file this suit without the sanction of the Advocate-General, or other authorized officer, under section 539, Civil Procedure Code.

The fact that it was subsequently ruled that such sanction was not necessary, no doubt, removed any objection such as that raised in this case, so long as that ruling and section 539, Civil Procedure Code, remained in force. But it cannot be properly said to operate retrospectively, so as to vest in plaintiff a right at the date of the institution of the suit, which in fact he did not possess in the then existing state of the law, as interpreted by the Bombay High Court or the Sind Sardar Court. And, had the ruling in Radhibai v. Kundanmal (1) been subsequently reversed by the Privy Council, the decision would obviously operate to bar the present suit. The same principle seems to me to apply to the provisions of section 92 (2) in which the Legislature has deliberately reversed the view of the law followed in Radhibai's case (1) and adopted that followed by the Bombay High Court. As stated in Hardcastle on Statutory Law, 3rd Edition, page 363, "where an Act is in its nature declaratory, the presumption against construing it retrospectively is inapplicable. Acts of this kind, like judgments, decide like cases pending when the judgments are given but do not re-open decided cases." See also Maxwell on the Interpretation of Statutes, 3rd Edition, page 309, Attorney-General v. Theobald (6) and Steele v. M'Kinlay (7). In the particular case of sub-section (2) of section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, there can, I think, be no reasonable doubt that its provisions are of a declaratory nature, inserted with a view to settle the point on which conflicting decisions had been given by the various High Courts, as to whether the provisions of the corresponding section 539 of the former Code were mandatory or not.

Another consideration which also tells in favour of the above view is, that though the Code of 1908, was passed on the 21st March 1908, it did not actually come into force till the 1st January 1909. Attention was drawn to the change of law about to be effected by section 92 (2), of the Code in Radhabai's case (1) and if the plaintiff had exercised due

(4) 16 B. 626.
(5) 21 B. 257.
(6) (1890) 24 Q. B. D. 557; 62 L. T. 768; 38 W. R. 527.
(7) 5 App. Cas. 574 at pp. 781-2; 43 L. T. 358; 29 W. R. 17.

vigilance, he could have moved the Court to dispose of the case before the 1st January 1909, so as to avoid the operation of section 92 (2), in respect of pending suits. The fact that the Legislature allowed an interval of time in which plaintiff might have taken steps for avoiding any hardships arising from the change of law, is a circumstance which supports the inference that section 92 (2) was intended to have retrospective effect; see Hardcastle on Statutory Law, 3rd Edition, p. 362, and Maxwell on the Interpretation of Statutes, 3rd Edition, p. 311.

As said by Davar, J., in Abdul Rehman v. Kassum Ebrahim (8), "the object of providing that in charity suits the previous sanction of the Advocate-General should be a condition precedent to the institution of the suits is to save trustees from harassing and vexatious actions at the instance of irresponsible parties." It is, therefore, somewhat on a par with the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, (56 and 57 Vict. C. 61), section 1 of which provides a period of six months' limitation for actions instituted in respect of any alleged neglect or default in the execution of any Act of Parliament or of any public duty or authority. In The Ydun (9), it was held that this provision was retrospective; as dealing with procedure only. This is a far stronger case than the present, because, the protection there given amounted to an absolute bar of the suit; whereas here there is no bar, provided the Advocate-General's consent be obtained.

If sub-section 2 of section 92 was not intended to be retrospective, the Legislature would almost certainly have inserted the words "after the commencement of this Code" after the word "instituted," cf. section 1 of the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893. It must also be noted that the Code of 1908 contains no saving of pending suits and does not even impose the limitation "so far as may be," which is contained in section 2 (3), of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1898. The general intention of retrospectivity is, on the contrary, indicated by the special saving of pending arbitration proceedings under section 89 (2); while section 154 only saves a "present right of appeal," and not of suit.

Section 6 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, does not help the plaintiff, because, as pointed out in Jagodanund v. Amritalal Sircar (10), the operation of such an enactment is limited to cases in which the change in the law is the result of a mere repeal of the old enactment, and does not extend where it is due (as in this case) to an addition to it, cf. also Steele v. M'Kinlay (7), where a distinction is drawn between a repealing and a declaratory Act. In any case, for the reasons already given, "a different intention appears" and section 6 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, does not, therefore, bar the retrospective operation of section 92 (2) of the Civil Procedure Code to the present suit.

I accordingly hold that the plaintiff had no vested right at the date of the institution of the suit, which can bar section 92 (2) from operating retrospectively to it, and that the provisions of that sub-section, being of a declaratory nature, do apply to the present suit. Mr. Knight has not fully considered this point and his interlocutory judgment that section 92 (2) does not apply is, in my opinion, based on an erroneous assumption, which justifies me in refusing to be bound by it. The result is, that I hold the present suit barred by section 92 (2) of the Code for want of the Advocate-General's sanction. It is admitted that the suit is one regarding a "trust created for public purposes of a charitable or religious nature;" and the plaint is not confined to the private trust under the Will, but prays for the removal of the three trustees—defendants generally.

For the above reasons, I dismiss the plaintiff's suit, with costs. I see no sufficient reason to refrain from following the ordinary rule as to costs following the event, especially as this seems to me clearly a case in which, at any rate, a reasonable suspicion arises as to the bona fide nature of the suit.

Suit dismissed.

(8) 13 Bom. L. R. 583 at p. 588; 11 Ind. Cas. 726.
(9) (1899) B. 236.
(10) 22 C. 767 at p. 781.

SEVUGAN CHETTY v. KRISHNA AIYANGAR.

(s. c. 10 M. L. T. 557.)

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 722 OF 1910.

October 25, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Spencer.

A. R. R. M. S. V. SEVUGAN CHETTY —PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

KRISHNA AIYANGAR AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VI, r. 17 --Suit to recover account-books from one's servants—Amendment of plaint—Adding further relief to recover moneys.

Where a suit as originally framed is to recover the account-books of the plaintiff from his servants who were in charge of his business, an application for amendment, before any evidence was recorded, merely claiming by way of further relief the moneys due from them also on the facts stated in the original plaint is proper and should be allowed. The fact that the further relief asked for might have been barred in the interval does not by itself render the amendment improper.

Kisandas Rupchand v. Racchappa Vithoba, 33 B. 644 at p. 651; 11 Bom. L. R. 1042 and Mulla Veetil Seethi Kutti v. Kerambath Painthuti Achutan Nair, 21 M. L. J. 475; 10 Ind. Cas. 218, referred to.

Weldon v. Neal, (1887) 19 Q. B. D. 394; 56 L. J. Q. B. 621; 35 W. R. 820, distinguished.

Account-books are personal property and a suit to recover them from servants would lie.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of Madura, in Appeal Suit No. 551 of 1909, presented against the decree of the Court of the District Munsif of Sivaganga, in Original Suits No. 478 of 1908.

Mr. V. C. Seshachariar, for the Appellants.

Mr. C. Madhavan Nair, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—We think that the Courts below were in error in refusing to allow the plaintiff to amend his plaint as prayed in his petition of the 8th July 1909. This petition was put in before any evidence had been recorded. It did not allege any new facts, but merely prayed that an additional relief might be granted on the facts stated in the original plaint.

It may be that the further relief then asked for had become barred in the interval but we do not think that this by itself necessarily renders the amendment improper. The rule applicable is that contained in Order VI, rule 17 of the new Code of Civil Procedure which enacts that the Court may at any stage allow a party to amend the pleadings "in such manner as may be just" and that "all such amendments shall be made as may be necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties." There can be no doubt that both the conditions laid down in the above rule are satisfied in the present case. The reliefs claimed by the plaintiff and the facts on which he claimed them are stated in the original plaint, though he then only asked the Court to recover his account-books from the defendants, who were alleged to be his servants, and said he would bring a separate suit for the money due by them. He afterwards thought it was desirable to claim the recovery of the money in the same suit. There is no injustice to the defendants in allowing this amendment, for the effect of it is to enable the plaintiff to prove his right to money which, before any bar by limitation had arisen he had in the original plaint claimed as due to him by the defendants (see the remarks of Batchelor, J., in Kisandas Rupchand v. Rachappa Vithoba (1) and also the recent case in this Court Mulla Veettil Seethi Kutti v. Korambath Painthuti Achutan Nair (2). The case of Weldon v. Neal (3), is very different from the present case, for in that case the proposed amendment alleged assault, malicious prosecution and other facts not stated in the original plaint, and which constituted a totally new cause of action. The Courts below not only refused to allow amendment in the present case, but dismissed the plaintiff's suit as originally framed on the ground that it was unsustainable.

We do not understand why it was considered to be so. The plaintiff alleged that the defendants were his servants on a monthly pay and had charge of his shop, and claimed that the accounts kept by them in regard to the business were his property and he sued to recover these accounts. It is difficult to see why such a suit should be unsustainable.

We set aside the decrees of the Courts below and remand the suit to the District Munsif to be restored to his file and to be disposed of according to law. He should allow the amendment desired by the plaintiff, and allow the defendants to put in a fresh

(1) 33 B. 644 at p. 651: 11 Bom. L. R. 1042.

(2) 21 M. L. J. 475; 10 Ind. Cas. 218.

(3) (1887) 19 Q. B. D. 394; 56 L. J. Q. B. 621; 35 W. R. 820.

LEKHRAJ v. HARPAL SINGH.

written statement if they desire to do so, and if necessary, he should revise the issues.

The costs will abide the results.

Decree set aside.

[s. c. 11 M. L. T. 1; (1911) 1 M.W.N. 16; 9 A.L.J. 40.]

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE FOR THE NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES, ALLAHABAD.

November 22, 1911.

Present:—Lord Macnaghten, Lord Robson, Sir John Edge and Mr. Ameer Ali.

Thakurain LEKHRAJ KUNWAR—APPELLANT

versus

Thakur HARPAL SINGH AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Succession—Impartible estate--Rule of primogeniture—Owner devising the estate to his widow —Next reversioner disputing the Will—Probate—Compromise—Construction—Character of the estate taken by the next reversioner.

One R. S., who was in possession of an impartible estate, succession to which was governed by the rule of primogeniture, died without male issue, leaving a Will by which he left his entire estate absolutely to his widow, who applied for a grant to her of Probate of the Will. The next reversioner, S. S. filed objections to Probate being granted, and instituted a suit against the widow claiming that the Will was null and void as against him and the estate and that absolute possession over the entire estate should be awarded to him. A decree in the suit was made in accordance with the terms of a compromise between the parties whereby it was provided, inter alia, that the widow should remain in possession during her life-time of the entire estate left by R. S. exercising the powers of a gaddi-nashin without the power of alienation, that S. S. should receive an annual allowance; that on the death of the widow S. S. or any representative of his should be the absolute owner of the estate and should occupy the gaddi, and that should it be indispensably necessary to raise any money on the estate by way of a loan the parties to the compromise should in concurrence with each other borrow an amount and re-pay the same from the profits of the estate. The Will was subsequently admitted to Probate. S.S. predeceased the widow of R. S. The widow of S. S. brought the suit claiming proprietary possession of the estate as against her husband's distant cousin in the male line and certain other members of his family:

Held, that the rights of the parties to the suit depended on the construction of the compromise, but not upon the Will of R. S. and that the fact that after the compromise the Will was admitted to Probate did not affect the rights of S. S.

Held, also, that the compromise did not change the character of the estate, which as an impartible estate devolved on S. S. on the death of R. S.; that by the compromise S. S. reserving to himself the said annual income out of the estate gave to the widow of R. S. a bare interest for her life in his (S. S.) impartible estate, and that on the death of S. S. the estate as an impartible estate devolved, subject to the life-interest of the widow of R. S., on the heir of S. S. according to the rule of primogeniture, and not on the widow of S. S.

Harpal Singh v. Lakhraj Kunwar, 30 A. 406; 5 A. L. J. 405; (1908) A. W. N. 165, affirmed.

Appeal from a judgment and decree of the High Court at Allahabad, dated May 29th, 1908, reversing that of the District Judge of Jaunpur, dated February 24th, 1906.

FACTS.—The suit was instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Jaunpur, but was subsequently transferred to the Court of the District Judge of Jaunpur, who allowed the plaintiff's (appellant's) claim.

The facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of their Lordships. For a report of the judgment of the High Court see Harpal Singh v. Lekhraj Kunwar (1).

Sir H Erle Richards, K. C., and Mr. B. Dube, for the Appellant.—The estate, though impartible, is alienable, and Randhir Singh had the power to devise it to his widow.

[Mr. De Gruyther, K. C—I do not dispute that point, which was decided in Rani Sartaj Kuari v. Ram Deoraj Kuari. (2)]

Randhir Singh made a Will giving the whole estate to Sonao Kunwar, his wife, who by virtue of that gift became the absolute owner of the estate: Musammat Surajmani v. Ribi Nath Ojha (3).

The effect of such a transfer of the estate was, that the original character of its impartibility and the special custom regulating its descent by the rule of primogeniture were destroyed. That is the effect of the Will. Probate of that Will was granted to Sonao Kunwar, and the absolute gift of the estate to her is good.

Even if the estate is impartible, the appellant succeeds to it, unless it is established that the estate is impartible and also that succession to it is governed by the rule of primogeniture. But, here, by virtue of the compromise, Sheopal Singh acquired an absolute vested interest in the estate subject to the life-interest of Sonao Kunwar.

That interest of Sheopal Singh was his self-acquired property and passed to his widow on his death under the ordinary rule of

(1) 30 A. 406; 5 A. L. J. 405; A. W. N. (1908) 165.

(2) 15 I. A. 51; 10 A. 272.

(3) 35 I. A. 17; 18 M. L. J. 7; 12 C. W. N. 231; 10 Bom. L. R. 59; 5 A. L. J. 67; 7 C. L. J. 131; 3 M. L. T. 144 (P. C.).

descent of self-acquired property of a Hindu governed by the Mitakhshara law: Periasami v. Periasami (4) and the Shivagunga's case (5). Reference was also made to Abdul Wahid Khan v. Musammat Nuran Bibi (6).

Mr. De Gruyther, K. C. and Mr. G. E. A. Ross, for the Respondents, were not called upon, but they referred to Khunni Lal v. Gobind Krishna Narain (7) as to effect of a compromise.

JUDGMENT.

SIR JOHN EDGE.—This is an appeal by Thakurain Lekhraj Kunwar (the plaintiff) from the decree of the High Court of Judicature for the North-Western Provinces of India, dated the 29th of May 1908, which set aside the decree in the plaintiff's favour of the District Judge of Jaunpur, and dismissed the plaintiff's suit and certain objections which had been filed by her.

In the suit in which the decree now under appeal was made the plaintiff, who was the widow of Sheopal Singh, claimed proprietary possession of the Riasat of Singra Mau in the District of Jaunpur, and mesne profits. The defendants to the suit, who are respondents to this appeal, are Thakur Harpal Singh, a distant cousin in the male line of Sheopal Singh, Shamsher Bahadur Singh, a younger brother of the father of Thakur Harpal Singh, Raghuraj Bahadur Singh, and Rampal Singh, minors, sons of Shamsher Bahadur Singh, and Thakurain Janki Kunwar, the widow of Rudarpal Singh, who was a brother of Sheopal Singh and had died without male issue. The last common ancester of Sheopal Singh and Thakur Harpal Singh was Dammar Singh.

The District Judge of Jaunpur gave the plaintiff Thakurain Lekhraj Kunwar a decree for possession as an Hindu widow, and decreed mesne profits. From that decree the defendants, Thakur Harpal Singh and Shamsher Bahadur Singh, on his own behalf and as guardian of his sons Raghuraj Bahadur Singh and Rampal Singh appealed to the High Court, and in that appeal the plaintiff filed objections to the decree of the District Judge, claiming that she was entitled to a decree for possession of the Singra Mau Estate as an absolute owner, and not merely for the estate of a Hindu widow. The defendant Thakurain Janki Kunwar did not defend the suit; she claimed no interest.

The question upon which this appeal depends is a short one. The Estate of Singra Mau descended in the male line from Dammar Singh as an impartible estate to one Randhir Singh, who died without issue male in January 1895. In the family to which Randhir Singh, Sheopal Singh and Thakur Harpal Singh belonged the rule of primogeniture applied so far as this Estate of Singra Mau was concerned. The pedigree of the family will be found in the judgment of the High Court; it is sufficient now to say that Sheopal Singh, who was the plaintiff's husband, was the son of Jagurnath Singh, a younger brother of Randhir Singh, and that on the death of Sheopal Singh without a son in July 1899, the defendant Thakur Harpal Singh was, subject to the life-interest of Thakurain Sonao Kunwar under a compromise, the next member of the family who was entitled to the possession of Singra Mau, if the estate was then impartible. The question as to whether the estate had ceased to be impartible or had continued to be and was impartible on the death of Sheopal Singh depends upon the construction of an agreement of compromise of the 25th of April 1896, to which Sheopal Singh and Thakurain Sonao Kunwar, who was the junior widow of Randhir Singh, were the parties.

Randhir Singh, who was then 74 years of age, and in possession of the impartible Estate of Singra Mau, made a Will on the 15th December 1894, by which he left his entire estate and every kind of moveable and immoveable property of which he was then in possession to Thakurain Sonao Kunwar, his junior wife. It is admitted that if Randhir Singh was then of testamentary capacity he had power, as the owner in possession of the impartible Estate of Singra Mau, to make that Will, and by it to put an end to the impartibility of the estate, and to exclude his nephew Sheopal Singh from the succession, which was the effect of the Will as it was executed. After the death of Randhir Singh his widow Thakurain Sonao Kunwar applied for a grant to her of Probate of the Will. Sheopal Singh and others filed objections to Probate being granted; thereupon in March

(4) 5 I. A. 61; 1 M. 312.
(5) 9 M. I. A. 539; 2 W. R. 31 (P. C.).
(6) 12 I. A. 91; 11 C. 597.
(7) 38 I. A. 87; 15 C. W. N. 545; 8 A. L. J. 552; 13 C. L. J. 575; 13 Bom. L. R. 427; 10 M. L. T. 25; 2 M. W. N. 432; 21 M. L. J. 645; 33 A. 356; 10 Ind. Cas. 477.

1896 Sheopal Singh brought a suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Jaunpur against Thakurain Sonao Kunwar and Thakurain Shankar Kunwar, the senior widow of Randhir Singh, a pro forma defendant, and Babu Soridat, also a pro forma defendant, in which Sheopal Singh alleged that when Randhir Singh was seriously ill and on the point of death, and quite incapable of entering into any contract or of understanding any transaction, the well-wishers of Sonao Kunwar and Shankar Kunwar, having colluded together, caused the Will to be executed. Sheopal Singh further alleged in that suit that, according to the old custom and nature of the property, and also on the strength of right of survivorship, the right to occupy the gaddi, and to enter into possession of the entire estate devolved upon him on the death of Randhir Singh, and he prayed for a declaration that the Will of the 15th of December 1894 was null and void as against him and the estate, and for a decree dispossessing Thakurain Sonao Kunwar and Thakurain Shankar Kunwar, and awarding absolute possession to him, Sheopal Singh, over the entire Estate of Singra Mau, together with imalaks, moveable and immoveable property appertaining to the said estate.

On the 25th of April 1896 Sheopal Singh and Thakurain Sonao Kunwar entered into an agreement of compromise which was executed by them and was in the form of a petition to the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Jaunpur in the suit which had been brought by Sheopal Singh against Sonao Kunwar, Shankar Kunwar, and Babu Soridat. That petition was presented to the Court of the Subordinate Judge, and on the 27th of April 1896, the Subordinate Judge made a decree in the suit in accordance with the petition giving possession of the estate to Sonao Kunwar for her life subject to the terms of the compromise.

The petition of compromise was as follows:—

"1. The name of Musammat Thakurain Sonao Kunwar will continue to be recorded in the Revenue papers in the same way in which it stands recorded, and she will remain in possession during her life-time of all the moveable and immoveable properties, of which Rai Randhir Singh was in possession, exercising the powers of gaddi nashin (occupation of gaddi) without the power to transfer or change the estate in any way.

"2. I, Thakur Sheopal Singh, will take the sum of Rs. 12,000 a year at the rate of Rs. 1,000 per month from Musammat Thakurain Sonao Kunwar for all my expenses, and I, Musammat Thakurain Sonao Kunwar, will pay the same. I, Thakur Sheopal Singh, will not interfere with the estate in any way in the life-time of Musammat Sonao Kunwar. After the death of Musammat Thakurain Sonao Kunwar, I, Thakur Sheopal Singh, or any representative of mine who may be living at the time, will be the absolute owner of all the moveable and immoveable properties possessed by Rai Randhir Singh, and will occupy the gaddi. In case of non-payment of the fixed annual allowance, I, Thakur Sheopal Singh, will have power to recover the same by instituting a suit and attaching the profits and moveable property belonging to Thakurain Sonao Kunwar.

"3. If I, Thakur Sheopal Singh, have to go to any member of the brotherhood, or any rais on the occasion of any ceremony or otherwise, I will have authority to take as much equipage belonging to the estate as I require, and when I go out for recreations, &c., I will take any conveyance I like for my use. Thakurain Sonao Kunwar will have no power to forbid me.

"4. If, on any particular occasion, any indispensable necessity arise in the estate, and it be necessary to take a loan, we Thakur Sheopal Singh and Musammat Thakurain Sonao Kunwar, will, in concurrence with each other, borrow five or ten thousand rupees, and re-pay the same gradually from the profits of the estate.

"5. I, Thakurain Sonao Kunwar, also accept all the aforesaid conditions. It is, therefore, prayed that the case may be struck off as a contested one on the basis of the compromise, and the costs incurred by the parties be charged against themselves. This compromise may be embodied in the decree. Musammat Thakurain Shankar Kunwar and Sridat, pro forma defendants, have been exempted."

Sheopal Singh died on the 27th of July 1899 without issue male, and without having made any disposition by Will or otherwise of his interest in the Singra Mau Estate. Thakurain Sonao Kunwar, who had been in possession of the estate under the compromise of the 25th April 1896, died on the 20th of June 1904, and thereupon Thakurain Lekhraj Kunwar and Thakur Harpal Singh respectively claimed possession of the estate. On the 6th of July 1904 the Collector of Jaunpur ordered mutation of names in favour of Thakur Harpal Singh; from that order Thakurain Lekhraj Kunwar appealed to the Commissioner of Benares, who on the 2nd of September 1904 dismissed the appeal.

The District Judge of Jaunpur in his judgment in this suit held that the estate had descended to Thakurain Sonao Kunwar under the Will of Randhir Singh by an entirely new title, and had thereby lost its character of impartibility, and was no longer subject to the special custom of descent. The District Judge further held that the estate which Sheopal Singh would have taken had he survived Thakurain Sonao Kunwar, would be self-acquired by Sheopal Singh as arising out of the contract of compromise with Thakurain Sonao Kunwar. As the learned Judges in the High Court rightly observed, the District Judge went behind the compromise and held that the Will was a valid Will binding on Sheopal Singh, and determined what in his opinion were the rights of the parties before the compromise, the very thing the avoidance of which led to the compromise. The learned Judges in the appeal in the High Court held that the right of the parties to this suit depended upon the construction of the compromise, but not upon the Will of Randhir Singh. With that conclusion their Lordships in this appeal agree. They also held that:—

"Upon the language of the compromise it is not possible to hold that the character of the estate, as it had been handed down from father to son for generations was changed. As an impartible Estate Sheopal Singh laid claim to it, and the compromise provided that as an impartible estate it should devolve upon him."

And they accordingly dismissed the suit.

Their Lordships consider that the High Court put the only possible construction upon the agreement of compromise. Sheopal Singh never admitted the validity of the Will as against him, and never admitted that Thakurain Sonao Kunwar had obtained any title under the Will. It is obvious from the terms of the compromise that Sheopal Singh consistently maintained that the Will was invalid, and consequently that Thakurain Sonao Kunwar had taken no title under it, and that the estate as an impartible estate had vested in him on the death of Randhir Singh. By the compromise, Sheopal Singh, reserving to himself an income of Rs. 12,000 a year out of the estate, gave to Thakurain Sonao Kunwar a bare interest for her life in his impartible estate. Sheopal Singh in the agreement of compromise carefully provided that on the death of Thakurain Sonao Kunwar, he or his successor should be the absolute owner of the estate and should occupy the gaddi; that on the occasion of any ceremony, or when he should go out for recreation, he should have the right to take as much equipage and any conveyance belonging to the estate for his use as he should require, and that Thakurain Sonao Kunwar should have no power to forbid him; and that should it be indispensably necessary to raise any money on the estate by way of loan he and Thakurain Sonao Kunwar should in concurrence with each other borrow Rs. 5,000 or Rs. 10,000 and re-pay the same gradually from the profits of the estate. Under the compromise Thakurain Sonao Kunwar had no power to encumber the estate for any purpose except in conjunction with Sheoraj Singh. The terms to which their Lordships have referred are consistent only with the construction placed upon the compromise by the High Court, and there are no terms in the compromise which suggest any other construction. To these terms Thakurain Sonao Kunwar submitted. It may be mentioned that the Subordinate Judge of Jaunpur, before making his decree of the 27th of April 1896, took the precaution of ascertaining that Thakurain Sonao Kunwar understood the terms of the compromise. The High Court rightly dismissed the suit of Thakurain Lekhraj Kunwar.

The fact that after the compromise the Will of Randhir Singh was admitted to Probate did not affect the rights of Sheoraj Singh.

Their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that the judgment and decree appealed against should be affirmed and the appeal dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellant: Messrs. T.C. Summershays and Son.

Solicitors for the Respondents: Messrs. Barow, Roggers and Nevill.

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 174.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION No. 74 OF 1911.

August 25, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Crouch, A. J. C.

EMPEROR—COMPLAINANT

versus

ANDAL valad KHAMISO—ACCUSED.

Pardon, tender of—Approver—Pardon granted by District Magistrate before approver placed on trial—Forfeiture of pardon—Examination in Sessions Court not necessary—Pardon does not affect liability before perjury committed subsequently—Approver's statement on oath signed by him—Statement as witness—Perjury—Sanction to prosecute—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 4 (h), 164, 337 (1), (2) and (4), 339 (2)—"Inquiring into the offence"—"Inquiry"—Proceedings under section 164—Judicial proceedings—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 193.

The words "inquiring into the offence" in section 337 (1) of the Criminal Procedure Code qualify the words "Magistrate of the First Class" and not the words "District Magistrate or Presidency Magistrate."

The "inquiry" referred to in section 337 (1) is not necessarily limited to an inquiry under Chapter XVIII of the Code.

A District Magistrate can legally grant a pardon although he does not himself inquire into the offence.

Pardon may legally be tendered to a person who has not been sent up for trial by the Police or to an accused before he is placed before the Committing Magistrate.

The provisions of section 337 (2) are complied with by the examination of the approver by the Committing Magistrate. The prosecution are not bound to call him in the Sessions Court if they think him an untruthful witness. It is not necessary that the approver should be examined in the Sessions Court before he can be said to have committed breach of the condition on which pardon was granted.

Queen v. Rana Sami, 24 M. 321, Aligiriswami v. Emperor, 33 M. 514; 5 Ind. Cas. 831; 7 M. L. T. 121; (1910) M. W. N. 5, followed.

A pardon cannot affect a liability to be tried for perjury committed after the tender of the pardon.

Section 337 (4) only refers to those cases in which the disclosure made by the approver shows that only a minor offence triable by a Magistrate has been committed.

A District Magistrate is competent to record the deposition of the approver on oath although he may have no jurisdiction to try the offence.

The deposition on an oath made by an approver before a District Magistrate, although signed by the approver, is a statement given by him as a witness.

The statement of an approver who has forfeited his pardon may be used as the basis of a charge of perjury against him. Section 339 (2) contains no express limitation of the use of the statement to a trial for the original offence.

Empress v. Asghar Ali, 2 A. 260, Reg. v. Hanmanta, 1 B. 610; Queen v. Alagu, 16 M. 421; Queen-Empress v. Bharma, 11 B. 702, distinguished.

Queen v. Nanni, 22 A. 115; Suppa Tewan v. Emperor, 29 M. 89; 3 Cr. L. J. 370, referred to.

The proceeding in which the statement of a witness is recorded under section 164 is an investigation directed by law preliminary to the trial and is, therefore, a stage of a judicial proceeding under explanation 2 to section 193 of the Penal Code.

An approver can be prosecuted for perjury for making contradictory statements before the District Magistrate at time of tender of pardon and before the Committing Magistrate.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

Mr. Wadhumal Udharam, for the Accused.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application under section 339 (3) for sanction for the prosecution of the opponent Andal for giving false evidence in respect of contradictory statements made on the 29th July to the District Magistrate, Sukkur, and on the 22nd September before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Rohri.

The opponent and two other persons were suspected of murder. On the 29th July, the investigating Police placed the opponent before the District Magistrate who tendered him a pardon on the conditions stated in section 337, Criminal Procedure Code. The opponent accepted a tender and was examined by the District Magistrate under section 164, Criminal Procedure Code. He made a statement implicating himself and the others in the murder. The two others were then placed before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate on a charge of murder. The opponent was examined as a witness in the inquiry before the Committing Magistrate and denied nearly every statement of fact that he had made to the District Magistrate.

The statements are so irreconcilable that on the merits there can be no defence to the application.

Various legal defences have been raised; but before discussing them I shall proceed to consider a point that has not been raised.

It has not been suggested that the pardon was illegally tendered by the District Magistrate. Prinsep in his commentary on the Code of Criminal Procedure suggests that no pardon can be tendered unless the inquiry before commitment under Chapter XVIII has begun and then only by the Magistrate holding such inquiry. He appears to limit the scope of the section to a procedure by which a person over whom the Magistrate is exercising jurisdiction as an accused person and who is, therefore, incapacitated by section 342 (4) from giving evidence—can be converted into a witness. There is no authority for so limiting the section and I do not think the words of the section justify the limitation. The section refers to the "offence under inquiry," but the word inquiry is not necessarily limited to an inquiry under Chapter XVIII, see the definition of the word in section 4 (h) of the Code and its use in section 159 where a Magistrate may make an inquiry for the purpose of assisting the Police in the discovery and arrest of the offender (section 157). The power to tender pardon is given to "the District Magistrate or Presidency Magistrate, any Magistrate of the First Class inquiring into the offence or with the sanction of the District Magistrate any other Magistrate." The words "inquiring into the offence" qualify the words "Magistrate of the First Class," but they do not qualify the words 'The District Magistrate or Presidency Magistrate.' For in the case of a sanction given by the District Magistrate to any other Magistrate it would be the latter Magistrate who would be making the inquiry and not the District Magistrate. If, therefore, the District Magistrate can sanction the grant of the pardon although he is not making the inquiry himself—a fortiori he can himself grant a pardon in such a case.

Further, the expression "any person supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned in or privy to the offence under inquiry" is a very wide one and includes others besides an accused who has been sent up for trial by the Police.

The pardon was, therefore, legally tendered and that being so, the various legal defences raised are easily disposed of.

It is first suggested that the statement made by opponent to the District Magistrate was a confession and not a statement. It was, no doubt, signed by the opponent and the District Magistrate in his reasons for tendering the pardon uses the word 'confession.' But there is no doubt that the statement is that of a witness and not the confession of an accused. Section 164 provides for the recording both of statements of persons proposed to be called as witnesses and of persons whom it is proposed to charge with an offence. The former are called statements and are recorded on oath, and the latter are called confessions and not recorded on oath but in the manner presented by section 364. The pardon was tendered to the opponent with a view to obtaining his evidence and he was for that reason examined on oath. The District Magistrate used the word confession in no technical sense and the fact that the opponent signed the statement does not alter its character. I have no doubt that the statement recorded is the deposition of opponent given as a witness.

It is then said that under section 337 (4) the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the offence and, therefore, could not record the deposition. Pardon can only be tendered in cases triable exclusively by the High Court or Court of Session and section 337 (4) only refers to those cases in which the disclosure made by the approver shows that only a minor offence triable by a Magistrate has been committed. In such cases this offence should not be tried by the Magistrate tendering the pardon. This is not the case here; moreover, the fact that the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the offence does not affect his competency to record the deposition; see the explanation to section 164.

Then it is said that the opponent has not committed a breach of the condition on which he was pardoned as he was not examined in the Sessions Court. But I concur in the rulings in Queen v. Rana Sami (1) and Aligiriswami v. Emperor (2) that the provisions of section 337 (2) have been complied with when the approver has been examined by the Committing Magistrate and that the prosecution are not bound to call him in the Sessions Court if they think him an untruthful witness. Further, the pardon only refers to the offence committed before the tender of pardon. It cannot possibly affect a liability to be tried for perjury committed after the tender of the pardon.

It is next urged that as section 339 (2) expressly provides that the statement of an

(1) 24 M. 321.
(2) 33 M. 514; 5 Ind. Cas. 831; 7 M. L. T. 121; (1910) M. W. N. 5.

approver who has forfeited his pardon may be used in evidence against him when tried for the offence in respect of which the pardon was tendered—it impliedly forbids its use when tried for any other offence. But there is no express limitation in section 339 (2) to a trial for the original offence. No doubt that was the offence the Legislature had in its mind, for the intention was to make any admission in such statement evidence against the accused in spite of section 24, Indian Evidence Act. But there is no implication that the statement may not be used in a trial for another offence and clause (3) of the section makes it very clear that the statement may be used as the basis of a charge of perjury.

Reference has been made to the case of Empress v. Asghar Ali (3), but in that case and in the Bombay case Reg. v. Hanmanta (4) which it followed, there had been an illegal tender of pardon to a person who was an accused before the Magistrate and who was, therefore, incapacitated from giving evidence by section 342 (4). These cases have, therefore, no application. The case of Queen-Empress v. Bharma (5) was also cited but this case was prior to the enactment of the explanation to section 164, Criminal Procedure Code, and was decided on the ground that the Magistrate had not jurisdiction to record the statement. The case has been distinguished on this ground and explained in the cases of Queen v. Alagu (6) and Queen v. Nanni (7). The proceeding in which the statement of a witness is recorded under section 164 is an investigation directed by law preliminary to the trial and comes within explanation 2 to section 193, Indian Penal Code, and is, therefore, a stage of a judicial proceeding. I concur with the decision of the Madras High Court on this point in Suppa Tevan v. Emperor (8).

I would, therefore, sanction the prosecution of the opponent for an offence, under section 193, Indian Penal Code, of giving false evidence in a stage of a judicial proceeding, either on the 29th July 1910 before the District Magistrate, Sukkur, or on the 22nd September 1910, before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Rohri, in that he made the following two inconsistent statements:—

Statement before the District Magistrate, Sukkur, on 29th July 1910.	Statement before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate on 22nd September 1910.
I told Allahdino to then detain the bania so that I might give him the grain. Allahdino went after the bania, and I also followed him. Allahdino went running and caught the bania, but the bania abused him on his wife and sister and both quarrelled. Being provoked by abuse, he struck the bania with the hatchet he had in his hand. I also just arrived there. The bania was at that time struggling and I also struck him with a lathi. When we had ceased striking, my brother Raban also came afterwards, on hearing noise. Then I and Allahdino threw the corpse in the water of the dhand that was adjoining.	I did not tell Allahdino to bring back the bania so that I might settle up. I and Allahdino did not go after him. Allahdino did not stop him. I did not hear Dipo abusing Allahdino. I did not see Allahdino strike him with a hatchet, nor did I strike him with a hatchet. Neither did we kill him. Nor did Raban come there. I and Allahdino did not remove the body to the pond.

Sanction accorded.

(3) 2 A. 260.
(4) 1 B. 610.
(5) 11 B. 702.
(6) 16 M. 421.
(7) 22 A. 115.
(8) 29 M. 89; 3 Cr. L. J. 370.

[S. C. 10 M. L. T. 563; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 3].

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL MISCELLANEOUS PETITION No. 341 OF 1911.

November 29, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Spencer.

THE ASSISTANT SESSIONS JUDGE OF NORTH ARCOT—PETITIONER

versus

RAMAMMAL AND OTHERS—ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 177 195 and 531—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), . 468—

ASSISTANT SESSIONS JUDGE OF NORTH ARCOT v. RAMAMMAL.

Sanction—Commitment by wrong Court—Commitment to wrong Court—Using a document as genuine—Compulsory production in Court.

As regards the necessity for sanction, an offence under section 463, Indian Penal Code, mentioned in section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, includes all cases of forgery and hence an offence under section 468, Indian Penal Code, requires as a preliminary to its trial the sanction of the Court before which it was committed.

Teni Shah v. Bolahi Shah, 14 C. W. N. 479; 5 Ind. Cas. 879, Queen-Empress v. Tulja, 12 B. 36, followed.

The production of a document which a person is summoned by a Court to produce does not amount to using the document as genuine. The expression 'using a document' is apparently used in the sense of its being put forward in some way for one of the purposes mentioned in section 463, Indian Penal Code.

Though the commitment of an accused by a wrong Court may only be an irregularity. A commitment to a wrong Court is an illegality and ought to be quashed.

Ledgard v. Bull, 9 A. 191; 13 I. A. 134; Queen-Empress v. Ram Dei, 18 A. 350; Queen-Empress v. Thaku, 8 B. 312, referred to.

Application praying that in the circumstances stated in the letter of reference, dated the 4th October 1911, and the order of reference made by the Assistant Sessions Judge of North Arcot, dated the 3rd October 1911, in the Sessions Case No. 55 of 1911, the High Court will be pleased to quash the order of the Second Class Magistrate of Tirupattur, dated the 5th September 1911, in Preliminary, Register Case No. 4 of 1911, committing the accused therein to take their trial at the Sessions Court of North Arcot.

Mr. T. Narasimha Iyengar, for the Accused.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

ORDER.—This is a reference made by the Assistant Sessions Judge of North Arcot asking this Court to quash the commitment of the accused in Sessions Case No. 55 of 1911 to the Court of North Arcot. The order of commitment was made by the Second Class Magistrate of Tirupattur. There are five accused in the case. The first accused Ramammal is the widow of one Ramakrishnier whose mother is the complainant. The second and third accused are respectively the father and brother of the first accused. The fourth accused is also a relation of accused Nos. 1 to 3. The first accused executed on the 20th July 1905, a mortgage-deed for Rs. 3,000 in favour of the third and fourth accused and the consideration for this deed is stated in it to be the amount due for principal and interest on a promissory-note dated the 10th August 1902 alleged to have been executed by the first accused's deceased husband in favour of the 4th accused for Rs. 2,400. The deed further recites that the executant, the first accused, received Rs. 1,500 out of the Rs. 3,000 from the third accused for payment to the fourth accused towards the amount due on the promissory-note. In a suit for maintenance instituted by the complainant against the first accused in the District Munsif's Court of Tirupattur No. 1062 of 1909, the first accused pleaded, apparently with reference to the extent of the property in her hands liable for complainant's maintenance, that she owed a debt of Rs. 3,000 to the 3rd and 4th accused on the mortgage mentioned above. She summoned the 4th accused to produce the mortgage-deed and the promissory-note and in obedience to the summons they were produced by him.

The case for the prosecution is that the promissory-note of the 10th August 1902, is a forged document and that no debt was due by the first accused's husband to the 4th accused. The charges against the 1st accused are abetment of forgery of a valuable security (i.e., the promissory-note) and fraudulently using the same under sections 468 and 109, Indian Penal Code, and section 471, Indian Penal Code. The 2nd, 3rd and 5th accused are charged with abetment of the forgery of the promissory-note, the 2nd accused was the writer and the 5th accused the attestor of the promissory-note. And the charges against the 4th accused are forgery of the promissory-note and fraudulently using the same as genuine.

The learned Assistant Sessions Judge is of opinion that the commitment of all the accused is illegal. With regard to the 1st accused, the objection to the commitment according to him is that the prosecution was not maintainable without the sanction of the District Munsif's Court of Tirupattur as the offences of abetment of forgery and using the forged document as genuine were committed by a party to Original Suit No. 1062 of 1909, in Court in respect of a document produced in that suit. The Assistant Sessions Judge is obviously right in holding that an offence under section 463, Indian Penal Code, mentioned in clause (C) of section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, covers an offence under section 468, Indian Penal Code, the object of mentioning section 463, in section 195 (C), Criminal Procedure Code, being to include all cases of forgery whatever the nature of the fraudulent intention may be. Tani Shah v. Bolahi Shah (1) and Queen-Empress v. Tulja (2).

The commitment of the 4th accused for forgery of the promissory-note and fraudulently using the same as genuine has next to be considered. With respect to the latter Court, it is contended that the production of the document in obedience to an order of the District Munsif's Court does not amount to using it as genuine. This contention is sound. The 4th accused was bound to produce the promissory-note and would have been punishable under section 175, Indian Penal Code, if he had failed to do so. An involuntary production of a document in Court cannot be said to amount to any user of it. It was contended for the prosecution before the Assistant Sessions Judge that apart from its production in the District Munsif's Court, the promissory-note was used for giving a colour of validity to the mortgage-deed, but we doubt whether this argument can be upheld. Assuming that the promissory-note was forged before the mortgage-deed was brought into existence, there was nothing done with the promissory-note at the time of the execution of the mortgage-deed, and it was not used in any way. If both the documents were got up at the same time then they were part of the same transaction and the promissory-note could not have been said to be used in any manner for the purpose of executing the mortgage document. The expression, "using a document" is apparently used in the sense of its being put forward in some way for one of the purposes mentioned in section 463, Indian Penal Code.

It is, however, not necessary to decide about the validity to the objection to the maintainability of the charge of user before the document was produced in Court as the commitment on this charge must be quashed on another ground which applies equally to the charge of forgery as against the 4th accused as well as against the accused Nos. 2, 3 and 5. That ground is that the promissory-note and the mortgage-bond were both executed in the village of Varatnapalli within the jurisdiction of the Sessions Court of the Salem Division. The Assistant Sessions Judge held that the commitment would be illegal as the Magistrate having local jurisdiction over an offence committed at Varatnapalli was the 2nd Class Magistrate of Kristnagiri in the Salem District in so holding. His attention was apparently not drawn to section 531, Criminal Procedure Code, which lays down that no order of any Criminal Court shall be set aside merely on the ground that the inquiry in the course of which it was passed took place in a wrong sub-division or local area, unless it appears that such error has in fact occasioned a failure of justice. An order of commitment is an order within the meaning of this section. See Queen-Empress v. Thaku (3); Queen-Empress v. James Ingle (4) and Queen-Empress v. Abbi Reddi (5). But it must be held that the commitment to the Sessions Court of North Arcot was illegal. Under section 177, Criminal Procedure Code, "every offence shall ordinarily be inquired into and tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it was committed." The offence was, therefore, triable by the Sessions Court of Salem and not by the Sessions Court of North Arcot. According to section 213, Criminal Procedure Code, "a Magistrate may make an order committing the accused for trial by the High Court or the Court of Session as the case may be.' The expression 'the Court of Session' here can only mean the Court of Session having jurisdiction to try the case under section 177, Criminal Procedure Code. Section 63 of Act X of 1872, provided that 'Magistrates shall ordinarily commit to the Court of Session for the Sessions Division in which the District to which they are appointed is situated.' But the present Criminal Procedure Code contains no similar provision. The Bombay High Court in Queen-Empress v. Thaku (3) held that the commitment should be to the Court empowered to try the case under section 177, Criminal Procedure Code. The learned Judges in that case having to deal with a commitment made to a Court not having such jurisdiction did not quash the commitment but directed the transfer of the case to the Court having jurisdiction. But the Privy Council has pointed out in Ledgard v. Bull (6),

(1) 14 C. W. N. 479; 5 Ind. Cas. 879.
(2) 12 B. 36.
(3) 8 B. 312.
(4) 16 B. 200.
(5) 17 M. 402.
(6) 9 A. 191; 13 I. A. 134.

that a transfer from a Court having no jurisdiction would not render the proceeding legal. The Allahabad High Court in Queen-Empress v. Ram Dei (7) followed a similar course. Ledgard v. Bull (6) was apparently not brought to its notice. We do not, therefore, think that we would be justified in upholding the commitment and directing the transfer of the case to the Sessions Court of Salem. We must hold that the commitment is illegal, and set aside the order of the Sub-Magistrate of Tirupattur. As we are informed that an appeal against the judgment of the District Munsif's Court of Tirupattur in Original Suit No. 1062 of 1909 is still pending we do not consider it necessary to pass any further order in the case at present.

(7) 18 A. 350.

[s. c. 11 M. L. T. 23; (1912) M. W. N. 42.]

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 588 OF 1911.

CASE REFERRED No. 120 OF 1911.

December 14, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ayling.

In re SUBBIAH SERVAI AND OTHERS—ACCUSED.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 379—Theft—Irrigation tank—Removal of fish—Facts of each case to be looked into.

Whether the removal of fish from an irrigation tank amounts to theft depends upon the facts of each case. When the water is so low that the fish could not escape, the removal may be theft.

Subba Reddi v. Munsoor Ali Sahib, 24 M. 81, Queen-Empress v. Shaik Adam valad Shaik Farid, 10 B. 193, Maya Ram Surma v. Nichala Kantani, 15 C. 402, referred to.

Case referred for the orders of the High Court under section 438 of the Criminal Procedure Code by the Additional District Magistrate of Madura, in his letter, dated the 16th September 1911, R. O. C. No. 744/Mag. of 1911.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

ORDER.—The accused were convicted of theft in removing fish from a Government irrigation tank. They pleaded guilty but the District Magistrate, relying on the ruling in the High Court Proceedings 663, dated 10th April 1880, has referred the case on the ground that the capture of fish in an ordinary irrigation tank does not amount to theft.

The ruling quoted, which has been followed in a later case Subba Reddi v. Munsoor Ali Sahib (1), is authority for the general principle above referred to but there is a reason to doubt whether that principle is to be applied to all cases and under all circumstances or was intended to be so applied. A somewhat different view has been taken by both the Bombay and Calcutta High Courts, vide Queen-Empress v. Shaik Adam valad Shaik Fraid (2) and Mayaram Surma v. Nichala Kantani (3). In the former case the tank in question was an enclosed Municipal tank; but the ratio decidendi was that the fish being unable to escape from the tank are practically in the power and dominion of the owner so as to be capable of being the subject of theft. It has been pointed out that even in an open irrigation tank after the water has fallen to such an extent that both the supply and distribution channels are dry the freedom of the fish is equally circumscribed and the learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court in the ruling above quoted appear to clearly recognise that under such circumstances a conviction for theft might be sustainable. It was presumably in view of those considerations that Miller, J., in the latest Madras case to which I had been referred (Criminal Revision Petition No. 580 of 1909), held that each case must be decided on the particular facts thereof—in other words, that the general principle laid down in Subba Reddi v. Munsoor Ali Sahib (1) and the earlier case was not universally applicable. He accordingly refused to interfere with a conviction based on very similar facts to those in the present case.

In the view I cannot but concur though I fully realise the desirability of a more positive exposition of the law, if it were possible, and the drawbacks inevitably attendant on a state of affairs in which an act which is lawful to-day may become a criminal offence to-morrow and vice versa.

In the present case the judgment gives no indication of the state of the tank but the District Magistrate says that the Sub-Magistrate's statement that the water was so low that the fish could not escape is probably correct. In view of this and of the fact that the accused pleaded guilty and have

(1) 24 M. 81.
(2) 10 B. 193.
(3) 15 C. 402.

only been awarded small fines, I do not feel it necessary to call for further evidence or to interfere in any way with the conviction and sentence.

(s. c. 16 C. W. N. 69.)

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 314 OF 1911.

July 11, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Caspersz and Mr. Justice Sharfuddin.

KADER SUNDAR AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 400—Association for habitual pursuit of dacoity—General criminality of tribe not to be imputed to individual members—Section to be strictly construed—Gist of offence—What must be established to convict accused—Approver's testimony—Corroboration—Acquittal—No adverse inference against accused after acquittal—Past misconduct of accused, when may be considered.

The general criminality of a tribe or caste cannot be imputed to individual members operating in gangs where the prosecution is under section 400, Indian Penal Code.

The Public Prosecutor v. Bonigiri Pottigadu, 32 M. 179 at p. 184; 5 M. L. T. 100; 9 Cr. L. J. 567; 5 Ind. Cas. 307, referred to.

The offence under section 400, Indian Penal Code, is one of a very special character and entirely the creature of statute. The section must, therefore, be strictly construed.

Judgment of Phear, J., in Queen v. Mooktaram Sirdar, 23 W. R. Cr. 18, relied upon.

Association for the habitual pursuit of dacoity is the gist of the offence under section 400, Indian Penal Code.

Although the evidence need not show the same degree of particularity as to the commission of each dacoity as is required to support a substantive charge of that crime, it must be established, for the purpose of conviction, that the accused belong to a gang whose business is the habitual commission of dacoity. The special conspiracy must be proved.

Empress v. Kure, A. W. N. (1886) 65, and King-Emperor v. Tirumal Reddi, 24 M. 523 at p. 546, referred to.

Corroboration of the testimony of an approver must connect the accused with the offence, that is, association of a gang of persons for the business of habitually committing dacoity.

No adverse inference can be drawn against the accused after their acquittal. Therefore, if some of the persons accused under section 400, Indian Penal Code, had been tried on a charge of dacoity but acquitted, that fact cannot be relied on by the prosecution to prove that they were habitual dacoits.

Emperor v. Noni Gopal Gupta, 15 C. W. N. 593; 38 C. 559; 10 Ind. Cas. 582; 12 Cr. L. J. 286, and Rex v. Plummer, (1902) 2 K. B. 339; 71 L.J.K.B. 805; 86 L. T. 836; 51 W. R. 137; 66 J. P. 647; 20 Cox. C.C. 269, followed.

If the association for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity be made out, the past history of the accused, that they had been convicted of dacoity or had been bound down to be of good behaviour would be significant.

Bonai v. Emperor, 15 C. W. N. 461; 9 Ind. Cas. 555; 38 C. 408; 12 Cr. L. J. 97, relied upon.

Appeal against the conviction and sentence under section 400, Indian Penal Code, passed on February 15th, 1911, by the Additional Sessions Judge of Bogra, agreeing with the opinion of the assessors.

Babu Monmatha Nath Mukherjee, for the Appellants.

Mr. Sultan Ahmed with Moulvi Khorshaid Hossien, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The Sessions Judge concurring with the four assessors, has convicted the 29 appellants for belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity and he has sentenced appellants Nos. 2 and 27 to transportation for life and the other appellants to rigorous imprisonment for seven or five years. The trial of the case occupied two months in the Court of Session, but the substantial question for determination is a simple one, namely, whether the approver, Bayan Sandar, has been adequately corroborated in respect of each of the appellants. Six appellants Nos. 8, 10, 14, 15, 17, 26 may be excluded at the outset, because the learned Deputy Legal Remembrancer intimated during the hearing, that he was unable to support their convictions. There remain 23 appellants including two (Nos. 2 and 18) who made confessions in the Magistrate's Court.

The case for the Crown is that the Sandars are a semi-criminal tribe, dwelling in boats, wandering and predatory by habit and instinct, that the appellants belonged to a gang of Sandars operating during the years 1891—1909, in the Districts of Bogra, Pubna, Rungpur, Mymensingh and Rajshahye, and that the numerous dacoities that took place were the work of this gang which, however, did not invariably consist of the same persons but committed dacoities in detachments.

Bayan Sandar, the approver, was convicted in the Gadakhali Dacoity case in February 1909. Subsequently, on the 11th April 1909, he made a detailed confession to a Magistrate of the crimes he had been guilty of, as a member of the gang, and this was

KADER SUNDAR v. EMPEROR.

"verified" by another Magistrate. On this basis, the 29 appellants were sent up for trial with the result we have mentioned.

The Sessions Judge, after reciting the history of the initiation of the case and stating the general effect of the evidence of Bayan, proceeds to give, in tabular form a list of the dacoities and thefts in which Bayan implicated himself and the appellants who are his relations.

The tabular form gives a list of eighteen criminal occurrences, the date of each such occurrence, the names of the persons implicated by the confession of Bayan and by his evidence in Court, and the documents (first informations, etc.) and the witnesses proving the occurrence. But the numerous witnesses mentioning the appellants merely say that they are Sandars that they live in boats, and that the boats congregate in bahars that is in flotillas, at various places in the net work of rivers which constitute a peculiar feature of that part of the country. The witnesses identify the appellants in one sense, but they do not connect them or any of them with the tabulated occurrences Identification of this kind does not carry the case for the Crown very far in a prosecution under section 400, Indian Penal Code, though no doubt such evidence and the other evidence in this case might be valuable if the proceedings had been for bad livelihood or with reference to the Criminal Tribes Act (now Act III of 1911). The general criminality of a tribe or caste cannot be imputed to individual members operating in gangs where the prosecution is under section 400, Indian Penal Code. See The Public Prosecutor v. Bonigiri Pottigadu (1). Similarly, the documents specified do not prove that particular persons were named as having been concerned in any occurrence to which they relate. In seven occurrences only, Sandars were suspected as having committed the offence reported. None were convicted. The utmost that can be said is that Sandars were seen within a distance of three miles from the scenes of the occurrences at or about the time in question. We offer these observations in this place because they have an important bearing in the matter of corroboration of the testimony of the approver, and it is as well to state, at once, the difficulty we feel in dealing with the case.

(1) 32 M. 179; 5 M. L. T. 100; 9 Cr. L. J. 567; 5 Ind. Cas. 307.

The Sessions Judge, after discussing some discrepancies in the evidence of Bayan, next proceeds to consider each occurrence from the year 1892 to 1908 when the Gadakhali dacoity in which Bayan was caught red-handed, was perpetrated. The Sessions Judge explains the nature of the corroboration, which, in his opinion, was sufficient, but we do not find anywhere that he directed his attention to what is legally adequate corroboration, that is, evidence connecting each of the appellants with each or some of the occurrences. We may mention that the Magistrate who verified Bayan's confession was not examined as a witness, but the inferior evidence of the verification witnesses was recorded and relied on. Even so, the verification does not touch the appellants.

The Sessions Judge then mentions certain other dacoities and thefts of which the Fulchari dacoity may be taken as a specimen. A Railway Booking Clerk (P. W. No. 65) says that some persons took 7 or 8 tickets, possibly, bearing consecutive numbers, at the Bogra Station for Fulchari on the day in question. We are unable to hold that this fact proves that twelve of the appellants were the dacoits—in fact, railway tickets must be issued in a consecutive series, and the clerk cannot know who the passengers are—whether dacoits or others. Moreover, Bayan said, in his confession that only eight persons committed the Fulchari dacoity. The finding of the Sessions Judge is in general terms that,—"There appears reason to think Sandars committed those dacoities and thefts." He also says that a large number of Sandars were seen staying with their boats at the different centres of their association; that thefts and dacoities increased in the quarter where they used to stay; that the Sandars were kept under Police surveillance, and their boats used to be regularly searched. It is a fact of importance that no stolen property was ever recovered in any of these searches.

The Sessions Judge concludes his judgment with a consideration of the case of each of the appellants, but his analysis is not conclusive and does not go beyond his previous estimate of the evidence.

In dealing with the judgment of the Sessions Judge we have inevitably expressed the views we are constrained to adopt on the essential aspects of the case. The learned Deputy Legal Remembrancer and the learned Vakil for the appellants have afforded us the greatest assistance in examining the bulky record in which, it is admitted, much irrelevant matter is contained. The arguments of the learned Deputy Legal Remembrancer may now be considered in their order, and we proceed to do so.

KADER SUNDAR v. EMPEROR.

It is argued for the Crown (1) that evidence proving an offence under section 400, Indian Penal Code, need not be of the same quality as in the case of ordinary offences; (2) that in seven dacoities, during the shorter period 1899 –1909, Sandars were referred to as being concerned in the same, and that their presence near the scenes of the occurrences affords sufficient corroboration of the story of Bayan; (3) that four of the appellants (Nos. 7, 9, 21, 25) were sent up but acquitted in the Fulchari dacoity (P. W. Nos. 65, 75, 204); (4) that the previous convictions of some of the appellants may be taken into consideration; (5) that the confessions of appellants Nos. 2 and 18 are sufficient to complete the evidence against them.

(1) Association is the gist of the offence punishable under section 400 of the Penal Code, that is, association for the habitual pursuit of dacoity. The subject is fully discussed by Dr. Gour in his second volume on the Penal Law of India, and he has collected all the cases under the section (pp. 1587—1590). The section is a highly penal one, and, as was said by Phear, J., in The Queen v. Mooktaram Sirdar (2), the offence is 'one of a very special character and entirely the creature of statute." The section must, therefore, be strictly construed. Although the evidence need not show the same degree of particularity as to the commission of each dacoity as is required to support a substantive charge of that crime [Empress v. Kure (3)] it must be established, for the purpose of conviction, that the accused belong to a gang whose business is the habitual commission of dacoity. The special conspiracy must be proved—see King-Emperor v. Tirumal Reddi (5). A good illustration of the kind of evidence to be adduced in such a case as this is to be gathered from the judgment of Munro, J., in The Public Prosecutor v. Bonigiri Pottigadu (1), and we think that, in the case before us, the evidence under the seven heads (at p. 181 of the report is almost entirely absent. For instance, it has not been shown that the appellants move about in batches, have been arrested in batches, and are absent from home in batches, or that the appellants have been concerned in a large number of dacoities.

(2) It follows from the principles we have just mentioned, that the implication of Sandars generally in the number of even seven dacoities spread over the shorter period of ten years. is not sufficient proof against the present appellants. The tribe or caste of Sandars contains thousands of human beings, and even one bahar or flotilla of fifty boats may include two hundred persons. The approver Bayan has been corroborated to some extent as to the facts of the dacoities, but that corroboration has no tendency to prove that the appellants were with him on each or some of the occasions. Corroboration of the testimony of an approver must connect the accused with the offence—here, the association of a gang of persons for the business of habitually committing dacoity. In this essential respect, the evidence does not sufficiently support the story of the approver, and we may add that Bayan's deposition, which has been placed before us, is not free from important contradictions which cast doubts on his veracity. We have already noticed the vital fact that no stolen property was found in the possession of any of the appellants; if stolen or suspicious property had been discovered, that would have been adequate corroboration.

(3) The third contention of the learned Deputy Legal Remembrancer may be dismissed with the observation that the acquittal of the accused in Fulchari dacoity can only mean that they had nothing to do with that crime. See the cases of The Emperor v. Noni Gopal Gupta (5), Rex. v. Plummer (6). No adverse inference can be drawn against the accused after their acquittal.

(4) The next argument concerns the previous convictions of some of the appellants. Jadu (No. 23) was twice punished for dacoity. Sabed (No. 4), Rahimuddin (No. 6), Jalla (No. 11), Jadu (No. 23) and Tomiz (No. 24) were bound down to be of good behaviour under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code. Lal

(2) 23 W. R. Cr. 18.
(3) (1886) A. W. N. 65 at p. 66.
(4) 24 M. 523 at p. 546.
(5) 15 C. W. N. 593; 38 C. 559; 10 Ind. Cas. 582; 12 Cr. L. J. 286.
(6) (1902) 2 K. B. 339; 71 L. J. K. B. 805; 68 L. T. 36; 51 W. R. 137; 66 J. P. 647; 20 Cox. C. C. 269.

In re ARUNACHELLA TEVAN.

Chand (No. 19) was convicted for theft and sentenced to three months' rigorous imprisonment. These are the previous convictions relied on. They do not carry much weight, though, no doubt, if the association for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity had been made out, the past history of some of the appellants would have been significant, as was pointed out in the case of Bonai v. The King-Emperor (7).

(5) The last contention covers the case of the appellants who confessed in the first Court (Nos 2 and 18). We have heard the confessions read out. The appellants did not admit the existence of a gang. No. 2 spoke of five thefts and five dacoities. No. 18 mentioned only one theft and one dacoity. The confessions were retracted before the Magistrate. In our opinion, such confessions cannot be deemed conclusive where the other evidence in the case is so wanting in precision.

The conclusion of the whole matter is, that all the appellants, including the six exempted by the learned Deputy Legal Remembrancer, are in the same category, and must be acquitted of the present charge under section 400, Indian Penal Code. We regret the expenditure of public time in the trial of this case in the Court of Session.

The appeal is allowed. The convictions and sentences are reversed. The appellants will be set at liberty, so far as the present proceedings are concerned.

Appeal allowed.

(7) 15 C. W. N. 461; 38 C. 408; 9 Ind. Cas. 555; 12 Cr. L. J. 97.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEALS NOS. 514 AND 557 OF 1911.

December 15, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Spencer.

In re ARUNACHELLA TEVAN AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 392, 397—Misdirection to Jury—Absence of evidence that accused caused grievous hurt—Hurt caused by some of the robbers—Direction to convict.

Where, on a charge against the accused under sections 392 and 397, Indian Penal Code, the Sessions Judge, while pointing out to the jury that there was no evidence that the accused caused grievous hurt or used deadly weapons, directed them to convict under section 397, Indian Penal Code, because grievous hurt was caused by some of the robbers some of whom used knives:

Held, (1) that this amounted to a misdirection and the conviction under section 397, Indian Penal Code, could not be sustained;

(2) that the accused were rightly convicted under section 392, Indian Penal Code.

Criminal Appeal 315 of 1886 and Emperor v. Nageswar, 28 A. 404; 3 Cr. L. J. 322; A. W. N. (1906) 61, referred to.

Appeal against the conviction and sentence of the Court of Session of the Tinnevelly Division, in C. C. No. 61 of 1911.

Mr. M. D. Devadoss, for the Appellants.

Mr. C. F. Napier, Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The appellants have been convicted by a jury of offences under sections 392 and 397, Indian Penal Code, and sentenced each to 5 years' rigorous imprisonment. This sentence, as the learned Sessions Judge himself subsequently discovered and has pointed out in a letter of reference, is less than the minimum prescribed by section 397, Indian Penal Code.

I do not find any misdirection in the charge to the jury except as regards the liability of the appellants to conviction under section 397, Indian Penal Code. The Judge, while pointing out to the jury that there is no evidence that these appellants caused the grievous hurt or (apparently) used deadly weapons has directed the jury that they may convict the appellants of an offence under section 397, Indian Penal Code, merely because grievous hurt was caused by some of the robbers and (apparently) that some of the robbers used knives. This view finds no support in the wording of the section, especially as compared with section 394, Indian Penal Code, and is opposed to the ruling of this Court in Criminal Appeal No. 315 of 1886 reported on page 450 of Vol. I of Weir's Law of Offences and Criminal Procedure and of the Allahabad High Court in Emperor v. Nageshwar (1). It is now supported by the Public Prosecutor. I hold it to be erroneous. It follows that the conviction under section 397, Indian Penal Code, was wrong and was induced by a misdirection of the Judge. It must, therefore, be set aside.

But I see no reason to interfere with the conviction under section 392, Indian Penal Code. This is fully supported by the evidence and it is impossible to see how the verdict of the jury as regards this offence could have been influenced by the misdirection above referred to. I quash the conviction under section 397, Indian Penal Code, and uphold the conviction under section 392, Indian Penal Code. The sentence is reduced to 3 years' rigorous imprisonment in the case of each appellant.

(1) 28 A. 404; 3 Cr. L. J. 322; A. W. N. (1906) 61.

Sentence reduced.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 50 OF 1911.

December 6, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Tudball.

GANESH PERSHAD—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 476—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Fabrication of evidence and forgery committed by a Patwari in Tahsil records—Patwari appearing as a witness in District Judge's Court—Departmental inquiry made by District Magistrate—District Judge directing prosecution of Patwari on basis of Departmental inquiry—Judicial proceedings—No inquiry by District Judge—Material irregularity.

A Patwari appeared as a witness in a Civil case in the Court of a District Judge. After the decision of the case the District Magistrate had a Departmental inquiry made which went to show that the Patwari had fabricated false evidence and had also forged a signature in his diary in the Tahsil records. Upon this the District Magistrate applied to the District Judge for sanction to prosecute the Patwari for the offences of perjury and forgery and along with his application for sanction forwarded the record of the Departmental inquiry.

The District Judge on perusal of this record issued notice to the Patwari, and after hearing him directed his prosecution on the basis of the Departmental inquiry:

Held, (1) that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to order prosecution in respect of matters which had occurred in the Tahsil and not in his Court;

(2) that, assuming the matters to have been brought to the notice of the District Judge in the course of a judicial inquiry, as the record of the Departmental inquiry was not evidence in the matter of the sanction applied for by the District Magistrate, the District Judge acted with material irregularity in ordering prosecution without having himself made an inquiry.

Revision against the order of the District Judge of Mirzapur, dated the 14th of January 1911.

Mr. Haribans Sahai, for the Appellant.

Mr. Ryves, for the Crown.

ORDER.—This is an application in revision under section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure and arises out of the following circumstances:—

A civil suit was heard in the Court of the District Judge of Mirzapur in the course of which Ram Daur Lal, Patwari, gave evidence.

After the decision of the case the District Magistrate applied to the District Judge for sanction to prosecute Ram Daur Lal for the offences of forgery and perjury. The District Judge refused sanction in respect of the forgery on the ground that it was unnecessary and refused sanction in the matter of the alleged perjury on the ground that the words used did not amount to perjury. When applying for sanction, the District Magistrate forwarded to the District Judge the record of a Departmental inquiry made by one of his subordinates. The record of that Departmental inquiry, judging from the Judge's order in the present case, went to show that Ram Daur Lal and one Ganesh Prosad had fabricated false evidence or had attempted to do so by introducing into the Tahsil record room the Patwari's diary for 1314, also it goes to show that these persons either committed forgery or entered into a conspiracy to do so by signing the name of the superior Kanungo in the diary. The District Judge on perusal of this record and after refusing the sanction, for which the District Magistrate had applied, issued notice to these two persons to show cause why he should not place them on trial for the above-mentioned offences. After hearing what they had to say, he directed their prosecution and hence the present application in revision.

The first objection, and a very material one, to the action taken by the District Judge, is that he had not before him any evidence whatsoever in respect of the commission of the alleged offence, there is no basis for his order and that he has, therefore, at least acted with material irregularity. It is urged that the record of the Departmental inquiry is not evidence at all. It is clear that the Judge has ordered the prosecution in respect of matters which occurred in the Tahsil and not in his Court and in respect of which there was no evidence whatsoever before him. It may be assumed that the matter was brought to his notice in the course of a judicial inquiry but it seems to be materially irregular to order a prosecution for such offences without having before it at least some material in the shape of evidence which goes to show that there is reason to believe that the offences have been committed. The District Judge has made no inquiry himself. He has acted on what is not evidence that is on the basis of a record at which he ought never to have looked it not being evidence in the matter of the sanction applied for by the District Magistrate. On the ground of what I deem to be material irregularity, if not illegality, I admit the application and set aside the order of the District Judge. I make no order as to costs.

Order set aside.

(s. c. 5 S. L. R. 173.)

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 65 OF 1911.

August 16, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C.

IMPERATOR—

versus

RAJABALI SON OF ADMJI—

Reformatory Schools Act (VIII of 1897), s. 16—Detention in lieu of imprisonment—Appeal—Power of Appellate Court to alter sentence of imprisonment to one of whipping—Effect of alteration.

Under section 16 of the Reformatory Schools Act, an order substituting detention in a Reformatory for imprisonment cannot be interfered with in appeal but this does not preclude an Appellate Court from altering the sentence of imprisonment to one of whipping. When the order of imprisonment is altered to one of whipping, the order of detention in a Reformatory falls to the ground.

Queen-Empress v. Hori, 21 A. 391, relied upon.

Appeal against the decision of the Additional City Magistrate, Karachi.

Mr. J. F. de Vertuil, for the Appellant.

The Assistant Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The accused has been convicted of theft in a dwelling house and sentenced to simple imprisonment for one year. The Magistrate has directed that the accused should, instead of undergoing the sentence, be detained for 4 years in a Reformatory. There is no question as to the propriety of the conviction for the accused has pleaded guilty.

Under section 16 of the Reformatory Schools Act, VIII of 1897, I cannot interfere with the order substituting detention in a Reformatory for imprisonment, but that does not preclude me from altering the sentence of imprisonment to one of whipping—and in that case the order for detention in a Reformatory which could not be passed in substitution of such sentence—would fall to the ground—See Queen-Empress v. Hori (1).

It is admitted that the accused is a young boy living under the control of his parents who are respectable people and as this is a first offence I think they might be allowed to retain custody of the boy and endeavour to reclaim him from the vicious tendencies that he has displayed.

I, therefore, confirm the conviction but alter the sentence to one of whipping and direct that the accused receive fifteen stripes.

Sentence altered.

(1) 21 A. 391.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 37 OF 1911.

December 20, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Karamat Hussain and Mr. Justice Chamier.

AJODHIA PARSHAD—APPLICANT—APPELLANT

versus

RAM LAL AND ANOTHER—OPPOSITE PARTY—RESPONDENTS.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 195 (7), cls. (b), (c)—Perjury committed in execution proceedings in a rent suit—Sanction to prosecute—"Case," meaning of—Appeal—Jurisdiction—Principal Court of original jurisdiction—District Judge.

In the course of execution proceedings of a rent decree passed under the Agra Tenancy Act of 1901, R. made a statement which was false. An application was made to the Assistant Collector for sanction to prosecute. The Assistant Collector rejected the application. The applicant then appealed to the District Judge who dismissed the appeal on the ground that he had no jurisdiction in the matter:

Held, that the District Judge was right in dismissing the appeal as he had no jurisdiction in the matter.

Per Chamier, J.—The word 'case' in clause (b), subsection 7 of section 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure of 1898, may mean either the original case, out of which arose the case or proceeding in which the offence is said to have been committed, or the actual proceeding in which the offence is said to have been committed. It must be construed with reference to the context in which it appears. There being a remote connection with the original suit and an immediate connection with the execution proceeding, the case in connection with which the offence in question is alleged to have been committed is the execution proceeding.

Clause (c) applies to the present case and, therefore, the applicant should have applied to the principal Court of original jurisdiction.

AJODHIA PARSHAD v. RAM LAL.

The principal Court of original jurisdiction under the Tenancy Act of 1901, is clearly not the Court of District Judge.

Per Karamat Husain, J.—The word "case," in clause (b) of sub-section 7 of section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code means the actual proceedings in which the offence is said to have been committed and not the original case out of which those proceedings arose.

The opening words of clause (c) of the section "where no appeal lies" refer to cases in which no appeal lies and not to Courts against the decision of which there is no appeal.

Wazir Muhammad v. Hub Lal, 31 A. 313; 6 A. L. J. 231; 9 Cr. L. J. 504; 2 Ind. Cas. 182, referred to.

Revision against the order of the District Judge of Moradabad, dated 22nd December 1911.

Mr. Hamilton, for the Applicant.

Mr. Bajpai, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.

CHAMIER, J.—A suit for arrears of rent exceeding Rs. 100 was brought in the Court of an Assistant Collector of the first class and was decreed. In the course of execution proceedings in the same Court the respondents made statements which according to the applicant were false. The applicant then applied to the Assistant Collector for sanction to prosecute the respondent. That officer refused to give sanction and the applicant then went in appeal to the District Judge who threw out the appeal on the ground that he had no jurisdiction to hear it. This is an application for revision of the order of the District Judge. On behalf of the applicant it is contended that the case is governed by clause (b) of sub-section 7 of section 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and that on a proper construction of that clause the District Judge had jurisdiction. It is contended further that he had jurisdiction even if clause (c) of the same sub-section is held to be applicable and that one or other of these clauses must apply to the case. As regards clause (b) the argument for the applicant is that the case in connection with which the offence is said to have been committed was a suit for rent exceeding Rs. 100 against the decree in which an appeal lay to the District Judge, therefore, the Assistant Collector who refused sanction must be deemed for the present purpose to be subordinate to the District Judge who accordingly ought to have entertained the appeal. To this the respondent's reply that the case in connection with which the offence is alleged to have been committed was the execution proceeding the order on which was not appealable, therefore, clause (b) does not apply. The applicant contends that even if clause (b) is held to be inapplicable clause (c) cannot apply because the opening words of the clause "where no appeal" refer only to cases in which no appeal lies against any decisions of the Court and that the words do not mean as contended by the respondents. "Where no appeal lies in the case in connection with which the offence is alleged to have been committed." In the alternative the applicant contends that if clause (c) applies the Court indicated is the Court of the District Judge. To this the respondents reply that the principal Court of original jurisdiction under the Tenancy Act is the Court of the Collector.

The word "case" has been the subject of many conflicting decisions in connection with section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, and section 115 of the present Code. I do not think that any useful purpose would be served by a reference to these decisions, for the word must be construed with due regard to the context in which it appears and the purpose for which the section of which it forms part was framed. It was this consideration which led the majority of the Chartered High Courts to place a narrow meaning upon the word "case" in the sections just mentioned. The object of sub-section 7 of section 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure was to indicate the Court to which a Court giving or refusing sanction to a prosecution should be deemed to be subordinate within the meaning of sub-section (6). As originally framed, sub-section (7) provided only that the Court giving or refusing sanction should be deemed to be subordinate only to the Court to which appeals ordinarily lay. This produced a mass of conflicting rulings and clauses (a), (b) and (c) were added with a view to getting rid of the difficulty. Clause (a) provides for the case of a Subordinate Court against whose decisions appeals lie and two Courts of different grades and is plain enough. Clause (b) provides for the case of a Subordinate Court against whose decision appeals lie to two different kinds of Courts. Here the test is to what Court did an appeal lie in the case in connection with which the offence is alleged to have been committed? The word case taken by itself may mean either the original case out of which arose the case of proceeding in which the offence is said to have been committed or the actual proceeding in which the offence is said to have been committed. It must be construed with reference to the context in which it appears. The words are "nature of the case in connection with which the offence is alleged to have been committed." There being a remote connection with an original suit and an immediate connection with an execution proceeding, I am of opinion that the case in connection with which the offence is alleged to have been committed is the execution proceeding. According to the decisions of this Court no appeal lies against an order of an Assistant Collector of the first class passed in execution proceedings under the Tenancy Act. The result is that clause (b) does not apply. Does clause (c) apply? The opening words of the clause "where no appeal lies" do not appear to me to refer to a Court against none of whose decisions an appeal lies but to refer to particular cases in which no appeal lies. The whole sub-section seems to be confined to Courts against whose decisions or some of whose decisions appeals do lie, for the opening words are "For the purposes of this section every Court shall be deemed to be subordinate only to the Court to which appeals from the former Court ordinarily lie" (the italics are mine). The result of this construction is, possibly, that the Legislature has made no provision in section 195 for an appeal against an order of a Small Cause Court giving or refusing sanction and it may be that the only Court which can interfere with such an order is the High Court. This result may not have been contemplated but the construction advocated by the applicant seems to me to be clearly inadmissible. It would have been another matter if clause (c) had formed a separate sub-section. I hold that clause (c) applies to the present case and, therefore, the applicant should have appealed to "the principal Court of original jurisdiction." I can discover no justification for reading these words as if they were "principal Court of original Civil jurisdiction" The clause applies to all classes of cases and it is impossible to suppose that the Legislature intended the principal Court of Original Civil jurisdiction to revise the orders of Criminal and Revenue Courts with which it has no concern as a Civil Court. The circumstance that District Judges in this Province, generally, have the power of Sessions Judges and hear appeals in Revenue cases seems to be wholly irrelevant. The principal Court of original jurisdiction under the Tenancy Act is clearly not the Court of the District Judge.

In re MUTHIAH CHETTY.

For the above reasons, I am of opinion that the District Judge was right in declining to entertain the applicant's appeal and I would dismiss this application with costs.

KARAMAT HUSAIN, J.—I am of opinion that the word "case" in clause (b), sub-section 7 of section 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898) means the actual proceedings in which the offence is said to have been committed and not the original case out of which those proceedings arose. I am also of opinion that the opening words of clause (c), sub-section 7 of section 195 of the Code "Where no appeal lies" refer to cases in which no appeal lies and not to Courts against the decisions of which there is no appeal. It was so held by me in Wasir Muhammad v. Hut Lal (1). In that ruling it was assumed that the Court of District Judge was the principal Court of original jurisdiction. That, however, is not the case and the nature of the proceedings in which sanction is given or refused is to determine the principal Court of original jurisdiction. For the above reasons, I agree with my learned brother in dismissing the application.

BY THE COURT.—Order of the Court is that the applicant be dismissed with costs.

Application dismissed.

(1) 6 A. L. J. 231; 9 Cr. L. J. 504; 31 A. 313; 2 Ind. Cas. 182.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 567 OF 1910.

December 5, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Spencer.

In re MUTHIAH CHETTY—APPELLANT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 175, 193, 471—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 162—Production of document in obedience to Court Summons—Document found to be forged—Using as genuine a forged document—

In re MUTHIAH CHETTY.

Giving false evidence with regard to the document—Perjury.

Accused produced a document before a Munsif in obedience to a Court summons and, when examined as a witness, stated that P. W. No. 1 delivered it to him. It was found that the document was not genuine and that P. W. No. 1 had not given it to him. Accused was tried and convicted under section 471, Indian Penal Code, for using as genuine a forged document:

Held, (1) that the conviction was wrong as the mere production by a person of a document in obedience to a Court summons is not, by itself, a user of that document by him.

Assistant Sessions Judge North Arcot v. Ramammal, 10 M. L. T. 563; (1912) M. W. N. 3; 13 Ind. Cas. 275, followed.

A witness who is summoned to produce a document cannot be put to the risk of having to consider whether a document answering the description contained in the summons is in fact genuine and whether there is any reason to believe it to be not genuine. The mere production of a document in answer to a command of Court cannot be regarded as fraudulent in law.

(2) That the giving of false evidence by the accused that P. W. No. 1 delivered the document to him with a fraudulent intention did not amount to a fraudulent user of the document with reference to which the evidence was given, though it might expose him to a prosecution for perjury.

Asimuddi Sheikh v. King-Emperor, 11 C. W. N. 838; 5 Cr. L. J. J. 351; 5 C. L. J. 454, explained.

Appeal against the sentence of the Court of Session of the Madura Division, in Sessions Case No. 39 of 1911.

Mr. K. Sadagopachariar, for the Appellant.

Mr. C. F. Napier, Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the accused has been convicted under section 471 of the Indian Penal Code of fraudulently or dishonestly using as genuine a document which he knew or had reason to believe to be a forged document.

The facts are that the accused was summoned to produce the document in question (Exhibit J) Original Suit No. 39 of 1910 on the file of the Subordinate Judge's Court of Madura (West). He was not a party to that suit. In answer to the Court summons he produced the document. He was afterwards examined as witness in that case, and he gave the deposition marked as Exhibit K. He then stated on oath that the prosecution first witness in that case gave the document to him. The learned Sessions Judge has found that the document was not genuine and that the prosecution first witness did not give it to the accused. We decide the case on the assumption that these findings are correct. So far as the production of the document was concerned, the accused was bound to obey the summons of the Court. Section 162 of the Indian Evidence Act lays down that every witness summoned to produce a document shall do so, and section 175 of the Indian Penal Code makes the non-production of it an offence punishable under that section. We adhere to the opinion we expressed in Assistant Sessions Judge, North Arcot v. Ramammal (1), that the production by a party of a document, which he is bound by law to produce, cannot by itself constitute a user of that document by him. He cannot be put to the risk of having to consider whether a document answering the description contained in the summons is in fact genuine, and whether there is any reason to believe it to be not genuine. The mere production of a document in answer to a command of Court can in no case be regarded as fraudulent in law. The learned Public Prosecutor argues that the accused did more than produce the document in this case because he swore, when he was examined as a witness, that the document was handed to him by the prosecution first witness, and he urges that assuming, as we are prepared to do for the purpose of deciding the question of law, that the accused had the dishonest intention when he gave his evidence of inducing the Court to give judgment in favour of the plaintiff in that suit, his giving evidence would make the act a dishonest user of the document by him. We must put entirely out of account the fact that he produced the document as that act was perfectly innocent. All that is then left is that he gave false evidence with the fraudulent intention of causing loss to one of the parties in the suit. We are clearly of opinion that the giving of false testimony by itself with a fraudulent intention cannot amount to a fraudulent user of a document with reference to which that evidence is given. Otherwise every attesting witness who gives evidence with a similar dishonest intention might also be held guilty of dishonestly using the document. It is not contended that there is any evidence in this case of user beyond the fact that he gave evidence. There is no evidence of any previous conspiracy in pursuance of which he gave the evidence. We must, therefore, hold that the accused did not commit an offence under section 471 of the Indian Penal Code. If the evidence he gave was false he would, of course, be guilty of perjury. But he is not charged with that offence in this case.

(1) 10 M. L. T. 563; (1912) M. W. N. 3; 13 Ind Cas. 275.

SURYA v. LACHMI NARAIN.

In Asimuddi Sheik v. King-Emperor (2) Rampini and Gupta, JJ., held that a party who had produced a document before a Munsif for obtaining compulsory registration of it could not be held guilty of an offence under section 471 of the Indian Penal Code by merely declaring it to be genuine before a Deputy Magistrate to whom the document was sent over by the Munsif for an inquiry being held as to whether he was guilty of forging the document.

The statement before the Deputy Magistrate was not made by the accused on oath and he could not, therefore, be convicted of perjury. It was sought to be argued that he was guilty of using the document as genuine by declaring it to be true. The learned Judges say: "He may have used the document before the Munsif when he brought a suit to enforce registration, but he is not charged in this case with using the document before the Munsif. He is charged with using it before the Deputy Magistrate and we do not think he can be said to have committed any offence on the 21st January 1902 punishable under section 471 of the Indian Penal Code." There is, of course, a difference between that case and this. In that the statement made by the accused as a witness in this case was made on oath while in the Calcutta case the statement was made by him before the Deputy Magistrate as an accused person and not on oath. But that does not affect the general proposition that a mere statement that a document is genuine does not amount to using it as genuine. We, therefore, set aside the conviction of the accused. We do not consider it necessary to pass any further order having regard to the state of the evidence on record. The bail-bonds executed will be discharged.

Conviction quashed.

(2) 11 C. W. N. 838; 5 Cr. L. J. 351; 5 C. L. J. 454.

AJMER-MERWARA JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CRIMINAL APPLICATION No. 33 OF 1910.

February 20, 1910.

Present—Mr. Colvin, J. C.

Musammat SURYA—APPLICANT

versus

LACHMI NARAIN AND ANOTHER—ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 367—Points for determination, reason for the decision.

Where the judgment of an Appellate Court does not comply with the provisions of section 367 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and omits to state the points for determination and the reasons for decision, the case should be returned for re-trial.

Petition for revision of the order of the District Magistrate, Ajmer, dated 13th October 1910, acquitting the accused on their appeal from the judgment of the Honorary Magistrate, Ajmer.

ORDER.—The order of the lower Appellate Court does not comply with the provisions of section 367 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The points for determination are not stated, nor are adequate reasons given for the decision. The Appellate Court thinks there has been some under-hand game going on between the parties, and that the accused is at the bottom of it but nevertheless acquits the accused on the ground of some doubt, the nature of which is left unexplained. The judgment should have explained why the Court thinks there is doubt regarding the jewelry transaction; and on what evidence this doubt rests. The judgment of the Appellate Court is so unsatisfactory that I am constrained to return the case to be re-tried on the merits in that Court: ordered accordingly.

Re-trial ordered.

JOTINDRA MOHAN v. KEDAR NATH.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1583 OF 1910.
December 13, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Carnduff.
JOTINDRA MOHAN GHOSH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
KEDAR NATH GHOSH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 182—Homesteads—Purchase by raiyat of homestead of another tenant—Cultivation of purchased homestead land—Character of such land.

A raiyat purchased two parcels of land from the respective raiyats to whose homesteads they originally belonged. Since then he cultivated them and paid rent to the landlord, who subsequently sued to eject him:

Held, that the parcels, whatever they had been once, were now agricultural lands held by the raiyat, and that the Bengal Tenancy Act applied to them.

Appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge of Hooghly, dated February 8th, 1910, confirming that of the Munsif of Hooghly, dated February 23rd, 1909.

Babu Narendra Kumar Bose, for the Appellant.

Mr. N. C. Bordalai for Babu Jadu Nath Kanjilal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiffs-appellants for the ejectment of the defendant-respondent from two parcels of land in Mouzah Sonatakari in the District of Hooghly. It is admitted here—as it apparently was also in the lower Appellate Court—that the action was bound to fail, if the case was governed by the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, but that it ought to have succeeded, if it was not. The only question for my decision, therefore, is as to whether both the Courts below were right in holding that Act applicable.

The facts, in so far as they are material and have been found, are these. The respondent is himself a raiyat of the village, in which he had, and has, both a homestead and an agricultural holding. The two parcels in suit are situated near his old homestead, and he acquired them separately by purchase from the respective raiyat to whose homesteads they originally belonged. He has since been cultivating them and paying rent to the appellants who are the landlords: and there is no local custom or usage, such as is referred to in section 182 of the Tenancy Act, to be considered in connection with the matter.

In these circumstances, I should have thought it hardly possible seriously to suggest that the law applicable is not the Tenancy Act. But the learned Vakil for the appellants contends that it is not that Act, but the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, that ought to have been applied; and the following I understand to be his argument.

The disputed parcels were homestead lands, and, as the learned Subordinate Judge has himself observed,—their cultivation by the respondent could not change their character. They are still homestead lands.

Prima facie, the Transfer of Property Act applies in the case of such lands, and it is only by virtue of section 182 of the Tenancy Act that the provisions of the latter can have any application to them.

But section 182 is of no avail to the respondent because the parcels are not "his homestead," and that is all that the section touches. "Homestead" means the steads or place of a dwelling house; and these parcels which once formed the homesteads of others, are not the respondent's homestead, though they are close to it. They are his homestead lands; but not "his homestead."

Therefore, the Tenancy Act did not govern the case, and ex concesso, the suit ought to have been decreed.

This argument may be ingenious, but it is certainly unsound.

In the first place, it begins with the gratuitous introduction of novel and extraordinary class of land; land, which is "homestead land," but nevertheless appertains to no-body's "homestead." The idea is somewhat elusive, and I confess it is beyond me to grasp it.

In the second place, I can find no authority either for the assumption of "once homestead, always homestead", or for the postulate that homestead lands come within the scope of the Tenancy Act only through the operation of section 185. I see no reason why even the site of a dwelling house should not, on the disappearance of the building, become an ordinary holding; and I can find nothing in the Tenancy Act to remove homestead lands generally from its operation. On the contrary, it seems to me that the test is not homestead or non-homestead, but agricultural or non-agricultural, and that the Act applies to all lands in a village which are, as a matter of fact, for the time being held as agricultural (or horticultural) land. On the facts before me, these parcels undoubtedly are of this latter description.

Thirdly, the first and third of the learned Vakil's premises, taken together, point to a conclusion the opposite of that deduced by him. For, if the disputed parcels have remained homestead, they must be the respondent's: they are no longer his vendor's, but have become "his homestead," and consequently section 182 and the other provisions of the Tenancy Act apply.

Finally, the appellant's argument leads them in another quandary. Admittedly, the respondent is the tenant in occupation of these parcels, which, it has been found, he is cultivating: and he has an old homestead in the village. Now, either the parcels are so close to that homestead as to have become a portion of it, or they stand apart and are held separately. In other words, they must be either homestead or not homestead. If they are homestead, cadit quæstio. If they are not, what are they, and how are they held? I cannot accept the new classification suggested and above alluded to, and the only rational reply seems to me to be that these parcels, whatever they have been once, are now agricultural or horticultural lands held by the respondent under the ordinary tenancy law.

I have been referred to the case of Abdull v. Kutban, S. A. No. 1376 of 1895 of which a brief note is to be found in 1 C. W. N. at p. clxxi. There the plaintiff had sued to recover possession of the basti land and house (in other words, the homestead) of another villager, which he had purchased alone and held apart from his own jote (if he had a jote, as to which there was no finding). The learned Judge (Rampini, J.) held expressly that section 182 and the other provisions of the Tenancy Act applied; but the crucial question before him was one of limitation and he ruled that the suit was not, as had been suggested, barred by Article 3 of Schedule III (which then referred to occupancy-ryots only), because the plaintiff was not, and had not professed to be, an occupancy-ryot. In so far then as that case can be said to be in point at all, it appears to tell against the appellants.

On the other hand, the view I favour seems to be supported by the ruling in another unreported case—Munshi Golam Mowla v. Abdul Sowar Mondol, S. A. No. 1078 of 1892 decided on the 16th May 1893. That was the case of a settled ryot of a village who had taken a plot of homestead land in it distinct from his agricultural land, and it was held by Rampini, J., applying section 182 of the Tenancy Act, that the ryot had a right of occupancy in the land under section 21 of the same.

I think, then, that this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.
FULL BENCH.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 810 OF 1903.
November 30, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Robertson, Mr. Justice Johnstone, Mr. Justice Rattigan and Mr. Justice Chevis.

Musammat RAM DEVI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat SHIB DEVI—PLAINTIFF AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Widow—Unchastity—Gift—Forfeiture by unchastity—Effect on donee—Forfeiture by re-marriage—Distinction—Succession—Daughter—No collateral—Hindu Rajputs of Dasuya Tahsil, District Hoshiarpur—Evidence to prove agnatic relationship.

(By the Full Bench):—Where an unchaste widow, belonging to a tribe by whose custom unchastity involves forfeiture of the widow's estate, gifts to her lover the propery inherited from her husband, the reversioner is entitled to immediate possession of the property. Such a case is not governed by the judgment in Bainta v. Acchhar, 188 P. L. R. 1905.

Per Robertson, J.—A distinction must be drawn between the nature of the forfeiture of a widow's estate by re-marriage and by unchastity. In the case of a forfeiture by re-marriage, throughout the province, the woman ceases altogether to be the widow of her deceased husband, loses all rights and every kind of interest in his estate and becomes a member of a different family. The case of forfeiture by unchastity, where it is established, is different. The woman does not cease to be the widow of her deceased husband, nor does she become a member of another family. By custom she forfeits a special form of maintenance recognized in the province, that is, the possession for life of her husband's estate.

Per Johnstone and Chevis, JJ.—The forfeiture which unchastity involves comes into place, as against the widow and also as against any person in whose favour she has alienated the land other than a person who is a bona fide alienee for consideration, with effect from the date of unchastity and not merely from the date of institution of a suit by the reversioner.

RAM DEVI v. SHIB DEVI.

(By the Division Bench, Johnstone and Chevis, JJ.)—Among Rajputs of Dasuya Tahsil, Hoshiarpur District, a daughter is entitled to succeed to the property of her father in the absence of collaterals.

The mere fact that a person belongs to the same got as the propositus is insufficient to make that person a collateral of the latter. A claim to succeed to property on the score of agnatic relationship should be supported by evidence showing the actual relationship.

Among Hindu as well as Muhammadan Rajputs of the Hoshiarpur District, the unchastity of a widow has the effect of forfeiting her life-estate.

In the case of forfeiture by unchastity, a widow becomes a trespasser directly the act of adultery is committed and the suit of the reversioner is to be regarded as a claim to dispossess a person who has, prior to the institution of the suit, ceased to hold any rights and become a trespasser.

Quære.—Whether a female holding a life-estate is subject to control in her dealings with the property by another female next entitled to succeed as a similar life-tenant?

First appeal from the order of the District Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated the 30th March 1908, decreeing plaintiff's claim.

The Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shafi, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Sukh Diyal and Pestonji Dadabhai, for Musammat Shib Devi, and Mr Daulat Ram, for Musammat Kirpo, Respondents.

ORDER OF REFERENCE.

CHEVIS AND JOHNSTONE, JJ. (21st July 1911).—Rijha, a Bihal Rajput of Nansota village, in the Dasuya Tahsil, in the Hoshiarpur District, died on the 12th October 1892, this is the date of death as entered in the Register of Mutations—leaving a widow Musammat Kirpo, and a minor daughter Musammat Shib Devi. The widow succeeded to the property of the deceased on the usual life-tenure. It is admitted that she became the mother of at least one illegitimate child. Then, in June 1902, she gave a lease of her husband's estate for 5 years to Achar Singh, and in August 1902 she gifted to him 2,335 kanals, with share in shamilat. Achar Singh died in April 1906, and his widow Musammat Ram Devi now holds the gifted land. Musammat Shib Devi who was a minor when this suit was instituted, but has since attained majority, sues for possession, alleging that her mother's rights are extinct by reason of unchastity and that she is the person entitled to succeed next to her mother.

Musammat Kirpo supports her daughter admitting the claim and saying she had illicit intercourse with Achar Singh who got a deed of gift from her.

Musammat Ram Devi's pleas are that Achar Singh as reversioner was next heir after Musammat Kirpo in preference to Rijha's daughter, that Musammat Kirpo, though unchaste, had not forfeited her tenure, that plaintiff was not the heir, that plaintiff in any case had no right to object to her mother's alienation, and that plaintiff could not in any case get possession as long as her mother was alive. It was also alleged that Musammat Shib Bevi was herself unchaste, but this plea may be passed over as defendant's Counsel has admitted that even supposing the plaintiff to be unchaste, he cannot support the argument that a daughter loses her rights in her father's estate by reason of unchastity. It was also contended for the defendant (i. e., Musammat Ram Devi, Musammat Kirpo is only a pro forma defendant) that the gift was valid on account of services rendered by the donee.

The learned District Judge seems to have been of opinion that Achar Singh was a distant collateral of Rijha, but without coming to any definite finding on this point, he has held that such a distant collateral is excluded by the daughter. He also finds that Musammat Kirpo has forfeited her rights, that the gift was invalid, and that Musammat Shib Devi has a right to contest her mother's alienations. The District Judge was personally of opinion that plaintiff was entitled to a decree for possession, but on being referred to the case reported as Bainta v. Achhar (1), he restricted the decree to a declaration that the deed of gift should not affect the plaintiff's rights after the death of Musammat Kirpo. The decree might well, in my opinion, have been so worded as to take immediate effect also in the case of Musammat Kirpo's re-marriage.

Both sides appeal. The defendent again urges those pleas which have been decided against her, and asks that the suit may be dismissed; the plaintiff urges that she should be given a decree for possession.

(1) 188 P. L. R. 1905.

RAM DEVI v. SHIB DEVI.

I propose first to consider the question whether the plaintiff is entitled to succeed after her mother. It is urged for the defendant that Achar Singh was a collateral of Rijha.

One Harnam Das, Brahmin, appears as witness for defendant and professes to give the genealogical tree as follows:—

Now let us see how far this genealogical tree, professedly given from memory—for the witness says that though his father had a written tree he does not know whether it is lost or whether his brother has it—is supported by any records.

There are genealogical trees of four villages on the record. That of Beata village seems to afford no help at all. The Nansota village tree (i. e., the tree of Rijha's village) gives the tree, as stated by Harnam Das from Rijha up to Amir and the note as to foundation of the village says Amir came from Virowal and broke up the jungle. The tree of Serak village gives the tree down from Sahai to Jawla Singh and shows Sunder as another son of Nathu. Beneath Sundar no descendants are shown; there is, however, a note that he went off to Sundarpur.

The tree of Sundarpur village shows two families of Muhammadan Rajputs and one family of Hindus, the third being Above Achal Singh no names are given. Achar Singh was son of Maya Ram. Even supposing that the Sundar who is said to have founded Sundarpur is the same as the son of Nathu who left Serak village (though it seems strange that in Serak village the tree is given for five generations above Sundar, whereas in Sundarpur village the people professed themselves unable to give Sundar's pedigree) there is a link wanting. According to the village pedigree tables we get from Achar Singh up to Sahai through Nathu, and from Rijha up to Amir but there is nothing outside the evidence of Harnam Das to connect Amir with Nathu except the bare statement that Amir came from Virowal and founded Nansota, and Virowal, according to one witness Lalu (see page 69), is another name for Sundarpur. To produce a Brahmin as witness to reel off a string of names and so supply a gap in the pedigree tree set up is easy enough.

When mutation of names was effected on death of Rijha, I note that Maya, father of Achar Singh, came from Serak and claimed to be next heir after Musammat Kirpo but his claim was not investigated. When gifting the land to Achar Singh, Musammat Kirpo described him as a reversioner, but Musammat Kirpo's conduct throughout has been such as to render it impossible to attach weight to her statements or actions. And it is, of course, possible that she credited Maya's claim to be a collateral, but this does not render it unnecessary for Achar Singh's widow to prove the alleged relationship now that on the strength of it she wishes to defeat the claim of the plaintiff. It was possibly on account of her crediting Maya's claim to relationship that Musammat Kirpo employed first Maya and then Achar Singh as her agent, as she professes to have done (see page 67.) In my opinion it is not proved that Achar Singh was a collateral of Rijha. No doubt they were both of the same gôt, but a claim to succeed to property on the score of relationship should, in my opinion, be supported by evidence showing the relationship, otherwise any man might claim to exclude a daughter on the ground that he was her father's collateral both he and her father being descended from Adam.

Excluding Achar Singh, it is not shown that any other collaterals of Rijha are in existence to contest the claim of Rijha's daughter to be the next heir. But it is contended that among Rajputs of the Dasuya Tahsil, a daughter never inherits, and here reliance is placed on the Riwaj-i-am (see page 24) where it is stated for the Dasuya Tahsil:—"No share has ever been given to a daughter nor is she entitled to it." But on page 25 an answer is given, which is apparently one for the whole district, that "in our tribe a daughter cannot inherit any property," which seems clearly opposed to the answers for the Garhshankar and Hoshiarpur Tahsils given on page 24. Showing that in the absence of collaterals a daughter can inherit. The answer to question 40 (given on page 4 of the paper-book) also shows that in certain cases a daughter does inherit. To deprive a daughter even in the absence of collaterals of all rights of succession would be quite opposed to general custom, and I would hold that in the absence of collaterals a daughter is entitled to succeed. Cases of absence of all collaterals must be uncommon; and this is very possibly the explanation of the statement "no share has ever been given to a daughter."

I omitted in the earlier part of this judgment to note an argument put forward by defendant's Counsel that in the plaint it is not denied that Achar Singh was a collateral, and that all that is denied there is that he was a near collateral; without going into the question of the exact meaning of the words "rishta karabat," I would hold that plaintiff's Counsel probably put down in the plaint as much as he thought necessary for the purposes of her case, and that the wording of paragraph 5 of the plaint cannot be taken to be an admission, binding on the plaintiff that Achar Singh was a distant collateral. Possibly, it was recognised that as both Achar Singh and Rijha were of the same gôt, there must be a common ancestor somewhere in the remote past, but, as I have already said, I do not think it sufficient for a man to say: "We are all descendants of Adam;" nor is it sufficient to say: "we all came out of the Ark."

The next question with which I will deal is whether Musammat Kirpo's unchastity entails forfeiture of her life-estate. That she has been unchaste is admitted. Of the allegation that she also left her husband's house, the best proof is to be found in her statement of 7th November 1902, (vide page 38) in which she states clearly that she is living with Achar Singh and does not want to live in Nansota where her tenants want to kill her and Achar Singh; this statement was made at the time when Musammat Kirpo was trying to get Achar Singh appointed as her sarbarah lambardar. No doubt, it was made nearly three months after the gift had been made in Achar Singh's favour, but I should say there was not the least doubt that Achar Singh had got the woman quite under his thumb at the time, and had induced her to forsake all for him, and so had got first a lease and then a deed of gift from her.

The Riwaj-i-am (see page 3) lays down that a widow loses her rights in case of unchastity or of re-marriage and four instances are given in support of this. As defendant's Counsel points out the four instances given are all cases of Muhammadan Rajputs and of the Hoshiarpur Tahsil, and Counsel argues that it cannot be assumed that the custom of Muhammadan Rajputs is the same. He points out that a Hindu widow governed by her personal law does not forfeit her rights, whereas he urges that an unchaste Muhammadan widow is even subject to death according to her personal law. But, as far as I know, an unchaste Muhammadan widow does not, according to her personal law, lose her property merely by reason of unchastity; of course, if she dies or is killed she loses her rights; but this applies to all the world, for a dead person can have no rights in property. As far as I can discover, there is not a scrap of evidence anywhere tending to show that the custom of Hindu Rajputs of any Tahsil of the Hoshiarpur District differs in any respect from that of Muhammadan Rajputs of the same Tahsil. The latter were also originally Hindus, and it does not follow that change of religion necessarily means a change of customs. I am unable, therefore, to see any force in the argument that cases relating to Muhammadan Rajputs should be disregarded.

Turning to the previous judgments, I will first notice those put in by the defendant:—

(1) Ala Devi v. Fateh Din, decided by Hakim-ud-din Ahmad, Subordinate Judge, on 30th November 1891. The Subordinate Judge held that no special custom had been proved, and that according to general custom unchastity did not entail forfeiture. He noted the entry in the Riwaj-i-am, but considered this insufficient. He apparently overlooked the fact that there are four instances cited in the Riwaj i-am.

This case apparently was not appealed.

(2) Maghar v. Daropti, decided by Rai Dalip Singh, Munsif 2nd Class, on 24th December 1895, (printed on pages 30-34 of the paper-book).

This judgment cites the case above noted and refuses to rely on the four instances cited in the Riwaj-i-am as not having been "tested and examined in Court." It also apparently interprets the clause in the Wajib-ul-arz as to forfeiture being the penalty of a widow's unchastity as meaning that an unchaste widow cannot get possession, and not as meaning that a widow having once got possession and thereafter becoming unchaste is liable to dispossession—a curious and unsatisfactory judgment in my opinion.

(3) Sundar Singh v. Musammat Rupan, (vide pp. 28-30). The lower Court held that unchastity did not entail forfeiture, but the Divisional Judge on appeal pointed out that this question did not arise, as plaintiff had sued to dispossess the widow solely on the ground of her re-marriage. So this case proves nothing.

For the plaintiff, the following cases are cited:—

(1) Musammat Karim Bibi v. Malang Khan, decided by Lala Mul Raj, Divisional Judge, on 24th July 1905 (vide pages 14-16).

For defendant it is objected that the onus was wrongly placed on the widow in this case (vide para. 3 on page 16), but this was apparently done because the Riwaj-i-am, supported by instances, was against her.

(2) Musammat Rahmati v. Rahiman, decided by Major Beadon, Divisional Judge, on 2nd November 1905. This decision, too, relied on the Riwaj-i-am and the instances cited therein, and also on the case above cited of Musammal Karim Bibi v. Malang, and on a Chief Court ruling C. A. No. 873 of 1899 (Amir Bakhsh v. Kande Khan.)

(3) Dhaju v. Hira, decided by Major Beadon on 5th March 1908. Here the Divisional Judge does not give all the facts as they appear to have been given in a previous order remanding the case for further inquiry. The Divisional Judge remarks that unchastity by itself may not be sufficient to deprive a widow of her life-estate but that a widow who has become unchaste and has left her husband's house to live with another man can hardly be in a better position than a widow who has re-married. The Divisional Judge then found that the widow having become a bad character and gone to a different village had lost her rights. This judgment only goes so far as to find (it was not necessary to go further) that unchastity coupled with desertion of her husband's house, entails forfeiture of a widow's rights.

(4) Then, though earliest of all, not least in importance, is the Chief Court ruling in Civil Appeal No. 873 of 1899 (Amir Bakhsh v. Kande Khan) where the Riwaj-i-am and the four instances there cited are noted, and it is held that unchastity forfeits a widow's rights. In this case a Local Commissioner was appointed, and the whole consensus of opinion as shown by his report was, that unchastity forfeited the widow's life-estate.

I do not think it necessary to examine the oral evidence in detail. Some of the above noted cases are cited by the witnesses. Cases of which no records are forthcoming may or may not be true; it is easy for witnesses to give names and allege facts. As to the opinion of witnesses as to what the custom is, I consider nothing much need be said. Some of the witnesses apparently think that a widow may have illegitimate children, but must not be called unchaste unless she re-marries. The Riwaj-i-am, supported by instances, is against the defendant and so is the great bulk of the previous decisions. I would hold that Musammat Kirpo has by her misconduct forfeited her life-estate.

Two questions remain, (1) whether the plaintiff, being herself a female with only a limited estate, has the right to control her mother's actions and attack her mother's alienations, and (2) whether the alienee is entitled to hold possession, in spite of Musammat Kirpo having forfeited her rights, until Musammat Kirpo's death; in other words, whether plaintiff must content herself with a declaratory decree and cannot recover possession at once. I will first deal with the latter question.

RAM DEVI v. SHIB DEVI.

The District Judge has followed the ruling published as Bainta v. Achhar (1), which lays down that even where a reversioner is entitled to claim the estate from a widow by reason of her unchastity having forfeited her life-estate, the alienee from the widow cannot be prejudicially affected by the action taken by the reversioner subsequent to the date of the alienation; so that all that the reversioner can get is a declaration protecting his reversionary rights. It is held that unchastity of the widow does not "per se make her succession to the estate null and void ab initio," and I quite agree that unchastity does not annul the widow's succession. A widow succeeds by the death of her husband; her succession is a fact which subsequent misconduct may terminate but cannot cancel. But it seems to me that the real question is whether, the widow having once succeeded and then having become unchaste, such unchastity does not forfeit her rights as instantly as re-marriage would do. It is urged by defendant's Counsel that re-marriage mechanically terminates the widow's tenure, whereas unchastity only gives the reversioner a right to terminate the tenure. For my own part, with all due respect to the learned Judges who decided Bainta v. Achhar (1), I am quite unable to agree. I fail to see any difference between unchastity and re-marriage in this respect. I cannot see why an act of adultery should not be regarded as in itself extinguishing a widow's tenure just as much as going through the ceremony of karewa. The idea seems to me the same in either case, viz., that when a widow unites herself to another man she loses all rights in the estate of her late husband. In the case of karewa the re-union is legalized; in the case of unchastity the re-union is irregular. In either case it seems to me that the claim on the former husband's estate is at once forfeited. In the case of re-marriage unless the widow gives up the property out of Court, the reversioner has to come into Court, and if the re-marriage is denied he has to prove it before he can get possession. So, too, in the case of unchastity, unless the widow gives up the estate voluntarily the reversioner has to come into Court and prove his claim. I do not think that it can be said in either case that the widow ceases to be owner and that the reversioner becomes the owner by reason of the decree; it seems to me that in both cases the widow's tenure has ceased and the reversioner's ownership has commenced by reason of the widow's act (adultery or re-marriage) and that the decree merely recognises this and gives the reversioner possession of that which has already become his property. In my opinion, the widow in all such cases becomes a trespasser directly the ceremony of re-marriage or the act of adultery is committed, and the suit of the reversioner is to be regarded as a claim to dispossess a person who has, prior to the institution of the suit, ceased to hold any rights and become a trespasser.

I would remark that it appears to me that if the ruling in Bainta v. Achhar (1) is correct, all that an unchaste widow who finds herself threatened with a suit for ejectment has to do is to execute a deed of gift of her husband's estate in favour of a lover, brother, daughter or any one whom she may favour or whom she thinks she can trust; the result will be that the reversioner is at once shut out until the widow's death, and the penalty of forfeiture of life-estate then seems to be to become a mere farce easily evaded. I have already heard complaints that widows, who lose their rights by re-marriage but not by unchastity, prefer to live with their lovers without going through any marriage ceremony; this cannot be helped. But if among tribes whose custom recognizes unchastity equally with re-marriage as entailing forfeiture of a widow's life-estate, the principle laid down in Bainta v. Achhar (1) is to be followed, we shall, I fear, find that alienations by unchaste widows of their husbands' estates will soon become the fashion in order to shut out the reversioners from wresting the property from the widows.

I regret, therefore, that I cannot agree with the above ruling. My opinion is that unchastity at once forfeits the widow's rights.

If the above opinion of mine be correct, it is, I think, unnecessary to consider the question whether a daughter can control her mother's alienations, for, Musammat Kirpa having by reason of unchastity ceased to hold the estate even before the gift in question, there was nothing left to her which she could gift and the daughter is entitled to ignore the gift as a void transaction effected by a stranger subsequent to the property having passed to the daughter.

But if Bainta v. Achhar (1) is to be followed, then we must decide whether the daughter is competent to control her mother's actions. Seeing the unfavourable position in which daughters seem to stand amongst Rajputs of the Hoshiarpur District in regard to matters of succession, I should feel inclined to follow Sher Muhammad Khan v. Muhammad Khan (2), and to hold that the daughter cannot control her mother's actions. In Natha Singh v. Mohan Singh (3) it is observed that a right to succeed does not necessarily infer the right to control (see page 337). In Chiragh Bibi v. Hassan (4), it is held that among Arains of the Lahore District a daughter can control her step-mother's alienations, but the daughters seem to take a high place among Arains, and "clearly are recognized as having a strong position as heirs." In Nur-ul-nissa v. Gauhar-ul-nissa (5), it is laid down that the power of control, by a female, cannot be presumed. But Maqsud-ul-nissa v. Kaniz Zohra (6) lays down that any female entitled to succeed on the death of another female can control the latter's alienations if the latter has only a limited estate. I think it is high time that some definite rule should be laid down, if possible, so that we may know on whom the burden of proof in such cases is to lie.

My own inclination would be, to hold that the estate passed to the daughter even prior to the gift, and to raise the decree to one for possession, but as this would mean to overrule Bainta v. Achhar (1), I would, if my learned brother agrees with my views, refer this case to a Full Bench for a decision as to the correctness of the above ruling.

If the Full Bench should decide that the above ruling is correct, I would ask the Full Bench also to decide, in view of the apparent conflict of opinions [Sher Muhammad Khan v. Muhammad Khan (2), Chiragh Bibi v. Hassan (4) Nur-ul-nissa v. Gauhar-ul-nissa (5) and Natha Singh v. Mohan Singh (3) on one side and Maqsud-ul-nissa v. Kaniz Zohra (6) on the other] whether the presumption should be that a female holding a life-estate is subject to control in her dealings by a female next entitled to succeed as a similar life-tenant.

(2) 5 P. R. 1895.
(3) 93 P. R. 1906; 163 P. L. R. 1906.
(4) 19 P. R. 1906; 70 P. L. R. 1906.
(5) 61 P. R. 1906.
(6) 135 P. R. 1908.

JUDGMENT OF THE FULL BENCH.

ROBERTSON, J.—I think this reference can be disposed of very shortly. It appears to me that it was the result of a little misunderstanding due to the desire, which I appreciate, of my brothers, Johnstone and Chevis, JJ., not to appear to disregard what was understood to be laid down in the (unpublished) judgment by Mr. Justice Rattigan and myself in Bainta v. Achhar (1).

We are all agreed that that judgment does not govern the case now before us, and that it is, therefore, unnecessary to discuss any of the other points raised. This reference draws our attention to the danger of unauthorized reporting. It may be as well to notice what the judgment in Bainta v. Achhar (1) really did say.

There is no doubt that a distinction must be drawn between the nature of the forfeiture of a widow's estate by a widow who re-marries and by a widow who is proved to be unchaste. In the case of a forfeiture by re-marriage throughout the Province the woman ceases altogether to be the widow of her deceased husband, loses all rights and every kind of interest in his estats, and becomes a member of another family. The case of forfeiture by unchastity where it is established is different. The woman does not cease to be the widow of her deceased husband nor does she become a member of another family. By custom she forfeits a special form of maintenance recognized in this Province, i. e., the possession for life of her husband's estate, and it is a question, more often answered perhaps in the affirmative than in the negative, whether she is not even then entitled to maintenance from her husband's relatives.

In cases where she is held to be still entitled to maintenance though not to possession of her deceased husband's estate, it may be said that what occurs as a result of unchastity is the substitution of one form of maintenance for another of lesser extent at the option of the reversioners.

In the judgment in Bainta v. Achhar (1), which was given on the facts of a particular case, it was found that a widow had made an alienation in good faith for value received to an alienee who had nothing to put him on his guard, no action having been taken by the reversioners at that time, to deprive the widow of the estate. It was held, not that the widow could resist the claim on her own account, but that the equities in favour of the vendee, a purchaser for value in good faith before any action had been taken by the reversioners, were so strong that the Judges considered that his rights could not be affected by a subsequent suit on the part of the reversioners to obtain possession of the estate on the ground of alienor's unchastity. Indeed, in that case the Judges were by no means convinced even that the unchastity had occurred before the transfer (Notice their remarks that the succession could not be considered null and void ab initio).

Certainly, the reversioners had taken no action and there was nothing to warn the purchaser. In the case before us, it is clearly found that unchastity forfeits the rights of the widow to retain possession of the estate for her maintenance for life. The alienee was a donee and not a vendee for value. Moreover, the estate was clearly made over to him in consequence of his illicit relations with the widow and with the express object of defeating the rights of the reversioners. It is, therefore, unnecessary to discuss the principles which led to the judgment in Bainta Achhar (1), in which the wording, as it was a decision on the facts of the particular case and not intended for publication, may or may not have been wide. We hold it quite inapplicable to the case before us where unchastity forfeits the estate of a widow and where there is no alienee for value in good faith with any equities at all in his favour or whose claims, apart from those of the widow, require to be considered. This being so, in view of the findings of fact in the present case, and the facts of the previous case, it becomes unnecessary to discuss the second part of the reference.

The only question decided by this Full Bench is that the judgment in Bainta v. Achhar (1) does not govern the case before us. The case is, therefore, referred back to the Division Bench for decision.

Judgment announced on 17th November.

CHEVIS, J.—I understand that my learned brothers and myself are all agreed that the forfeiture which unchastity involves comes into force, as against the widow and also as against any person in whose favour she has alienated the land other than a person who in a bona fide alienee for consideration, with effect from the date of the unchastity and not merely from the date of institution of a suit by the reversioners. This appears to me all that it is necessary to decide for the purposes of the present appeal and I think it unnecessary to consider the peculiar case of a bona fide alienee for consideration.

I agree with my learned brother Robertson that the judgment in Bainta v. Achhar (1), as now explained, does not govern the case before us. It is now unnecessary to consider the second question referred to the Full Bench.

JOHNSTONE, J.—I concur in the observations of my brother Chevis.

RATTIGAN, J.—I agree that the judgment in Bainta v. Achhar (1) is not relevant to the present case, decided, as the former appeal was, upon its peculiar facts. As at present advised, I see no reason to question the general soundness of the proposition stated by my brother Chevis, but it is not necessary for us to give a definite opinion thereon, especially as the point has not been argued before us and incidental questions of some importance may have to be considered before a final decision can be given.

ROBERTSON, J.—I agree.

AJMER-MERWARA JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPLICATION No. 172 OF 1910.

April 21, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Colvin, J. C.

RAM GOPAL—PLAINTIFF—APPLICANT

versus

THE AGENT, BOMBAY BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY Co.—DEFENDANT—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Railways Act (IX of 1890*), s.* 77—Notice to the Traffic Manager equivalent to notice to the Agent—Contract Act (IX of 1872*), s.* 23—Risk-note Form H—Liability of the Railway Administration.

It is the business of the Traffic Manager to settle all claims against a Railway. A notice to that official is a claim preferred "to the Railway Administration" under section 77 of the Railways Act. The agent must be presumed to know what is going on in his subordinate offices and the notice of claim to the Traffic Manager must be regarded as equivalent to notice to the Agent.

Woods v. Meher Ali, 13 C. W. N. 24; 4 M. L. T. 427; 2 Ind. Cas. 107, followed.

Where a consignor signs a risk-note in the old Form H. and agrees to hold the Railway Administration free from all responsibility for any loss etc., for such consignment, the Railway Administration is fully protected from liability to compensation for loss.

Petition for revision against the order of the Judge, Court of Small Causes, Nasirabad.

ORDER.—The opposite party not advancing any serious objections to the re-admission of the petition for revision, this application is granted, provided it is supported by an affidavit as to the applicant having made a mistake and attended the wrong Court.

The affidavit has since been filed.

This Court, in anticipation of the filing of the affidavit, proceeds to dispose of the case on the merits. There are two somewhat important points of law involved in the case. The case was remanded to the lower Court to determine whether the notice served by the plaintiff actually reached the Agent of the Railway Company, and the lower Court has answered this question in the negative. But the real points for determination appear to be (i) Is it necessary that notice in such a case should be actually served upon the Agent of the Railway? (ii) Is defendant protected from liability to compensation owing to plaintiff having signed the risk-note (Form H)? As regards these two points I must say that the decision given by the Calcutta High Court in Woods v. Meher Ali (1), appears eminently reasonable. It is really the business of the Traffic Manager to settle such claims and, in the circumstances, the notice to that official is a claim preferred "to the Railway Administration" under section 77 of the Railways Act. The Agent must be presumed to know what is going on in his subordinate offices, and the notice of claim to the Traffic Manager must be regarded as equivalent to notice to the Agent. It is not disputed that notice of claim was sent to the Traffic Manager within six months, and, so far as this matter goes, the case is not, in my opinion, liable to be thrown out. In regard to the second point I am unable to follow the argument of the lower Court in which reference is made to section 23 of the Contract Act. The plaintiff signed risk-note in Form H, and in that document it clearly says that in consideration of special reduced or owner's risk rate, the signatories of the document agree that the sender shall hold the Railway Administration "harmless and free from all responsibility" for any loss, destruction, damage, etc., of such consignment. This seems to me to fully protect the Railway Administration from liability to compensation. I am informed that the wording of this Form H has since been altered so as to throw on the Railway Administration the liability for complete loss of any consignment. But the form signed by plaintiff was the old form and it seems to afford complete protection to the Railway in this case. This being so, I must dismiss this application, the lower Court's arguments for its conclusions are different from those of this Court, but the result is the same, the plaintiff not having made out a case for interference in revision costs on the applicant.

Application dismissed.

(1) 13 C. W. N. 24; 4 M. L. T. 427; 2 Ind. Cas. 107.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REFERENCE No. 36 OF 1912.

January 6, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis.

BELA SINGH—PETITIONER

versus

LABH SINGH—DEFENDANT.

Jurisdiction of Civil or Revenue Court—Suit for eviction—Plaintiff alleging forcible dispossession—Test—Examination of plaintiff—Defendant proving to be a tenant—Practice—Dismissal of suit.

A suit to evict defendant from land of which he is alleged to have taken forcible possession from plaintiff is cognizable by a Civil Court.

In ascertaining whether a suit is cognizable by a Civil or by a Revenue Court, it is not enough merely to look at the plaint.

The real test in such cases is to examine the plaintiff and see whether, according to the plaintiff, the defendant took the land from plaintiff in the first instance for cultivation, or whether the defendant got possession in the first place by force.

If, on inquiry, the Civil Court finds that the defendant is, as a matter of fact, a tenant and not a trespasser, the Civil Court should dismiss the suit.

Case referred by the Commissioner of the Lahore Division with his No. 450, dated the 11th April 1911, for the orders of the Chief Court.

ORDER.—This is a reference under section 99, Tenancy Act. The plaint was presented to a Munsif who returned it for presentation to a Revenue Court, holding the suit to be cognizable by a Revenue Court. The Revenue Court thinks the suit cognizable by a Civil Court and so has referred the matter to this Court for decision.

SALIMUDDI v. UZIR MAHOMED.

The defendant is in possession and the plaintiff sues to evict the defendant, alleging that the latter has taken forcible possession. The defendant is, in one part of the plaint, spoken of muzaria, and this has probably misled the Munsif; but had the Munsif examined the plaintiff as he should have done, he could easily have found out the real nature of the claim.

In such cases it is not enough merely to look at the plaint, for it is only too common a practice for petition-writers to describe the defendant as having taken forcible possession even when the plaintiff really means to say that the defendant is a tenant who has refused to pay rent and who is holding on in opposition to the landlord's wishes. The real test in such cases is to examine the plaintiff and see whether, according to the plaintiff, the defendant took the land from plaintiff in the first place for cultivation, or whether the defendant got possession in the first place by force. The Revenue Officer examined the plaintiff, who then stated that he had not given the land to defendant for cultivation, but that defendant had taken possession forcibly two years ago and that prior to such trespass plaintiff had cultivated the land himself. This makes it clear that this is a suit to eject a trespasser, not a tenant.

The suit is cognizable by a Civil Court, and I direct that the plaint be returned for representation to a Civil Court.

I may remark that if on inquiry it should appear that defendant is, as a matter of fact, a tenant and not a trespasser, the Civil Court should dismiss the suit, as the Civil Courts cannot decree the ejectment of a tenant.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 9, 47, 48 AND 49 OF 1909.

December 18, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Carnduff.

SALIMUDDI HOWLADAR AND ANOTHER —PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

UZIR MAHOMED HOWLADAR AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage-decree—Execution—Purchaser—Failure to get possession—Suit to recover possession—Obstruction by person interested not made party in mortgage-decree Who is to retain possession.

The purchaser at a sale in execution of a mortgage decree, if he fails to get possession or is dispossessed, is entitled to recover possession by suit from a person interested but excluded from the mortgage-action, subject to that person's right to redeem.

Appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge of Backergunge, dated August 1st, 1908, modifying that of the Munsif of Bhola, dated December 11th, 1907.

Babu Prokash Chandra Majumdar, for Babu Romesh Chandra Sen, for the Appellants.

Babu Abinash Chandra Guha, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—These appeals arise out of four suits for the recovery of the rent for the years 1310 to 1313 of certain holdings in a nimhowla. Nazir Mahomed, defendant No. 2, is one of the tenants, and he claims to be the mortgagee of the nimhowla in possession thereof, having had the nimhowla mortgaged to him by the plaintiff's vendor and having been put in possession of it in execution of his mortgage-decree. As the mortgagee obtained possession in the year 1312, the Courts below have allowed the plaintiffs rents for the years 1310, 1311 and a part of 1312. The plaintiffs now appeal, claiming the rest of the rent of 1312 and the rent of 1313.

The plaintiffs' purchase was in Bysakh 1309, that is May 1902. Nazir Mahomed's mortgage was executed in 1304, that is in 1897. It has been found that Nazir Mahomed had no notice of the plaintiff's purchase when he brought his mortgage suit in 1904 and obtained a decree. In execution of that decree, he purchased the nimhowla and his purchase was confirmed in Sawan 1312, that is August 1905. Having no notice of the plaintiffs' purchase, he did not make the plaintiffs parties to his mortgage suit; and it in now contended that, as the plaintffs are not bound by the mortgage-decree or the sale in execution thereof, their rights are in no way affected and they are entitled to the rents of 1312 and 1313 which have been refused them. The mortgagee purchaser's proper remedy, it is further contended, is either to bring a fresh action on his mortgage against the plaintiffs or to sue the plaintiffs for confirmation of possession, thus allowiug the plaintiffs an opportunity of exercising their right of redemption. The respondent, on the other hand, argues that as he is in possession, his possession ought not to be disturbed and the proper remedy of the plaintiffs is to bring a suit for redemption.

On behalf of the appellants I have been referred to the cases of Jugdeo Singh v. Habibulla (1) and Sriheri Banerjee v. Khitishchandra Rai Bahadur (2) and it is further contended by their learned Vakil that the two cases of Gangadas Bhattar v. Jogendranath Mita (3) and Bunwari Jha v. Rumjee Thakur (4), on which the lower Courts and the respondent rely, really support the appellants' case. I have considered these cases carefully, and the question raised is, no doubt, one of some nicety and by no means free from difficulty: but the result of the decisions seems to me to be this, that the purchaser at a sale in execution of a mortgage-decree, if he fails to get possession or is dispossessed, is entitled to recover possession by suit from a person interested but excluded from the mortgage action, subject to that person's right to redeem. That being so, I think, that where the purchaser at the sale in execution of a mortgage-decree is, as here, actually in possession, his possession ought to be maintained, subject, of course, to the other party's right to bring a suit for redemption. On the whole, then, I think that these appeals must be dismissed with costs.

Appeals dismissed.

(1) 12 C. W. N. 107; 6 C. L. J. 612.
(2) 24 C. 569 at p. 574; 1 C. W. N. 509.
(3) 5 C. L. J. 315; 11 C. W. N. 403.
(4) 7 C. W. N. 11 at pp. 18, 19.

[(1912) 1 M. W. N. 11.]

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1211 OF 1909.

November 9, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar.

VELLUVAKANDI KUNHI PATHUMMA —PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

PONNANKI MOOSSAN MAMMAD—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Muhammadan Law—Moplahs following Marumakatayam system—Moplah wife claiming maintenance under Muhammadan Law bound to live with her husband, if so required, notwithstanding Marumakatayam custom to the contrary.

Though the usual practice amongst the Moplahs of North Malabar following the Marumakathayam law is for a married woman to live in her tarward house, yet, as the wife's right to maintenance is derived by her from the Muhammadan Law, she must take it subject to the obligation under that law to live with the husband in his own house if he requires her to do so.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of North Malabar, in Appeal Suit No. 318 of 1903, presented against the decree of the Court of the District Munsif of Cannanore in Original Suit No. 349 of 1907.

Mr. J. L. Rosario, for the Appellant.

Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The Judge finds that under the Muhammadan law, a wife is bound to go and live with her husband. It is not quite clear whether he means "under the Muhammadan law" as observed by the community to which the parties belong though his reference to the evidence of the plaintiff's witnesses Nos. 2 and 6 may show that that is his meaning. It is strongly contended for the appellant that, according to the usage of Marumakkathayam Moplahs, there is no obligation on the part of a wife to leave her tarwad house in order to live with her husband. As the question is one affecting a pretty large community, we consider it desirable to have a distinct finding on the question whether a Moplah wife governed by the Marumakkathayam law is bound to leave her tarwad house and to take up her residence with her husband, and whether such obligation on her part, if any, is subject to any and what restrictions.

The parties are at liberty to adduce fresh evidence.

The finding should be submitted within two months after the re-opening of the District Court after the recess, and seven days will be allowed for filing objections.

[In compliance with the above judgment the District Judge submitted the following

FINDING:—

I am directed to submit a finding on the following question:—

"Whether a Moplah wife governed by the Marumakathayam law is bound to leave her tarwad house and take up her residence with her husband, and whether such obligation on her part, if any, is subject to any and what restrictions."

2. On a perusal of the remand order certain conclusions suggested themselves—in the light of one's knowledge of North Malabar—and the evidence adduced on remand has not materially modified those conclusions. They are:—(1) that it is the custom under Marumakathayam law for a Moplah wife to live in her own tarwad house; (2) that notwithstanding this, she is bound to go and live with her husband if he so requests. This will be elucidated further on.

3. Plaintiff has examined three additional witnesses at remanded hearing and defendant four.

4. P. W. No. 8 is the Athigari of Muzhapilangad which is about five miles from where the parties live. He is a follower of Marumakathayam, as are also, I may state at once, all the other witnesses examined on remand. He states that among Marumakathayam Moplahs there is no obligation on a woman to leave her tarwad and go and live with her husband on marriage, that the custom is for husbands to visit their wives in their tarwad houses, and that the husband generally lives in the wife's tarwad house after marriage. Both this witness and all the others examined on remand have been cross-examined about particular instances where more or less well-known Moplahs have followed the practice opposed to the one in favour of which they are giving evidence. And no doubt there is considerable diversity of usage; in the case of some of the Moplahs alluded to their wives live with them, in the cases of others the wives live in their tarwad houses. To return to P. W. No. 8, he admits in cross-examination that as regards the rights and obligations arising out of marriage, Moplahs follow Muhammadan law. The witness states that he does not know any Moplah wife who is living with her husband. But he has to admit immediately after that his own wife is living with him. The question whether if a wife refuses to go and live with her husband she is entitled to maintenance does not seem to arise on the issue referred for a finding. Nevertheless, as it could scarcely be said to be altogether unconnected with the subject I allowed the witnesses to be questioned on the point, noting the objection of Counsel and Pleader for plaintiff.

5. P. W. No. 9, a resident of the Amsam of the parties, with Rs. 70 assessment in his name, corroborates the last witness re the custom and the absence of obligation on the part of the wife to go and live elsewhere than in her tarwad house with her husband. All the witnesses admit that the vidukudal or consummation ceremony takes place in the wife's tarwad house and that the husband lives there for some time afterwards. This particular custom appears to have practically no exceptions. This witness is a son of plaintiff's karnavan's daughter and various other marriage connections between relatives of his and of plaintiff are elicited. P. W. No. 10 an inhabitant of Cannanore about four miles from where the parties live with Rs. 44 assessment in his name corroborates the two previous witnesses re custom and the wife not being bound to go and live elsewhere with her husband. The witness was convicted with Kalleri Pokkar in a famous forgery case but was acquitted on appeal. He denies that among respectable people the wife goes and lives with the husband. But the evidence shows that the practice is largely followed among such people.

6. D. W. No. 7—1st D. W. on remand—is acting Kazi of Tellicherry for his father the permanent Kazi, who, he states, is ill. He says his tarwad has some property for which there is Rs. 20 in his karnavan's name. He says that among Marumakathayam Moplahs a wife is bound to go and live with her husband if he so requests. He would apparently rather answer a question where a Moplah wife spends most of her time—in her husband's or her tarwad houss than the question where Moplah wives generally live.

He, however, states that "in this country," meaning no doubt in the locality of Tellicherry, most wives live in their tarwad houses. In cross-examination he draws a distinction, in the country parts the wife lives permanently in her husband's house but that in towns the husband lives in the wife's house. I don't know whether this evidence of his is simply an attempt to wriggle or represent a solid distinction. He states the obligation of a wife to go and live with her husband is founded on Muhammadan Law and not on local custom, but again he states that according to local custom she must go. Again, he states there is no special local custom in the matter.

7. D. W. No. 8 is karnavan of his tarwad which he says is one of the principal ones in Tellichary paying Rs. 1,000 assessment —the amount standing in his name as karnavan is only about Rs. 20—also states that a Marumakathayam Moplah wife is bound to go and live with her husband. Of course, all the witnesses on remand who say the wife is bound also say that if she refuses to go she is not entitled to maintenance. The witnesses on the other side on remand say, of course, that her not going does not disentitle her to maintenance. These latter witnesses also seem to announce a general proposition that under Muhammadan law a husband is bound to maintain his wife unless and until he divorces her, i. e., apparently even if she refused to go though bound. If such were the case, his remedy would presumably be to divorce her. But Muhammadan law does not compel a husband to maintain his wife under all circumstances till he divorces her. There is nothing in this point and besides the maintenance matter is not immediately in question in the issue before me. To continue with D. W. No. 8, though he states that a wife is bound to go and live with her husband he supports the other side otherwise because he states that as far as his knowledge extends the husband generally lives in the wife's house, though he modifies this by saying that the custom is for the husband to live in the wife's house, portion of the time and for the husband to take the wife to his house for the other portion. Again, he says that Moplahs will live for some time in their wives' houses and if there is no accommodation they will leave.

8. D. W. No. 9 is one of the karnavans or manager of the Baliapatam jamath mosque and says his tarwad is an ancient one in Baliapatam. He says that if a Marumakkathayam Moplah wants his wife to go and live with him she must, that the wife's place of residence is determined by the husband and in the absence of such determination she resides in her own tarwad house. But he states that most women go and live in their husbands' houses; again, that it is about half and half each way; and that he can't say which arrangement is most prevalent. His own wife he admits lived in her tarwad house for a considerable time though she has been living with him permanently for a long time. The witness and the Kazi of the Baliapatam mosque (P. W. No. 6) appear to be on opposite sides in some disputes re mosque matters. D. W. No. 10 lives in the locality of the parties and corroborates the previous witnesses re the wife's obligation. In his locality the majority of wives, he says, live with their husbands. He conducts some cases he says and it would seem that he assisted in this case also for defendant.

9. I have summarized the foregoing evidence mainly for convenience of reference. As stated already, it does not materially affect my previous ideas in the matter.

10. There can be no question about its being the custom for the wives of Marumakkathayam Moplahs to live in their wives' tarwad houses and be visited by their husbands there. Those witnesses who try to prove the contrary are essaying an impossible task. It is one of the recognized incidents of Marumakaythayam law which the North Malabar Moplahs follow. The evidence of P. W. Nos. 8, 9 and 10 and of D. W. No. 8—who supports them on this point—may be accepted about the custom. The evidence of D. W. Nos. 7 and 9 is halting and inconclusive on it, for the simple reason that they are trying to show that the custom is other than it really is. Even apart from evidence there is no doubt about the existence of the custom in question. No doubt, it has numerous and probably ever increasing exceptions.

11. Had the issue referred for a finding been whether such a custom existed or not I should have had no hesitation in reporting in the affirmative. I should also have added that it is an ancient custom, a widespread one and one not repugnant to public morality—essentials of a valid custom.

But the issue is not that but whether a Moplah wife governed by Marumakathayam law is bound to leave her tarwad house and go and live with her husband. The existence of the custom in question cannot alone settle this point. Other considerations arise. There is the question of Muhammadan law. The parties are married according to the rites of Muhammadan law. In all matters appertaining to religion they follow Muhammadan law. Marriage is, of course, a religious institution under Muhammadan law. And, of course, under Muhammadan law a wife is bound to live with her husband if he requests her to do so. Though there is nothing opposed to public morality in the custom of a wife not going to her husband's house but remaining in her own tarwad house, yet there cannot be any doubt that such a custom must be repugnant to Muhammadan marriage law as well as to the marriage laws of every patriarchal people. That a wife could refuse to live with her husband in his house if it so pleases her is utterly opposed to the principles of those laws. It seems to me doubtful whether it would even be possible to establish such a custom as a binding modification of Muhammadan marriage law. But assuming it could I am clearly of opinion that there is no such evidence in this case as would justify holding that this Marumakathayam custom has become such a binding modification of Muhammadan law as to justify a wife in refusing to go and live with her husband. The custom exists and has existed because Moplahs accepting the conditions of the Marumakathayam law under which they lived, accepted also that one of them by which wives continued to live in their own tarwad houses and did not in consequence desire to exercise their right under Muhammadan law. But it does not follow that this obvious and highly important right under Muhammadan law has been abrogated and that if a husband requests his wife to live with him as Muhammadan law lays down, she is entitled to refuse. No doubt the Kazi of Baliapatam was examined as a P. W. on commission at the original trial and he says "if a husband calls his wife to live in his house she should go if it is advantageous to her, and she should not go if it is disadvantageous." This is not the view of D. W. No. 7 the acting Kazi of Tellicherry and it seems to me more an attempt to reconcile the two conflicting facts than an authoritative exposition of which of the two laws is to prevail in the matter. The mere evidence of P. W. Nos. 8—10 that the wife is bound to go cannot establish the important point now in question re the conflict between Muhammadan law and Marumakathayam custom. It would have been desirable to have had more definite and more extensive ecclesiastical evidence on the question. It was not sought to examine the Baliapatam Kazi again in the light of the High Court's remand order.

12. With reference to the portion in the remand order "...and whether such obligation on her part, if any, is subject to any and what restrictions," neither side has taken its stand on any question of this sort, not even in connection with the Baliapatam Kazi's statement just quoted; he does not elucidate further what amounts to "advantageous" and "disadvantageous" except to indicate that even the giving of property by the husband to the wife need not necessarily make things "advantageous" to her.

13. I may allude to the fact that the very right to the maintenance which plaintiff claims accrues to her only under the Muhammadan law; it is unknown to Marumakathayam law. So the law plaintiff seeks to overrule on one point is the very law which enables her to sue. If the rights, why not also the obligations of Muhammadan law?

14. On the facts before me I, therefore, decide on the issue referred to me by the High Court that a Moplah wife governed by Marumakathayam law is bound to leave her house and go and live with her husband if he requests her to do so]

The second appeal coming on for final hearing after the return of the finding the Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT.—The Judge has found that the usual practice amongst the Moplahs of North Malabar following the Marumakathayam law is for a married woman to live in her tarwad house, though there are many instances where the wife goes to live with her husband in his own house, but he holds that as the wife's right to maintenance is derived by her from the Muhammadan law she must take it subject to the obligation under that law to live with the husband in his own house if he requires her to do so. We agree in this view. Besides, the custom of living in the tarwad house cannot be said to be anything more than a social usage and does not carry any legal consequences. The result is that the second appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

[s. c. 16 C. W. N. 97; 11 M. L. T. 6; 9 A. L. J. 68; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 32.]

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

November 2, 1911.

Present:—Lord Macnaghten, Lord Robson, Sir John Edge and Mr. Ameer Ali.

JAMNA DAS—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Pandit RAM AUTAR PANDE AND OTHERS —DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Sale of equity of redemption—Undertaking by purchaser to pay off mortgage—Personal liability to pay—Balance legally recoverable—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882*), s.* 90.

The purchaser of an equity of redemption is not personally bound to pay the mortgage-debt.

A mortgagor sold his equity of redemption and left a part of the purchase-money with the purchaser to pay off the mortgage. The purchaser did not do so, and the mortgagee sued on the mortgage and sold the mortgaged property which was not sufficient to pay off the decretal amount. He then sued, under section 90 of the Transfer of Property Act, for the recovery of the balance for the purchaser:

Held, that, the mortgagee had no right to avail himself of the undertaking given by the purchaser to his vendor, as the mortgagee was no party to the sale; and that the purchaser not having entered into any contract with the mortgagee, was not a person from whom "the balance was legally recoverable" within the meaning of section 90.

Appeal from the judgment of the Allahabad High Court, dated April 20th, 1909, reported as 31 A. 352; 6 A. L. J. 427; 2 Ind. Cas. 460, affirming that of the Sub-Judge of Mirzapore, dated the April 16th, 1907.

FACTS.—Lakhpati Koer borrowed Rs. 40,000 from the plaintiff Jamna Das on a mortgage-bond. She subsequently sold all her properties including the equity of redemption in the mortgage to the principal defendant, and out of the consideration-money she left Rs. 40,000 with the purchaser to pay off the mortgage, but the purchaser did not do so.

The mortgagee instituted a suit on his mortgage against the representatives of the mortgagor and against the purchaser, the principal defendant, and obtained a decree. He then caused the mortgaged property to be sold, but the sale-proceeds were not sufficient to pay off the decretal amount. Thereupon he instituted the present proceedings for recovery of the balance of the amount under section 90 of the Transfer of Property Act. The Court of first instance gave him a decree against the representatives of the mortgagor but dismissed his application against the principal defendant. He appealed to the High Court but his appeal was dismissed. He then appealed to the Privy Council.

Sir E. Richards, K. C., and Mr. Ross, for the Appellants.

Mr. L. DeGruyther, K. C., and Mr. Bhagwandin Dube, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

LORD MACNAGHTEN.—This is a perfectly plain case. The action is brought by a mortgagee to enforce against a purchaser of the mortgaged property an undertaking that he entered into with his vendor. The mortgagee has no right to avail himself of that. He was no party to the sale. The purchaser entered into no contract with him, and the purchaser is not personally bound to pay this mortgage-debt. Therefore, he is not a person from whom, in the words of the 90th section of the Transfer of Property Act, "the balance is legally recoverable."

Their Lordships will, therefore, humbly advise His Majesty that this appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellant: Messrs. Ranken, Ford, Ford & Chester.

Solicitors for the Respondents: Messrs. Barrow, Rogers and Nevill.

KIRPAL SINGH v. SANT SINGH.

(S. C. 71 P. R. 1911.)

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL No. 662 OF 1909.

May 22, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Rattigan and Mr. Justice Shah Din.

KIRPAL SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

SANT SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Bond in favour of managing member—Right to sue—Manager's right to sue in his own name without impleading other members—Right of other members to receive payments—Appeal—Court-fee—Payments disallowed by first Court—Prayer for declaration as to who is entitled to money—Prayer for reduction of amount of decree—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870*), Sch. II, Art.* 17 VI—Parties.

A bond was executed in favour of some members of a joint Hindu family as obligees. These members brought a suit for recovery of the money due on the bond. The other members of the family were not impleaded as parties. The defendant had made certain payments to the other members on account of the debt. He pleaded that the debt was due to all the members of the family and that the payments should be allowed towards the debt. The Court of first instance held that the payments could not be regarded as payments made to the plaintiffs and decreed the whole claim. The defendant appealed, affixing a Court-fee stamp of Rs. 10 on his memorandum of appeal:

Held, that the memorandum of appeal was sufficiently stamped so far as the prayer for a final declaration as to who was entitled to the money was concerned, but that the defendant must pay ad valorem Court-fee on the amount of payments by which he sought the decree of the lower Court to be reduced.

If a contract is made on behalf of a joint Hindu family by the managing member, the latter is entitled to sue on the contract in his own name without making the other members of the family parties to the suit.

In the case of such a contract, no other member of the family is competent to interfere or to give receipts in connection therewith.

Kishen Parshad v. Har Narain Singh, 15 C. W. N. 321; 8 A. L. J. 256; 9 M. L. T. 343; 13 C. L. J. 345; 21 M. L. J. 378; 13 Bom. L. R. 359; 33 A. 272 (P. C.); (1911) 2 M. W. N. 395; 9 Ind. Cas. 739, followed.

Where a debtor executes a bond in favour of some members of a joint Hindu family under the impression that the contract is with all the members of that family and has no notice or reason to believe otherwise, he is justified in making payments to members of the family other than the obligees and should be given credit therefor.

First appeal from the order of the District Judge, Gujranwala District, dated 29th April 1909.

Mr. Shadi Lal, for the Appellant.

Rai Sahib Lala Sukh Dial, for the Respondents

JUDGMENT.—A preliminary question arises in this appeal with regard to the sufficiency of the Court-fee stamp. Briefly stated, the facts are as follows:—

One Bishen Singh, with his four sons Hakim Singh, Sanat Singh, Ganesha Singh and Narain Singh formed a joint Hindu family and owned two shops, one at Laddhewala, the other at Mannanwala, both in the Gujranwala District. Bishen Singh died in November 1903, and on the 21st July 1904 Sardar Kirpal Singh (defendant-appellant) executed a bond for Rs. 17,000 nominally in favour of Hakim Singh and Sant Singh. The latter are the only persons who are named in the bond as the obligees, and on the 1st February 1908, Sant Singh and the two sons of Hakim Singh (who had died prior to suit instituted the present claim which is for recovery of Rs. 21,585-14-3, that is to say, for Rs. 17,000 as principal and Rs. 5,585-14-3 as interest and compound interest. Plaintiffs admit that a sum of Rs. 1,000 was re-paid by defendant on 12th Maghar, Sambat 1962 (26th November 1905) and they give defendant credit for the said amount.

Defendant admitted execution of the bond and liability thereupon, but pleaded (1) that the money had been advanced to him from the joint fund of the family and that plaintiffs were, therefore, not competent to sue alone for its recovery and that the other members of the joint family (Ganesha Singh and Narain Singh) should be impleaded as co-plaintiffs; and (2) that he had paid Ganesha Singh and Narain Singh Rs. 10,400 in all, including the Rs. 1,000 admitted by plaintiffs to have been re-paid, and (3) that as this payment was made to persons who were members of the joint family, he should be given credit therefor. When examined upon the pleadings, defendant distinctly stated that he still owed over Rs. 9,000 on the bond, and that he was ready to pay that amount "to whomsoever the Court will order" (page 21 of the paper-book).

Before issues were drawn, Ganesha Singh and Narain Singh filed an application in Court (on the 20th February 1908) in which they asserted that money paid to defendant had come from the funds of the joint family, and that as they were equally entitled to it they should be impleaded as co-plaintiffs. The District Judge practically ignored this application, his order being that it should be "placed on the record."

The case then went to trial upon the following issues:—

"(1) Should all the members of the plaintiffs' joint Hindu family be brought on the record as co-plaintiffs?

(2) Have any re-payments been made by the defendant?

(3) Should the re-payment made to Ganesha Singh and Narain Singh be looked upon as re-payments made to the plaintiffs in satisfaction of the bond in suit?

(4) What is now due from the defendants?"

Upon these issues the District Judge found (i) that as the bond was executed exclusively in the names of Hakim Singh and Sant Singh, these persons were entitled to sue in their own names for its enforcement, and that it was unnecessary for them to implead the other members of their family as co-plaintiffs or as defendants; (ii) that a total sum of Rs. 10,400 had been paid by defendant to Ganesha Singh and Narain Singh, but (iii) that the defendant was not justified in making these payments to the latter, who had no authority to act as agents of the plaintiffs for this purpose; and (iv) that the said payments by defendants could not be regarded as payments made to plaintiffs.

The District Judge accordingly granted plaintiffs a decree for the full amount claimed (viz., Rs. 21,585-14-3) with interest at the rate of 12 annas per cent. per mensem from the date of suit until realization. He further ordered defendant to pay costs of the suit.

From this decree the defendant has preferred an appeal to this Court and has affixed a Court-fee stamp of Rs. 10 only upon his memorandum of appeal. To his grounds of appeal the defendant has added the following note:

"As the defendant-appellant never denied liability for the debt and even now accepts the decree in the main, only contending that the Court should finally decide as to who is entitled to it, the value for purposes of Court-fee cannot be determined as it is a case when he only wants a final declaration as to who is entitled to the money and a stamp of Rs. 10 is sufficient for this portion of the relief."

We have heard arguments upon this question, but neither Counsel has been able to refer us to any authority directly in point and we must accordingly decide it upon principle.

No doubt the grounds of appeal are in the main of the nature of an interpleader, and appellant's chief objection is that the Court has decided the suit without impleading Ganesha Singh and Narain Singh, who also claim to be entitled to the money due on the bond. He points out that the result will be that he has to run the risk of a second suit at the instance of those persons.

This contention is, we think, well founded in part. The defendant has still to pay (in any event) a large sum to the persons who are legally entitled to the bond, and as to this sum he expresses his willingness to pay the said amount to whomsoever the Court may adjudge it to be due. Pro tanto, he accepts the decree of the District Judge, and the only question that he wants definitely settled is whether the plaintiff, or Ganesha Singh and Narain Singh, or both jointly, are entitled to the balance. As to this part of his appeal we think this memo. of appeal has been sufficiently stamped with a Court-fee of Rs. 10 (article 17 (6) of the 2nd Schedule to the Court Fees Act). But as regards the sum of Rs. 10,400 which the defendant says he has paid to Ganesha Singh and Narain Singh, the matter is very different. Here defendant asks for the reversal of the decree of the District Judge and credit given to him for this amount. The District Judge has held that the payment of this amount to Ganesha Singh and Narain Singh cannot be regarded as payment to plaintiffs, and it is the object of defendant upon this appeal to show that this finding is wrong and that to that extent the decree of the District Judge must be set aside. This is a relief of which the value can certainly be determined, and we accordingly hold that the plaintiff must pay ad valorem duty on the said amount of Rs. 10,400.*

In support of his client's appeal, Mr. Shadi Lal devoted much time and trouble to establish the facts that the four brothers,

* NOTE. The appellant made up the deficiency in the Court-fee stamp in accordance with this order.

KIRPAL SINGH v. SANT SINGH.

Hakim Singh, Sant Singh, Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh, constituted a joint Hindu family in every sense of the terms; that the whole of their property was still joint, and that the Rs. 17,000 advanced to defendant, within a few months of the death of Bishen Singh, the father of the said four brothers, had come from the joint family funds. A very lengthy and convincing argument was addressed to us in support of these contentions, without interruption on the part of Mr. Sukh Dial, and as Sant Singh (the principal plaintiff) had in the lower Court distinctly asserted that the money in question had been "allotted" to him and Hakim Singh by his father, we were led to infer that the respondents still maintained that the loan to defendant had nothing to do with the joint family. We were, therefore, somewhat surprised when Mr. Sukh Dial, on rising to reply, admitted that the money came from the joint funds and that the plaintiffs would (if successful in this case) have eventually to account to Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh for it. Plaintiffs' position, as now explained, is this:—The family is joint in every respect, and the money advanced to defendant came from the joint family chest; but, though joint, the four brothers have mutually agreed that the two shops, the one at Mannanwala, the other at Laddhewala, shall be carried on independently of each other; that the contract with defendant was made by the Laddhewala shop, of which plaintiffs are alone the managing members, and that, therefore, plaintiffs are alone entitled to sue in respect of that contract and to receive payments in respect thereof from defendant. Mr. Sukh Dial conceded, further, that the suit must be regarded as one by plaintiffs in a representative capacity, that is, by them as the Managers of the Laddhewala branch suing on behalf of the family. The only points, therefore, in dispute upon this appeal are (1) whether the alleged repayments made by defendant to Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh were actually made; (2) whether the sum of Rs. 1,000 which was admittedly re-paid by defendant on the 12th Maghar, Sambat 1962 was paid directly to Hakim Singh or indirectly to the latter through Ganesha Singh; and (3) if such re-payments, if established in fact, can be held to be valid payments, binding upon plaintiffs.

It is, we think, to be regretted that the respondent's position was not made clear at the commencement of the hearing, as considerable time would thereby have been saved and Mr. Shadi Lal spared much trouble.

But the position of plaintiffs has now been made clear and we have consequently to deal only with the above questions, as Mr. Shadi Lal concedes that if plaintiffs are suing merely on behalf of the family, as the alleged Managing members of the Laddhewala shop, they were entitled to bring the suit in their name, without making the other members of the family parties to the suit. Upon this point the ruling of their Lordships of the Privy Council reported in Kishen Parshad v. Har Narain Singh (1) is conclusive. Mr. Shadi Lal, however, does not admit that plaintiffs are the Managing members of that shop, or that the contract was made with that shop or distinct from the family as a whole, and in any event, he contends, that defendant had no knowledge of any arrangement inter se which may have been made by the members of the family. The learned Counsel argues that defendant had always regarded the family as joint in every respect, and that he had no knowledge whatever of the arrangement alleged by plaintiffs, but denied by the two other brothers, Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh.

After full consideration of the evidence upon the record of the pleadings of the parties and of the arguments of learned Counsel, we have come to the conclusion that defendant has succeeded in his contentions.

In the first place, we agree with the District Judge that defendant has proved that he made re-payments to Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh aggregating in all Rs. 10,400.

Plaintiffs admit that the sum of Rs. 1,000 was actually re-paid, and it is clear from the entry in their own books, made by the late Hakim Singh, that this sum was received through the Mannanwala people, i. e., through Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh. As to the other items of Rs. 900, Rs. 2,500, Rs. 2,000 and Rs. 4,000, we have the evidence of defendant who swears that he paid these sums to Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh and his evidence is corroborated by that of these two persons, and of his agent Ram Singh, and by the entries in defendant's account books. It was, no doubt, difficult for plaintiffs to prove the negative, but the fact that Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh (who will eventually have to account for monies so received and who admit that the plaintiffs are entitled to a half share therein) support defendant's assertion that these sums have been paid to them, is, we think, a very strong piece of evidence in favour of defendant's plea. The District Judge finds that the sums were actually paid to Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh, but somewhat inconsequentially, he proceeds to hold the defendant was acting in collusion with those two brothers against the plaintiffs. It is true that the witness, Dharam Singh, stated that after the brothers had quarrelled, the plaintiffs alleged before him that Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh were in collusion with defendant, but that Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh denied the allegation. Except for this, there is nothing on the record to support the theory of fraud or collusion, and whether Sant Singh or Budh Singh so much as hinted at it, though we are bound to say that the execution of the pro-note on the 16th Magh, Sambat 1963 (28th January 1907) for Rs. 13,054-6-0 is a circumstance which does not impress us favourably. The very fact that defendant does not rely upon this note (which relieved him of all liability as regards the payment of compound interest) is a point against him. But upon the balance of evidence, we think his contentions must prevail. He has from the outset pleaded re-payment to Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh, giving full details as to amounts re-paid and dates of re-payment, and Sant Singh, though examined on no less than five occasions during the course of the trial, has never ventured to suggest that defendant was colluding with his brothers. The District Judge has found the books of the defendant to be in order and above suspicion, and Mr. Sukh Dial has not been able to satisfy us that this finding is erroneous. In view of all these facts we must hold that defendant actually paid Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh Rs. 10,400 towards the liquidation of his debt upon the bond of the 17th July 1904.

(1) 15 C. W. N. 321; 8 A. L. J. 256; 9 M. L. T. 343; 13 C. L. J. 345; 21 M. L. J. 378; 13 Bom. L. R. 359; 33 A. 272 (P. C.); (1911) 2 M. W. N. 395; 9 Ind. Cas. 73

As regards the second point, we have already pointed out that the entry made by Hakim Singh himself fully corroborates defendant and Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh in their assertion that the Rs. 1,000 re-paid on the 12th Maghar, Sambat 1962, were received through Ganesha Singh.

The real dispute between the parties is with regard to the third question. Assuming that the re-payments were made to Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh, can we hold that plaintiffs are bound thereby? This is a question of some difficulty, but after giving every weight to Mr. Sukh Dial's arguments, we are of opinion that plaintiffs are bound to acknowledge and give credit for those payments.

From a purely equitable point of view, it would appear unjust to compel defendant to pay plaintiffs sums of money which he has already paid to persons who are jointly entitled with plaintiffs to those monies, and who admit that they have received the same and are ready to account to plaintiffs therefor. But if plaintiffs are legally entitled to recover such sums from defendant, questions of equity cannot be considered as a bar to their claim. The question, then, is whether plaintiffs are in law entitled to ignore those re-payments? Mr. Sukh Dial contends that they are so entitled because (a) the contract was, upon the face of the bond, made solely with Hakim Singh and Sant Singh, as the Managing members of Laddhewala shop, and (b) the latter alone were entitled to receive payments in respect of that debt. Now it may, we think, be taken as established by the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council to which we have already referred, that if a contract is made on behalf of a joint Hindu family by the Managing member, no other member of the family is competent to interfere in that contract or to give receipts in connection therewith. Mr. Shadi Lal demurred to this interpretation of their Lordships' judgment, but we think it is sound. But while the principle is clear, its application to the facts of particular cases may not be easy, and every case must necessarily be decided upon its own facts.

In the present case, the crucial question is whether the contract was made by Hakim Singh and Sant Singh as Managing members of the Laddhewala branch, and whether defendant knew that the contract was with the latter only, and not with the joint family. If he did, he had no right to make payments to other members of the family. On the other hand, if he had no reason to believe that the contract was other than a contract with all four of the joint brothers, he was, in our opinion, fully justified (until notified otherwise) in making payments to any one of those four brothers on behalf of the family.

Now what are the facts? Admittedly, the family was joint and during the life-time of the father, Bishen Singh, both shops were managed jointly. Defendant had dealings with the family during Bishen Singh's life-time. Bishen Singh died in November 1903 and the bond was executed in July 1904, and it is admitted that at that time all four brothers were on the best of terms. It is not suggested that any notice was given to defendant that the two shops were to be managed independently and when the bond was executed, all four brothers were present and the money (according to defendant's evidence which is uncontradicted upon the point) was actually handed to him by Narain Singh. Plaintiff, Sant Singh, himself admits that the bond was executed neither at Laddhewala nor at Mannawala but at Gujranwala, and there can be little, if any, doubt that the money was paid there. Then we have a letter from defendant to Sant Singh and Hakim Singh (printed at page 5 of the paper-book) in the last sentence of which defendant distinctly informs plaintiff that he told "Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh that he would pay interest when the grain was sold." This letter and this remark admittedly refer to this bond-debt and it is a legitimate inference from the words used by defendants that he regarded Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh as equally entitled in the debt.

Furthermore, we have it established that from the very outest defendant made re-payments through Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh. The first re-payment the item of Rs. 1,000 was made on the 12th Maghar, Sambat 1962 (26th November 1905) and it is clear from the evidence of defendant Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh and from the terms of the entry made by Hakim Singh himself in his own books, that this sum was paid by defendant to Ganesha Singh and remitted by the latter to the Laddhewala shop. Plaintiffs are unable to show that they protested against this payment to the Mannanwala branch, or that they informed defendants that all payments must in future be made direct to them.

As regards the other sums Narain Singh has deposed in clear terms that "Sant Singh and Hakim Singh had knowledge of these recoveries" (paper-book page 22, L. 20). Sant Singh was examined on two occasions after that statement was made, but on neither occasion did he venture to contradict Narain Singh's very emphatic assertion. On the other-hand, in his evidence given on the 8th April 1908—(paper-book page 24) he makes two false statements, (1) that the Rs. 17,000 lent to defendant had been allotted to his share by Bishen Singh, and (2) that after the death of Bishen Singh plaintiffs got no money from the Mannanwala firm. It is clear from the entry made by Hakim Singh (and Sant Singh could not have been ignorant of the fact) that the Rs. 1,000 had been received after the death of Bishen Singh, from the Mannanwala branch.

As a matter of fact, a quarrel arose in the family after the death of Hakim Singh, and it was in consequence of this dispute that the two branches, at Mannanwala and Ladhewala practically, though not nominally, separated from each other and refused to recognize each other's acts. The defendant has sworn that he personally knew nothing of this dispute, until the institution of the present suit and there is nothing on the record to rebut this evidence as to this.

There is evidence on the record to the effect that in their dealings with various third parties, all four brothers acted upon the assumption that each of them was entitled to enforce contracts made in the names of some only of them, but we lay no great stress upon this, though we cannot lose sight of the fact that in a previous suit Hakim Singh (the eldest brother) distinctly admitted that it was immaterial in whose name a bond was executed and that any one of the brothers could sue to enforce it (see his statement made on the 14th August 1901). The important point is whether defendant was led to believe that the four brothers were joint and that his contract, though nominally in the names of Sant Singh and Hakim Singh alone, was really a contract with the joint family. It is now, somewhat tardily and reluctantly, admitted that in point of fact the contract was with the joint family, and that all members of it are entitled to share therein, and the sole ground upon which defendant's right to pay monies thereunder to Narain Singh and

KIRPAL SINGH v. SANT SINGH.

Ganesha Singh is denied, is that plaintiffs were, to the knowledge of defendant, the sole managing members of the Laddhewala branch and that it was this branch alone which made the contract. But here the facts are all against plaintiffs. The contract was made at Laddhewala; the money came from the joint fund and was actually handed over to defendant by Narain Singh; all four brothers were present when the contract was made; and the first repayment was made to Ganesha Singh and received through him, without demur, by Hakim Singh. Further, the case for plaintiffs as now set up, is radically different from the allegations made in the plaint and pleadings, and from the statements made by Sant Singh when examined as a witness. Plaintiffs' original claim, though not very lucidly expressed, was obviously intended to suggest that the debt was due to them alone, and that no one else had any interest therein, and it was in support of this that Sant Singh asserted that the Rs. 17,000 was advanced out of monies allotted to him and Hakim Singh by his father, Bishen Singh.

In view of all these facts, we are of opinion that defendant who apparently had no object in making payment to the Mannanwala branch rather than to the Laddhewala branch was justified in assuming that all four brothers were jointly and equally interested in the contract and that he had no knowledge that it was the Laddhewala branch alone which had made the contract with him. We further find that defendant had no notice that the Laddhewala branch was being managed independently of the Mannanwala branch, and that re-payments were to be made to plaintiffs and not to any other member of the joint family with whom he was led to suppose that he had contracted. On the contrary, we find that he had every reason to believe that repayments made to the Mannanwala branch would be recognized as valid by the other members of the family, just as the re-payment of Rs. 1,000 had been so recognized. Mr. Sukh Dial laid some stress on the fact that in defendant's account-books there was a separate khata in respect of debts due to (1) Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh, and (2) this bond debt which is entered as due to Hakim Singh and Sant Singh. In point of fact, we find that the first khata No. 57 (page 9 of the paper-book) was closed with an entry to the effect that Rs. 2,167-8-0 was due on account of interest on this very sum of Rs. 17,000, and that this entry was thereupon transferred to khata No. 42 which is in the name of Hakim Singh and Sant Singh (page 11 of paper-book). In these two khatas sums due on the bond and on other accounts are mixed up, but so far from this affording an argument in support of plaintiffs' case, it seems to us to show clearly that defendant regarded this bond-debt as due to all four brothers. Otherwise, why should the khata of Narain Singh Ganesha Singh finish with the entry regarding the amount due on the bond debt of Rs. 17,000, and why should the khata of Hakim Singh-Sant Singh contain entries relating to payments made, otherwise than in respect of the bond-debt, to Narain Singh and Ganesha Singh.

We accordingly so far accept the appeal that we hold that the defendant is entitled to credit for the sum of Rs. 9,400, (i.e., the Rs. 10,400 minus the Rs. 1,000 for which plaintiffs have given defendant credit). Plaintiffs in claiming the sum of Rs. 21,585-14-3 have not only ignored the sum of Rs. 9,400 which we find to have been duly re-paid, but have claimed interest and compound interest on the principal sum of Rs. 17,000 upon the assumption that the said sum of Rs. 9,400 was not re-paid. In view of our findings, not only will the latter sum have to be deducted from the total amount claimed, but a proportionate deduction will have to be made in respect of the interest and compound interest claimed by plaintiffs. This is a matter of account which must be settled by the office in consultation with the parties' Counsel. Plaintiffs are clearly entitled to a decree for the balance due from defendant and must be given such relief, together with interest on such sums from the date of institution of suit until realization, at the rate specified in the decree of the District Judge. As regards costs we direct the parties to bear their own throughout the litigation.

Appeal accepted.

ENSAR ALI v. YAKUB ALI.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1509 OF 1910.
December 18, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Carnduff.
ENSAR ALI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus
YAKUB ALI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 106—Suit between rival proprietors—Question of possession—Suit between two rival tenants—Question of title, if may arise—Court not to go behind statement in judgment.

The question of possession alone should be considered in a proceeding under section 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act between two rival proprietors: but the question of title may legitimately arise and be decided in such a proceeding between two rival tenants or between a landlord and a tenant.

Mohunt Padmalav Ramanuja Das v. Lukshmi Rani, 12 C. W. N. 8 at p. 15, relied upon.

A Court will not go behind any statement in the judgment of another Court.

Mirza Shamsher Bahadur v. Kunj Behari Lall, 7 C. L. J. 414; 12 C. W. N. 273; 3 M. L. T. 212, relied upon.

Appeal from the decree of the Special Judge of Backergunge, dated February 4th, 1910, affirming that of the Assistant Settlement Officer of Backergunge, dated September 21st, 1909.

Babu Hem Chandra Sen, for the Appellants.

Dr. Sarat Chandra Basak, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff-respondent under section 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, for the correction of an entry in a record of right relating to a miras karsa holding. The holding was entered in the record as belonging to one Moharuddi and the defendants, half and half. Moharuddi has died and Yakub claims to be, as his second cousin, entitled to 4-annas of the holding. He accordingly brought this suit in order to have his name entered in respect of 4 annas. Both the Courts below have concurred in altering the record accordingly.

The defendants now appeal, and on their behalf, three contentions have been pressed before me, first, it is said that the onus has been wrongly placed on the defendants, whereas it ought to have been placed on the plaintiffs, secondly, it is contended that the lower Courts have not found what the precise share of Yakub under the Muhammadan law is, and, therefore, they had no right to alter the record by entering his name in respect of any particular share, lastly, it is urged that, in cases under the Bengal Tenancy Act, the sole question to be decided is the question of possession and no question of title ought to be considered at all.

The first point I am unable to understand. I can find nothing in either of the judgments of the lower Courts regarding the onus of proof excepting the remark made by the lower Appellate Court that the onus of proving that Moharuddi was not entitled to a share in the property lies on the appellants and that the appellants have utterly failed to discharge that onus. There can be no question as to the soundness of this remark, for Moharuddi is entered in the record as the owner of half the miras karsa and the burden of proof is, of course, on the person alleging that that record is incorrect.

As regards the second point, the learned Vakil for the appellants relies on the case of Mohunt Padmalav Ramanuja Das v. Lukshmi Rani (1). In that case, no doubt, it was held that the question of possession alone ought to be considered in a proceeding under section 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act between two rival proprietors; but I am here concerned with a proceeding between rival tenants and, as one of the learned Judges (Mr. Justice Coxe) observed at page 15 of the report, in suits between tenant and tenant or between landlord and tenant, question other than that of possession may legitimately arise. The ruling relied upon is, therefore, within point; and I see no reason for extending it to cases such as this.

As regards the third argument, I find it stated in both the judgments of the Courts below that the plaintiff was admittedly the heir of Moharuddi and so entitled to a share of 4 annas. I, for my part, am not prepared to go behind any such statement in the judgment of a Court, and, in this connection, I venture to express my entire concurrence with the remarks made by Mukerjee and Caspersz, JJ., in the case of Mirza Shamsher Bahadur v. Kunj Behari Lall (2)

There is really no substance in this appeal and it must be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 12 C. W. N. 8 at p. 15.
(2) 7 C. L. J. 414; 12 C. W. N. 273; 3 M. L. T. 212.

DHIAN SINGH v. DHIAN SINGH.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 372 OF 1909.

January 3, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Robertson and Mr. Justice Shah Din.

DHIAN SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLENT

versus

DHIAN SINGH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Jurisdiction—Suit by vendee for possession—Decree on payment of sum exceeding Court's pecuniary jurisdiction.

In a suit for possession of land brought by a vendee against his vendor, a Court has no jurisdiction to pass a decree for possession on payment of a sum which exceeds the pecuniary limit of its jurisdiction.

Mohamad Afzal Khan v. Nand Lal, 16 P. R. 1908, 146 P. L. R. 1908; 73 P. W. R. 1907, followed.

Miscellaneous appeal from the order of the Additional Divisional Judge, Sialkot Division, dated 23rd January 1909, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Gujranwala, dated the 17th August 1906, decreeing the claim and remanding case for re-decision.

Rai Bahadur Lala Sukh Dial, for the Appellant.

Bhagat Gobind Das, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts are briefly these. The plaintiff-appellant sued for possession of 78 kanals, 10 marlas of proprietary and occupancy land, together with accessory right therein, on the allegations that it had been sold to him by defendant-respondent for Rs. 4,070, that of this amount Rs. 2,531 was due to the latter, and that in spite of repeated demands, he had refused to receive this amount and deliver possession of the property sold.

The defendant-respondent raised certain pleas which it is not necessary to notice in this place. Issues were framed on the pleadings of the parties and after evidence had been recorded on both sides on those issues, the Court of first instance held that Rs. 2,631 out of the consideration-money was payable by the plaintiff to the defendant, and accordingly it decreed possession of the property in dispute in favour of the plaintiff on payment of the said amount to the defendant.

The defendant appealed to the Divisional Court and contended, inter alia, that out of the land in dispute 11 kanals, 4 marlas, Khata No. 86, were not assessed to land revenue, and that as the market-value of that area was about Rs. 11,000 the first Court which was that of a Munsif of the 1st class, had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. The learned Divisional Judge remanded the case to the Munsif for an inquiry and report on points raised by the defendant. The return was to the effect that 5 kanals, 12 marlas out of the land in dispute were not assessed to land revenue and that the market-value of the said area was not less than Rs. 500. On receipt of the return, the Divisional Judge held that the portion of the land in suit which was not assessed to land revenue must be valued at its market price for purposes of jurisdiction, and he agreed with the Munsif that its market-value was not less than Rs. 500. As the value of the rest of the land for purposes of jurisdiction, calculated at thirty times the revenue was Rs. 991, the learned Judge held that the value of the whole subject-matter of the suit was over Rs. 1,000 and that, therefore, the Munsif had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. The Divisional Judge accordingly accepted the appeal and remanded the case under Order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code, to the Court of the District Judge for a fresh trial.

The plaintiff has appealed to this Court from the Divisional Judge's order of remand. The Pleader for the defendant-respondent has taken the preliminary objection that as the Munsif did not dispose of the suit upon a preliminary point, the Divisional Judge had no power to remand the case under Order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code, for a fresh decision. In our opinion the Divisional Judge's order can be reasonably construed as one returning the plaint to the plaintiff to be presented to the proper Court, and, construed as such, it is appealable under Order XLIII, rule 1 (a), Civil Procedure Code. The preliminary objection is, therefore, overruled.

The respondent's Pleader further points out that according to the Full Bench ruling of this Court [Mahomad Afzal Khan v. Nand Lal (1)] the Munsif had no jurisdiction to pass a decree for possession of the land in dispute in favour of the plaintiff on payment of Rs. 2,631 and as the Advocate for the appellant is not prepared to question the correctness of the said ruling, we must hold that the decree passed by the Munsif was ultra vires. On this view of the case, it is not necessary to decide whether the view taken by the Divisional Judge in his order of remand as to the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction is correct or not, and the question as to the valuation of the subject matter of the suit can be again raised and decided in the Court of first instance. We set aside the order of the Divisional Judge and the decree of the Munsif, and direct that the plaint be returned to the plaintiff for presentation in the proper Court. Parties will pay their own costs throughout.

(1) 16 P. R. 1908; 146 P. L. R. 1908; 73 P. W. R. 1907.

Order set aside.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 23 OF 1909.

November 28, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim.

ADUSUPALLI VENKATA ROW—APPELLANT

versus

MARIKRUTHU AMMAL AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Parties—Limitation—Death of party—One of legal representatives brought on record—No bar by time against bringing other representatives.

Where one of the representatives of a deceased party to a suit is brought on the record in time, there is no bar by time to bring in other representatives on the record subsequently.

Ramanuj Sewak Singh v. Hingu Lal, 3 A. 517 and Krishnaji Janardan v. Murarry Rao, 12 B. 48, followed.

Appeal against the order of the District Court of Chingleput, in Appeal Suit No. 224 of 1909, presented against the order of the Court of the District Munsif of Poonamalli, in C. M. P. No. 884 of 1906, in E. P. No. 774 of 1906 (O. S. No. 161 of 1894, on the file of the City Civil Court of Madras.

Mr. Joseph Satya Nadar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The judgment-creditor had applied in time for bringing one of the representatives of David Pillai, namely, the second respondent, Swami Pillai, on record and that application was granted. That being so, the cases of Ramanuj Sewak Singh v. Hingu Lal (1) and Krishnaji Janardan v. Murarry Rao (2), with which we agree, show that there is no bar to the other representatives of the David Pillai, viz., respondents Nos. 3 and 4 being also brought on the record on the present application. We may say that we do not understand the ground on which the learned District Judge distinguishes these cases. We order that Marikruthu Ammal and Kalanithi Ammal be brought on the record as legal representatives of David Pillai and set aside the order of the District Judge with costs to be paid by the respondents.

(1) 3 A. 517
(2) 12 B. 48.

Order set aside.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 824 OF 1910.

November 1, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Judge, and Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar.

NATESA PILLAY—APPELLANT

versus

MUNUSAWMY NAICKEN AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Assignment—Suit by assignee—Mistake as to date of mortgage in assignment-deed—Right of plaintiff to prove that suit mortgage was assigned.

Where a deed assigning a mortgage contains a mistake as to the date of the mortgage-deed, it is open to the assignee, suing on the mortgage to show that what he purchased is the mortgage sued on, and the date mentioned in the assignment-deed is a misdescription.

Palaniappa Tevan v. Sadagopa Mudaliar, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 133; 9 M. L. T. 319; 9 Ind. Cas. 729, followed.

Mr. T. V. Gopalswami Madaliar, for the Plaintiff.

Mr. G. S. Ramachandra Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—We are of opinion that the plaintiff was entitled to show that the right purchased by Veera Pillay under Exhibit C was the mortgage now sued on, and that the year of the mortgage-deed mentioned in Exhibit C was a misdescription. See Palaniappa Mudaliar v. Sadagopa Tevan (1). The decrees of the lower Courts must be reversed and the suit remanded to the Court of first instance for fresh disposal according to law. The costs of the second appeal and the costs in the lower Appellate Court will abide the result.

Appeal allowed.

(1) (1911) 2 M. W. N. 133; 9 M. L. T. 319; 9 Ind. Cas. 729.

ALIM ALI v. NABBU.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.
CIVIL REVISION No. 691 OF 1911.
January 5, 1912.
Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis.
ALIM ALI—DEFENDANT—PETITIONER
versus
NABBU AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Adoption—Alienation—Gift—Daughter's son—Muhammadan Rajputs of Hissar District.

Among Muhammadan Rajputs of the Hissar District, the burden of proving the validity of the adoption of a daughter's son or of a gift in favour of a daughter's son lies on the adoptee or the donee. The adoption of a daughter's son who belongs to another caste is not valid by custom.

A gift of ancestral property to a daughter's son is not valid by custom.

Petition under section 70 (a) (b) of Act XVIII of 1884, as amended by Act XXV of 1899, for revision of the order of the Divisional Judge, Hissar Division, dated the 26th October 1910, reversing that of the Munsif, 3rd Class, Hissar, dated the 30th June 1910, dismissing plaintiffs' suit.

Lala Lajpat Rai, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Gullu Ram, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs, who are collaterals of Ahmad, sue for a declaration that the deed of gift executed by Ahmad, in favour of Alam Ali shall not affect their reversionary rights. Ahmad is dead, but plaintiffs cannot sue for possession in the presence of Musammat Najban. The deed of gift in question is a registered document, dated 15th April 1905. In it Ahmad describes Alam Ali as his adopted son. Alam Ali is daughter's son of Ahmad, and it is also pleaded in defence that Muratib, father of the donee, was a khana-damad. The argument for the defendant is that Alam Ali was adopted, that the suit is time barred, that the adoption was valid, and that apart from adoption, the gift is valid by custom, especially in view of the facts that the donee's father was khana-damad and that the gift was for services rendered by the donee's father.

The first Court held the adoption proved and valid, and also pronounced in favour of the validity of the gift, and so dismissed the suit. It also held the suit to be time-barred by Article 91, Limitation Act.

The learned Divisional Judge on appeal held that there was no adoption prior to the gift, that the suit was not time-barred, that there was an adoption at the time of the gift, but that such adoption was not valid, and also that the gift was not valid.

I admitted the case to a hearing under section 70 (1) (a) as regards the time of adoption, the judgment of the learned Divisional Judge seeming to me defective on this point and under section 70 (1) (b) as regards the validity of the gift. The office should have classed this case as an appeal, it being admitted partly under section 70 (1) (b).

First, as to the alleged adoption. The Divisional Judge says that an adoption certainly took place as mentioned both in the plaint and pleas, but that it was only "just before and along with the gift." The original plaint certainly says "Mutbana karke hibba likh dya," but the amended plaint says "Mutbana likha kar," and I do not think that the plaintiffs meant to admit more than that Ahmad professed to have adopted Alam Ali.

I have now gone through the evidence as to the alleged adoption of Alam Ali ten years prior to suit. Of the witnesses who speak of this adoption some certainly say that it took place in their presence, but what is their evidence worth? Dad Ali is uncle of Muratib Ali, the donee's father, and Ali Mir is also a relation of Muratib Ali's. And seeing that there is no recital in the defendant's written pleas of an adoption having taken place long before the execution of the deed of gift, I think the Divisional Judge's finding that the alleged adoption 10 years prior to suit is a myth should be upheld.

Even supposing that there was an adoption at the time of the gift, it seems to have been a mere paper adoption, and in any case I do not think the validity of the adoption of a daughter's son, a person of another gôt is proved. The adoptor was a Muhammadan Rajput, the adoptee a Sayad. The old Wajib-ul-arz says that a person of a ghair gôt, if adopted, gets no share (hissa). I do not wish to place too much reliance on an assertion in a Wajib-ul-arz unsupported by instances, but setting the Wajib-ul-arz aside, I think the onus of proving the validity of the adoption rests on the defendant. The instances cited by the witnesses are vague, as the relationship is not cited. It is said that one Maula Bakhsh adopted one Abdul Ghani and that the collaterals sued in vain, that one Rahim adopted one Rustam, that one Wazir adopted his sister's son, that one Nawab Ali adopted one Fattah. In only one case is the relationship of the adoptee to the adoptor stated, and this is the case of adoption of a sister's son and we are not told what collaterals were in existence, whether they assented or contested the adoption, and whether the adoptee was of the same gôt as the adoptor. The defendant's witness Bakhshi, Zaildar, says that a boy of another gôt cannot be adopted. I think the Divisional Judge has rightly held that the adoption was not valid by custom.

Then, as to the validity of the gift. The Wajib-ul-arz says that a gift to a daughter's or sister's son is invalid if any descendant of the grandfather of the donor objects. (Plaintiffs are such descendants). I do not wish to lay much stress on an old Wajib-ul-arz of this sort, which begins the subject of gifts with the remarkable assertion that alienations by gift are subject to pre-emption. But, apart from the Wajib-ul-arz, I think that it lies on the defendant to prove that a gift of ancestral land to a daughter's son is valid, even in Hissar, one of the eastern districts of the Punjab. To prove the validity of the gift three mutations are put forward —

(1) On 20th February 1880, a gift by Musammat Jaiman, widow of Wazir, to her khana-damad was attested.

(2) On 16th July 1889, a gift by Musammat Amirunnissa to her khana-damad was attested and apparently some collaterals objected at time of mutation.

(3) On 23rd December 1889, a gift by Musummat Manbibi to Mahbub, her husband's daughter's son (sic), was attested though collaterals objected.

But the evidence of Shamas, defendant's witness, shows that in the first two of these three cases the collaterals did assent, and in the third case a later mutation shows that Mahbub surrendered a part of the gift because the collaterals objected. These three cases, if they were good instances, would go to show that even widows could make gifts, but in two cases it seems that the collaterals assented to the gift, while in the third the collaterals were appeased by a part surrender of the gift. These cases, therefore, prove nothing, and, in my opinion, defendant has failed to prove the validity of the gift. As to services being rendered, I fail to see how Ahmad's providing his son-in-law with a home can be regarded as service rendered by the son-in-law.

I omitted in an earlier part of this judgment when, dealing with the value of the oral evidence produced to prove the alleged adoption ten years prior to suit, to point out that one witness, Dad Ali, goes so far as to make the absurd statement that Muratib Ali, too, was adopted (go l men liya) by Ahmad, this shows how reckless or stupid witnesses can be in supporting the party which has called them.

I uphold the Divisional Judge's decree and dismiss this case with costs.

Case dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1330 OF 1910.

November 30, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Spencer.

KOIPALLI RAMIAH—APPELLANT

versus

SAJJA SUBBIAH AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 45—Contract—Specific performance—Contract with a number of persons—Right of one to enforce specific performance—Vendor and Purchaser.

Where an agreement is made to sell certain property to several persons, one of the latter only cannot claim specific performance of the agreement.

Safiur Rahman v. Maharamunnessa Bibi, 24 C. 832, referred to.

Second appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Ellore, in A. S. No. 228 of 1909, presented against the decree of the District Munsif, Narsapur, in O. S. No. 249 of 1908.

Mr. Prakasam, for the Appellant.

Mr. Narayanmurthi, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The first defendant entered into an agreement with the plaintiff and defendants Nos. 2 and 3 to convey certain land. The plaintiff alone instituted this suit for specific performance. Defendants Nos. 2 and 3 repudiate the contract and say that they are not willing to get any sale-deed from the 1st defendant. The lower Courts have dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff alone had no right to demand performance of the agreement. In our opinion they are obviously right. Section 45 of the Contract Act lays down the rule on the point. The second and third defendants do not want the land, the first defendant is not bound to compel them to take it along with the plaintiff.

TARI BAZ KHAN v. FATEH KHAN.

We agree with the decision in Safiur Rahman v. Maharamunnessa Bibi (1) and dismiss the second appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 24 C. 832.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1070 OF 1910.

December 19, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis.

TARI BAZ KHAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

FATEH KHAN—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Custom—Succession—Daughters—Collaterals of sixth degree—Pathans of Mianwali Tahsil—Burden of proof—Method of computing degree of relationship.

Among Pathans of the Mianwali Tahsil, daughters exclude collaterals of the 6th degree in matters of succession to the ancestral property of their father.

The mode of computing degrees of agnatic relationship among these Pathans is to count from the collaterals to the common ancestor both being included.

Girdhari Ram v. Faizullah Khan, 48 P. R. 1908; 98 P. W. R. 1908; 166 P. L. R. 1908, followed.

The words 'warisan chhe pusht ke andar' mean collaterals up to and including the fifth degree and exclude the collaterals in the sixth degree

The burden of proving a custom whereby remote collaterals such as those of the sixth degree exclude daughters rests on the party who asserts such a custom Bholi v. Man Singh, 86 P. R. 1908; 146 P. W. R. 1908, followed.

Abdul Karim v. Sahib Jan, 5 P. R. 1908; 29 P. W. R. 1908; 99 P. L. R. 1908, referred to.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Campbellpur, dated 4th October 1910, reversing that of the Munsif, 1st Class, Mianwali, dated 6th July 1910, decreeing plaintiffs' claim.

Mr. Fazl Elahi, for the Appellants.

Rai Bahadar Bakhshi Sohan Lal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The land in suit, 115 kanals, 2 marlas, belonged to Thaj Khan, and after his death was sold by his widow Musammat Lalo to the defendant for the small sum of Rs. 9. The plaintiffs' collaterals sue for possession, challenging the alienation as without necessity. The defendant pleaded (1) that the plaintiffs had no right to sue in the presence of Thaj Khan's daughters, (2) that the alienation was for consideration and necessity, and (3) that the plaintiffs were estopped by acquiescence.

The first Court found in plaintiffs' favour on all three of the above points and decreed the claim, but the Divisional Judge came to a different finding on all three points and dismissed the suit. The plaintiffs have lodged a further appeal to this Court.

The appeal can be decided solely on the question of plaintiffs' right to claim possession in the presence of daughters.

The three daughters of Thaj Khan are still alive. Two of them married collaterals, and so their sons are included among the plaintiffs. But if the daughters succeed in preference to the collaterals, the sons of those daughters cannot sue in the presence of their mothers: if the daughters of Thaj Khan are the real persons entitled to possession they and they alone can have a right to oust the defendant. Had the daughters assigned their rights the case would have been different, but no such assignment has been pleaded.

So the question is whether, on the death of Thaj Khan's widow, the right to hold his land passed to the daughters or to the collaterals. The plaintiffs would be regarded as collaterals in the fifth degree if the usual method of computation were followed, i. e., to count upwards from the last male owner to the common ancestor, both being included; but the parties are Pathans who belong to the Mianwali Tahsil, formerly part of the Bannu District, and here the mode of computation is to count from the collaterals to the common ancestor both being included: see Girdhari Ram v. Faizullah Khan (1). Adopting this method of computation, the plaintiffs are collaterals some in the sixth and rest in the seventh degree. The Riwaj-i-am lays down that daughters succeed in the absence of collaterals within the sixth degree (chhe pusht ke andar.) This, in my opinion, means that daughters are excluded by collaterals in the fifth degree, but not by collaterals in the sixth degree. I form this opinion after referring to the four instances quoted in the Riwaj-i-am, which are as follows: (1)

(1) 48 P. R. 1908; 98 P. W. R. 1908 166 P. L. R. 1908.

TARI BAZ KHAN v. FATEH KHAN.

Bakhtawar died. There were collaterals in the fifth degree but the daughter succeeded.

(2) Ahmad Khan died, no callaterals for five degrees and the married daughter succeeded.

(3) Muhammad Khan died; no collaterals up to the fifth degree, and the daughters succeeded.

(4) Prem died; no collaterals up to the fifth degree, and the daughter succeeded, the warisan suing in vain.

Had the meaning of the phrase chhe pushat ke andar been that collaterals up to and including those in the sixth degree excluded daughters, I should have expected to find it recorded in the above four instances that there were no collaterals up to the sixth degree, whereas in each case the degree spoken of is the fifth.

In Abdul Karim v. Sahib Jan (2), it is laid down that there is no general rule, that regardless of tribe and creed agnates, however remote, exclude daughters from succession to ancestral property. In Bholi v. Man Singh (3), it is also laid down that the burden of proving a custom whereby remote collaterals, such as those of the sixth degree, exclude daughters rests on the party who asserts such a custom. So the onus of proof was rightly laid on the plaintiffs in this case. No instances of a collateral in the sixth degree excluding a daughter has been noted, and the mere assertions of witnesses as to what the custom is cannot be regarded as of any value in the absence of instances. All that can be said is, that the collaterals have obtained mutation of names in their favour as regards the rest of Thaj Khan's land, but this fact alone is not worth very much when we remember that two of the daughters of Thaj Khan, who might have claimed mutation in their own favour, are represented by sons who figure among the collaterals. No doubt the amount of land falling to those sons is lessened by the inclusion of other collaterals, but still I do not think this fact alone sufficient to discharge the burden of proof, especially in face of the entry in the Riwaj-i-am. That entry is against the collaterals, and cannot be altogether disregarded even though the first instance might be criticized as one open to doubt as an instance where the daughter, contrary to the rule laid down, excluded even collaterals in the fifth degree. The use of the word warisan, too, in the fourth instance might be commented on as showing a want of precision, for the waris is surely the person entitled to succeed whoever he or she may be, but probably the word is merely a careless slip for Jaddian. In fact, in all the instances the wording seems to me inacurate, the words aulad narina being used e.g., panch pusht tak us ki aulad narina koi na thi—when the proper word should be Jaddian. Still, however these instances may be criticized, there is the fact that the rule is laid down in the Riwaj-i-am and three instances are given of a daughter succeeding in the absence of collaterals in the fifth degree, while one instance is cited of a daughter succeeding even in the presence of collaterals in the fifth degree. It may be said that there is nothing in the second and third instances to show that there were any collaterals even beyond the fifth degree. It may also be urged that daughters sometimes succeed by consent even though not strictly entitled to do so, especially where they have married collaterals or where the amount of land is small. But though such arguments may lessen the value of the entry in the Riwaj-i-am and of the instances there quoted, I do not think that this entry and the instances can be entirely disregarded.

The case stands thus. The burden of proof is on the plaintiffs, there is in their favour nothing but the fact that they have succeeded to the rest of Thaj Khan's land, while there is against them the entry in the Riwaj-i-am supported by four instances. I consider that plaintiffs have failed to discharge the onus and I must, therefore, uphold the decision of the learned Divisional Judge on the ground that plaintiffs have failed to prove a right to sue for possession in the presence of Thaj Khan's daughters.

I say nothing as to the alienation being for necessity. Anything I might write on this point would be merely obiter dictum after I have come to the above finding, and certainly would not be binding on the daughters of Thaj Khan, who may very possibly sue on their own account now that the collaterals have failed to wrest the land from the defendant.

(2) 5 P. R. 1908; 29 P. W. R. 1908, 99 P. L. R. 1908.

(3) 86 P. R. 1908; 146 P. W. R. 1908.

SANTU v. ARJAN DAS.

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

P. S.

I note that in Girdhari Ram v. Faizullah Khan (1), the question of the daughters succeeding as heirs was raised, but the right of the daughters to succeed to the exclusion of the plaintiffs (collaterals in the sixth degree) was not decided, it being held that the plaintiffs' suit which was merely for a declaration, was maintainable even in the presence of the daughters and of nearer collaterals.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL CASE NO. 312 OF 1911.

CIVIL APPEAL NO. 914 OF 1909.

December 20, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Johnstone.

SANTU AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—PETITIONERS

versus

Mahant ARJAN DAS—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Ex parte decree—Application for setting aside—Period of limitation expired—Review—"Other sufficient cause"—Service notice—Sepoy—Notice received without objection without the intervention of Commanding Officer—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908*), O. V, r.* 28, O. XLVII, r. 1 (1)—Limitation Act (IX of 1908*), Sch. I, Art.* 169.

Where the period prescribed for making an application for setting aside an ex parte decree has expired the party aggrieved by the decree is not entitled to ask for review of the judgment.

The Legislature having expressly provided a party aggrieved by an ex parte decree a method for obtaining justice, it is highly improbable that such person had another remedy also by way of review.

A party can only ask for a review of judgment on the ground of "other sufficient cause" if he is able to show that the judgment is incorrect.

Where a notice of appeal was sent to a sepoy respondent without the intervention of his Commanding Officer and the sepoy received it without demur he cannot subsequently urge in an application to set aside the ex parte decree, that he was not duly served, the notice not having been sent through his Commanding Officer.

Petition, under Order XLI, rule 21, of Act V of 1908, for re-hearing of the appeal case noted above and for reversal of the ex parte decree passed therein on 8th June 1911.

Lala Rama Nand, for the Petitioners.

Mr. Duni Chand, for the Respondent.

ORDER.—On 8th June 1911, I heard and decided ex parte in the absence of the respondents Further Appeal No. 914 of 1909. On 9th August 1911 the present application for a re-hearing of that case and for setting aside the ex parte decree was laid before me, and I issued notice. For the opposite party Mr. Duni Chand raises the objection that the application is barred by time under Article 169 of Act IX of 1908. That Article allows 30 days from the date of the decree in appeal, or, where notice of the appeal was not duly served, from the date on which the applicant has knowledge of the decree. In this case notices were duly served, and, therefore, clearly this petition was put in more than 30 days after the date of the decree in appeal. I say that notices were duly served, although the petitioner's Pleader tries to make out that this was not so. He admits that in the case of all his clients but one service was duly effected, but as to that one he contends that under Order V, rule 28, Civil Procedure Code, the summons should have been sent through the Commanding Officer, petitioner being a sepoy and that this was not done. I overrule this objection. There is no doubt that the sepoy petitioner did receive his notice and he took it without objection, and it is too late now for him to raise an objection of this kind.

The point of limitation being thus clear, the petitioner's Pleader is forced to adopt another line. He asks that the petition be taken as one for review. But this seems to me to be out of the question. In the first place, it was filed definitely as a petition for a re-hearing of a case and not for a review, and, secondly, according to law, I can see no ground for review at all. Turning to Order XLVII, rule 1, sub-rule (1), it is clear that if there is any ground for review at all, it must come under the words "any other sufficient reason," for none of the previous phrases can possibly be applied to the present application. It seems to me that a party can ask for a review of judgment on the ground of "other sufficient reason" only if he is able to show that the judgment is incorrect. Here the judgment was obviously correct, for the appellants appeared before me and the respondents who were all duly served did not, and, therefore, the only course open to me was to hear the case ex parte. Nothing urged by the petitioner now could make it right to say that that proceeding of mine was wrong, and, therefore, in my opinion, there is no case for review at all. I would also note that the Legislature has expressly provided a means whereby a party aggrieved by an ex parte decree can get justice, and it seems to me highly improbable that the Legislature intended to give such a person also another remedy by way of review. If this had been the intention of the Legislature where would have been the use of Article 169 aforesaid at all, for a party would be able to turn the flank of Article 169 on every occasion and it would become a dead letter?

For these reasons I dismiss the application with costs.

Application dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1049 OF 1909.

January 2, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Robertson and Mr. Justice Rattigan.

GHASI RAM—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

JAI LAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

*Principal and agent—Gambling debt of principal paid by agent—Right of agent to recover sums actually paid—*Hundi drawn by principal—Consideration—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23—Public policy.

An agent is entitled to recover from his principal sums actually paid by the agent in settling a gambling debt incurred by the principal, whether the payment is by way of adjustment of accounts or in cash.

Behari Lal v. Parbu Lal, 79 P. R. 1908; 130 P. W. R. 1908 (F. B.), followed.

A hundi executed by a principal in favour of his agent for such payments is for consideration.

First appeal from the order of the District Judge, Rohtak, dated the 10th August 1909, decreeing plaintiffs' claim.

Mr. Arthur Grey, for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shafi, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a case in which the claim is ostensibly based simply upon three hundis amounting in all to Rs. 4,700 drawn by the defendant Ghasi Ram in favour of the plaintiff Jai Lal and another on.....

The original hundis, when they fell due, were renewed and it is clear that Rs. 207 interest has been paid upon them. The consideration for these hundis is frankly stated to be the payment by Jai Lal of a gambling debt due from Ghasi Ram to Jai Lal's brother Mutsadi Lal. It appears that Mutsadi Lal had brought a suit against Ghasi Ram on account of some actual trade transaction and was threatening further action in respect of a sum of upwards of Rs. 25,000 which he alleged to be due from Ghasi Ram on account of gambling debts (Badni transaction). Mutsadi Lal and Ghasi Ram agreed to submit the whole of the question between them to Jai Lal, Mutsadi Lal's brother, and another person named Behari Lal for investigation and settlement. These two persons examined the accounts with care and apparently discovered that the largest item which Mutsadi Lal was claiming from Ghasi Ram amounting to about Rs. 21,000 was not really claimable from Ghasi Ram, the defendant, but from another Ghasi Ram, a member of a different firm. This item was accordingly struck off and Rs. 4,700 was found to be due from Ghasi Ram to Mutsadi Lal. Mutsadi Lal represented himself as agent for Ghasi Ram in these gambling transactions and claimed the right to recover on the ground that he had settled these transactions with other gamblers. If this could be proved to be so, it would appear to bring the case within the purview of the Full Bench judgment in Behari Lal v. Parbhu Lal (1) which abandoned the view previously taken by the Judges of this Court in Ragnath Sahai v. Man Raj (2) and Kashmiri Mal v. Girdhari Lal (3). On settlement being made for Rs. 47 apparently in order to bring the claim more clearly within the purview of the Civil Courts, Jai Lal undertook to pay off Ghasi Ram's debt to Mutsaddi Lal and Ghasi Ram agreed to give hundis for the amount Rs. 4,700, to Jai Lal thus bringing in a third party in whose favour a right to sue was intended to be created. This Rs. 4,700 appears to have been due on account of balance of losses on a number of transactions and corresponds approximately with the sum shown in his favour by Mutsaddi Lal in his evidence which amounts to Rs. 4,624.

(1) 79 P. R. 1908; 130 P. W. R. 1908 (F. B.).
(2) 80 P. R. 1895.
(3) 74 P. R. 1908; 57 P. W. R. 1907.

CHITTAR KUAR v. GOURA KUAR.

We may say at once that, in our opinion, the letter on page 101 of the record from Rai Ghasi Ram to Dhanraj-Basheshar Lal (Exhibit P. 44), dated Sawan Badi 9th, Sambat 1962, and the reply of the same date from Dhanraj-Basheshar Lal to Harjas Rai Ghasi Ram (Exhibit D. 1) show conclusively that Jai Lal was in fact, if not in name, a partner with his brother Mutsadi Lal. The letter, Exhibit D. 1, was written by Kidar Nath, whom Jai Lal states to be his own munim, and signed by Jai Lal for "Dhan Raj-Basheshar Lal," which is a firm admittedly in which Mutsadi Lal is a partner. Consequently, we hold that it is very difficult indeed for Jai Lal to prove that the execution of hundis in his favour placed him in any better position than Mutsadi Lal himself would have been in had the hundis been drawn in his name.

This transaction is admittedly a gambling one and apparently under the law in England would not there be recoverable through the instrumentality of Courts of law. Two Judges of the Chief Court have spent a day and a half in hearing this case and many days were spent in the lower Court over it thus involving the tax-payers in a large amount of expense for the purpose of settling a gambling debt. As the law stands, however, as laid down in Behari Lal v. Parbhu Lal (1), and other judgments of this Court, if Mutsadi Lal had actually paid this debt as agent for his principal, Ghasi Ram, either by way of adjustment of accounts or in cash, he would be entitled to recover the amounts from Ghasi Ram. In our opinion the position stands thus. At the time when the hundis were executed, Mutsadi Lal was threatening to sue Ghasi Ram for a very much larger sum. Under rulings, more particularly in Behari Lal v. Parbhu Lal (1), a large portion, if not all, could probably have been recovered. Both parties apparently at that time desired to act honestly. Ghasi Ram was not prepared to repudiate a gambling transaction into which he had entered Rs. 4,700 was found to be due from him on a consideration which might have formed the subject of a successful action. He was of full age and intelligence and a man of business. With his eyes open he chose to discharge this debt by the execution of hundis in favour of Jai Lal. On a subsequent occasion he renewed these hundis and though there is no satisfactory proof of this, is even said to have paid interest. We consider that, under these circumstances, it cannot be said that there was no consideration for the hundis. There is no proof that Ghasi Ram was in any way deceived as to the actual facts. The money may have been recovered at law although the origin of it was a gambling transaction and consequently we cannot say that Ghasi Ram can claim to repudiate his liability now. As an instance of the extent to which gambling transactions go, we note that one item originally claimed was upwards of Rs. 20,000 alleged to have been lost in one single transaction. We find that as the law stands Ghasi Ram is liable to pay Rs. 4,700 for which he executed the hundis.

As regards interest, we note that an issue was drawn. Ghasi Ram denied liability for any. The onus of proving that interest was due was thrown upon the plaintiffs and they produced practically no evidence upon the point. Consequently, we do not see how it is possible for us to hold that interest was payable. It is possible that the onus was wrongly placed and it is probable that, under the custom of trade; interest would be payable. But in face of the issue and the way in which onus was laid and no objection taken to this order and no evidence offered, we can only find that no interest was payable. To that extent only we accept the appeal, and decree Rs. 4,700 in favour of the plaintiffs as against Ghasi Ram.

Seeing the nature of the transaction which lay at the basis of these hundis, we do not see any obligation to allow the plaintiffs their costs. We accordingly decree that each party should bear its own costs throughout.

Appeal accepted.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 236 OF 1910.

December 18, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Richards, K. C., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

CHITTAR KUAR—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

GOURA KUAR—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Co-widows—Partition.

A Hindu co-widow is entitled to have her husband's property partitioned.

CHITTER KUAR v. GOURA KUAR.

Gajapathi Nilamani v. Gajapathi Radhamani, 1 M. 290; 1 C. L. R. 97; 4 I. A. 212, Kuthaperummal v. Venkabai 2 M. 194, Bhugwandeen Doobey v. Myna Baee, 11 M. I. A. 487, 9 W. R. (P. C.) 23, referred to.

First appeal from the decision of the Subordinate Judge of Bareilly, dated the 1st July 1910.

Mr. Choudhri (with him Dr. S. C. Banerji), for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Dr. Sunder Lal (with him Mr. Lalit Mohan Banerji), for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.- The appellant who is one of the two widows of one Madan Mohan Lal, brought the suit, out of which this appeal has arisen, against the other widow of the aforesaid deceased for a declaration that the defendant being childless was only entitled to maintenance and had no right to have the zemindari villages belonging to her deceased husband partitioned between the two widows. It appears that Madan Mohan Lal died some time in the year 1909, leaving two widows who are the parties to this suit. The plaintiff has a daughter but the defendant has no issue. The names of both the widows were entered in the Revenue Records. The defendant applied to the Revenue Court for partition of a half share. The plaintiff objected and was referred to the Civil Court. Thereupon she instituted the present suit. She put forward her claim on two grounds; first, that under a custom prevailing among Kurmis, to which caste the parties belong, a childless widow only receives maintenance and has no right to the estate of her husband; and, secondly, that under the general Hindu Law a widow cannot claim partition.

The Court below has dismissed the plaintiff's claim, being of opinion that the custom alleged had not been proved and that as both the widows inherited the property of their husband they were entitled to joint enjoyment of the property and to divide it between themselves for the purpose of such enjoyment.

The plaintiff has preferred this appeal, and her first contention is that the custom alleged by her is proved. We are of opinion that this contention has no force. A number of witnesses were examined who spoke generally as to the existence of the alleged custom, but, with the exception of one witness, none of the others was able to refer to any instance in which a childless widow was excluded by another having a female child. The only instance which was referred to was that of Hari, but one instance does not establish a custom. The wajib-ul-araiz of some of the villages were referred to, some of these wajib-ul-araiz are declarations made by a single owner, and even according to these wajib-ul araiz it is manifest that where a widow has a male child that male child excludes the widows and the childless widow has only a right to receive maintenance from the son. In the original wajib-ul-araiz the vernacular word used is "aulad" (issue) but judging by the context it is manifest that this word was meant to apply to male issue only.

The next contention on behalf of the appellant is that under the Hindu law a widow is not entitled to claim partition. We were referred to the following cases, namely, Gajapathi Nilamani v. Gajapathi Radhamani (1); Kathaperumal v. Venkabai (2) and Bhugwundeen Doobey v. Myna Baee (3). In the case first mentioned, their Lordships, no doubt, observe that "widows taking a joint interest in the inheritance of their husbands have no right to enforce an absolute partition of the joint estate between them". But their Lordships further held that where the widows could not go on peaceably in the joint enjoyment of the property, they could by mutual agreement or otherwise separately hold the property although they had no right to partition in the proper sense of the term and that the share of one would go by right of survivorship to the other notwithstanding the separation. In the case before us, the two widows, although entitled to enjoy the property, appear to be unable to do so peacefully unless they divided it; in fact, the plaintiff in this suit has tried to exclude the defendant altogether from the whole of the property left by her husband admitting her only to a bare right to maintenance. That being so, we are unable to hold that the defendant has no right to apply for a partition such as would enable her to enjoy her share of the property of her husband for her life. Such a partition would in no way affect the plaintiff's right of survivorship in the event of her surviving the defendant.

The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs including fees on the higher scale.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 1 M. 290; 1 C. L. R. 97; 4 I. A. 212.
(2) 2 M. 194.
(3) 11 M. A. 487; 9 W. R. (P. C.) 23.

MUTYALA PAPAYYA v. KOSURI MURAMALLU.

[s. c. 11 M. L. T. 11; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 7.]

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1044 OF 1910.

November 29, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Spencer.

MUTYALA PAPAYYA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

KOSURI MURAMALLU—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Madras Hereditary Village Offices Act (III of 1895), ss. 3, 21—Claim to the emoluments of the office of village carpenter—Proprietary estate—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

Civil Courts have no jurisdiction to entertain claims to emoluments of the office of village carpenter in a proprietary estate. Such offices are governed by section 3 clause (4) of Act III of 1895.

Chinnaya Asari v. Mooniappa Mudali, 7 M. L. T. 264; 5 Ind. Cas. 41, dissented from.

Second appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge's Court of Cocanada in A. S. No. 143 of 1909, presented against the decree of the Court of District Munsif of Cocanada, in O. S. No. 215 of 1909.

FACTS.—Suit to recover lands which formed the emoluments of the office of a village carpenter in a proprietary estate. The defendants contended that the suit is not maintainable in a Civil Court by reason of section 21 of Act III of 1895. The Courts below, upholding the defendant's contention, dismissed the suit. The plaintiff appealed.

Mr. V. Ramadoss for Mr. P. Narayana Murti for Appellant:—Section 3, clause (4), must be construed with reference to section 3 clause (3). The offices mentioned in clause (4) are totally excluded from the operation of the Act, if in proprietary estates. I rely on Chinnayya Asari v. Mooniappa Mudali (1).

Mr. V. Ramesam, for Respondent:—If clause (4) applies to non-proprietary villages, the Legislature could have easily said so. The report of the Select Committee shows that these offices are not excluded from the Act. The object of excluding them from clause (3) but including in clause (4) is to apply different rules of succession—See sections 10, 11 and 12 of the Act. The Board of Revenue understands the Act as I contend (Vide S. O.)

In 1904 a Bench of this Court decided this point against my contention. The Government then referred the matter for the opinion of the Advocate-General who pointed out that the decision (Civil Miscellaneous Appeal No. 226 of 1904) was wrong. The Government thereupon thought it is unnecessary to amend the Act and sent a Circular to the Collectors in the Presidency instructing the Revenue Courts to continue to take cognisance of such suit.

Chinnayya Asari v. Mooniappa Mudali (1) was wrongly decided. The point was not overlooked in Raja of Vizianagram v. Dantivada Chelliah (2).

JUDGMENT.— The question argued in this second appeal is whether Revenue Courts have jurisdiction to try a claim to the office and emoluments of a village carpenter in a proprietary estate. Both the lower Courts hold that they have and we are of opinion that they are right.

Mr. Ramadoss for the appellant contends that section 3 of the Madras Hereditary Village Offices Act, III of 1895, excludes from the operation of the Act the offices of a village carpenter and the other offices mentioned in sub-clauses (4). The section divides into four classes the village offices to which the Act is applicable. The third class is mentioned in sub-clause (3) in these terms 'Other hereditary village offices in proprietary estates except (1) the offices forming class (4) below.' Then the fourth class runs thus—'The hereditary offices of village artizans and village servants such as the following.' The first office enumerated is the village carpenter. The argument for the appellant is that inasmuch as clause 3 mentions as offices to which the Act applies 'other hereditary village offices in proprietary estate except the hereditary offices of certain village artizans and village servants it cannot be applied to those that are thus excepted.' But what is excepted is included in the next sub-clause. The object of excepting the offices mentioned in sub-clause (4) from sub-clause (3) was to form them into a separate class as, according to the scheme of the Act, it was intended to deal with questions relating to succession and other matters relating to the offices included in sub-clause (3) and sub-clause (4) separately. The object of the exception was to carve out a smaller class for the purpose of making special provision for offices in that class with respect to succession and other matters. It is true that clause (3) speaks of other hereditary

(1) 7 M. L. T. 264; 5 Ind. Cas. 41.

(2) 28 M. 84.

village offices in proprietary estates except those included in clause (4) and that clause (4) does not expressly speak of the hereditary offices of village artizans and village servants in proprietary estates. At the same time, it is not confined in express terms to hereditary offices of village artizans and village servants in non-proprietary estates. It will be observed that succession to offices mentioned in clauses (1), (3) and (4) is dealt with separately in that Act. Section 10 deals with the offices forming class 1, section 11 with offices forming class 3 and section 12 with those forming class 4. The subject of the control and punishment of village officers is also dealt with separately in sections 7 to 9. None of such provisions, it may be noted, has reference to clause (4) in section 3. It is quite clear to our minds that the object of the draftsman was merely to group the offices under convenient heads for the purpose of dealing with them in different sections with reference to the questions of succession, punishment, etc., of village officers, artizans and servants. The result of upholding the appellant's contention would be that the emoluments attached to the offices mentioned in clause (4) of sub-section 3 would not be declared inalienable under section 5 of the Act. There can be no doubt that the emoluments of all public offices of the kind were declared inalienable by Regulation VI of 1831. That provision was repealed by Act III of 1895, and section 5, we have no doubt, was intended to re-enact the rule of inalienability embodied in that Act. We can conceive of no reason for supposing that the Legislature could have intended not to declare the inalienability of emoluments attached to the offices mentioned in clause (4) in section 3. Our attention has been drawn to a judgment of Munro and Abdur Rahim, JJ., in Chinnayya Asari v. Mooniappa Mudali (1). That judgment is, no doubt, in the appellant's favour. But it is an extremely short one. The learned Judges say: 'We have no doubt that the District Judge has properly considered section 3 of Act III of 1895.' No reasons are given by the learned Judges themselves for the conclusion they arrived at. In Rajah of Vizianagaram v. Dantivada Chelliah (2), the learned Judges who decided that case proceeded on the assumption that a carpenter's inam was covered by section 5 of Act III of 1895. Reference is made to it in the latter case of Chinnaya Asari v. Mooniappa Mudali (1) and it is said that the fact that the office was that of a village carpenter in a proprietary estate seems to have escaped notice. It is hardly likely that such was the case though no doubt it was not argued that the emoluments of such an office were inalienable. For the reasons given above, we are unable, with all deference, to agree with the judgment in Chinnayya Asari v. Mooniappa Mudali (1).

We dismiss the second appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(S. C. 76 P. R. 1911.)

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL NO. 218 OF 1911.

April 19, 1911.

Present:—Sir Arthur Reid, KT., Chief Judge.

ZIA-UD-DIN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

GOBIND RAM—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—Ejectment—Notice—Denial of landlord's title before suit.

No notice for the determination of a tenancy, even if a notice is required by the terms of the lease, is necessary for maintaining a suit for the ejectment of a tenant, where the tenant has, before institution of the suit, denied the landlord's title and the validity of the lease.

Haidri Begum v. Nathu, 17 A. 45, followed.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Ambala Division, dated the 28th October 1910.

Dr. Muhammad Iqbal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Ganpat Rai, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The lower Appellate Court found in favour of the plaintiff-appellant's title but dismissed the suit and appeal on the ground that the notice specified in the leases found to have been executed, had not been given by the appellant. The latter alleged in his plaint dated December 2nd, 1909, that his title had been denied by the defendant-respondent on the 1st August 1908. This allegation was not traversed in the written statement, which denied the appellant's title and alleged that the leases had been executed on false pretences.

Under these circumstances, further evidence of the denial of title was, in my opinion, unnecessary and the ruling in Haidri Begum v. Nathu (1), that under the circumstances notice was unnecessary, is directly in point.

I decree the appeal, set aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court and remand the appeal under Order XLI, rule 23, of the Code of Civil Procedure, for decision of any other points involved in the second issue framed by the Court of first instance.

Court-fee on the memorandum of appeal here will be refunded and other costs will be costs in the cause.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 17 A. 45.

[s. c. 11 M. L. T. 15; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 1.]

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER NOS. 120, 121 AND 122 OF 1910.

November 15, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim and Mr. Justice Spencer.

KUPPUSAMI IYENGAR AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

SUBBARAYA ROWTHA MINDA NAINAR AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Execution—Mortgage-decree—Purchase of judgment-debtor's mortgage-decree—Application to execute latter decree—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 16—Sale certificate, construction of.

C. obtained a mortgage-decree against N. and in execution thereof became purchaser of certain other mortgage-decrees obtained by N.: Held, that the whole interest of N. in the decrees obtained by him had passed to C. by operation of law and that, therefore, C. was entitled to apply as transferee under Order XXI, rule 16, Civil Procedure Code, for the execution of those decrees.

Ramasamy Pillay v. Muthoo Chetty, (1910) M. W. N. 4; 7 M. L. T. 125; 5 Ind. Cas. 834; Rowthu Minda Nainar v. Kuppusami Aiyangar, 5 M. L. T. 278; 1 Ind. Cas. 535, referred to.

Per Spencer, J.—Where in a sale certificate relating to several plots of land, instead of the boundaries of each plot being stated, a general description of the whole area sold is entered, the paimash and survey numbers of the plots must be taken as a far more definite specification of what was sold than the boundaries.

Appeals against the order of the Subordinate Judge's Court of Mayavaram at Kumbaconam, dated the 12th April 1910, E. P. Nos. 189 of 1909, 23 of 1910 and 24 of 1910 respectively connected with O. S. Nos. 43 of 1893, 33 of 1893 and 35 of 1895 respectively on the file of the Subordinate Judge of Kumbaconam.

IN A. A. O. No 120 of 1910.

Mr. C. V. Anantakrishna Aiyar, for the Appellant.

Mr. K. Ramachandra Aiyar, for the Respondents.

In A. A. O. Nos. 121 & 122 of 1910.

Mr. C. V. Anantakrishna Aiyar, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER NO. 120 OF 1910.

ABDUR RAHIM, J,—I think the order of the Subordinate Judge is wrong in so far as it disallows the petition of the appellants who are decree-holders in Original Suit No. 62 of 1901 to proceed against the properties not mentioned in the sale-certificate dated the 16th December 1904 but included in the decree obtained by the Nadars, the judgment-debtors of the appellant, against the respondents. I have assumed that the properties now sought to be proceeded against are not covered by the sale-certificate in question because there is no evidence on record to show that they are, but the decrees obtained by the appellants against the Nadars entitle them to recover the judgment-debt from their persons and other properties. The properties in dispute are undisputedly included in the mortgage-decrees of the Nadars and so all their rights in those properties are liable to be sold if the decree obtained by the appellants is not satisfied by the sale of the Nadar's interest in the properties hypothecated to them and ordered to be sold under the appellant's decree. Order XXI, rule 53 of the Code of Civil Procedure which governs this case lays down that the holder of a decree sought to be executed by the attachment of another decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge shall be deemed to be the representative of the holder of the attached decree and, therefore, to be entitled to execute such attached decree in any manner lawful for the holder thereof. It was the same Subordinate Court of Kumbaconam that passed the decree obtained by the Nadars against the respondents and the decree obtained by the appellants against the Nadars. Then, all that would be necessary for the attachment of the Nadars' decrees, so far as the properties in question are concerned, is to pass an order to that effect and then the appellant can proceed to execute the mortgage decrees of the Nadars. The appeal is, therefore, allowed with costs here and in the KUPPUSAMI IYENGAR v. SUBBARAYA ROWTHA MINDA NAINAR.

Court below and the Subordinate Court will be asked to dispose of the appellant's application for execution according to law.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER NOS. 121 AND 122 OF 1910.

These appeals follow Appeal No. 120 of 1910.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER NOS. 120, 121 AND 122 OF 1910.

SPENCER, J.—The decree-holders in Original Suits Nos. 33 and 43 of 1893 and 35 of 1895 who may for shortness be termed the 'Nadars' mortgaged their interest to the appellants, who may be called the 'Chetties.'

The Chetties brought a suit, Original Suit No. 62 of 1901, for sale upon their mortgage and obtained a decree. In execution of this decree there was a Court auction at which the Chetties became the purchasers of the hypothecation rights of the Nadars in certain immoveable properties described in the sale-certificate in these proceedings.

The Chetties now seek to have sold by the Court certain other lands not specified in the sale-certificate but covered by the Nadars' decrees. The judgment-debtors in the Nadars' decrees who are respondents in these appeals object that the Chetties are not entitled to exercise against lands not included in their sale-certificate powers which they have by virtue only of their purchase.

Out of the contentions of the parties two questions arise, viz., (1) whether the Chetties by their right as mortgagees are entitled, so long as their decree remains unsatisfied, to step into the shoes of the Nadars and execute their decrees against the respondents up to the limit of the Nadars' interest in the mortgaged properties, and (2) whether the sale-certificate covers the lands now sought to be proceeded against although by some mistake they may have not been specifically mentioned.

On the second point the appellants rely on the well-known rule that if in a document, boundaries and extent are at variance, boundaries should prevail. In the second column of the sale-certificate boundaries have been given, and these are said to include the whole extent mortgaged under the original decrees. But I find no proof that the lands now sought to be sold lie within these boundaries. Boundaries have been given as the form requires it, but instead of the boundaries of each plot being stated a general description of the whole area sold is entered. In this case the paimash and survey numbers of the plots must be taken as a far more definite specification of what was sold than the boundaries.

As regards the first point, it was held by the Chief Justice in proceedings between these same parties in Subbaraya Rowthu Minda Nainar v. Kuppusamy Iyengar (1) that the mortgage interest under the decree obtained by the Nadars includes the right to sell the property in default of payment and that no order for sale of the decrees obtained by the Nadras was necessary in order to enable the Chetties to execute the decrees which they (the Nadars) had obtained. This view is supported by the ruling in Tarvadi Bholanath v. Baikashi (2) wherein it was held that the sale of a mortgage-debt in execution by public auction carries with it the right to proceed against the mortgaged property. No attachment and sale under section 274 of the old Civil Procedure Code was considered necessary in such a case. In this case it appears that the hypothecated mortgage decrees obtained by the Nadars were sold by the Kumbaconam Sub-Court at the instance of the Chetties and bought in with that Court's permission, and afterwards there was an amicable settlement in this Court at which the sale to the Chetties was confirmed.

Order XXI, rule 55, clauses (1), (3) and (6) of the new Code of Civil Procedure which govern the present proceedings make the matter much clearer than section 273 of the old Code. Clause 1 expressly makes the rule applicable to decrees for sale in enforcement of a mortgage; clause (3) declares that the holder of the second decree shall be deemed to be the representative of the holder of the attached decree and to be entitled to execute the attached decree in any manner lawful for the holder thereof, and clause (6) deals with the procedure to be followed as to giving of notice.

In Ramasamy Pillai v. Muthoo Chetty (3) a mortgagee was held to be a transferee for the purposes of section 134 of the Transfer of Property Act and to have a right as such to sue in his own name. The appellants in the present case are in a stronger position as they are mortgage decree-holders and have by the

(1) 5 M. L. T. 278; 1 Ind. Cas. 535.
(2) 26 B. 305.
(3) (1910) M. W. N. 4; 7 M. L. T. 125; 5 Ind. Cas. 834.

compromise effected in this Court become purchasers of the decrees obtained against the respondents. The whole interest of the Nadars in the decree obtained by them has passed to the Chetties by operation of law and, therefore, the appellants were entitled to apply as transferees under Order XXI, rule 16 for execution of those decrees to the Court which passed them. These appeals must, for these reasons, be allowed with costs in this Court and the Court below and the execution petition must be sent back to the Subordinate Judge for disposal according to law.

Appeal allowed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 508 OF 1912.

January 3, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis.

NATHU RAM—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat KARMON—RESPONDENT.

Appeal—Minor's property in possession of third person—Remedy of guardian—Suit—Practice—Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), ss. 47, 48.

There is no provision in the Guardians and Wards Act authorizing a Court to compel a person in possession of a minor's property to hand over the property to the person appointed guardian of the minor's property.

No appeal lies against an order of the District Judge declining to compel a person in possession of a minor's property to hand it over to the guardian and referring the guardian to a separate suit.

Miscellaneous appeal from the order of the District Judge, Amritsar, dated the 26th January 1911, directing appellant to bring a suit formally.

Mr. Vishnu Singh, for the Appellant.

Rai Bahadur Bakhshi Sohan Lal for Mr. Roshan Lal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant has been appointed guardian of the property while the respondent has been appointed guardian of the person of the minor. The minor was born on 24th September 1893, and so is now over 18 years of age.

The respondent is in possession of the property and refuses to hand it over to the appellant. The appellant having asked the District Judge to compel respondent to hand over the property, the District Judge has referred appellant to a civil suit to get possession. Appellant appeals.

For respondent it is pointed out that the District Judge's order is not one of the orders mentioned in section 47 of the Guardians and Wards Act, and so no appeal lies. This seems correct. Mr. Vishnu Singh suggests that I should treat the matter as an application for revision under section 70 (1) (a) of the Punjab Courts Act. Looking to section 48 of the Guardians and Wards Act, I am not at all sure that I have any powers on the revision side in such matters. But in any case what could I do? Mr. Vishnu Singh is unable to point to any section of the Act authorising the Court to compel a person in possession of the property to hand over the property to the person appointed guardian of the property, so I am unable to see that the District Judge has committed any irregularity.

When I admitted this case, I thought it might be possible to bring respondent to her senses by warning her that she might be regarded as no longer fit to be guardian of the person, but I was not then aware that the minor was a lad of 18 years of age, a lad who looks quite fit to be guardian of his own person.

The appeal fails and is dismissed, but in view of the defiant conduct of the respondent in not handing over the property, I pass no order as to costs.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 264 OF 1911.

December 13, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Coxe and Mr. Justice N. Chatterjea.

SHAM LAL CHATTERJEE—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—APPELLANT

versus

HAZARI MAL BABU—DECREE-HOLDER—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 2 sub-rr. (1), (3)—Fraudulent arrangement between decree-holder and judgment-debtor—Adjustment of decree in part—Arrangement not certified, effect of—Decree-holder's fraud—Estoppel against precise term of enactment.

An arrangement between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor of a compromise instalment decree to the effect that the latter should make defaults in the payment of instalments, in collusion with the decree-holder in order to give the latter an opportunity of executing his decree so that certain property instead of being sold out of Court according to the stipulation in the compromise, should be sold in execution, is an adjustment of the decree in part to the satisfaction of the decree-holder, within the meaning of Order XXI, rule 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Such an arrangement ought to have been certified to the Court, and if not certified it would not be recognized by the execution Court.

SHAM LAL v. HAZARI MAL.

Order XXI, rule 2, sub-section (3) applies even where the decree-holder is guilty of fraud.

There can be no estoppel against the precise terms of a provision of the Code.

Appeal from the order of the Sub-Judge of Burdwan, dated May 27th, 1911.

Babus Ram Chandra Majumdar and Karunamoy Bose, for the Appellant.

Babu Shashi Shekhar Bose, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

COXE, J.—The opposite party in this case is a decree-holder, who obtained an instalment-decree against the petitioners. Instalments were to be paid twice a year, from 1314 to 1325; and there was also a stipulation that if a certain estate, called Lot Chandrabati, was sold out of Court at an adequate price, the sale-proceeds should be paid to the decree-holder and credited against the decretal amount.

It is not disputed that the two instalments due in 1316 were not paid in full. It has been faintly argued that this did not constitute default, because the terms of the agreement were that the decree-holder should not be entitled to execution, unless these two instalments remained wholly unpaid. But, on referring to the terms of the contract, it seems to us perfectly clear that the meaning of the parties was that if these two instalments were not paid in full, that is to say, if any portion of these two instalments remained unpaid, the decree-holder should be entitled to execute his decree. When this default had been made the decree-holder took out execution against all the property covered by the decree and for the whole balance due to him. The judgment-debtor, petitioner, made no objection; but he asked that Lot Chandrabati only might be sold. This request was agreed to by the decree-holder. Lot Chandrabati was sold; and the sale-proceeds, amounting to Rs. 10,000, were credited against the decretal amount. The decree-holder then took out execution against the remaining property.

The judgment-debtor has now objected to this execution; and he says that he made these two defaults in 1316 in collusion with the decree-holder; that it was arranged between the parties that he should make these two defaults, in order to give the decree-holder an opportunity of executing his decree, so that Lot Chandrabati, instead of being sold out of Court, according to the stipulation in the compromise, should be sold in execution.

The learned Subordinate Judge held that the judgment-debtor was not entitled to put forward this argument at all, and he rejected the objection and allowed execution to proceed.

The judgment-debtor appeals to this Court and for the purposes of this appeal we must take it that his story is untrue, although, of course, at present there is no evidence whatever in support of it. We must assume that he and the decree-holder made this arrangement that he should make these two defaults; but that the decree-holder should not thereby be entitled as he otherwise would have been entitled by the decree, to realise the whole balance of the money, but should only be entitled to sell Lot Chandrabati and should then be debarred from proceeding with the execution of his decree until further default had been made. The sum of Rs. 10,000, realised by the sale of Lot Chandrabati, would have covered the instalments for about 5 years from 1316; so that by this alleged agreement the decree-holder was debarred from proceeding with his decree until 1321.

It appears to me that an arrangement of this kind is certainly an adjustment of the decree in part to the satisfaction of the decree-holder within the meaning of Order XXI, rule 2, of the Code of Civil Procedure. It may be open to doubt whether a mere agreement to grant time would be an adjustment within the meaning of that section; although, speaking for myself, I should be inclined to think that it would be such an adjustment.

But, be that as it may, it is quite clear that the agreement pleaded by the judgment-debtor amounts to a good deal more than an agreement to grant time; and, therefore, it was incumbent on the parties to certify it to the Court, and they had no right actively to conceal it from the Court's knowledge. As it was not certified it would not be recognised by the execution Court.

BRINDARANI CHOUDHRANI v. ANNODA MOHAN RAY.

It has been argued, firstly, that this adjustment is saved from the operation of sub-section 3 of the section I have quoted, by reason of the fact that the conduct of the decree-holder was fraudulent, and, secondly, that the decree holder is estopped from denying the adjustment. It seems to me, however, that to hold that sub-section 3 has no application where the decree-holder has been guilty of fraud, would take all real meaning out of the sub-section, as there must be few cases in which, when the payment is not certified to the Court, the concealment is not fraudulent. As to estoppel, there can be no question of estoppel against the precise terms of a provision of the Code.

It appears to me, therefore, that the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge is right and should be upheld. The appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs, which we assess at two gold mohurs.

N. CHATTERJEA, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

(s. c. 16 C. W. N. 94.)

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL RULE No. 5035 OF 1911.

November 28, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Caspersz and Mr. Justice D. Chatterjee.

Rani BRINDARANI CHOUDHRANI—CLAIMANT—PETITIONER

versus

ANNODA MOHAN RAY CHOUDRY—DECREE-HOLDER—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 170, cl. (3)—Purchaser of holding before rent-decree—Right to deposit to prevent sale.

Where a tenure is transferred before a rent decree is made against the transferror tenant, the transferee is not entitled to make a deposit under section 170 clause (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

But where on previous occasions, similar deposits made by the transferee were withdrawn by the landlord decree-holder, the transferee should be permitted to make the deposit.

Jotindra Mohan Tagore v. Durga Dabe, 10 C. W. N. 438; Radhika Nath Sarkar v. Rakhal Raj Gayen, 13 C. W. N. 1175; 10 C. L. J. 473; 3 Ind. Cas. 835 and Jugal Mohini Dasi v. Srinath Chatterjee, 7 Ind. Cas. 477; 12 C. L. J. 609, referred to.

Rule against the order of the Munsif of Nilphamari dated July 7th, 1911.

FACTS.—The petitioner Rani Brindarani purchased a permanent tenure of the judgment-debtors in 306 B. S. long before the period in respect of which the arrears of rent have now been decreed. On two previous occasions, in 1909 and 1910, the Rani was allowed to make deposits of moneys then due on account of rent decree and now, when she made a similar deposit, the learned Munsif upon the objection of the decree-holder held that she was not entitled to make the deposit, that the deposit actually made by her was not good and valid, and that the tenure should be sold.

The petitioner moved the High Court against that order and obtained this Rule.

Babu Baidya Nath Dutt and Hem Chandra Mittera, for the Petitioner.

Babu Dwarka Nath Chuckerbutty, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—The question for determination in this Rule is whether the petitioner is entitled to make a deposit under the provisions of section 170 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The petitioner, Rani Brindarani Choudhrani, purchased a permanent tenure of the judgment-debtors in the year 1306, that is, long before the period in respect of which the arrears of rent have now been decreed. In that view, and having regard to the authority of the case of Jotindra Mohan Tagore v. Durga Dabe (1), the Munsif has directed the tenure to be sold and refused to consider the deposit actually made by the Rani as good and valid deposit.

The petitioner, manifestly, is not a judgment-debtor within the intent of section 170 (3). The arrears of rent have been decreed as due from other persons against whom the landlord brought his suit. The petitioner, also, does not represent the judgment-debtors because the tenure was transferred before the decree made in the rent suit. For the same reason, the petitioner cannot be said to have any interest voidable on the sale to be held in execution of the rent-decree. That decree does not affect the interest, if any, of persons who were not parties thereto. The tenure is not an encumbrance on itself, it has been transferred in its entirety to the petitioner. We, therefore, think that the case relied on by the Munsif justifies his order so far as it holds that the petitioner cannot bring her case within the strict language of section 170 (3).

(1) 10 C. W. N. 438.

GOPAL CHANDRA CHAKRABARTI v. RADHARAMAN DAS BABAJI.

Our attention has been called to two other cases on this point. But in Radhika Nath Sarkar v. Rakhal Raj Gayen (2) the decision in Jotindra Mohan Tagore v. Durga Dabe (1) was not cited or considered, while in Jugal Mohini Dasi v. Srinath Chatterjee (3) the learned Judges thought the observations in the earlier case were obiter. They, however, adopted the same procedure and permitted the deposit to be made on the ground that, on a previous occasion, the landlord had withdrawn a sum similarly paid in by the claimant under section 170 (3) of the Act. We see no reason why the Rani, the petitioner before us, should not be granted a similar indulgence.

It appears that, on the 9th October 1909, the petitioner was allowed to make a deposit of the money then due and decreed "at her own risk." That was done and the decree-holder took out the sum deposited. Again, on the 12th March 1910, the same procedure was observed though nothing was then said as to the deposit being made subject to all just exceptions. The landlord withdrew the money, as before.

In these circumstances, it seems to us that the decree-holder having accepted previous deposits and there being a contest between the parties as to the composition of the tenure concerned, we are justified in interfering.

The order of the Munsif, dated the 7th July 1911, is set aside. The petitioner deposited the money but there is an order for refund. If the money has been taken back the petitioner may make the deposit as prayed. On such deposit being made within a time to be fixed by the Munsif, the sale will not be held, otherwise the proceedings will continue. If no refund has been made, the Munsif will pass the necessary orders for due appropriation of the sum paid in, and stay the sale.

The Rule is made absolute with costs. We assess the hearing fee at two gold mohurs.

Rule made absolute.

(2) 13 C. W. N. 1175; 10 C. L. J. 473; 3 Ind. Cas. 835.

(3) 12 C. L. J. 609; 7 Ind. Cas. 477.

(s. c. 16 C. W. N. 108.)

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2900 OF 1908.

August 22, 1911.

Present:—Sir Lawrence Jenkins, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice D. Chatterjee.

GOPAL CHANDRA CHAKRABARTY—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

RADHARAMAN DAS BABAJI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Succession—Shebait—Deed of endowment—Shebait to succeed—"Shishya shishyanukrame," meaning of.

Where a deed establishing an idol directed that the Shebaitship should on the death of the first shebait descend from disciple to disciple of the first shebait:

Held, that one disciple of a shebait may succeed another disciple in the line of the original shebait, and that the maker of the endowment did not intend that one disciple should be succeeded by his own disciple and not by a brother disciple of the previous shebait.

Appeal from the decree of the Additional District Judge of Dacca, dated September 12th, 1908, modifying that of the first Munsif of Naraingunge, dated July 30th, 1906.

FACTS.—One Gopal Sarma established an idol by a deed appointing Nobin Brojaboshi as the first shebait and directing that the shebaitship should on his death descend from disciple to disciple of the first shebait shishya shishyanukrame. Nobin had two disciples Adyaita and Srinibash. On his death, Adyaita succeeded Nobin. And on Adyaita's death, Srinibash the other disciple of Nobin succeeded. After the death of Srinibash his disciple Ramananda succeeded and after Ramananda's death, the plaintiff as his disciple became the shebait but was dispossessed by the defendant. The plaintiff has brought this suit for a declaration of his title and recovery of possession of the idol and its properties.

The defence was that the plaintiff had no title, as he was not in the line of succession, because Srinibash not being a disciple of Adyaita had no title to succeed.

The lower Appellate Court held that the fact that Srinibash was a co-disciple of Adyaita was not at all material, and that he had a good title, and a decree was given to the plaintiff.

The defendent appealed.

Mr. S. P. Sinha and Babu Govind Chandra Dey Roy, for the Appellant.

In re STAMP ACT.

Babu Jogesh Chandra Roy and Dr. Sarat Chandra Basak, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The decision of this appeal depends upon the proper construction of the document, Exhibit I, and of the words shishya shishanukrame, that is to say, disciple following after disciple, in that document. It is contended on behalf of the appellant that the maker of the endowment intended that one disciple should be succeeded by his own disciple, and not by a brother disciple of the previous shebait. That, however, does not seem to be the proper construction of the document. The words should be construed like the words puttra puttradikrame in other deeds; and, if we do so, it does not matter, so long as one disciple of a shebait succeeds another disciple in the line of the original shebait. In this case Srinibash was a disciple of Nobin, and he succeeded Adyaita, another disciple of Nobin. Succession, therefore, was in accordance with the intention of the endowment. This being decided, the findings of the lower Appellate Court upon the questions of fact arising in the case dispose of the appeal, and it is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REFERENCE CASE No. 25 OF 1911.

June 16, 1911.

Present:—Sir Arthur Reid, KT., Chief Judge, Mr. Justice Kensington and Mr. Justice Shah Din.

In re STAMP ACT.

Stamp Act (II of 1899), s. 2 (7)—Negotible Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 5—Cheque—Receipt—Instrument purporting to receive money from bank and specifying name of messenger.

An instrument which purports to receive a sum of money from the saving account of a depositor with a Bank and specifies the name of the messenger who is to receive payment is only a receipt and is not liable to stamp duty as a cheque.

Ratnlal Rangildas v. Vrijbhukan Prabhuram, 17 B. 684, distinguished.

Case referred by the Junior Secretary to the Financial Commissioner, Punjab, with his Letter No. 1482, dated the 13th February 1911, for the order of the Chief Court.

ORDER.—This is a reference under section 57 of the Stamp Act for a decision whether a certain document is chargeable with stamp duty as a cheque. The document is in these terms,—

"The Punjab Co-operative Bank, Limited.
Dated 28th September 1910.

"Rs. 5.

"Received from the Punjab Co-operative Bank, Limited, Lahore, the sum of Rs. 5 only from my Saving Account on Ledger Folio 160-6.

The Registrar, Joint Stock Companies, Punjab.	(Sd.) Khosla. Depositor's signature and address.

Messenger or Agent.

Section 2 (7) of the Stamp Act defines a cheque as a bill of exchange drawn on a specified banker and not expressed to be payable otherwise than on demand. A bill of exchange is defined in section 5 of the Negotiable Instruments Act XXVI of 1881, as an instrument in writing, containing an unconditional order, signed by the maker, directing a certain person to pay a certain sum of money only to, or to the order of, a certain person or to the bearer of the instrument. We are unable to hold that the instrument in question, which purports to be a receipt, is an unconditional order to pay the sum specified in it. It is true that a Messenger or Agent is specified in the instrument, but, whatever may be the private understanding between the executant and the banker, the instrument is in the form of a receipt and we are unable to import into it, merely on the assumption that the banker will pay the person described in it as Messenger or Agent, the sum specified, any words which could justify our treating it as a cheque. Ratnlal Rangildas v. Vrijbhukan Parabhuram (1) cited in the text books is not in point, the instrument therein dealt with containing a distinct order to a specified individual to pay a specified sum to a specified person, and the decision that the instrument was not liable to stamp-duty being based on the fact that the drawee was not a banker. Although the instrument before us was addressed to a bank, our answer to the reference is that it is not a cheque.

(1) 17 B. 684.

MIR SARWARJAN v. FAKHRUDDIN MAHOMED.

[s. c. 16 C.W.N. 75;(1912)1 M. W. N. 22; 9 A. L. J. 33; 15 C. L. J. 69.]

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

November 9, 1911.

Present:—Lord Macnaghten, Lord Shaw, Lord Marsey and Mr. Ameer Ali.

MIR SARWARJAN—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

FAKHRUDDIN MAHOMED CHOWDHURI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Minor—Guardian or Manager of minor—Contract for purchase of immoveable property—Specific performance—Mutuality, want of—Powers of minor's Manager and of his guardian.

It is not within the competence of a manager of a minor's estate or within the competence of a guardian of a minor to bind the minor or the minor's estate by a contract for the purchase of immoveable property. And, as the minor is not bound by the contract there is no mutuality and the minor cannot obtain specific performance of the contract on attaining majority.

Quære.—Whether there is any difference between the position and powers of a manager and those of a guardian of a minor.

Appeal from the decree of the Calcutta High Court, dated December 6th, 1906, affirming that of the Sub-Judge of Backergunge, dated February 23rd, 1904.

The case was referred to a Full Bench by Rampini and Woodroffe, JJ. The judgment of the Full Bench is reported as 11 C. W. N. 34. The Full Bench sent the case back to the Division Bench which affirmed the decree of the First Court which decreed the suit.

The defendant then appealed to the Privy Council.

Mr. L. DeGruyther, K. C., and Mr. K. Brown, for the Appellant.

Mr. A. M. Dunne, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

LORD MACNAGHTEN.—This is an appeal from a decree of the High Court at Calcutta affirming a decree of the Subordinate Judge of Backergunj.

All the questions raised in the litigation but one were disposed of before the appeal was taken to the High Court, and when the case was before a Division Bench of that Court that question was made the subject of a reference to the Full Bench.

The reference was in the following terms:—"Can specific performance of a contract validly entered into on behalf of a minor be enforced?"

The reference came before the Chief Justice and four other Judges of the High Court. They agreed in returning an answer which seems to be carefully guarded and is perhaps rather enigmatical. The Chief Justice observed that the question submitted to the Court was "a wide and far-reaching question." His opinion was that they could only "answer the question by saying that if a contract is validly entered into on behalf of a minor, and there is mutuality in such contract, it might be specifically enforced." The other learned Judges concurred.

The case was then sent back to the Division Bench to be tried out on the merits. The decree under appeal to the High Court was a decree for the specific performance of an agreement for the purchase and the sale of immoveable estate. The agreement was expressed to be made between a Mr. Garth and the appellant, Mir Sarwarjan. Mr. Garth was at the time manager of the estate of the respondent No 1 who was then a minor.

After observing that they had already considered the evidence and had "come to the conclusions: (1) that it was a contract validly entered into, and (2) that there is mutuality with regard to it; for 'the agreement made by Mr. Garth with Mir Sarwarjan would seem to be as enforceable against the minor as it is against Mir Sarwarjan,'" the learned Judges of the Division Bench stated that they saw no reason to dissent from their views already expressed and recorded "(1) that the contract was validly entered into particularly when, as pointed out, it was for the benefit of the minor, and was accepted and ratified by him, and (2) for the reason given 'there is no want of mutuality' in respect of this agreement."

The agreement in question was entered into by an agent of Mr. Garth, without any express authority from him, but there was some evidence that Mr. Garth adopted or assumed to adopt the agreement on behalf of the minor. At any rate, it was assumed in both Courts and it was the opinion of the Subordinate Judge that the contract was not intended to bind the manager personally, and, therefore, it was assumed that it was intended to bind the minor or the minor's estate. It was also assumed that the purchase was an advantageous purchase for the minor. In this judgment and for the purpose of this judgment their Lordships accept all the foregoing assumptions.

The learned Judges of the Division Bench disposed of the question of mutuality at the first hearing in the following terms: "There is no want of mutuality in this case for the agreement made by Mr. Garth with Mir Sarwarjan would seem to be as enforceable against the minors as it is against Mir Sarwarjan. The acts of a guardian in this country bind the minor. There is no difference between his position and powers and those of a manager." No other or further reason in regard to this point was given by the learned Judges when the case was referred back to them.

Without some authority, their Lordships are unable to accept the view of the learned Judges of the Division Bench that there is no difference between the position and powers of a manager and those of a guardian. They are, however, of opinion that it is not within the competence of a manager of a minor's estate or within the competence of a guardian of a minor to bind the minor or the minor's estate by a contract for the purchase of immoveable property, and they are further of opinion that as the minor in the present case was not bound by the contract there was no mutuality, and that the minor who has now reached his majority cannot obtain specific performance of the contract.

Their Lordships, therefore, will humbly advise His Majesty that the appeal should be allowed, the order of the High Court discharged, and the suit dismissed.

The respondent No. 1 must pay the costs of the appeal. Any costs paid under the order of the High Court must be re-paid, but there will be no other order as to costs in the Courts below.

Appeal decreed with costs.

Solicitors for the Appellants: Messrs. T. L. Wilson & Co.

Solicitors for the Respondents: Messrs. Morgan, Price & Co.

(s. c. 16 C. W. N. 116.)

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 76 OF 1910.

August 24, 1911.

Present:—Sir Lawrence Jenkins, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice D. Chatterjee.

UPENDRA NATH GHOSH AND ANOTHER —PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

THE CHAIRMAN OF THE CALCUTTA CORPORATION—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Evidence Act (I of 1872*)*, ss. 13 83 —Map prepared by Government of Khas Mehal lands—Boundary dispute—Admissibility—Witness, non-attendance of—Prayer for arrest—Refusal upon insufficient ground.

A map, more than 30 years old and prepared under the direction of Government as landlord is admissible in evidence, under section 13, though not as a public record under section 83, of the Evidence Act.

In a suit against the Calcutta Municipality, the plaintiff desired to call as a witness a servant of the Municipality and to require him to produce certain material documents. The witness failed to attend and the plaintiff asked the Court to compel his attendance by arrest if necessary. That prayer was rejected without satisfactory reasons:

Held, that the attendance of the witness should be compelled with the production of the documents, and that the case should be sent down to the first Court for re-hearing.

Appeal under section 15 of the Letters Patent from the decree of Mr. Justice Vincent dated July 28th, 1910, passed in S. A. No. 2242 of 1908.

The judgment of Mr. Justice Vincent was as follows:—

VINCENT, J.—This appeal arises out of a dispute regarding a small plot of land 1 cotta, 10 chattaks in area in Bhowanipur.

The plaintiffs allege that this land is part of a holding of theirs in the Government estate of Panchannagram and that in any case they have been in possession of the same for many years and have acquired a title to it by adverse possession whether the land was originally included in their holding or not. They allege further that the defendant Municipality, relying on certain entries made in a map prepared under the Bengal Survey Act, has lately been attempting to take possession of the said land. The plaintiffs, therefore, in this suit seek for a declaration of their title and confirmation of their possession, and further pray that an injunction may be issued prohibiting the defendant from, in any way, interfering with their possession.

The defendant Municipality states that the land in dispute has been measured as part of a public road in certain proceedings under the Survey Act, and that as part of a public road the land is Municipal property under the provisions of Act III (B. C.) of 1899. The plaintiffs' suit has been dismissed in both the lower Courts and hence this appeal is filed.

Now although the memorandum of appeal contains many grounds on which the decree is objected to, yet learned Counsel who appeared for the appellants stated specifically in Court that he would only press two points, namely, (1) that a certain map called Billon's map had been wrongly admitted in evidence and, if admissible, undue weight had been given to it in deciding the suit and the appeal in the Courts below, and (2) that the Court of first instance had improperly refused to take steps to enforce the attendance of an important witness for the plaintiffs. An affidavit was filed showing that this latter point was pressed in the lower Appellate Court, although it is not dealt with in the judgment. And reference has been made in detail to the various applications and orders on record regarding the attendance of this witness.

Accepting the affidavit as correct and taking it as a fact that the lower Appellate Court did not deal with this question, I think that as all the materials are on the record and the facts have been placed before me in some detail, it would serve no useful purpose to remand the case to the lower Court for a decision as to whether the attendance of this witness was necessary or not and that the point may well be decided in this Court.

I find on a reference to the record that it is true that more than one application was made to summon this witness who is or was apparently a Municipal assessor, and it is also a fact that he did not attend. It is also correct that an application was made to the Court to issue a warrant to enforce his attendance and this application was refused. I am not, however, satisfied that the application for the issue of warrant was made in due time or that the Court of first instance ought to have issued a warrant at the stage of the proceedings when the application for such process was made. Up to the 24th of September 1907 there was apparently some hope of settling the suit amicably and on that date also an application was made for further time to compromise. But the application was refused and on the 25th September the hearing commenced. On that date witnesses were examined and the hearing was continued on the 26th and 27th. The trial proceeded again on the 30th and on that day the tenth witness for the plaintiffs was examined and it was not until the 1st October 1907, that any application was made to enforce the attendance of this witness. The learned Munsif records the following order on that application:—"Plaintiff puts in a petition for warrant of arrest of a witness. No such petition can be allowed at this stage. Application rejected." In my opinion, this order was a proper order, having regard to the facts that the plaintiffs' case was then nearly completed and that no application had been made when the hearing commenced. I am, therefore, unable to say that it was incumbent on the Court to enforce the attendance of this witness and this point is decided against the appellants.

In regard to the second point it is urged and with some force that the map of Mr. Billon upon which reliance has been placed is not a map prepared under the authority of Government as the sovereign power but one prepared by Government as landlord in its own interest, and reference has been made in particular to the cases of Junmajoy Mullick v. Dwarka Nath Maytee (1) and Ram Ohunder Sao v. Bunseedhar Nath (2). But, although it is true that Billon's map is not possibly admissible as a public record, it is undoubtedly, in my opinion, admissible under section 13 of the Evidence Act, quantum valeat. The document is more than 30 years old. It was apparently produced from proper custody and was, therefore, in my opinion, admissible in evidence. In any case, even if this map is excluded it appears that the plaintiffs have, on the findings of fact arrived at by the lower Courts, entirely failed to adduce satisfactory evidence to discharge the onus which lay upon them. On the pleadings it is clearly incumbent on the plaintiffs to prove either a title by adverse possession or that the land was included within their holding. The finding of the learned District

(1) 5 C. 287; 4 C. L. R. 574.
(2) 9 C. 741.

Judge is distinct that the land has not been in the possession of the plaintiffs for twelve years and the evidence of title adduced by the plaintiffs was accepted in neither of the Courts below. In fact, the learned District Judge goes so far as to say that the plaintiffs have deliberately suppressed their title-deeds and have produced other deeds containing boundaries which are obviously wrong and he further states that the appellants have no evidence of title or of possession beyond that afforded by the judgments of Mr. Smart and Mr. Marr in the survey proceedings and these judgments contain a definite finding that the possession of the appellants is a possession by encroachment only. It appears to me that these findings of fact are conclusive against the appellants and that they have failed to prove any title which would justify the Court in making a decree in their favour. It follows, therefore, that this appeal must be dismissed with costs and the decision of the lower Courts must be confirmed.

The plaintiff appealed.

Babus Susil Madhub Mullick and Provash Chander Mitter, for the Appellant.

Babu Debendra Chandra Mullick, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

JENKINS, C. J.—This is an appeal from a decision of Mr. Justice Vincent affirming the decree of the lower Appellate Court, with the result that the plaintiff's suit stands dismissed.

Two objections were taken before us on behalf of the plaintiff; first, it was said that there was improper reception of evidence inasmuch as the map prepared by Mr. Billon was admitted. But, in our opinion, that map was admissible, if not under section 83, still under section 13 of the Evidence Act. The value to be attributed to it, when admitted, was a matter to be determined by the Court of fact: so that had matters rested there, we should not have interfered with the decree of the lower Appellate Court. But there is an incident in the case which certainly calls for interference on the part of this Court, and it is this: The plaintiffs were desirous of establishing their possession of the land in suit and it was obviously most material for them to be able to prove that possession. For the purpose of proving that, they desired to call as a witness a servant of the Municipality and to require him to produce certain documents which, they maintained, would go far to show that their contention as to their possession was correct. They made repeated attempts to procure the evidence of that witness: but he absolutely failed or declined to attend. In those circumstances, the plaintiff not unnaturally asked the Court to take measures to compel his attendance, by arrest if necessary. For some reason, which does not appear satisfactory to me, the Court of first instance refused to take this measure. We have asked the learned Pleader who appears on behalf of the defendant Municipality how it was that a servant of the Municipality should have acted in this way and should have practically set the summons of the Court at defiance. He was unable to give any explanation. I can see nothing to excuse such conduct. If, as has been suggested, it was in any way due to the Municipality itself, I need hardly say that it would be most reprehensible conduct. But we are not in a position to form an opinion as to the responsibility of the Municipality although that is the statement made before us.

In the circumstances of the case, the proper course will be to set aside the decrees of the lower Appellate Court and o the Court of first instance and to send back the case for re-hearing and determination, when the attendance of this witness has been compelled, with the production of the documents that were required from him for the purposes of this case.

The Municipality must pay the appellants' costs up to the present time.

D. CHATTERJEE, J.—I agree.

Appeal allowed: Case remanded.

WESTON v. PEARY MOHAN DAS.

(s. c. 16 C. W. N. 119.)

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM EXTRAORDINARY ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION, No. 61 OF 1911.

November 27, 1911.

Present:—Sir Lawrence Jenkins, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Woodroffe.

D. WESTON AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

PEARY MOHAN DAS—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 10—Security for respondent's costs—Appeal by servant of Government—Interest of Government—Appellants not having means to pay costs—Nature of security—Bond of Secretary of State.

Where it appeared that the respondent's costs which the appellants were ordered to pay amounted to two lacs and fifty thousand rupees, that the appellants have no such means as to be able to pay costs; that the prosecution of the appeal will entail a very heavy expenditure on the part of the respondent, and that the suit was and the appeal is being carried on by the Government on behalf of the appellants, Government servants, at an enormous expense:

Held, that this is eminently a case where the Court of Appeal should exercise its discretion in favour of directing security for costs.

The security was ordered to be taken in the form of a bond of the Secretary of State, the respondent being satisfied with the same.

The suit was brought against a Magistrate and two Polic Officers for damages for extorting a confession from the plaintiff's son. Mr. Justice Fletcher who tried the suit awarded Rs. 1,000 as damages to the plaintiff and costs on scale II. The Government defrayed the expenses of the defendants and intended to bear their costs of the appeal. The respondent prayed that security for costs might be taken from the appellants.

Messrs. K. B. Dutt and H. D. Bose, for the Respondent Petitioner.

Mr. W. Garth for the Appellants, Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.

JENKINS, C. J.—This is an application to this Appellate Court under Order XLI, rule 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which empowers the Court in its discretion to demand from the appellants, security for the costs of the appeal, or of the original suit, or of both, The only materials on which we are entitled to decide this application are the allegations contained in the petition. Those allegations are uncontradicted, and it has been stated before us by Mr. Garth very candidly that they are admitted to be correct. Now, it is stated in that petition that the respondent's costs which have been ordered to be paid amounted to a very large sum, roughly estimated, of about two lacs and fifty thousand rupees; that the appellants have no such means as to be able to pay the costs; that the appellants have no immoveable property from which the costs can be realised, and that the prosecution of the appeal will entail a very heavy expenditure on the part of the plaintiff-respondent, and, then it is said that the suit was and the present appeal is being carried on by the Government on behalf of the appellants at an enormous expense. It appears to me further, having regard to the action of the Government, that the Government is really interested in this litigation for reasons which have been indicated in the course of the argument. In these circumstances, I think this is eminently a case where we should exercise our discretion in favour of directing security for costs, and there will be an order, as prayed, for such security.

The only question that has arisen as to the nature of the security is a doubt which was suggested by Mr. Garth whether the respondent would be satisfied with the bond of the Secretary of State for India in Council. The respondent says that he would be perfectly satisfied with such security, so that if the appellants are prepared to offer such security, then the security, in that form can be taken in the circumstances of the case. In view of the admission of Counsel on behalf of the appellants and the difference in the circumstances of the case, I do not think we need be concerned with the determination of the Court in another case to which a brief allusion was made.

The costs of this application will be costs in the appeal.

WOODROFFE, J.—I agree.

Application granted.

Attorney for the Plaintiff-Respondent: Petitioner: Mr. J. C. Dutt.

Attorneys for the Defendants-Appellants: Messrs. Orr, Dignam & Co.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 102 OF 1910.
December 13, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Carnduff.
LAZARANNESSA BIBI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
MAHOMED JAFFAR LASHKAR—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Mortgage—Usufructuary mortgagee—Suit for money—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 67, 68.

The remedy of a usufructuary mortgagee to whom possession had not been given is to sue for possession under his contract, or to bring, under section 68 of the Transfer of Property Act, a suit, for money. He cannot turn his usufructuary mortgage into a simple mortgage and sue for sale of the property mortgaged.

Luchmeshar Singh v. Dookh Mochan Jha, 24 C. 677, relied upon.

Kangaya Gurukal v. Kalimuthu Annavi, 27 M. 526 and Arunachalam Chetti v. Ayyavayyam, 21 M. 476, referred to.

Appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge of Dacca, dated August 24th, 1909, reversing that of the Munsif of Munshigunge, dated December 23rd, 1908.

Moulvi Nur-ud din Ahmed for Moulvi L. R. Zahid, for the Appellant.

Babu Harendra Narain Mitra, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by a usufructuary mortgagee for recovery of his mortgage-debt by sale of the property mortgaged. The suit was decreed by the Court of first instance but on appeal it has been dismissed on two grounds, the first being that a usufructuary mortgagee cannot sue for sale, and the second that the holding mortgaged was not transferable.

It is argued before me that the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge on the first point is erroneous, and I am referred to the judgment of a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in the case of Kangaya Gurukal v. Kalimuthu Annavi (1). As regards this case all that I need say is that it is not precisely in point and is distinctly opposed to the ruling of another Full Bench of the same Court in the case of Arunachalam Chetti v. Ayyavayyam (2). It is also opposed to the law as laid down by a Division Bench of this Court in the case of Luchmeshar Singh v. Dookh Mochan Jha (3) and it seems to me to be contrary to the express provisions of sections 67 and 68 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. The remedy of the mortgagee to whom possession had not been given, was to sue for possession under his contract or to bring, under section 68 of the Act referred to, a suit for money; and he chose to take the latter course. He clearly cannot turn his usufructuary mortgage into a simple mortgage, as is suggested by the learned Vakil on his behalf. There is here no question of the mortgage being anomalous. It is described as usufructuary, and I must treat it as such since it has not been translated or printed by the appellant. The appeal must consequently fail on this first point; and it is not necessary for me to consider the second. It is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 27 M. 526.
(2) 21 M. 476.
(3) 24 C. 677.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 3127 OF 1909.
December 13, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Carnduff.
LAKHI KANT DAS—DEFENDANT No. 3—APPELLANT
versus
BALABHADRA PROSAD DAS—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—Non-transferable occupancy-holding—Purchase by co sharer landlord—Joint khas possession, claim for, by other co-sharer—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 22 (2).

Section 22 clause (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act does not apply to a non-transferable occupancy-jote.

Therefore, where a co-sharer landlord purchases a non-transferable occupancy-jote, his co-sharer is entitled to recover khas possession of the jote jointly with the purchaser co sharer, on the ground that the jote must be treated as having been abandoned.

Girish Chandra Chowdhury v. Kedar Chand Roy, 27 C. 473, relied upon.

Ram Mohan Pal v. Sheikh Kachu, 32 C. 386; 1 C. L. J. 1; 9 C. W. N. 249 (F. B. and Jawadal Huq v. Ram Das Saha, 24 C. 143; 1 C. W. N. 166, distinguished.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Cuttack, dated September 10th, 1909, affirming that of the Munsif of Balasore, dated February 24th, 1909.

Moulvi Nuruddin Ahmed for Moulvi L. R. Zahid, for the Appellant.

Babu Provash Chandra Mitter, for the Respondent.

PRAN SINGH v. JANARDAN SINGH.

JUDGMENT.—The parties to this appeal are co-sharer landlords. The appellant purchased two occupancy jotes and the finding is that such jotes are not transferable. The respondent sought to recover khas possession of them jointly with the appellant on the ground that they must be treated as having been abandoned. Both the Courts below have concurred in decreeing the suit, the learned District Judge holding on appeal that section 22 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, on which the appellant has relied, does not apply to non-transferable jotes. It seems to me that the learned District Judge is clearly right and that there is no substance in this appeal.

On the words of the section itself, I should say that transferability is implied; and it has been so ruled by this Court in the case of Girish Chandra Chowdhry v. Kedar Chandra Roy (1). The learned Vakil, who appears on behalf of the appellant, argues that that decision has been practically overridden by a Full Bench of this Court in the case of Ram Mohan Pal v. Sheikh Kachhu (2), in which it was declared that the ruling in the earlier case of Jawadal Huq v. Ram Das Saha (3) was good law. It seems to me, however, that neither of the cases last mentioned clashes with or affects the ruling in Girish Chandra Chowdhry v. Kedar Chandra Roy (1), or is of any avail to the present appellant. For, in the Full Bench case there was the finding that the lands in dispute were transferable by custom with the consent of the landlords, and it is clear that in the case of Jawadal Huq v. Ram Das Saha (3), the holdings concerned were likewise transferable. This appeal must, therefore, be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 27 C. 473.
(2) 32 C. 386; 1 C. L. J. 1; 9 C. W. N. 249.
(3) 24 C. 143; 1 C. W. N. 166.

(s. c. 14 C. L. J. 541.)

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL NO. 481 OF 1910.

August 28, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

PRAN SINGH AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—APPELLANTS

versus

JANARDAN SINGH AND OTHERS—DECREE-HOLDERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, rr. 66, 90—Notice to judgment-debtor to settle details in sale proclamation—Effect of non-objection by judgment-debtor —Judicial sale not to be assailed on technical grounds —Sale to be conducted by fair methods—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 291—Hour of sale to be inserted in sale proclamation—Non-insertion, material irregularity.

If in a sale proclamation the value of the properties to be sold, is understated, and this is calculated to mislead bidders, and to prevent them from offering adequate prices or from bidding at all, and an altogether inadequate price is offered, the sale is liable to be set aside.

Saadatmand Khan v. Phool Koer, 25 I. A. 146; 20 A. 412; 2 C. W. N. 550, relied upon.

Abdul Kashem v. Benode Lal, 12 C. W. N. 757, not followed.

An inquiry under Order XXI, rule 66 is intended to be of the most summary character. But the judgment-debtor has notice of the proceeding and has an opportunity to take exception to the statements proposed to be entered in the sale proclamation. If his objection as to under-valuation is not heeded by the decree-holder the latter proceeds with execution, with full knowledge that if he purchases the properties for a small amount, the validity of the sale is sure to be challenged by the judgment-debtor. But if the judgment-debtor, with notice of the proceedings, does not object to the entries in the sale proclamation at that stage, a subsequent objection by him on the ground of inaccuracy or insufficiency of description, is not likely to be entertained by the Court.

Arunachellam v. Arunachallam, 15 I. A. 171; 12 M. 19, referred to.

Although the validity of judicial sales, properly conducted, should be supported and should not be allowed to be assailed on technical grounds, yet, at the same time, the purity of judicial proceedings in connection with execution sales should be assured to a reasonable extent; and a decree-holder should not be allowed to employ the machinery of the Court to secure for himself at a grossly inadequate price the properties of his judgment-debtor by methods which will not bear examination.

Obiter dictum.—When a sale is adjourned under section 291 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882, it is necessary to mention the hour of sale, and an omission to do so is a material irregularity.

Bhikari Misra v. Rani Surja Moni, 6 C. W. N. 48, followed.

Surno Moyee v. Dakhina Ranjan, 24 C. 291 and Venkatasubbaraya v. Zemindar of Karvetengar, 20 M. 159. referred to.

PRAN SINGH v. JANARDAN SINGH.

Appeal against the order of the Subordinate Judge of Gaya, dated the 18th August 1910.

Babus Biraj Mohan Mojumdar and Harihar Prosad Sinha, for the Appellants.

Dr. Rash Behary Ghosh and Babus Umakali Mukerji, Ganesh Dutt Singh and Sheonandan Roy, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against an order by which the Court below has dismissed an application of the judgment-debtor to set aside a sale of six properties in execution of a mortgage-decree. The decree was made by this Court on the 2nd December 1908, in affirmance of the decree of the original Court, dated the 29th June 1907. The first application for execution was made on the 28th March 1908, on the basis of the decree of the Court of first instance, even before it had been confirmed by this Court. That application was dismissed for default on the 15th September 1908. The second application was presented on the 6th February 1909. The sale was proclaimed and for five of the properties the decree-holder was the highest bidder at the sale which took place from the 15th to the 18th March 1909. Before the sale could be completed, however, the decree-holder withdrew on the ground recorded in the bid-sheet and signed by his Pleader that "the decree-holder does not want to get the properties sold fearing irregularity". The execution proceeding consequently fell through. On the 21st September 1909, the decree-holder made the third application for execution. In the course of the proceedings so instituted, the Subordinate Judge, on the 11th October 1909, determined the upset values of the six properties under Order XXI, rule 66, sub-rule 2 (e), of the Code of 1908. The judgment-debtors were represented at this summary inquiry and protested against the values suggested by the decree-holder as too low; in fact, they were in some cases lower than the prices offered by the decree-holder himself at the sale held in March 1909. The objection of the judgment-debtors was, however, not heeded, and the sale-proclamation was ordered to issue with the statement of values as suggested by the decree-holder on the basis of the Road-Cess Returns. An appeal to this Court against that order was dismissed on the 13th December 1909. The sale took place on the 21st and 22nd February 1910. The decree-holder was granted leave to bid at the sale "on fair price". At the sale, the decree-holder offered bids through his Pleader, and his principal contestant was one Ram Charan Bajpai. In the case of the first property, the Pleader for the decree-holder does not appear to have offered any bid, and the contest was limited to Ram Charan and four other persons. In the case of the fourth property, one Dilkeswar Singh appears to have offered two bids at an early stage, but he retired from the contest later on. On the face of the papers, therefore, excepting the case of the first property, the contest was between the decree-holder and Ram Charn. Ram Charn succeeded in purchasing all the properties, and on the 25th February 1910, his bids were accepted and the payment of the balance of the purchase-money sanctioned. On the 8th March 1910, however, Ram Charn appeared and stated that he had made the purchase for one Askaran Baid who also appeared and prayed for leave to deposit the balance of the purchase-money. The application was granted, and certificate of sale was directed to be delivered to Askaran Baid. On the 21st March 1910, the judgment-debtors applied to have the sale set aside under rule 90 of Order XXI of the Code of 1908. Various objections were taken to the validity of the sale, the substance of which was that the decree-holder had himself purchased the properties benami for a grossly inadequate price, and, with a view to enable him to do so, had committed fraud and various irregularities. One of the irregularities mentioned was that the decree-holder had deliberately undervalued the properties for the purposes of the execution-sale: another was that the sale proclamation had not been duly served, and a third objection was that the sale had been irregularly adjourned without specification of the hour at which the sale was to take place. The Subordinate Judge, on the 18th August 1910, overruled all the objections urged before him and confirmed the sale. The present appeal was lodged by the judgment-debtors on the 21st September 1910, and has been contested by the decree-holder who has on the 4th November 1910, taken a conveyance from Askaran Baid; the conveyance states, we are informed, that the consideration is Rs. 1,500 in excess of the price paid at the sale. On behalf of the appellants, the validity of the sale has been impeached on several grounds, of which two may be considered as specially important, namely, first, that the properties were deliberately undervalued by the decree-holder for the purposes of the sale proclamation, that he himself has thereby succeeded in purchasing the properties for a grossly inadequate sum, and that he misled the Court by setting up a fictitious bidder to indicate that there was a keen contest and the purchase was made by a stranger, whereas there was, as a matter of fact, no contest at all, and the properties were taken by the decree-holder in the name of the fictitious bidder; and secondly, that the adjournment of the sale on the 21st February, without specification of the hour at which the sale was to take place the next day, was a material irregularity calculated to mislead intending bidders.

PRAN SINGH v. JANARDAN SINGH.

In so far as the first of these contentions is concerned, there can, in our opinion, be no room for doubt that the decree-holder was the real purchaser at the execution-sale impeached by the judgment-debtors. It is not disputed that Ram Charan Bajpai, who was present at the sale, successfully offered the bids and deposited the earnest-money, was not the real purchaser; that is the common case of both the parties; who then was the real purchaser? The decree-holder asserts that it was Askaran Baid, who purchased the properties and paid for them. The judgment-debtors assert, on the other hand, that he is quite as much a shadow as Ram Charan Bajpai, and that both are persons set up by the decree-holder to enable him to seize properties of considerable value at the smallest possible price. This Askaran Baid has not taken the remotest interest in the present proceedings, and has made no endeavour to sustain the validity of the sale; though he was a party to the proceedings, and though the judgment-debtors repeatedly asserted that he was not the real purchaser, he has not even come forward to pledge his oath in support of the allegation that he was the person beneficially interested. Nor has any plausible explanation been attempted as to why Askaran Baid, who had on the 22nd February 1910 purchased the properties for one lac, six hundred rupees after an apparently keen contest with the decree-holder, should on the 4th November 1910, transfer the properties to the decree-holder for a nominal profit of Rs. 1,500. This sum would not cover even a small fraction of interest on the purchase-money for the interval at the current rate, whether that rate be taken to be twelve per cent. or six per cent. per annum. In our opinion, the surrounding circumstances are conclusive that it is the decree-holder who was the real purchaser at the execution-sale, and this aspect of the matter has, indeed, not been seriously controverted in this Court. The position is materially strengthened, when we examine the antecedent proceedings. In the second execution proceedings, as we have already stated, the decree-holder had openly offered the highest bid in the case of each of the five properties sold on that occasion. We tabulate below the values mentioned by the decree-holder in the sale proclamation then issued, and the bids offered by him at the sale. (The properties are numbered as in the present proceeding),—

No.	Value in sale proclamation.	Bid of decree-holder.
1	7,000	7,000
2	25,000	29,100
3	5,000	32,100
4	8,500	32,100
5	8,000	17,000

The bidder who principally entered into a contest with the decree-holder on that occasion, was one Dilkeswar Singh, who is said to be a relation of one of the judgment-debtors. On behalf of the respondents, it has been suggested in this Court that the decree-holder withdrew his bids when he discovered that Dilkeswar was a puffer set up by the judgment-debtors. There is no foundation whatever for this suggestion. In the first place, the ground then assigned by the decree-holder for not adhering to his bids in that proceeding was that he was afraid of irregularity. The suggestion now made that he had been misled by Dilkeswar is clearly an afterthought. In the second place, the decree-holder does not come into Court to pledge his oath in support of the theory he now sets up. In the third place, the theory itself is futile and will not bear examination for a moment. The decree-holder was not a stranger to the properties; he had accepted them as security for the money advanced by him, and when he did so, he may be assumed, like any reasonably prudent man, to have made an estimate of their value. He had deliberately caused to be inserted in the sale proclamation what, he thought, was the proper value of the properties. We are, therefore, not prepared to adopt the suggestion now made, but not supported by any evidence, that, because the decree-holder imagined Dilkeswar Singh to be a real bidder, he indiscreetly offered bids to the extent of Rs. 32, 100, Rs. 32,100 and Rs. 17,000 for properties valued by himself in the sale-proclamation at Rs. 5,000, Rs. 8,500, and Rs. 8,000 respectively. In our opinion, the bids offered by the decree-holder at the sale held from the 15th to the 18th March 1909, furnish strong evidence as against him as to the minimum value of the properties, and the presumption is not rebutted by an idle explanation, not even remotely suggested at the time but invented subsequently. The learned Vakil for the appellants has suggested a possible explanation as to why the decree-holder withdrew from the bids before their acceptance. It is not necessary for us to speculate as to his real motives, but the theory looks plausible that if Dilkeswar had no money for purchase of the properties, and if the decree-holder discovered it before the acceptance of his bids, he may have repented that he had offered such high bids and have at once decided to withdraw, with a view to take his chance and capture the properties on more favourable terms on a future occasion. But, as we have said, it is needless to find out the true motive which guided the conduct of the decree-holder on that occasion. The fact remains that he deliberately offered to take the properties at certain prices and that the explanation he has now suggested with a view to nullify the effect of this evidence, is wholly inadequate.

We shall now proceed to examine the conduct of the decree-holder in the present proceedings, which have been rendered necessary by the withdrawal of his bids on the former occasion. In spite of the protest of the judgment-debtors, he insists upon the insertion of certain figures in the sale proclamation, as representing the value of the several properties. These sums are calculated on the basis of the assets in the Road-Cess Returns, on which much reliance is placed, because the judgment-debtors admit that the Cess Returns were filed on behalf of some amongst themselves or their predecessors. That the Road-Cess Returns are not always a reliable guide in such matters, is well known; that they have proved very misleading in the present case, is beyond dispute. The decree-holder, who relied upon the Cess Returns, has himself offered much higher values than those deducible from the figures in the Road-Cess Returns. The truth is that the inquiry into the question of value before the Subordinate Judge was of a very summary character, and he too readily accepted the explanation offered by the decree-holder with a view to minimise the effect of the evidence of his previous bids. We tabulate below the values of the several properties as fixed by the Court at the instance of the decree-holder, and the bids as offered by the decree-holder himself through his benamdars Ram Charan Bajpai or Askaran Baid.

No.	Value in sale proclamation.	Price at the sale.
1	7,000	2,700
2	25,000	27,500
3	8,000	20,100
4	17,000	29,500
5	4,000	4,700
6	13,000	16,100

The net result is that the five properties, for which the decree-holder, on the 15th March 1909, offered one lac, seventeen thousand, three hundred rupees, are valued as his instance by the Court at Rs. 70,000 and are purchased by him benami, on the 22nd February 1910, for Rs. 95,900. The case of the third property is remarkable. In 1909, it is valued by the decree-holder in the said proclamation at Rs. 5,000. He offers a bid for Rs. 32,100. In 1910 he gets the Court to value it for the sale proclamation at Rs. 8,000, and in the sale which follows, purchases it for Rs. 20,100. The case of the fourth property is only a little less striking. In th sale proclamation of 1909, it is valued at Rs. 8,500, though the decree-holder is able to offer a bid of Rs. 32,100. For the sale proclamation of 1910, he successfully insists that it should be valued at only Rs. 17,000. At the sale which follows, he purchases it benami for Rs. 29,500. In the case of two other properties, the second and sixth, there is similar divergence, but not of an equally pronounced character. As regards the first property, it is to be observed that it was valued for the purposes of the sale proclamation at Rs. 7,000 both in 1909 and in 1910. But, while on the former occasion the decree-holder offered a bid of Rs. 7,000, on the present occasion, he acquires it benami for Rs. 2,700. Upon a careful scrutiny of the proceedings, two facts, therefore, emerge as firmly established, namely, first, that the value of the properties in the sale proclamation has been grossly and deliberately understated by the decree-holder, and secondly, that he has set up a fictitious bidder to create the impression that the several properties have been knocked down to a stranger to the proceedings after a keen contest in which he has been defeated; the truth is that all this is a blind, elaborately devised and successfully carried out; except in the case of the first property, the history of the antecedents of the bidders whereof is not known, in every other instance, the decree-holder himself has purchased the property without any contest, and for such sum as he has chosen to offer; the sum, in five instances, has been less than what he had offered on the previous occasion; in two of the instances, the price paid is remarkably inadequate in comparison with the price previously offered. The question now arises whether the decree-holder is entitled to invite the Court to confirm the sale under these circumstances.

PRAN SINGH v. JANARDAN SINGH.

In so far as the under-valuation of the properties is concerned, reliance has been placed by the appellants upon the decision of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Saadatmand Khan v. Phool Koer (1) in support of the proposition that as the understatement was calculated to mislead bidders, and to prevent them from offering adequate prices or from bidding at all, and as the sale has resulted in an altogether inadequate price, it is liable to be set aside. The soundness of this contention cannot be disputed, though it may be conceded that the case mentioned on behalf of the respondents, Abdul Kashem v. Benode Lal Dhone (2), appears to have overlooked the decision of the Judicial Committee which was probably not brought to the notice of the learned Judges; it may be added that this Court has, on more than one occasion, refused to follow the latter case as inconsistent with the exposition of the law on the subject by the Judicial Committee. Shivadurga v. Raj Mohan (3) and Rudranund v. Pirthi Chand (4). On behalf of the respondents, it has, however, been contended, that the principle of the decision in Saadatmand Khan v. Phool Koer (1), can no longer be treated as good law, because, under Order XXI, rule 66, sub-rule (2) of the Code of 1908, the judgment-debtor is entitled to notice before the sale proclamation is drawn up. In our opinion, there is no substance in this contention. Notice to the judgment-debtor only enables him to put his case before the Court, but if, as here, the decree-holder insists that a much smaller valuation should be inserted in the sale proclamation than what is alleged by the judgment-debtor, and the Court accepts his view of the matter, the decree-holder proceeds to the sale at his own risk. The learned Vakil for the respondents warmly repudiated the position that the entry of the valuation in the sale proclamation can, in any way, conclude the judgment-debtor in proceedings for reversal of the sale under Order XXI, rule 90. The inquiry under rule 66 is intended to be of the most summary character, and may possibly be described as "a matter of administration" in the words of Lord Macnaghten in Ko Tho v. Ma Hnin (5); the order of the Subordinate Judge is also not liable to be reviewed on appeal. Deoki Nandan v. Bansi Singh (6). The true view of the matter is that, under the new Code, the judgment-debtor has notice of the proceeding: he has opportunity to take exception to the statements proposed to be entered in the sale proclamation, but if his objection as to under

(1) 25 I. A. 146; 20 A. 412; 2 C. W. N. 550.

(2) 12 C. W. N. 757.

(3) 15 C. W. N. 577; 10 Ind. Cas. 475.

(4) 14 C. L. J. 346; 11 Ind. Cas. 438.

(5) 14 C. L. J. 241; 15 C. W. N. 862; 2 M. W. N. 449; 13 Bom. L. R. 694; 38 C. 717; 8 A. L. J. 1117; 6 L. B. R. 26; 4 Bur. L. T. 257; 11 Ind. Cas. 545.

(6) 14 C. L. J. 35; 16 C. W. N. 124; 10 Ind. Cas. 371.

PRAN SINGH v. JANARDAN SINGH.

valuation is not heeded by the decree-holder the latter proceeds with execution, with full knowledge that if he purchases the properties for a small amount, the validity of the sale is sure to be challenged by the judgment-debtor. No doubt if the judgment-debtor, with notice of the proceedings, does not object to the entries in the sale proclamation at that stage, a subsequent objection by him on the ground of inaccuracy or insufficiency of description, is not likely to be entertained by the Court. As Sir Richard Couch observed in Arunachellam v. Arunachellam (7), it would be very difficult to conduct proceedings in execution by attachment and sale of property, if the judgment-debtor could lie by and afterwards take advantage of misdescription which he knew well, but of which the decree-holder might be perfectly ignorant; he cannot, with notice, allow the sale to proceed without objection and then come forward and say that the whole proceedings were vitiated. Olpherts v. Mahabir Pershad (8). This doctrine has obviously no application to a case of this description. The judgment-debtors did not lie by; they have strenuously protested throughout that their properties, which they were willing should be sold for a proper price, were deliberately undervalued, and that such under-statement of value was likely to prejudice them seriously. Their objection has been disregarded; the decree-holder, with full knowledge of the objection, has purchased the properties for prices smaller than those he had himself previously offered. Here, at any rate, we are not concerned with the position of a stranger to the proceedings who has bona fide purchased for value the properties exposed for sale. In our opinion, the proceedings show conclusively that the decree-holder has deliberately understated the values of the properties in the sale proclamation, and that substantial injury has been caused to the judgment-debtors by this material irregularity, whether we accept as the true values of the properties the sums previously offered by the decree-holder himself or the much higher figures suggested and sought to be proved on behalf of the judgment-debtors. That this result has been achieved by the decree-holder, not by accident, but by measures carefully pre-concerted becomes manifest when we examine the bearing of the second conclusion of fact mentioned above.

We have found that the decree-holder was the real purchaser at the sale, and that Ram Charan Bajpai and Askaran Baid were persons introduced by him to give the sale the appearance of a sale to a stranger after severe contest with the decree-holder. In truth, there was no competition. The object of the device is self-evident. The decree-holder was taking out execution for a very large sum nearly one lac of rupees. He had valued the properties for the purposes of the sale proclamation at only Rs. 74,000. The judgment-debtors had protested against this valuation, and had asserted that the value was over two lacs and seventy-five thousand rupees. If at a sale held, under these circumstances, of properties of considerable value, there were no bidders present, and the decree holder attempted to purchase the properties without any competition, suspicion would at once be aroused, and the Court might very well direct the issue of a fresh sale proclamation to make sure that the sale was duly proclaimed and possible bidders afforded an opportunity to bid at the sale. Recourse to the device of an apparently keen competition consequently became necessary. With respect to the fourth property, for instance, the record shows that Ram Charan Bajpai is supposed to have offered at least twenty successive bids against the decree-holder before the property was knocked down to him; we now know that this contest was all a fiction, and that Ram Charan Bajpai was no other than a representative of the decree-holder himself. It is plain that these fictitious bids, by the interposition of a benamdar, were intended to create the impression that there was a contested sale to a stranger; the device was successful and effectively misled the Court. Nanda Kumar Saha v. Gobinda Mohan Das (9). We feel no doubt whatever that a sale held under such circumstances ought not to be maintained. It may be conceded that it is of the utmost importance that the validity of judicial sales, properly conducted, should be supported and should not be allowed to be assailed on technical grounds; at the same time, it is of at least equal importance that the purity of judicial proceedings in connection with execution-sales should be secured to at least a reasonable extent. It is intolerable that a decree-holder should be allowed, as in the case before us, to employ the machinery of the Court to secure for himself at a grossly inadequate price the properties of his judgment-debtors by methods which will not bear serious examination.

(7) 15 I. A. 171; 12 M. 19.

(8) 10 I. A. 25; 11 C. L. R. 494.

(9) 13 C. L. J. 312; 6 Ind. Cas. 135.

In the view we take of the first ground urged before us, it is not necessary to examine in detail the second ground mentioned by the learned Vakil for the appellants. We need only say that, as at present advised, we do not see any reason to question the correctness of the view adopted by Mr. Justice Ameer Ali in Bhikari Misra v. Rani Suria Moni (10), namely, that when a sale is adjourned under section 291 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882, it is necessary to mention the hour of sale, and its non-specification is a material irregularity. See also Surno Moyee Debi v. Dakhina Ranjan (11), Venkatasubbaraya v. Zemindar of Karvetenagar (12). It is not necessary, however, to deal with this aspect of the case in further detail. It is also needless to discuss the other points taken in the memorandum of appeal and pressed before us, or to examine in detail the evidence as to the service of the sale proclamation or the actual value of the properties. We need only say that the evidence upon these points cannot be summarily rejected, and in view of the fact that for five of the properties at least no real bidder was present, except the decree-holder himself, if it were necessary to consider the question of the service of the sale proclamation, the evidence in support of it would require very careful scrutiny.

The result, therefore, is that this appeal must be allowed and the order of the Subordinate Judge set aside. The execution proceedings will stand revived, and as soon as the records are received by the Court below, steps will be taken to issue a fresh sale proclamation. The Subordinate Judge will consider afresh the question of the values to be inserted in the sale proclamation, and he may very well act in the light of the bids offered at the two sales, and also of such evidence as may be adduced by the judgment-debtors.

(10) 6 C. W. N. 48.
(11) 24 C. 291.
(12) 20 M. 159.

The Court will also carefully consider the entry to be made as to the amount of Government revenue: there appears to have been error in this respect in the last sale proclamation, which might have been avoided with a little care; after the sale proclamation has been settled, it will be served in accordance with law and the judgment-debtors will assist the Court in effecting a proper service, so that no question of due publication may hereafter arise.

The appellants are entitled to their costs both here and in the Court below. We assess the hearing fee in this Court at five gold mohurs.

Appeal allowed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 403 OF 1910.

December 26, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Johnstone.

TULSI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

MADHO RAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation—Alienation—Alienor alienating and dying 12 years before suit—Mutation effected within 12 years—Suit for possession by reversioner—Punjab Limitation Act (I of 1900), scope of—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 144—Punjab General Clauses Act (I of 1898), s. 4.

A. effected an alienation in 1887 and died in 1894. Mutation in respect of alienation was not effected till 23rd February 1897. On 20th February 1909, the customary heirs of A. brought this suit for possession of the property alienated:

Held, that the suit was barred under Article 144 of the Indian Limitation Act, the Punjab Limitation Act of 1900 being inapplicable to the case.

If the last male owner alienated and died before Act I of 1900 came into force, the reversioner must sue within 12 years of the alienor's death, regardless of when mutation was effected upon the alienation.

Sahib Dad v. Rahmat, 90 P. R. 1904; 88 P. L. R. 1904; Karam Singh v. Mohammad Din, 11 P. R. 1909; 1 Ind. Cas. 397; 51 P. L. R. 1909; 12 P. W. R. 1909; Miran Bakhsh v. Ahmad, 145 P. R. 1907, relied upon.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Hoshiarpur Division, dated 10th August 1909, affirming that of the Munsif 1st Class, Hoshiarpur, dated 26th June 1909, dismissing plaintiff's claim.

Bhagat Govind Das, for the Appellants.

Lala Dwarka Das, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The sole question for decision in this appeal is whether the suit instituted on 20th February 1909, is within time or not. Ruldu, the last male owner, died 15 or 16 years before suit, and, if the old Law applies, the suit is barred under Article 144, Act XV of 1877, cf. Roda v. Harnam (1). But, the alienation having taken place in 1887, mutation was not effected until 23rd February 1897, or less than 12 years before suit, and thus, if Punjab Act I of 1900 rules the case, the suit is not out of time. Both the lower Courts have held, following Sahib Dad v. Rahmat (2), that the Punjab Act has no application and have dismissed the suit and appeal respectively.

Plaintiffs come up here on revision and their petition has been admitted as a further appeal. They argue that the Full Bench ruling is distinguishable. No doubt the facts are not quite as here, but, in my opinion, the principle laid down is fully applicable in the present case. There mutation was more than 12 years before suit, but the alienor died less than 12 years before suit, and it was held that the new Act (Punjab Act I of 1900) did not, in view of section 4, Punjab General Clauses Act, 1898, deprive plaintiff of his right to sue, under Article 144, Act XV of 1877, any time within 12 years of death of alienor. Here mutation took place less than 12 years before suit, while the alienor died more than 12 years before suit, and the question is whether the new Act can be brought in to save limitation because, when it came into force, plaintiffs still had a subsisting right to sue under the old Law. I have carefully read Sahib Dad v. Rahmat (2), and also Civil Appeal No. 664 of 1909 (by Shah Din, J., and myself) and Civil Appeal No. 702 of 1905 (by Lal Chand J.), and Karam Singh v. Mohammad Din (3), (by Reid, C. J.), and Miran Bakhsh v. Ahmad, (4), (Division Bench) and, in my opinion, all these rulings point really the same way. If the last male owner alienated and died before Act I of 1900 aforesaid came into force, the reversioner must sue within 12 years of alienor's death regardless of when mutation was effected upon the alienation.

(1) 18 P. R. 1895.
(2) 90 P. R. 1904; 88 P. L. R. 1904.
(3) 11 P. R. 1909; 1 Ind. Cas. 397; 51 P. L. R. 1909; 12 P. W. R. 1909.
(4) 145 P. R. 1907.

For these reasons I dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

December 14, 1911.

Present:—Lord Macnaghten, Lord Robson, Sir John Edge and Mr. Ameer Ali.

MUHAMMAD UMAR KHAN AND ANOTHER —PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

MUHAMMAD NIAZ-UD-DIN KHAN—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 118—No declaratory suit instituted—Suit for possession whether barred by the Article—Muhammadan Law—Adoption—Inheritance—Custom—Sheikh Ansari Pathans of Basti Danishmandan, District Jullundur—Gift of ancestral property by father to daughter—Whether the daughter has only a life-estate—Alienation—Whether daughter has power to gift—Evidence—Inference—Relevancy—Acquiescence.

The omission to bring a suit, within the period prescribed by Article 118 of the second Schedule of the Limitation Act, 1877, to obtain a declaration that an alleged adoption was invalid, or never, in fact, took place, is no bar to a suit for recovery of possession of property from the person relying on his adoption.

Thakur Tribhuwan Bahadur Singh, v. Raja Remeskar Baksh Singh, 33 I. A. 156; 10 C. W. N. 1065; 8 Bom. L. R. 722; 16 M. L. J. 440; 3 A. L. J. 695; 4 C. L. J. 405; 1 M. L. T. 265; 9 O. C. 377; 28 A. 727, relied upon.

Under the general Muhammadan Law an adoption is not allowed, an adoption, if made in fact by a Muhammadan, carries with it no right of inheritance.

The Sheikh Ansari Pathans of Basti Danishmandan, District Jullundur, do not belong to a family to which the Punjab agricultural or other similar restrictive customs must be presumed to apply.

There is no custom applying to the said family of Sheikh Ansari which limits the ancestral lands which came to a daughter by gift from her sonless father to a mere life-estate, and which prevents daughter from alienating such lands by gift in her lifetime.

Evidence as to the limited rights by custom of a widow in her deceased husband's property does not give rise to the inference that a daughter also has limited rights in her sonless father's ancestral property gifted to her. Nor has evidence that a Muhammadan father is prevented by some local custom from giving the bulk of his property to one of his sons any bearing on his power to make a gift of the whole of his property to his daughter,

Appeal from the judgment of the Chief Court, Punjab, reported as 1 P. R. 1907.

MUHAMMAD UMAR KHAN v. MUHAMMAD NAIZ-UD-DIN KHAN.

JUDGMENT.

SIR JOHN EDGE.—This is an appeal from the decree of the Chief Court of the Punjab, dated the 18th of April 1906, reversing the decree of the District Judge of Jullundur, dated the 13th of January 1902, which had decreed the plaintiff's claim.

The plaintiffs brought this suit on the 11th of May 1900, to obtain possession of certain immoveable property, lands and houses, in Basti Danishmandan, in the Punjab, which they claimed as their ancestral property. In their plaint they alleged that the property in question had been held for her life by Musammat Zainab, by virtue of a gift made to her by her father Sarfraz Khan, an uncle of the plaintiffs, and that on her death on the 4th of May 1899, the right of inheritance in the property devolved upon them as reversionary heirs. They also alleged in their plaint that Musammat Zainab had not, in fact, transferred the property to the defendant, and that if she had transferred the property to him, such transfer was, by law, according to the custom of the tribe to which the parties belong, and the Riwaj-i-am, null and void as against the plaintiffs as reversionary heirs.

The defendant by his pleadings alleged title as owner in himself by gift from Musammat Zainab, alleged that Musammat Zainab was entitled to the full estate in the property in question, and not merely to an estate for her life, denied that the plaintiffs had any right to the estate, denied that the property was ancestral, denied that any law or tribal custom existed which made the gift to the defendant unlawful or void, and amongst other things alleged that he had been adopted as her son by Musammat Zainab.

The parties to the suit are Sheikh Ansaris of a Pathan tribe of Punjab Muhammadans. The defendant is in possession of the property in dispute under a gift from Musammat Zainab made to him in her life-time. The plaintiffs' case, the only case on which they could have succeeded, is that, according to a custom which they alleged to be existing and binding in their family, no woman could take by gift more than a mere interest for her life without any power of alienation in any ancestral property of the family, and consequently that the gift by Musammat Zainab to the defendant was void. Many issues, some of which, in the view which their Lordships take of this case, were immaterial or irrelevant, were raised by the parties, and much evidence was recorded. The District Judge of Jullundur gave the plaintiffs a decree for possession. From that decree the defendant appealed to the Chief Court of the Punjab. The Judges in the Chief Court mainly directed their attention to a question of acquiescence, which their Lordships consider did not arise on the facts, and to the alleged adoption of the defendant by Musammat Zainab, which was an immaterial issue, and having, apparently, although somewhat uncertainly, found that Musammat Zainab had adopted the defendant, they applied Article 118 of the second Schedule of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, to the case, allowed the appeal, and dismissed the suit with costs.

Although their Lordships consider that the question of an adoption was an immaterial issue, they think it advisable to say that the omission to bring, within the period prescribed by Article 118 of the second Schedule of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, a suit to obtain a declaration that an alleged adoption was invalid, or never, in fact, took place, is no bar to a suit like this for possession of property. Their Lordships need only refer to Thakur Tirbhuwan Bahadur Singh v. Raja Rameshar Bakhsh Singh (1). Under the general Muhammadan law an adoption cannot be made; an adoption, if made in fact by a Muhammadan, could carry with it no right of inheritance.

It may be further observed that, even if an adoption by a Muhammadan was permissible by any valid custom in the Punjab, the Chief Court found that it had not been proved that the parties to the suit belonged to a family to which the Punjab agricultural or other similar restrictive customs must be presumed to apply.

In order to understand the material evidence in this case, it is necessary to refer to the pedigree of the plaintiffs. Muhammad Ali Sher, the common ancestor of the plaintiffs and Musammat Zainab, had three sons, one of whom, Jehangir Khan, had by his wife,

(1) 33 I. A. 156; 10 C. W. N. 1065; 8 Bom. L. R. 722; 16 M. L. J. 440; 3 A. L. J. 695; 4 C. L. J. 405; 1 M. L. T. 265; 9 O. C. 377; 28 A. 727.

Musammat Fatima, a daughter, Musammat Maryam, who married her cousin, Sarfraz Khan. Alamgir, another son of Muhammad Ali Sher, had three sons, one of whom was Sarfraz Khan, who married his cousin Musammat Maryam; another son of Alamgir was Shahbaz Khan; and the other son of Alamgir was Siraj-ud-Din, otherwise called Sheraz-ud-Din Khan, who was the father of the plaintiffs. Another son of Muhammad Ali Sher was Sarwar Khan, who had two sons, one of whom was Muhammad Said; the other son of Sarwar Khan was Muhammad Bahadur Khan. Sarfraz Khan had by his wife Musammat Maryam, a daughter Musammat Zainab, who married Ghulam Mohy-ud-Din alias Baghe Khan. The defendant is a son of Jamal-ud-Din, who was a son of a sister of Sarfraz Khan. Jamal-ud-Din Khan was a brother of Mohy-ud-Din alias Baghe Khan.

On the 3rd Ramzan 1248 A. H., Jehangir Khan, by his deed of gift, gave to his daughter Musammat Maryam, wife of Sarfraz Khan, absolutely all his one-third share of the property of his ancestors which had fallen to his lot according to law, in lieu of the dower of her mother Musammat Fatima. Musammat Maryam obtained possession of the property which had been given to her by her father Jehangir Khan, and remained in possession for 15 years, when she gave that property to her husband Sarfraz Khan, who took possession on her death. Musammat Maryam died in 1846 or 1847. After her death Sarfraz Khan's right to the possession of the property which had come to him from Musammat Maryam was challenged by Muhammad Said Khan and Muhammad Bahadur Khan, sons of Sarwar Khan, and Sheraz-ud-Din Khan, the father of the plaintiffs, who contested the alienation to Sarfraz Khan, alleging that by custom daughters had no right of succession. Sarfraz Khan brought a suit for maintenance of possession in the Court of the Deputy Collector against Muhammad Bahadur Khan, Muhammad Said Khan, and Sheraz ud-Din. In that case Sheraz-ud-Din, Shahbaz Khan, and Muhammad Bahadur Khan, proved that Musammat Maryam had been in possession of the property and had, through the agency of her husband Sarfraz Khan and his brother Sheraz-ud-Din, received the rents of the land together with zemindari dues and had paid the Government revenue. In that case Muhammad Said Khan testified to the facts of the gift and delivery of possession to Musammat Maryam, and Sheraz-ud-Din admitted that a deed of gift had been executed and that possession had been delivered to Musammat Maryam. Several other witnesses, including the marginal witnesses to the deed of gift, proved that the property had remained in the possession of Musammat Maryam for her life-time, and had, after her death, passed to Sarfraz Khan, her husband. On the 16th of May 1849, the Deputy Collector ordered that a decree for Sarfraz Khan's claim be passed to the effect that Sarfraz Khan should retain possession of the land then in suit. From that order of the Deputy Collector, Muhammad Bahadur Khan appealed to the Settlement Officer, who, on the 3rd of August 1849, dismissed the appeal, holding that the inquiry before the Deputy Collector had established Sarfraz Khan's possession, occupation of, and title to the land, and that if Muhammad Bahadur Khan had any claim to the land he was at liberty to lodge a suit in a Civil Court. No suit was brought in a Civil Court to contest the right or title of Sarfraz Khan to the land which had come to him from Musammat Maryam. The facts above referred to afford, in their Lordships' opinion, strong evidence that there was no custom applying to this family which limited the estate in ancestral lands which came to a daughter by gift to a mere life-estate, and which prevented a daughter alienating such lands by gift in her life-time.

On the 15th of December 1851, Sarfraz Khan, who was then in possession of the lands which had come to him by gift from his wife Musammat Maryam, and was also in possession of his own third share of three shares in the ancestral property which had come to him by lot according to law, made a deed of gift by which he gave to his daughter Musammat Zainab absolutely his entire property of every kind, and gave her possession. To that deed Shahbaz Khan, son of Alamgir, was one of the witnesses. Sarfraz Khan died on the 10th of May 1852, and on that day the patwari of Basti Danishmandan, on inquiry of Musammat Zainab, was directed by her to enter the entire share of Sarfraz Khan, which had come to her, in the official papers in the name of her husband

Ghulam Mohy-ud-Din, whose name was accordingly entered on the 10th of May 1852. In or about 1859, Muhammad Bahadur Khan and Muhammad Said Khan brought a suit in the Revenue Court of the Extra Assistant Commissioner of Jullundur against Ghulam Mohy-ud-Din, in which they claimed possession of the lands which had come through Musammat Maryam and Sarfraz Khan to Musammat Zainab. The plaintiff in that suit alleged that Sarfraz Khan had not executed the deed of gift in favour of Musammat Zainab, that the property in suit could not have passed through his wife Musammat Zainab to Ghulam Mohy-ud-Din, and that as Sarfraz Khan had died without a son the property had vested in them, Muhammad Bahadur Khan and Muhammad Said. In that suit the patwari of Basti Danishmandan was examined as a witness, and in reply to the question—"In Basti Danishmandan what custom prevails in respect of an estate left by a sonless proprietor?" said—

"The following custom prevails:—The estate of a proprietor dying childless goes to his daughters. Should he make a gift of his property during his life-time in favour of his daughters, they succeed to their father's estate. If he does not make a gift in favour of his daughters during his life-time, his brothers and brothers' sons succeed to his estate."

Ghulam Mohy-ud-Din gave evidence in that suit; he claimed no title in himself; he said that his wife Musammat Zainab was the proprietor, and that she had full authority to have her own name inserted in the official papers or to allow the entry in his name to stand. Many other witnesses were examined in that suit, and on the 25th of June 1859 the Extra Assistant Commissioner of Jullundur dismissed the suit. From that order dismissing the suit, Muhammad Siraj-ud-Din (Sheraz-ud-Din Khan) who had apparently come into the suit as a plaintiff, Muhammad Bahadur Khan, and Muhammad Said Khan, appealed to the Deputy Commissioner, who on the 31st of December 1859 rejected the appeal but holding that as Musammat Zainab alone was the proprietor, directed that her name should be entered in the column of owners. From the order rejecting their appeal, Muhammad Siraj-ud-Din (Sheraz-ud-Din Khan), Muhammad Bahadur Khan, and Muhammad Said Khan, appealed to the Commissioner of Jullundur, who on the 25th of February 1860 dismissed their appeal.

On the 6th of May 1887, Baghe Khan (Ghulam Mohy-ud-Din) executed a deed in which he stated that he had adopted Niaz-ud-Din when he was two years old and that he and his wife had brought him up. Niaz-ud-Din, who is mentioned in the deed, is Muhammad Niaz-ud-din Khan, the defendant in this suit.

On the 22nd of May 1888, Ghulam Mohy-ud-Din Khan and his wife Musammat Zainab executed a deed of settlement by which Ghulam Mohy-ud-Din gave certain property of his in Basti Danishmandan, which is not in dispute in this suit, to Muhammad Niaz-ud-Din Khan, and Musammat Zainab gave to Niaz-ud-Din Khan the property which is in dispute in this case. In that deed it is stated that Muhammad Niaz-ud-Din Khan had been placed in possession. An application was made to enter the name of the defendant Muhammad Niaz-ud-Din Khan in the column of proprietors in respect of the property in dispute in this suit, and Musammat Zainab having stated to the Tahsildar that Muhammad Niaz-ud-Din Khan was in possession, and no objector appearing, the Tahsildar sanctioned the mutation of names, and the name of Muhammad Niaz-ud-Din Khan was accordingly entered in the column of proprietors.

In 1895 and 1896 the principal lands which had been held in unpartitioned shares by Muhammad Niaz-ud-Din Khan, Muhammad Umar Khan, and Muhammad Pirdad Khan, were by agreement between them partitioned, each having allotted to him lands which represented his share. Muhammad Niaz-ud-Din's shares in the partition represented shares which had come to him by the gift of Musammat Zainab. Musammat Zainab was then alive; she died on the 4th of May 1899.

Their Lordships consider that these partition proceedings between Muhammad Umar Khan, Muhammad Pirdad Khan, and Muhammad Niaz-ud-Din Khan, who were the original parties to this suit, afford very strong evidence in favour of Muhammad Niaz-ud-Din, who is the defendant in the suit, and respondent in this appeal. The evidence which was given on behalf of the plaintiffs to prove that a custom existed and applied to this family, by which a female could take only a life-interest in the ancestral property which had come to her by gift from her sonless father and had in such property no power to alienate it by a gift in her lifetime, was of the most shadowy description and failed to prove the custom alleged by them. Evidence as to the limited rights by custom of a widow in her deceased husband's property was not evidence from which the custom alleged by the plaintiffs in this suit could be inferred. Nor was evidence that a Muhammadan father had been prevented by some local custom from giving the bulk of his property to one of his sons, evidence which had any bearing on the issue in this case. The evidence, to which reference has been made by their Lordships, relating to the devolution of Jehangir Khan's share to Musammat Zainab, is entirely inconsistent with the existence of the custom which has been alleged by the plaintiffs.

Their Lordships find that not only have the plaintiffs failed to prove the custom alleged by them, but the alleged custom has been disproved. They also find that Musammat Zainab had a full proprietary estate in the property in dispute, and that she made a valid gift of that property to the defendant.

Their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that the decree of the Chief Court of the Punjab dismissing the suit of the plaintiffs should be affirmed and this appeal be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REFERENCE No. 44 OF 1911.

December 23, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis.

DEVTA JAMLU—PLAINTIFF

versus

HARI DAS AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS.

Jurisdiction of Civil or Revenue Court—Suit for fixation of rent due from occupant of water-mill—Water-mill not land—Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), s. 3—Tenant.

A suit for the fixing of rent due from the occupant of a water-mill is cognizable by a Civil Court.

The site of a water-mill cannot be said to be used for agricultural purposes or for purposes subservient to agriculture. The occupant of such a mill does not hold "land" as defined in the Punjab Tenancy Act. His rights are, therefore, not governed by the Act.

Farman Ali v. Imam Din, 77 P. R. 1904, followed.

Case referred by the Commissioner, Jullundur Division, with his Letter No. 3330, dated the 10th July 1911, for orders of the Chief Court of the Punjab.

ORDER.—This order will also cover the connected case, Reference No. 45 of 1911.

The plaintiff lodged two suits claiming that he was the owner and defendants were the tenants of two mills, that the defendants were entered in the Revenue Records as paying no rent, but that the tenants of neighbouring mills paid rent at a certain rate to the landlords and that rent should similarly be fixed as regards these mills.

The cases were instituted in the Court of the Assistant Commissioner, Kulu, who has the powers of a Collector and also of a District Judge. He decided the cases on the Revenue side, and appeals were preferred to the Commissioner, who has referred the cases to this Court under section 100, Tenancy Act, quoting Farman Ali v. Imam Din (1). (The number of the ruling has by a slip been given as 76 in the Commissioner's order of reference). The Commissioner is quite right in saying that Farman Ali v. Imam Din (1) is authority for holding that such suits are cognizable by the Civil Courts. As pointed out in that judgment, the site of a water-mill cannot be said to be used for agricultural purposes or for purposes subservient to agriculture, and the occupant of such a mill is not holding "land" as defined in the Act, and his rights are therefore, not governed by the Tenancy Act.

I direct that the decrees passed in these two cases be registered as decrees of the District Judge of Kulu. The Commissioner should return the appeal for presentation to the Civil Appellate Court.

(1) 77 P. R. 1904.

RAMDEO PROSAD v. GOPI KOERI.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL NOS. 167 AND 279 OF 1908.

December 14, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Coxe and Mr. Justice N. Chatterjea.

RAMDEO PROSAD SINGH—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—APPELLANT

versus

GOPI KOERI AND OTHERS—DECREE-HOLDERS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Mitakshara—Interest—Liability of grandson to pay interest on grandfather's debt—Joint decree against father and grandfather—Distinction between interest at birth and that acquired by survivorship.

A decree was passed against the grandfather and the father of the appellant, a Hindu governed by the Mitakshara, for recovery of possession of land with mesne profits, costs and interest:

Held, that, although a grandson may not be liable to pay interest on the grandfather's debts, yet, as the decree was passed against both the grandfather and the father, the latter was liable for the whole of the interest and mesne profits decreed and that, therefore, the appellant is liable for the same.

Held, also, that, after the death of the grandfather and father, there did not remain any distinction between interest which was vested in the appellant at his birth and the interest that he acquired by survivorship and that, therefore, the decree-holder should not be compelled to proceed first against what was the share of the grandfather and the father at the time of the decree, and only in the event of that being insufficient, to proceed against the interest that then belonged to the appellant.

Kishun Pershad Chowdhury v. Tipan Pershad Singh, 34 C. 735, 11 C. W. N. 613; 5 C. L. J. 569, distinguished.

Appeal from the order of the Sub-Judge of Monghyr, dated April 4th, 1911.

Babus Umakali Mukherjee and Ganesh Dutt Singh, for the Appellant.

Babu Kulwant Sahai, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the respondent obtained a decree against Ajodhya and Damodar, the grandfather and father respectively of the appellant, for recovery of possession of land, with mesne profits, costs and interest. The mesne profits were subsequently ascertained and decreed in 1902 against Damodar and Ajodhya. At that time all three members of the family were in existence. The respondent took out execution of the decree; and the case ultimately came up to this Court in appeal. The Court below had excluded certain evidence; and the case was remanded in order that an opportunity might be given to the appellant to show that the debt with respect to which execution was sought was not one for which he was liable. On remand the Court below has come to the decision that the appellant is liable; and this finding has been returned to this Court.

Two points have been taken on behalf of the appellant. The first is that, in any case, the decree-holder is not entitled to interest; and reference has been made to a passage at page 232 of Babu Golap Chandra Sarkar Shastri's book on Hindu Law, in which it is said that the grandson is not liable to pay interest on the grandfather's debts. It is argued that the dispossession which created the liability to account for mesne profits was effected by Ajodhya, the grandfather; that, therefore, it was he that was liable for the interest, and that that liability does not descend to the present appellant, who is his grandson. But it is clear that the decree for mesne profits was passed against both Damodar and Ajodhya, and there is nothing to show that the dispossession which formed the cause of action was not effected by Damodar just as much as by Ajodhya. In any case, it is clear that Damodar was liable for the whole of the interest and mesne profits decreed; and, that being so, the passage we have quoted does not relieve the present appellant from a similar liability.

The second point taken is based, to a great extent, on the decision in Kishun Pershad Chowdhury v. Tipan Pershad Singh (1). That was a suit by a mortgagee against a father and son, to enforce a mortgage; and the order was that the plaintiff should have the usual mortgage-decree against the share of the father and, if that was not sufficient, should be entitled to realise the balance by the sale of the share of the son in the ancestral property. It is argued that, following the principle of this decision, the decree-holder ought to proceed first against what was the share of Damodar and Ajodhya in the ancestral property at the time of the decree, and only in the event of that being insufficient, should be allowed relief against the interest that then belonged to the present appellant. The case, however, which has been cited was a suit upon a mortgage; and it seems open to considerable doubt whether, if it had been a case of a simple money-decree, the Court would have made any distinction between the interest of the father and that of the son. But, whether that be so or not, we are certainly not prepared to hold that after the death of Damodar and Ajodhya there remains any such distinction between the interest which was vested in the appellant at his birth and interest that he acquired by survivorship, from Damodar and Ajodhya, as would justify the application of the case cited. The case, therefore, does not appear to us to sustain the contention of the learned Pleader for the appellant; and there is certainly no direct authority in favour of that contention.

(1) 34 C. 735; 11 C. W. N. 613; 5 C. L. J. 569.

No attachment of the property had been effected during the life-time of Damodar and Ajodhya.

It has been argued that the appellant is not entitled to take these pleas at the present time. But, as we have decided that they are not well founded, it is not necessary to give any opinion on that point.

The appeal will be dismissed with costs.

This decision will also govern Appeal No. 279 of 1908.

The hearing fee for both the appeals is assessed at five gold mohurs.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 66 OF 1911.
December 22, 1911.
Present:—Sir Richards, K. C., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.
Mirza ABDULLAH BEG AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS
versus
ABDUL HASAN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. I, r. 10—Suit instituted by a person having no interest in the property—Right person added as plaintiff subsequently by order of Court—Discretion.

A. and K. were brother and sister living in the same house. Defendants built a construction encroaching upon a portion of the house in which A. and K. lived. A. brought a suit for injunction and demolition of the construction. Later on, it turned out that K. was the owner of the house and that A. had no interest in it. The Court made K. also a plaintiff in the suit and proceeded to decide the case:

Held, that the suit could proceed between the parties, and that having regard to the circumstances of the case and to the fact that A. was living in the same house with his sister K., the joining of K., as a plaintiff by the Court was not an unreasonable or illegal exercise of the powers conferred on the Court by Order I, rule 10 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Appeal against the order of the Hon'ble Sir George Knox, Judge, Allahabad High Court, under section 10 of the Letters Patent, in Second Appeal No. 852 of 1910, dated the 9th May 1911. See 11 Ind. Cas. 223.

Mr. Govind Pershad, for the Appellants.

Mr. Gulam Mujtaba, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The suit out of which this appeal arises was a suit instituted by one Mirza Abdulla Beg, claiming a mandatory injunction for the demolition of certain constructions which he alleged the defendants had wrongfully made. He claimed to be entitled to a certain house which he alleged had been encroached upon. The defendants denied his title and claimed that the house was not his house but their house. Mirza Abdullah Beg was examined, and in the course of his examination he admitted that his sister, one Kulsum Bibi, had an interest in the house. The Court of first instance thereupon made an order, presumably under the provisions of Order I, rule 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and added of his own motion Kulsum Bibi and other residents in the house as co-plaintiffs in the suit. The learned Judge of this Court before whom the suit came in second appeal had some doubt as to whether or not Kulsum Bibi really consented to join in the proceedings, and he says in one part of his judgment that it does not appear that Kulsum Bibi was in any way related to Mirza Abdulla Beg, the original plaintiff. He was clearly in error in this respect. There is not the smallest doubt that Kulsum Bibi was the sister of the plaintiff Abdulla Beg, that both lived together in the house, and that she consented to be added as a plaintiff and adopted the proceedings which had been initiated by her brother. The learned Munsif having added Kulsum Bibi as a plaintiff proceeded to go into the merits of the case. He found that the real owner of the property was Kulsum Bibi and not Abdullah Beg. We do not think that it was necessary for the learned Munsif to have gone into the question of the legal ownership of the house excepting so far as it was necessary to find whether the plaintiffs between them were entitled to the property. The question of their rights inter se did not arise. It was not convenient to try such rights in a case where the plaintiffs were joining in a common action against alleged wrong-doers. Having heard the case on the merits, he decided the suit partly in favour of the plaintiffs and partly in favour of the defendants. The defendants have not in any way been prejudiced by the adding of Kulsum Bibi as a co-plaintiff; rather the contrary. She having been made a party to the proceedings, was bound by the decision of the Court in so far as it was in favour of the defendants. However, both parties appealed to the learned District Judge. Most of the grounds of appeal on behalf of the defendants were strictly on the merits of the case. In the last ground of appeal, however, it was contended that as the original plaintiff Abdulla Beg had no title, according to the finding of the Court, the decree should not have been granted. The learned District Judge did not go into the merits of the case, nor did he set aside the order adding Kulsum Bibi as a co-plaintiff but summarily dismissed the suit on the ground that Kulsum Bibi ought not to have been joined, and that, inasmuch as the Court of first instance had found that Abdullah Beg had no title, he dismissed the suit not only against Abdullah Beg but also against Kulsum Bibi. Upon second appeal to this Court the decision of the learned District Judge was confirmed. We doubt very much whether our learned brother would have taken the view he did, had he been aware of the fact that Abdullah Beg and Kulsum Bibi were brother and sister living together in the very house in question. It is to be admitted here that the dismissal of the suit against Kulsum Bibi, who was added by the Court, cannot possibly be sustained. We think further that, under the circumstances of the present case, and having regard to the fact that Abdullah was living in the house with his sister, the joining of Kulsum Bibi as a plaintiff by the Court was not an unreasonable or illegal exercise of the powers conferred on the Court by Order I, rule 10. It enabled the Court to do complete justice between the parties and prejudiced no one, all persons who were in physical possession of the house would have been bound by the result of the suit, whether that result was in their favour or in favour of the defendants. The order that the learned Munsif made was calculated to settle disputes once for all between all parties. We think that after the evidence has been taken, that it would be deplorable if the case was now dismissed on the technical point of the want of legal title in Abdullah and the parties driven to commence their litigation all over again. We think this appeal ought to be allowed. We accordingly set aside the decree of this Court and also of the lower Appellate Court. The case was decided on a preliminary point. Accordingly, it will be remanded under the provisions of Order XLI, rule 23, with directions to the learned District Judge to re-admit the appeal, and to proceed to hear and determine the same on the merits. Costs here and heretofore will be costs in the cause.

Case remanded.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2317 OF 1909.

September 4, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

Moharani JANKI KOERI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BASDEO OJHA AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Res judicata—Suit for rent—Previous Certificate cancelled on ground that bona fide claim of right is involved—No adjudication on merits—Public Demands Recovery Act (I B. C. of 1895), s. 7 sub-s. (1) cl. (c), s. 10, s. 12 sub-s. (1), s. 32, sub-s. (1)—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 13.

A certificate for arrears of rent was made on behalf of a landlord who was a Ward of Court. The tenant objected on the ground that he held the land rent-free. The certificate officer decided in favour of the landlord. Upon an appeal by the tenant, the Collector, without entering into the merits, cancelled the certificate on the ground that there was a bona fide claim of right involved in the proceedings. The landlord then brought a suit for rent in respect of which the certificate had previously been made:

Held, that the suit is not barred by the doctrine of res judicata as the Collector did not cancel the certificate on the merits.

Appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge of Mozaffarpur, dated June 24th, 1909, reversing that of the Munsif of Sitamorhi, dated April 23rd, 1908.

JANKI KOERI v. BASDEO OJHA.

Babus Ram Charan Mitra, Senior Government Pleader, and Dwarka Nath Mitra, for the Appellant.

Babu Luchmi Narain Singh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The question of law which calls for our decision in this appeal is, whether the trial of a suit for rent is barred by reason of an order made by a Collector under the Public Demands Recovery Act by which he cancelled a certificate on the ground that there is a bona fide claim of right involved in the proceedings. The appellant claims to be the landlord of the defendants. She is a Ward of the Court and a certificate for arrears of rent was made upon an application presented on her behalf under section 7, sub-section (1) clause (c) of the Public Demands Recovery Act of 1895. Under section 8, subject to the other provisions of the Act, the certificate so made acquire the force and effect of a decree of the Civil Court as regards the remedies for enforcing the same and for that purpose alone. Notices were thereafter served upon the judgment-debtors under section 10. They appeared and objected under section 12, sub-section (1), that they were not liable to pay any portion of the amount for which the certificate had been made against them inasmuch as they held the land rent-free. The certificate officer thereupon heard the petition and decided in favour of the landlord. An appeal was preferred by the tenants to the Collector under sub-section (1) of section 32 of the Public Demands Recovery Act. The result was that the Collector cancelled the certificate, inasmuch as he was of opinion that substantial questions of title were in controversy between the parties. The landlord thereupon commenced the present action for recovery of the rent in respect of which the certificate had previously been made at her instance. The tenants objected that the claim was barred by the doctrine of res judicata. This contention was overruled by the Court of first instance but upon appeal has found favour with the Subordinate Judge. The landlord has now appealed to this Court, and on her behalf it has been contended that the doctrine of res judicata, as embodied in section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882, has no application to the circumstances of the present case. In our opinion this contention is obviously well founded. We may state at the outset that it has not been argued by the learned Vakil for the appellant that if a certificate has been made and the matter has been decided on the merits by the certificate officer and in appeal by the Collector, the question can be re-agitated in a suit for rent. Such a view cannot possibly be maintained on first principles. A litigant who is allowed two alternative remedies cannot, if he elects in favour of one of them and pursues it unsuccessfully, take recourse to the other remedy. Here, however, the case is different. There was no adjudication on the merits by the Collector. In fact, the Collector proceeded in substance under the proviso to section 13 of the Public Demands Recovery Act. That proviso lays down that if in the opinion of the certificate officer the petition involves a bona fide claim of right he shall refer the petition to the District Collector for orders and the District Collector, if he is satisfied that a bona fide claim of right is involved, shall make an order cancelling the certificate. In the case before us, the Collector has cancelled the certificate not upon a reference by the certificate officer but in the exercise of his appellate jurisdiction. This, in our opinion, does not make any substantial different in the position of the parties. The essence of the matter is, that there has been no adjudication on the merits by the Collector and consequently there is nothing to prevent the plaintiff from seeking relief in the present suit.

The result, therefore, is that this appeal is allowed, the decree of the Subordinate Judge set aside and the case remanded to him in order that the appeal may be heard on the merits. The costs of this appeal will abide the result.

Appeal allowed.

MAHAMMAD MEHDI HASSAN KHAN v. SHEOSHANKAR PERSAD SINGH.

(s. c. 14 C. L. J. 552.)

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

REGULAR CIVIL APPEAL No. 542 OF 1908.

August 23, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Brett, Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Vincent.

MAHAMMAD MEHDI HASSAN KHAN AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

SHEOSHANKAR PERSAD SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Revenue Sale Law Act (XI of 1859), ss. 10, 11, 53—Bengal Land Registration Act (VII B. C. of 1876), s. 70—Separate accounts, opening of, by Collector without jurisdiction, effect of—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 575—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 98, sub-s. (2)—Point of law only to be referred.

Per Mookerjee and Vincent, JJ. (Brett, J. dissenting.)—A proprietor, who is not a recorded sharer of a joint estate held in joint tenancy, within the meaning of section 10 of Act XI of 1859, nor a recorded sharer whose share consists of a specific portion of the land of the estate within the meaning of section 11, but is recorded as proprietor of an undivided interest held in common tenancy of a specific portion of the lands of the estate but not extending over the whole estate, within the meaning of section 70 of the Bengal Land Registration Act, 1876, is not entitled to claim the benefit of the exception made in section 53 of Act XI of 1859 in favour of sharers with whom the Collector has, under section 10 or section 11 of the Act, opened separate accounts.

Per Mookerjee, J.—Where jurisdiction is usurped in contravention of statutory provisions, the act performed is a nullity. Therefore, if a Collector opens a separate account in clear contravention of the provisions of sections 10 and 11 of Act XI of 1859, that is, if he applies the provisions to cases to which the Legislature never intended that they should be applied, his act is without jurisdiction and cannot confer upon the person who obtains a separate account opened under such circumstances, the statutory privilege created by section 53.

Share-holders in some only of the villages constituting an estate, cannot claim to have a separate account opened under either section 10 or section 11.

Nunho Shahee v. Ram Pershad, 21 W. R. 38, followed.

Under section 575 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, it was the appeal that was referred to a third Judge, when the Judges hearing an appeal differed in opinion on a point of law; under the present Code of 1908, only the point of law is to be referred.

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Chapra, dated the 10th September 1908.

Babus Umakali Mookerjee and Moulvis Mustafa Khan and Sowgat Ali, for the Appellants.

Babu Shoroshi Charan Mitter, Dr. Sarat Chunder Bysack and Babu Harendra Krishna Mukerji, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BRETT, J.—The entire Mehal Raiputti bearing Towji No. 3143 in the Saran Collectorate was sold for arrears of revenue by the Collector, proceeding under the provisions of section 14, Act XI of 1859, and was purchased in the name of defendant No. 7, Babu Gopal Das.

Fifteen separate accounts or Khatas, besides one for the residuary share, had been opened many years ago by the Collector, and defendant No. 2 being the malik of Khata No. 1 executed three deeds of mortgage in favour of Babu Sheo Shankar Prosad Singh, defendant No. 1 on the 9th December 1886, 13th December 1886 and 1st July 1893, respectively. Afterwards, the share in respect of which Khata No. 1 had been opened was sold for arrears of revenue due on that share, and purchased by Pardip Narain Singh, defendant No. 6 subject to encumbrances. Defendant No. 1 afterwards brought a suit on the three mortgage-bonds, No. 67 of 1897, against defendants Nos. 2 to 6 and obtained a decree by consent for Rs. 17,231-10.

On the 25th March 1899, the share, in respect of which Khata No 4 had been opened, and which belonged to Kalika Prosad Singh, was put up for sale for arrears of revenue due on that share. No bids being offered, the Collector proceeded under section 14 of Act XI of 1859 and put up the entire estate, No. 3143, for sale and it was purchased by defendant No. 7 for Rs. 1,600.

Defendant No. 1 then took out execution of his mortgage-decree obtained against the proprietors of the share in respect of which Khata No. 4 had been opened, praying for sale of that share in execution of his decree. Thereupon, defendant No. 7 brought a Suit No. 51 of 1904 to have it declared that his purchase of estate No. 3143 was free of all encumbrances, and asked for a temporary injunction restraining the defendant No. 1 from selling the share. The injunction was granted on condition of defendant No. 7 depositing Rs. 1,454-8, being the amount of interest due on defendant No. 1's mortgage up to 1st August 1906. In that suit defendant No. 1 pleaded that it was incompetent as defendant No. 7 was merely a benamdar of the two plaintiffs. The plea was allowed and the suit was dismissed. Defendant No. 1 then drew out the Rs. 1,458-8 from deposit.

MAHAMMAD MEHDI HASSAN KHAN v. SHEOSHANKAR PERSAD SINGH.

On the 2nd March 1907 defendant No. 7 executed a deed of conveyance of the entire estate No. 3143 in favour of the plaintiffs for Rs. 12,000, the deed to be treated either as a deed of sale or a deed of release.

Defendant No. 1 again took out execution of his mortgage-decree and the share in respect of which Khata No. 4 had been opened was advertised for sale on the 5th August 1907.

Plaintiffs instituted the present suit on the 30th July 1907 for a declaration that defendant No. 1 is not entitled to sell the share in respect of which Khata No. 4 had been opened on the ground that plaintiffs had purchased the entire estate free of all encumbrances. They also claimed, as assignees of defendant No. 9, to be entitled to recover from defendant No. 1 the sum of Rs. 1,451-8 deposited by defendant No. 7 to cover interest on the mortgage-debt of defendant No. 1.

The plaintiffs' case as set out in their plaint was that as the entire estate had been sold for arrears of Government Revenue and purchased by defendant No. 7 a stranger, and subsequently purchased from him by the plaintiffs, the plaintiffs acquired the estate free from all incumbrances. In the suit brought by defendant No. 7, No. 51 of 1904, to which reference has already been made, it was held that defendant No. 7 was merely a benamdar for the plaintiffs, but at the same time the opinion was expressed in the judgment that, as the plaintiffs were sharers in respect of whom a separate account had been opened by the Collector under the provisions of sections 10 and 11 of Act XI of 1859, they came within the exception stated in section 53 of the same Act and they purchased the estate free of all incumbrances.

This latter ground, though not expressly stated in the plaint, was the one on which the plaintiffs relied in support of their suit in the lower Court.

Numerous issues were framed in the lower Court, but those which are of importance for the purposes of this appeal are Nos. 5, 10, 11 and 6.

Issue No. 5 is as follows: Are the plaintiffs purchasers of this estate free from incumbrances?

Issue No. 10 runs as follows: Were the plaintiffs such sharers in Mehal Raiputti, Towji No. 3143 before the Revenue sale dated the 5th June 1890, as to come within the exception mentioned in section 53 of Act XI of 1859?

Issue No. 11 is as follows:—Was there any separate account validly and legally opened under sections 10 and 11 of Act XI of 1859 on behalf of the plaintiffs? If not, whether the defendant No. 1 is competent to question the validity and legality of the separation of the account effected before the Revenue sale.

Issue No. 6 is as follows:—Are plaintiffs as assignees of defendant No. 7 entitled to get a refund of Rs. 1,454-8 deposited by defendant No. 7 in Court and withdrawn by defendant No. 1?

The Subordinate Judge decided all these issues against the plaintiffs.

The plaintiffs claimed to be sharers in the share in the estate in respect of which Khata No. 5 had been opened by the Collector. In fact, that separate account was opened on the 16th April 1872 by an order of the Collector of Saran. The original petition for the opening of a separate account was made by Ram Anugrah Singh, Rama Kanta Singh and Musammat Sarawan Koer (apparently the widow of a deceased brother of the two first-mentioned persons.) The Mehal Raiputti estate No. 3143 consists of 17 mouzahs and the petition stated that Ram Anugrah and Rama Kanta were proprietors of certain shares in 15 of these and that Musammat Sarawan Koer was the proprietor of the same share in the remaining two mouzahs. An objection seems to have been raised in the office of the Collector to the three persons joining in one petition, and accordingly an amended petition was filed, as ordered by the Collector, excluding Musammat Sarawan Koer, and on this amended petition the order was passed on the 16th April 1872 directing that the separate account be opened.

Subsequently, a portion of the shares of the heirs of Ram Anugrah Singh and of Rama Kanta Singh was sold by auction in satisfaction of decrees obtained against them by the plaintiffs, and were purchased by the plaintiffs and sale-certificates were obtained by them on the 13th June 1896. The plaintiffs appear to have been registered afterwards in the Collectorate. So far as the materials on the record go, the plaintiffs appear to have purchased only a portion of the shares which descended to the heirs of Ram Anugrah Singh and Rama Kanta. That point is not clearly dealt with in the lower Court. All that the Subordinate Judge says in his judgment is that "the plaintiffs are fractional sharers in 8 or 9 mouzahs out of the 15 or 16 included in Khata No. 5." No argument appears, however, to have been raised on the point that the plaintiffs were not purchasers of the entire shares of Ram Anugrah and Rama Kanta, the sharers in whose favour the separate account No. 5 was originally opened.

The learned Judge held that because Ram Anugrah and Rama Kanta Singh were persons who owned shares only in 15 or 16 mouzahs out of the 17 or 18 comprised in the mehal, and as such were neither sharers in all the mouzahs making up the mehal, nor the sole owners of the 15 or 16 mouzahs which go to make up with the shares of the other mouzahs the entire mehal Towji No. 3143, therefore, they were not sharers who, under sections 10 and 11 of Act XI of 1859, could apply to the Collector to have a separate account opened in their favour. In consequence, the Collector had no jurisdiction to open a separate account under sections 10 and 11 of Act XI of 1859 with them. In support of this finding, he relied on the decision of this Court in the case of Nunhoo Shahee v. Ram Pershad (1), and arriving at these conclusions the Subordinate Judge held that the plaintiffs not being sharers in whose favour separate account had been legally opened by the Collector they were not entitled to claim the benefit of the exception in section 53 of Act XI of 1859, and that, therefore, their purchase of the entire estate was not free from incumbrances.

Further, he held that even if the separate account opened by the Collector in favour of Ram Anugrah Singh and Rama Kanta Singh could be held to be one opened under section 70 of Act VII B. C. of 1876, Land Registration Act, they could not claim the benefit of section 53 of Act XI of 1859 as that section only included sharers in respect of whom separate shares had been entered under sections 10 and 11 of Act XI of 1859.

Accordingly, he held that the plaintiffs were not entitled to the declaration sought for in the suit, nor to recover from defendant No. 1 the sum of Rs. 1,454-8 deposited by defendant No. 7.

(1) 21 W. R. 38.

The suit was dismissed with costs and plaintiffs have appealed.

It appears that separate account or Khata No. 1 was originally opened on the 6th January 1872 in the name of Kishendeo Singh, who is represented in the present case by defendants Nos. 2 to 5. This is the share against which defendant No. 1 has obtained the mortgage-decree.

Separate account or Khata No. 4 was opened on the 21st March 1872 in the name of Kalika Prosad Singh. This is the share which defaulted.

Separate account or Khata No. 5 was opened on the 16th April 1872 in the names of Ram Anugrah and Rama Kanta Singh on the 16th April 1872. This is the share in which the plaintiffs claim rights by purchase.

Now, rightly or wrongly, these separate accounts had been opened for 35 years before the present suit was brought; revenue had been all along paid in respect of these shares into the separate accounts, and it would appear that the shares in respect of which these separate accounts had been opened, had been put up for sale, each separately, in respect of arrears due on its separate account. The proprietors of these shares in respect of which the separate accounts had been opened had dealt with them separately, and there have been transfers and alienations of the shares as shares in respect of which separate accounts have been opened.

It is first argued in support of this appeal that the Subordinate Judge was in error in holding that the order of the Collector opening the separate account No. 5 in respect of the share on which the plaintiffs are part purchasers could be questioned after the lapse of 35 years. No authority other than the Collector had power under the law to open a separate account and the law gave him full power to open an account. If, in ordering that an account be opened, he committed an error in law that could not make his order bad for want of jurisdiction. In the case of Khata No. 5 the record shows that the provisions of the law were fully complied with before the order was passed directing that the account be opened. The necessary notices were served and no objection was taken by any one who would at the time have been interested in opposing the application. Nor was any appeal preferred against his decision to the higher Revenue authorities as might have been done. His order, therefore, became final.

MAHAMMAD MEHDI HASSAN KHAN v. SHEOSHANKAR PERSAD SINGH.

Furthermore, if the order opening this separate account be now interfered with, the order relating to all the other accounts would be equally open to question with the result of disturbing rights long recognized and of creating uncertainty, confusion and hardship.

Undoubtedly, the separate account has been opened and has been in existence for 35 years. It is impossible now to treat it as though it had never had any existence, indeed the defendant No. 1's own decree is based on the existence of the separate account No, 1, against the share covered by which he is seeking to enforce his mortgage-decree. That share was in fact sold for its own arrear after the decree had been obtained by defendant No. 1.

Also, it is argued that defendant No. 1 being the transferee by mortgage of the rights of some co-sharers in the estate, it is not open to him now to question the legality of an order of the Collector which his transferors accepted and have acquiesced in for 35 years. There was a remedy in the superior Revenue Courts when the Collector's order was passed and that remedy never having been sought and on the contrary the order having been acquiesced in for 35 years it cannot now be questioned and declared invalid by a Civil Court.

It is also contended that even accepting, though not admitting, that the separate account could not have been opened under the provisions of sections 10 and 11 of Act XI of 1859 [still any defect would be covered by section 70 of Act VII B. C. of 1876, and section 71 of that Act which makes the provisions relating to sale included in sections 13 and 14 of Act XI of 1859] applicable to accounts opened under section 70 of Act VII B.C. of 1859 would also operate to bring the sharers in respect of whom the separate share had been opened within the exception provided by section 53 of Act XI of 1859.

It has also been suggested that defendant No. 1 is bound by the finding of the Court in the Suit No. 51 of 1904 to which he was a party.

As to this last contention we have only to observe that it has no weight. The suit was dismissed for other grounds and the opinion expressed by the Judge was not necessary for the decision of that suit and so cannot bind the defendant.

The most important question is certainly whether, after the lapse of 35 years, a Civil Court can call into question the order of a Revenue Court, which order was originally passed with all the formalities required by the law, which was not appealed against and so became final as regards the parties affected by it, and which has been acquiesced in by the persons through whom the defendants, who now desire to dispute the order, claim title. In consequence of that order of the Collector and of other similar orders for the opening of separate accounts in respect of other shares in the same estate, rights have been lost, sold, or transferred, and to disturb the order after the lapse of so many years would be to render uncertain titles long existing and to create confusion and hardship.

In my opinion, the Collector certainly had jurisdiction to open the separate account. If, at the time of opening the account, he misunderstood the provisions of the law that would not necessarily make his order void but voidable by the persons affected thereby. In the present instance none of the persons who were affected by the order have ever raised any objection to it, and the question is whether the defendant No. 1 as mortgagee of defendant No. 2 whose share, in respect of which Khata No. 1 was originally opened, has subsequently been sold, can be allowed to raise the objection in this suit.

In my opinion, the order of the Collector, acquiesced in and acted on for 35 years, is not now open to question by a Civil Court, and, if it were, the defendant No. 1, who acquiesced in the order all along, cannot be allowed in this suit to dispute the legality of the order.

The contention that the order is illegal depends entirely on the decision of this Court in the case of Nunhoo Shahee v. Ram Pershad (1). That decision was delivered on the 15th December 1873. The judgment states that plaintiff comes into Court upon a statutable cause of action and that his suit must be dismissed unless he brings himself either within section 10 or section 11 of Act XI of 1859. Exactly what the cause of action was is not stated. Apparently, he sued to have it declared that he had a right to have a separate account opened in respect of his share in the estate. As, however, he was only an eight-annas share-holder in 4 mouzahs out of the 6 which constituted the whole estate it was held that he was not "a recorded sharer of a joint estate in common tenancy within section 10." It was further held that he could not come under section 11 because he was not recorded sharer of a joint estate whose share consists of a specific portion of the land of the estate because he had only an undivided moiety of 4 mouzahs out of 6. If he had been joined with his co-sharers in the 4 mouzahs he might possibly have come before the Court with them as a party entitled to sue under section 11.

In the present case, the original petition for opening a separate account was made by Ram Anugrah Singh, Rama Kanta Singh and Musammat Sarawan, who together, apparently as members of one family, held shares in all the mouzahs included in the estate. The name of Musammat Sarawan was withdrawn by order of the Collector on a report from an officer of this Court. In the judgment relied on it is not stated what would be the effect if, in a case like the present, the defendants had shares in 15 out of 17 mouzahs and joined in their application those co-sharers who had shares in the other two mouzahs. Apparently, the application would then have fulfilled the requirements of section 10 of Act XI of 1859. There is nothing to support the view that shares in a joint estate held in common tenancy must have equal shares in all the mouzahs. Unequal shares in the different mouzahs might be consistent, too, with definite shares held in common in the whole estate.

There is no provision of the law that I am aware of, which lays down that the shares of tenants in common must be equal, either in every one of several mouzahs making up the estate, or in the entire estate.

In these circumstances, it seems open to doubt whether, on the basis of the decision relied on, the original application for the opening of the separate account did not fulfil the requirements of the law.

I am unable to agree, therefore, in the view taken by the lower Court that the suit of the plaintiffs must fail because they could not be regarded as sharers with whom the Collector under sections 10 and 11 of Act XI of 1859 had opened separate estates.

The question arises whether they are entitled to claim to come within the exception provided by section 53, by reason of the fact that they are only fractional share-holders of the share in respect of which the separate account was opened. There is nothing in the section to restrict the operation of the section to sharers holding the entire interest in the share; in these circumstances, I see no reason to hold that they do not come within the exception.

The result of these findings is that I hold that the plaintiffs are entitled to the relief claimed in this suit, that is to say, to have it declared that they purchased the estate No. 3143 free of all incumbrances. In these circumstances, I hold that they, as assignees of defendant No. 7, are also entitled to recover from defendant No. 1 the sum of Rs. 1,454-8 which had been deposited by defendant No. 7 in order to obtain the injunction in this suit, with interest at 6 per cent. per annum on that account up to the date of realization.

I would accordingly set aside the judgment and the decree of the lower Court and grant the plaintiffs a decree to the above effect. Plaintiffs are entitled to costs from defendant No. 1 in both the Courts.

As, however, my learned brother holds a different opinion, the appeal must be referred to the Hon'ble the Chief Justice under the provisions of section 98 of the Code of Civil Procedure in order that it may be referred to a third Judge for hearing.

VINCENT, J.—The facts of the case which has given rise to this appeal are as follows:—Mehal Raiputti is an estate borne on the Revenue Roll of the District of Saran with a revenue of Rs. 7,233 and odd. In the year 1899 fifteen separate accounts had been opened by different sharers in that estate under the provisions of section 70 of Act VII (B.C.) of 1876. One of these shares, viz., that covered by separate account No. 5 was opened by the plaintiffs. In January 1899, separate account No. 4 fell into arrears and was put up for sale on 25th March. The highest bid for the share was not sufficient to cover the arrears and, therefore, the Collector ordered that the sale of the share should be stayed and the whole mehal put up to sale under section 14 of the Revenue Sales Act.

On 6th June 1899, the whole estate was sold and bought for Rs. 16,200 in the name of the defendant No. 7.

The defendant No. 1 had a mortgage-decree for Rs. 17,281 against 13 villages included in the mehal, and in 1899 he advertised the mortgaged property for sale in execution of that decree.

The defendant No. 7 then sued for a declaration that his purchase at the revenue sale was free of incumbrances and that the property could not be sold in execution of the mortgage-decree and on a deposit of Rs. 1,454 as security against any loss the defendant No. 7 on the 14th March 1906 secured from the High Court, a temporary injunction staying the sale. That suit was dismissed as it was found that the defendant No. 7 Gopal Dass was a farzidar for the plaintiffs, whereupon the mortgagee, defendant in that suit, withdrew the Rs. 1, 454 in deposit. On 2nd March 1907 the defendant No. 7 executed a conveyance of all his rights in the mehal and in the Rs. 1,454 to the plaintiffs; and the plaintiffs now sue for a declaration that the defendant No. 1 has no right to sell the estate in execution of his mortgage-decree and that the purchase at the revenue sale was free of all incumbrances. The plaintiffs further seek to recover from the defendant No. 1 Rs. 1,454-8 plus interest on that sum alleging that the defendant No. 1 wrongly withdrew that amount from deposit in satisfaction of his decrees.

The real contending defendant is defendant No. 1. In the Court of first instance he raised a number of objections to the suit, which it is not necessary to set forth at length in this judgment, as only one point has been discussed in the argument before us.

It suffices to say that on the 10th September 1908, the plaintiffs' suit was dismissed by the Subordinate Judge on the ground that these plaintiffs, who were the real purchasers at the revenue sale, had bought the property subject to incumbrances.

The learned Subordinate Judge found that the plaintiffs were co-sharers in the mehal and was, therefore, of opinion that their purchase was under section 53 of Act XI of 1859 subject to incumbrances unless it is shown that they were sharers with whom the Collector had opened separate accounts under sections 10 and 11 of the Act. He further found, that although there was a separate account opened in the name of the predecessor-in-interest of plaintiffs in 1872 by the Collector for their share in this mehal, nominally under section 10 of Act XI of 1859, yet that account was opened without jurisdiction and that it could not, therefore, be said that the plaintiffs were persons with whom separate accounts had been opened under that section.

It this view of the facts, the plaintiffs' suit was dismissed and hence this appeal has been filed.

The only point argued in the appeal is whether the purchase by the plaintiffs through defendant No. 7 was a purchase free of incumbrances under section 53 of Act XI of 1859,

Now, the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge is based on the wording of section 10 of Act XI of 1859. That section enacts that a recorded sharer of a joint estate, held in common tenancy, if he desires to pay in his share of the revenue of the estate separately may submit an application to the Collector to that effect; and the Collector may after notifying the facts in a particular manner after a period of six weeks if no objections are made, open a separate account as desired. If any objection of any kind is raised by any other co-sharer, the Collector must at once refuse to take further action and refer the matter to the Civil Court under section 12.

Under section 53 of the same Act, if a co-sharer in an estate purchases the estate at a revenue sale, he acquires it subject to incumbrances except in the case of sharers with whom the Collector has opened separate accounts under sections 10 and 11 of the Act.

The Subordinate Judge finds that the predecessors-in-interest of the plaintiffs were not in fact sharers in a joint estate held in common tenancy, because they owned shares in 14 or 15 mouzahs only out of the various villages, 18 in number, comprising the estate and were not interested in every village in the estate. The Subordinate Judge is of opinion in these circumstances that the Collector had no jurisdiction to open a separate account with the predecessor-in-interest of the plaintiffs under section 10 of Act XI of 1859, and that the plaintiffs cannot be accepted as co-sharers with whom the Collector had opened separate accounts under that section, there being no jurisdiction under that section and that, therefore, their purchase was not free of, but subject to, incumbrances.

On appeal it is argued that the expression "estate held in common tenancy" has been misunderstood by the learned Subordinate Judge; that in any case the Collector had jurisdiction to open a separate account under section 10 and has done so, and that the order cannot be said to have been made without jurisdiction and further that as all the sharers in the estate including the persons from whom the defendant derives title made no objection at the time and as the separate account was opened and accepted for 27 years before the sale, the validity of the order cannot now be questioned. It is further urged that in any case the separate account could have been opened under section 70 of Act VII (B.C.)of 1876, and that it should be held to have been opened under that section if necessary, and that the effect then would be same as if it had been opened under section 10 of Act XI of 1859.

None of these arguments appear to me to be of very great weight. Section 53 of Act XI of 1859 lays down that if a sharer in an estate purchases the estate at a revenue sale, he does so subject to all incumbrances existing at the time of the sale unless the purchasing co-sharer or sharers are persons with whom the Collector has opened separate accounts under sections 10 and 11 of the Act. Section 10 of the Act empowers a Collector to open separate accounts in joint estates held in common tenancy, on the application of a recorded co-sharer. If there is no joint estate held in common tenancy then, in my view of the law, section 10 has no application and the Collector has no jurisdiction to open a separate account under that section and if he does open a separate account without jurisdiction then it cannot be said that the separate account is one opened under section 10 of the Act. Before that section can apply at all it is necessary that the estate should be one held in common tenancy, and if the estate is not so held the section has no application. Now mehal Raiputti is not an estate of that description. The expression "estate held in common tenancy" is defined in section 30 of Regulation XIX of 1814 as meaning an estate where all the sharers have a common right and interest in the whole of the estate. Where, therefore, various co-sharers have certain interests, not in the whole estate but only in particular villages in that estate, it cannot be said that the estate is held in common tenancy; this view has also been accepted in this Court in the case of Nunhoo Shahee v. Ram Pershad (1). Mr. Justice Phear in that case says that the plaintiff confessedly cannot bring himself under section 10 of Act XI, because only an eight-annas share-holder in four mouzahs out of the six which constitute the whole estate and he is, therefore, not "a recorded sharer of a joint estate held in common tenancy" within the meaning of section 10. The same view has been accepted by the revenue authorities in the Board's Miscellaneous Proceeding No. 306, dated 21st September 1876, quoted at page 19 of the Revenue Sale Manual where the Hon'ble Members of the Board of Revenue take the definition of an estate of this character as given in Regulation XIX as applicable to section 10 of Act XI of 1859, and state that a separate account cannot be opened under section 10 unless there is an estate held in common tenancy as set forth in section 30 of Regulation XIX of 1814.

Finally, in 1876 the Legislature recognised the difficulties that existed in regard to separate accounts in estates like the present one, and section 70 of that Act was enacted apparently to specifically provide for the opening of separate accounts in the case of proprietors who were recorded as owning an undivided interest held in common tenancy in any specific portion of the lands of an estate but not extending over the whole estate. If there previously had been any right to open separate accounts in such cases, there would have been no need for this change in the law.

In these circumstances, I hold that the separate account in this estate was improperly opened under section 10 of Act XI of 1859 in 1872, and that the Collector had no jurisdiction under that Act to open any such separate accounts in this estate, and it cannot be said, in my opinion, that any separate account opened by him was a separate account opened under the provisions of section 10 of Act XI of 1859, and the owner of any separate account opened without jurisdiction is not, in my opinion, entitled to claim the benefit of section 53 of Act XI of 1859 which merely relates to the case of co-sharers with whom separate accounts have been opened under sections 10 and 11.

It is true that a separate account No. 5 was opened 27 years before the sale and the validity of the order of the Collector was not questioned, but this does not in my view of the law affect the case or give validity to an order which was made without jurisdiction. Nor can the defendants in the suit be prejudiced by any such act of the Collector.

It is then urged that as the account remained open after Act VII of 1876 was passed, it should be held to be a separate account under that section. I do not think, however, that this contention has any force. The separate account No. 5 was not opened under section 70 of Act VII (B.C) of 1876, and does not purport to have been opened under that section, and, further, no notices were issued under that section to the sharers interested in the estate after the Act of 1876 was passed. Moreover, the privileges given under section 53 of Act XI of 1859 to the owner of a separate account opened under sections 10 and 11 of that Act are not apparently extended to those who have opened separate accounts under section 70 of Act VII of 1876 (B. C.). Section 71 of the Act extends the provisions of section 13 and 14 of Act XI to separate accounts opened under Act VII of 1876, but it is at least open to doubt how far this section makes section 53 of Act XI apply to those who have opened separate accounts under the Land Registration Act.

In this view of the facts and the law, the plaintiff in this suit who is a co-sharer in the estate of Raiputti and bought the estate at a revenue sale not being a co-sharer who has opened a separate account under section 10 or 11 of Act XI of 1859, purchased the estate subject to any incumbrance that there was on it and he, therefore, bought the share mortgaged to the defendant subject to the lien created by that mortgage and is not entitled to any relief in this case. In my opinion, therefore, the appeal should be dismissed with costs.

It is true that the defendant No. 7 had no right to withdraw the deposit of Rs. 1, 454 before the sale of the mortgaged property was complete and it was found that the sale-proceeds were not sufficient to liquidate his claim, but this amount would be in any case payable out of the mortgaged property and the amount will, no doubt, be deducted from the mortgage dues when the decree is executed.

It seems, therefore, that it is unnecessary and would be improper for the Court to order a refund of the amount in the present suit.

MOOKERJEE, J.—This is a reference under section 98, sub-section (2), of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908. The reference is not strictly in form, because the learned Judges have omitted to state specifically the point of law upon which they differed. The difference between section 575 of the Code of 1882 and section 98 of the Code of 1908 appears to have been overlooked. Under the former Code, it was the appeal that was referred to a third Judge, when the Judges hearing the appeal differed in opinion on a point of law, and on such reference, the whole appeal was open for argument, and not merely the point of law on which the Judges had differed in opinion. Under the Code of 1908, the proper procedure is to state the point of law upon which the Judges differ; the appeal is then to be heard upon that point only, and what is to be decided is not the appeal but the point of law only. In the case before me, this procedure has not been followed; but the parties are agreed that there is only one point of law involved in the appeal, upon which the learned Judges who heard the appeal in the first instance, have differed, as is manifest from their recorded opinions. That point may be formulated as follows:

Is a proprietor, who is not a recorded sharer of a joint estate held in joint tenancy, within the meaning of section 10 Act XI of 1859, nor a recorded sharer whose share consists of a specific portion of the land of the estate within the meaning of section 11, but is recorded as proprietor of an undivided interest held in common tenancy of a specific portion of the lands of the estate but not extending over the whole estate, within the meaning of section 70 of the Bengal Land Registration Act, 1876, entitled to claim the benefit of the exception made in section 53 of Act XI of 1859 in favour of sharers with whom the Collector has, under section 10 or section 11 of the Act, opened separate accounts?

MAHAMMAD MEHDI HASSAN KHAN v. SHEOSHANKAR PERSAD SINGH.

My learned brother Brett is of opinion that this question ought to be answered in the affirmative. My learned brother Vincent, on the other hand, is of opinion, that the question ought to be answered in the negative. To determine which of these two conflicting views should prevail, the provisions of the Revenue Sale Law (Act XI of 1859) and of the Land Registration Act (VII of 1876, B. C.) must be examined.

It is necessary to premise at the outset that one of the proprietors of a joint estate may be in enjoyment of his interest therein, in one of three ways, namely, first, he may be a recorded sharer of the whole joint estate held in common tenancy; secondly, he may be a recorded sharer of the joint estate and his share may consist of a specific portion of the land of the estate; or, thirdly, he may be recorded as proprietor of an undivided interest held in common tenancy in a specific portion of the land of the estate but not extending over the whole estate. If his interest is of the first description he may apply to have his share separated and a separate account opened under section 10 of Act XI of 1859. If his interest is of the second description, he may have his share separated and a separate account opened under section 11 of Act XI of 1859. If his interest is of the third description, he may have his share separated and a separate account opened under section 70 of the Land Registration Act. In this connection, it is important to bear in mind that, under section 71 of the Land Registration Act, section 12 of Act XI of 1859 is made applicable to an application under section 70, and further provided that the effect and consequences of opening a separate account under section 70 shall be such and the same as are described in sections 13 and 14 of Act XI of 1859. It is manifest, therefore, that the consequences of the opening of a separate account in cases covered by section 70, (that is, where the applicant is proprietor of an undivided interest held in common tenancy in a specific portion of the land of the estate, but not extending over the whole estate), are assimilated to the consequences of opening a separate account under section 10 or section 11 of Act XI of 1859, only in so far as sections 13 and 14 are concerned, that is, only in respect of the sale of the separated share and of the entire estate under certain specified conditions. Now, when we turn to section 53 of Act XI of 1859, we find that it defines the rights of a purchaser at a revenue sale, who is a recorded or unrecorded proprietor or co-partner. Such person, whether he purchases the property at a revenue sale or acquires it by re-purchase from the purchaser, acquires the estate, to put the matter briefly, subject to all its incumbrances existing at the time of the sale. An exception, however, is made in favour of sharers with whom the Collector has opened separate accounts under sections 10 and 11 of the statute; they stand in a position of advantage, which is denied to the purchaser co-partner who has not opened a separate account under either of these sections. I am not concerned with the policy of the Legislature in this respect; but it is remarkable that the privilege is not extended to persons who have opened separate accounts under section 70 of Land Registration Act. Section 71 as I have just observed, makes sections 13 and 14, but not section 53 of Act XI of 1859, applicable to the proprietor who has obtained a separate account opened under section 70. The inference is irresistible that the co-partner whose interest is of the description mentioned in section 70, and whose separate account has been opened under that section, can purchase the estate at a revenue sale, only as subject to incumbrances. The question, then arises, does it make any real difference if a separate account, which could not be opened under section 10 or section 11 of Act XI of 1859, because the interest of the proprietor was not of either of the two descriptions mentioned in these sections, has been opened by the Collector without any jurisdiction? In my opinion, it makes no difference whatsoever. The position of the proprietor who has obtained a separate account so opened in contravention of section 10 or section 11, is not identical for purposes of section 53 with the position of the proprietor whose separate account has been properly opened. The expression "sharers with whom the Collector has opened separate accounts under sections 10 and 11" plainly means "sharers with whom the Collector has opened separate accounts acting in conformity with sections 10 and 11." To accept any other interpretation, would be to acquiesce in a fraud on the statute. The Collector, when he opens a separate account under section 10 or 11, performs a statutory duty; his act must be in strict conformity with the legislative provisions on the subject. If the Collector opens a separate account in clear contravention of the provisions of section 10 and section 11; in fact, if the Collector applies the provisions to cases to which the Legislature never intended that they should be applied, his act is without jurisdiction, and cannot confer upon the person who obtains a separate account opened under such circumstances, the statutory privilege created by section 53. If any authority is needed in support of the proposition that where jurisdiction is usurped in contravention of statutory provisions, the act performed is a nullity, reference may be made to the decisions of the Judicial Committee in Ledgard v. Bull (2), Minakshi v. Subramania (3), Fischer v. Secretary of State (4), and of this Court in Achha Mian v. Durga Churn (5), Golab Sao v. Chowdhury Madho Lal (6), Gurdeo v. Chandrikah Singh (7), and Ananda Kishore v. Daije (8). In my opinion, the view adopted by Mr. Justice Vincent is correct, and I entirely agree in his conclusion that the question of law formulated above must be answered in the negative. This view is in accordance with that taken in the case of Nunhoo Shahee v. Ram Pershad (1), which, so far as I have been able to discover, has never been doubted in this Court. I observe that, with reference to this decision, my learned brother Brett remarks that the judgment does not state what the cause of action was. I have accordingly examined the records of that case. It appears that an estate Chilowley consisted of six villages. The plaintiffs were interested in an one-half share of four only of the six villages. They applied to the Collector to open a separate account for the half share of the four villages. Upon objection of the defendants, co-proprietors, the application was refused by the Collector on the 17th April 1871. On the 15th May following, the plaintiffs sued for declaration of title and for separation of the Government Revenue of their share of the four villages. The first Court held that the suit was maintainable under section 12 of Act XI of 1859, and made a decree in favour of the plaintiffs, though the revenue assigned was calculated on a basis other than that suggested by the plaintiffs. Upon appeal by the plaintiffs, the decree of the Subordinate Judge was affirmed by the District Judge. Upon second appeal to this Court by the plaintiffs (which related to the amount of revenue assignable in respect of the half share of the four villages), it appears to have been argued by the defendants-respondents (by way of cross-objection, though a memorandum of cross-objection is not to be traced on the part of the record still in existence) that the suit was not maintainable under section 12 of Act XI of 1859, as the plaintiffs were not entitled to have a separate account opened under either section 10 or section 11. Phear and Morris, JJ., gave effect to this contention and dismissed the suit. The learned Judges held that as the plaintiffs were share-holders in some only of the villages constituting the estate, they could not claim to have a separate account opened under either section 10 or section 11. It is superfluous to add that upon a plain reading of the sections, no other conclusion was possible.

Let me now consider the effect of this view of the law upon the present question. The records of the Collector which have been called for upon the joint application of both the parties, show conclusively that, not merely the fifth separate account, the proprietor of which purchased this estate at the revenue sale held on the 6th June 1899, but all the fifteen separate accounts, had been opened during the years 1871-1874 in contravention of the provisions of sections 10 and 11 of Act XI of 1859; the applicants were neither sharers in the whole estate nor proprietors of specific lands, but they were share-holders in some only of the many villages comprised in the entire estate, as is clearly shown by the details of the shares and villages in respect of which the separate accounts were opened This state of things has continued for many years, and has not been questioned by the various proprietors. The reason is obvious. When the Land Registration Act of 1876 came into force, it became clear that what had been done before

(2) 13 I. A. 134; 9 A. 191.
(3) 14 I. A. 160; 11 M. 26.
(4) 26 I. A. 16; 22 M. 270; 3 C. W. N. 161.
(5) 25 C. 146; 2 C. W. N. 137.
(6) 2 C. L. J. 384; 9 C. W. N. 956.
(7) 5 C. L. J. 611; 36 C. 193; 1 Ind. Cas. 913.
(8) 10 C. L. J. 189; 36 C. 726; 1 Ind. Cas. 549.

irregularly, because not falling within the scope of sections 10 and 11 of Act XI of 1859 might be validly done under section 70 of the Land Registration Act. It would have been idle, therefore, for the parties to challenge the validity of the separate accounts at any time after 1875. If objection had been taken by any of the proprietors, the then existing arrangement might have been validated by the presentation of applications under section 70 of the Land Registration Act. It is not right to say that the parties now attempt to invalidate what had been done at their instance during the years 1872-74, and no such question arises as was considered by this Court in Rai Mohan Saha v. Sasanka Mohan Roy (9), namely, the right of a proprietor to question the validity of a settlement of an estate irregularly made. If we look at the substance of the matter, the position of the parties is identical with what would have been their position if the separate accounts had been, as they could have been, opened under section 70 of the Land Registration Act. There is no controversy that, if they be deemed to have been opened under section 70 of the Land Registration Act, the purchaser at the revenue sale is not entitled to claim the benefit of the exception in section 53 of Act XI of 1859. The conclusion follows that the view adopted by Mr. Justice Vincent, in concurrence with the Court of first instance, that the purchaser has acquired the property subject to encumbrances, is correct and must be upheld.

It is satisfactory to find that this view of the law is manifestly in accord with the justice of the case. We have some indication of the value of the property, when we remember that the mortgagees advanced more than Rs. 13,000 on security of the share of the villages comprised in the first separate account which may be assumed to be worth at least that sum. The value of that share, as shown by the proportion of the total Government Revenue assigned to it, is about one-sixth of the value of the entire estate. The whole estate, therefore, is worth, at a very moderate estimate, at least Rs. 78,000. The purchaser has acquired it for Rs. 16,200; the charge claimed by the mortgagee amounts approximately to Rs. 20,000; even if the purchaser has to pay this charge, as, in concurrence with Mr. Justice Vincent, I hold that he is bound to do, he has made an excellent bargain; in fact, the very small price paid by the purchaser indicates plainly that he, at any rate, must have thought that he was acquiring the property subject to incumbrances.

The result, therefore, is that in concurrence with Mr. Justice Vincent, I hold that the decree of the Subordinate Judge must be affirmed, and this appeal dismissed with costs. The hearing fee of the two hearings is assessed at Rs. 1,000.

Appeal dismissed.

(9) 12 C. L. J. 407; 8 Ind. Cas. 786.

AJMER MERWARA JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPLICATION No. 42 OF 1911.

August 21, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Colvin, J. C.

GHISU—DEFENDANT—APPLICANT

versus

RAM BALLABH—PLAINTIFF—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 4—Separate Hindu family—Certificate necessary—Revision—Irregularity.

It is a serious irregularity not to require the plaintiff to produce the certificate required by section 4 of the Succession Certificate Act in the case of a separate Hindu family.

Petition for revision against the order of the Judge, Court of Small Causes, Ajmer.

ORDER.—The lower Court seems to have committed a serious irregularity in not requiring the plaintiff to produce the certificate required by section 4 of the Succession Certificate Act. Plaintiff's own witnesses state that he lived separate from his brother Gordhan; and it was, therefore, not correct to grant a decree without production of a succession certificate. The application must be accepted; and the case is remanded to the lower Court for a fresh decision, after plaintiff has been given due opportunity of producing the required certificate.

Application accepted.

ABDUL KARIM v. ABDUL RAHMAN.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1040 of 1909.
July 18, 1911.
Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

ABDUL KARIM PATWARI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

ABDUL RAHMAN AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and Tenant—Agricultural raiyat *letting out homestead portions—Incidents of sub-tenancy to be governed by Bengal Tenancy Act, not by Transfer of Property Act—Contract for grant of new lease on expiry of nine years—Effect of Contract—Ejectment of under-*raiyat after term.

Where the land included in the holding of an agricultural raiyat, consists partly of agricultural and partly of homestead lands and the portion which is used as homestead is let out for use as homestead, the under-tenant is an under-raiyat within the Bengal Tenancy Act, and the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act have no application.

Baburam Roy v. Mohendra Nath Samanta, 8 C. W. N. 454, relied upon.

A contract of tenancy between a raiyat and an under-raiyat that upon the expiration of the first nine years of the tenancy, a new settlement of rent would be made, and till such settlement was made, rent would continue to be paid at the rate mentioned in the contract, is valid in law, so far as the contracting parties are concerned.

Tamijuddi v. Ajgar, 36 C. 256; 13 C. W. N. 183; 1 Ind. Cas. 942, Bipin Bihari Hati v. Amrita Lal, 9 C. L. J. 76; 3 Ind Cas. 685 and Manik Borai v. Bani Charan Mandal, 10 Ind. Cas. 469; 13 C. L. J. 649, relied upon.

Basaratulla v. Kasirunnessa, 11 C. W. N. 190, not followed.

The effect of the clause for the grant of a new lease upon the expiry of the term of the first nine years, is to prevent the landlord from seeking to eject the under-raiyat upon the expiry of the nine years.

Ali Mahomed Bepari v. Nyan Raja Bhuyan, S. A. No. 906 of 1900, relied upon.

Appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge of Noakhali, dated February 20th, 1909, reversing that of the Munsif of Lakhimpur, dated August 11th, 1908.

Babu Prokash Chandra Majumdar, for Babu Romesh Chandra Sen, for the Appellant.

Babu Jyotish Chandra Sarkar, for Moulvi Serajul Islam, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal on behalf of the plaintiff in a suit commenced by him for ejectment of the defendant under section 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act on the ground that he held under a lease the term whereof had expired. It appears that three persons, by name, Zahiruddin, Abdur Rahim and Samiruddin were tenants of a ryati holding. Samiruddin transferred his one-third interest in the holding to the plaintiff on the 9th May 1899, and took from him a sub-lease of the homestead for a term of 9 years. The case for the plaintiff is, that although the term has expired the defendant has not vacated the land. The defendant resists the claim on the ground that under the terms of the lease he is entitled to continue in occupation even after the expiry of the term thereof.

The Court of first instance held that the incidents of the tenancy were regulated by the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act and that under section 49 clause (a) the defendant was liable to be evicted. Upon appeal the Subordinate Judge has held that the incidents of the tenancy are regulated by the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act and the defendant is consequently not liable to be ejected.

In the present appeal it has been contended on behalf of the plaintiff that the view taken by the Subordinate Judge as to the applicability of the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act is erroneous and that the defendant is liable to be ejected under section 49 (a) of the Bengal Tenancy Act. In our opinion the view taken by the Subordinate Judge as to the applicability of the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act cannot be supported, but the decree he has made is correct and ought to be affirmed.

The Subordinate Judge has held that the holding which belonged to the three persons named was an agricultural holding and that as the defendant has taken a sub-lease only of the homestead portion of the holding, the incidents of the sub-tenancy are governed by the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act. This position is clearly untenable. Section 182 of the Bengal Tenancy Act provides that when a raiyat holds his homestead otherwise than as part of his holding as a raiyat, the incidents of his tenancy of the homestead shall be regulated by local custom or usage: and, subject to local custom or usage, by the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act applicable to land held by a raiyat. No suggestion was made by either of the parties to the present suit that there was any local custom or usage applicable to this matter. Consequently, the homestead portion of the holding is governed by the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act precisely in the same manner as the portion under actual cultivation. The view we take is supported by the decision in Baburam Roy v. Mohendra Nath Samanta (1). It was ruled in that case that where the land included in the holding of an agricultural raiyat consists partly of agricultural and partly of homestead lands and the portion which is used as homestead, is let out for use as homestead, the under-tenant is an under-raiyat within the Bengal Tenancy Act and the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act have no application. Mr. Justice Mitra pointed out that the Bengal Tenancy Act was passed for the protection of raiyats as well as under-raiyats and if a raiyat holds lands partly agricultural and partly homestead the incidents of the holding will regulate the incidents of the sub-lease created by the raiyat. The Transfer of Property Act is not applicable to lands used for agricultural purposes and in considering whether the one Act or the other would apply, we have to look to the nature of the original tenancy and not the nature of the sub-tenancy with reference to a particular piece of land within the holding. If the contrary view were maintained, considerable anomaly might result. It follows, therefore, that the incidents of the tenancy of the defendant must be determined with reference to the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Now, it has been argued on behalf of the plaintiff that as the sub-lease of the 19th May 1908 was for a period of 9 years he is entitled to eject the defendants upon the expiry of the term. This contention, however, is not supported by the terms of the written instrument. The lease provides in one portion that the sub-tenant could not, at any time, be ejected from the raiyati holding of the landlord. In another portion, it provides that upon the expiry of the term of the qabuliat a fresh settlement would be made and till a fresh settlement was made the condition of the qabuliat would continue in force. These two clauses taken together plainly indicate that the intention of the parties was not to have the tenancy terminable upon the expiry of the period of 9 years. The lease in fact was permanent: the true intention of the parties was that upon the expiration of the first nine years of the tenancy a new settlement of rent would be made and till such settlement was made, rent would continue to be paid at the rate mentioned in the contract. That a contract of tenancy of this description between a raiyat and an under-raiyat is valid in law so far as the contracting parties are concerned, cannot be disputed in view of the decision of this Court in the cases of Tamijuddi v. Ajgar (2), Bipin Bihari Hati v. Amrita Lal (3) and Manik Borai v. Bani Charan Mandal (4). The contrary view taken in Basaratulla v. Kasirunnessa (5) cannot be supported, upon a true interpretation of the terms of section 85 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. That decision is inconsistent with at least two previous decisions of this Court and, so far as we have been able to discover, it has not been followed in any subsequent decision. We may further point out that the effect of the clause for the grant of a new lease upon the expiry of the term was to prevent the landlord from seeking to eject the defendant upon the expiry of nine years. This is conclusively shown by the decision of this Court in the case of Ali Mahomed Bepar v. Nyan Raja Bhuyan (6) (decided by Rampini and Handley, JJ.). We are consequently of opinion that, although the incidents of the tenancy of the defendants are regulated by the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act under the terms of the contract between the parties, the plaintiff is not entitled to a decree for ejectment.

RAGHUBAR DAYAL SUKUL v. JADU NANDAN MISSIR.

The result is that the decree made by the Subordinate Judge is affirmed, but not on the ground stated by him and the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 8 C. W. N. 454.

(2) 36 C. 256; 13 C. W. N. 183; 1 Ind. Cas. 942.
(3) 9 C. L. J. 76; 3 Ind. Cas. 685.
(4) 13 C. L. J. 649; 10 Ind. Cas. 469.
(5) 11 C. W. N. 190.
(6) S. A. No. 906 of 1900.

(s. c. 15 C. L. J. 89.)

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 543 OF 1910.

June 28. 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

RAGHUBAR DAYAL SUKUL AND OTHERS—DECREE-HOLDERS—AUCTION-PURCHASERS—APPELLANTS

versus

JADU NANDAN MISSIR AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 174—Party

RAGHUBAR DAYAL SUKUL v. JADU NANDAN MISSIR.

litigant if permitted to assume inconsistent positions—Appellant before L. A. Court not permitted to object that no appeal lies in case—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47, O. XXI, rr. 11 (3), 89, 91, 92—Execution of rent-decree—Decree-holder auction-purchaser—Application to set aside sale—Order or decree are appealable—Court's power to extend time for making deposit under section 174, Bengal Tenancy Act—Act of Court not to prejudice any one—Five per cent. on purchase-money to be paid even when decree-holder is auction-purchaser—Copy of decree, or Vakalatnamah, not necessary in execution proceedings—Poundage fee, refund of, on sale being set aside.

The decree-holders purchased at auction property of the judgment-debtors and the purchase-money was set off against the judgment-debt. The judgment-debtors applied to have the sale set aside under section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The application was dismissed and the judgment-debtors appealed to the District Judge who set aside the sale. From that order a second appeal was preferred to which the judgment-debtors objected that no appeal lay:

Held, first, that it is not open to a party litigant to assume inconsistent positions: the respondents, having succeeded in the lower Appellate Court on the assumption that the order of the original Court was of a particular description and appealable, cannot now be permitted to turn round and assume an entirely different and inconsistent position and say that that order is not appealable.

Held, secondly, that the order of the original Court is one under section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, and in the nature of a decree against which a first appeal and a second appeal lie.

Joytara v. Pran Krishna Seal, 7 Ind. Cas. 769; 13 C. L. J. 257; 15 C. W. N 512, referred to.

Chundi Charan Mandal v. Banke Behary Lal, 26 C. 449; 3 C. W. N. 283 and Sital Rai v. Nand Lal, 1 Ind. Cas. 304; 13 C. W. N. 591; 11 C. L. J. 202, relied upon.

Asimuddi Sheikh v. Sundari Bibee, 10 Ind. Cas. 345; 38 C. 339; 15 C. W. N. 844; 14 C. L. J. 224, distinguished.

It is not open to the Court to extend the time within which the judgment-debtor is required to make a deposit under section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Amir Hussain Khan v. Manakchand, 6 Ind. Cas. 424; 14 C. W. N. 882; 12 C. L. J. 62 and Golab Chand v. Bahuria Rammurat Koer, 13 C. L. J. 432; 10 Ind. Cas. 268, distinguished.

Sharopan v. Mahomed Habibuddin, 10 Ind. Cas. 148; 13 C. L. J. 535; 15 C. W. N. 685, followed.

But the position may be different if the party has been prevented from making the deposit by reason of the action of the Court, for an act of the Court can prejudice no one.

Akbar Jaman Khan v. Sukhdeo Pandey, 10 Ind. Cas. 51; 13 C. L. J. 467 and Dulhin Mothura Koer v. Bansidhar Singh, 10 Ind. Cas, 830, relied upon.

A judgment-debtor who applies to have a sale set aside under section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is bound to deposit 5 per cent. of the purchase-money even where the decree-holder is the auction purchaser and the purchase-money is set off against the judgment-debt.

Chundi Charan Mandal v. Banke Behary Mandal, 26 C. 449; 3 C. W. N. 283; Mendai Lal v. Bhujja Singh, A. W. N. (1895) 140 and Tirumal Rao v. Syed Dastaghiri Miyah, 22 M. 286, relied upon.

A copy of the decree is not necessary for the purpose of the execution proceedings.

Gunga Gobind Gooptoo v. Makhul Lal Hattee, 9 W. R. 362, Ramdhan Rakhit v. Panchanan Chuckerbutty, 10 W. R. 144; 1 B. L. R. (S. N.) 9; Khettur Mohan Chuttopadhaya v. Ishuur Chunder Surma, 11 W. R. 271, Madhoo Dossia v. Nobin Chunder Roy, 16 W. R. 25 and Rajgir v. Ishurdhar, 11 C. L. J. 243; 5 Ind. Cas. 660 (under name Ishurdhar v. Rajgir) relied upon.

The authority of a Pleader engaged in the suit, does not terminate with the decree, and it is competent to him to appear on behalf of his client in the course of execution proceedings without a fresh authority which is unnecessary.

Sadashiv Ganpatrao v. Vitthaldas Nanchand, 20 B. 198, Gopal Jayachand v. Hargovind, 5 B. H. C. R. A. C. J. 83, Thakur Prasad v. Fakirullah, 17 A. 106; 22 I. A. 44 and Mohini Mohan Patra v. Ram Narain Patra and Baroda Kanta Sircar, 14 C. L. J. 415; 12 Ind. Cas 780, relied upon.

The poundage-fee paid by the decree-holders auction-purchasers in respect of an execution sale is refunded on the sale being set aside.

Therefore, the decree-holders auction-purchasers are not entitled to charge the amounts spent by them in obtaining a copy of the decree, in the Court-fee of a fresh Vakalatnamah in the execution proceeding, and in payment of the poundage-fee, as part of the costs mentioned in section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Appeal from the order of the District Judge of Darbhanga, dated July 28th, 1910, reversing that of the Munsif of Samastipur, dated February 15th, 1910.

Babu Khetter Mohun Sen, for the Appellants.

Babu Joy Gopal Ghosha, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against an order by which the Court of Appeal below in reversal of the order of the Court of first instance has set aside an execution sale. It appears that the appellants obtained a decree for rent on the 12th August 1909. They applied for execution on the 14th September following and themselves purchased the properties at the execution sale on the 13th December 1909 for Rs. 99-11. The purchase-money was not brought into Court but was set off against the judgment-debt. On the 10th January 1910, the judgment-debtor applied to have the sale set aside under section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and on the next day deposited Rs. 100-3. On the day following, the Court directed the judgment-debtors to deposit an additional sum of Rs. 4-8 inasmuch as the office had reported that the amount deposited was insufficient. Thereupon, the judgment-debtors paid into Court Rs. 5 on the 13th January 1910. Two days later, upon the objection of the decree-holders auction-purchasers, the Court dismissed the application, as the judgment-debtors had failed to deposit the decretal amount with compensation in full within 30 days of the sale as required by section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The judgment-debtors appealed against that order. The District Judge, upon this appeal, has held, on the authority of the decision in Amir Hussain Khan v. Nanak Chand (1), that the Court had authority to extend the time within which the deposit was to be made and that it was consequently unfair to refuse to set aside the sale after the judgment-debtors had carried out the order of the Court for payment of the balance of the sum due. In this view the District Judge has allowed the appeal and reversed the sale.

RAGHUBAR DAYAL SUKUL v. JADU NANDAN MISSIR.

The decree-holders-purchasers have now appealed to this Court and on their behalf the decision of the District Judge has been assailed on the ground that it was not competent either to the original Court or to the Court of Appeal below to extend the time within which the judgment-debtors were required by law to make the necessary deposit. In support of this proposition reliance has been placed upon the case of Sharofan v. Muhamed Habibuddin (2). On behalf of the judgment-debtors it has been suggested that the appeal is incompetent because the order of the original Court could not rightly be treated as an order under section 47 of the Code of 1908. It has also been argued that the judgment-debtors had deposited within the time allowed by law whatever sum was justly payable by them and the decree-holders were consequently not entitled to resist the application for reversal of the sale. Before we deal with the case on the merits, it is necessary to examine briefly the objection to the competency of the appeal taken on behalf of the respondent.

The preliminary objection ought to be overruled, in our opinion, on two grounds. In the first place, the judgment-debtors appealed to the District Judge on the assumption that the adverse order of the Court of first instance had been made under section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act read with section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1908. It is, therefore, not competent to them to urge before this Court that the order in their favour by the District Judge was, as a matter of fact, made without jurisdiction and that although the appeal preferred by them was incompetent, it is not open to the decree-holders to assail that order by way of appeal. It was pointed out by this Court in the case of Bindeswari Prosad Singh v. Lakpat Nath Singh (3), that it is not open to a party litigant to assume inconsistent positions of this character. As we have just explained, the respondents have succeeded in the Court of the District Judge on the assumption that the order of the original Court was of a particular description: they cannot now be permitted to turn round and assume an entirely different and inconsistent position. In the second place, we are of opinion that the order of the original Court must be treated as one within the scope of section 47 of the Code of 1908 and in the nature of a decree against which a first appeal and a second appeal lie under the law. It was pointed out by this Court in the case of Joytara v. Pran Krishna Seal (4), that the answer to the question, whether an order in execution proceedings is within the scope of section 47 of the Code of 1908 must depend upon its nature and contents. If it decides a question relating to the execution, satisfaction or discharge of the decree and if the decision has been given between parties to the suit or their representatives-in-interest, the order of the Court falls within the scope of section 47 and is a decree within the meaning of section 2. Tested in the light of this principle, there can be no room for serious controversy that the order of the original Court in the case before us was a decree, and in support of this position it is sufficient to refer to the cases of Chundi Charan Mandal v. Banke Behary Lal Mandal (5) and Sital Rai v. Nanda Lal (6). In both these cases the decree-holder was the auction-purchaser. The sale has been held in execution of a decree for arrears of rent and the order of which the propriety was called in question,

(1) 6 Ind. Case. 424; 14 C. W. N. 882; 12 C. L. J. 62.
(2) 10 Ind. Cas. 148; 13 C. L. J. 535; 15 C. W. N. 685.
(3) 15 C. W. N. 725; 8 Ind. Cas. 26.
(4) 7 Ind. Cas. 769; 15 C. L. J. 257; 15 C. W. N. 512.
(5) 26 C. 449; 3 C. W. N. 283.
(6) 1 Ind. Cas. 304; 13 C. W. N. 591; 11 C. L. J. 202.

RAGHUBAR DAYAL SUKUL v. JADU NANDAN MISSIR.

had been made under section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. In both instances, it was held that the order was appealable as a decree. The recent decision of this Court in Asimuddi Sheikh v. Sundari Bibee (7) does not militate against that view. That decision merely points out that in cases under rule 89 of Order XXI of the Code of 1908, which corresponds to section 310A of the Code of 1882, only a first appeal is allowed under the new Code. That is so, because the order is made appealable under rule 1, clause (1) of Order XLIII of the Code, and consequently a second appeal is barred under the provisions of sub-section 2 of section 184. But an order under section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is not appealable under Order XLIII of the Code of 1908 and sub-section 2 of section 104 does not, therefore, bar a second appeal. The result is that the preliminary objection must be overruled and the propriety of the order of the District Judge examined on the merits.

It cannot be seriously disputed that the view adopted by the District Judge is erroneous. He has held, upon the authority of the decision in Amir Hossain Khan v. Nanak Chand (1), that it is open to the Court to extend the time within which the judgment-debtor is required to make a deposit under section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The case mentioned, however, is clearly distinguishable. It was ruled in that case as also in the case of Golab Chand v. Bahuria Rammurat Koer (8), that when full Court-fees have not been paid upon a plaint or memorandum of appeal, it is competent to the Court to extend the time for payment. That principle has plainly no application to cases under section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. As was explained in Sharofan v. Muhomed Habibuddin (2), the Court has no authority to extend the time within which the deposit has to be made under section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, as rule 89 of Order XXI of the Code of 1908. A similar view has in substance been taken in Kabilaso Koer v. Raghunath Saran (9) and Akbar Zaman Khan v. Sukhdeo Pandey (10). No doubt the position may be different if the party has been prevented from making the deposit by reason of the action of the Court, because, as observed in Mohamed Akbur Zaman Khan v. Sukhdeo Pandey (10) and Dulhin Mothura Koer v. Bansidhar Singh (11), in such contingency the Court is guided by the principle that an act of the Court prejudices no man. The case before us, however, does not fall within the scope of this doctrine. It has not been suggested that if there has been any default on the part of the judgment-debtors that it can be rightly attributed to any act of the Court. We must consequently hold that the ground upon which the order of the District Judge is based cannot be supported.

The learned Vakil for the respondent-judgment-debtors has, however, strenuously endeavoured to support the order of the District Judge on other grounds, and has contended that the amount deposited by the judgment-debtor was amply sufficient under section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act; it has been urged in substance that the amount claimed by the decree holders was excessive and could not be legally obtained from the judgment-debtors.

It has been argued, in the first place, that as the decree-holders themselves were purchasers at the execution sale, they were not entitled to receive 5 per cent. of the purchase-money under section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The learned Vakil for the respondents has sought to support this position by a reference to sub-section 2 which provides that in the case of a reversal of the sale, the provisions of rule 93 of Order XXI, of the Code of Civil Procedure shall apply. That rule provides that when a sale is so set aside, the purchaser shall be entitled to an order for re-payment of his purchase-money. The learned Vakil for the respondent has contended that as in this case the purchase money was less than the decretal amount and as no part of it was brought into Court by the decree-holders, the provisions of rule 93 cannot apply, and consequently the decree-holders were not entitled to receive 5 per cent. of the purchase-money. In our opinion, this contention is not well founded. It is sufficient to point out that section 174 is so framed as to apply to all purchasers, whether they are decree-holders or strangers to the execution proceedings.

(7) 10 Ind. Cas. 345; 38 C. 339; 15 C. W. N. 844; 14 C. L. J. 224.
(8) 10 Ind. Cas. 268; 13 C. L. J. 432.
(9) 18 C. 481.
(10) 10 Ind. Cas. 51; 13 C. L. J. 467.
(11) 10 Ind. Cas. 880; 15 C. J. L. 82.

RAGHUBAR DAYAL SUKUL v. JADU NANDAN MISSIR.

The question now argued before us was raised with reference to section 310A of the Code of 1882 and it was held by this Court as also by the High Court of Bombay and Allahabad that the decree-holder auction-purchaser was entitled to get 5 per cent. upon the purchase-money just like any other auction-purchaser. Chundi Charan Mandal v. Banke Behary Lal Mandal(5); Mendai Lal v. Bhujja Singh(12); Tirumal Rao v. Dastaghiri Miyah(13). We are not prepared to question the correctness of these decisions and upon the plain language of section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act we cannot accept the contention of the respondent as well founded.

It has been argued on behalf of the respondents, in the second place, that the decree-holders are not entitled to several items included by them in the statement of costs. It will be observed that section 174 makes it obligatory upon the judgment-debtors to deposit the amount recoverable under the decree with costs. The costs here referred to are obviously costs properly incurred by the decree-holders subsequent to the decree and in the course of execution proceedings.

One of the items claimed by the decree-holders is the costs incurred by them in obtaining a copy of the decree. It has been argued on behalf of the respondent that a copy of the decree was not necessary for the purpose of the execution proceedings. In support of this position, reliance has been placed upon the cases of Gunga Gobind Gooptoo v. Makhun Lal Hottee (14); Ramdhan Rakhit v. Panchanan Chuckerbutty (15); Khettur Mohan Chuttopadhya v. Ishur Chunder Surma (16) and Modhoo Dossia v. Nobin Chunder Roy (17). These cases were decided under the Code of 1859 and were repeatedly treated as good law under the Codes of 1877 and 1882 [Rajgir v. Ishwardhari, Ishwardhari v. Rajgir (18)]. Under the Code of 1903 the position is still clearer. Rule 11 of Order XXI specifies the contents of the written application for execution of decrees. Sub-rule 3 of that rule provides expressly that the Court to which an application is made under sub-rule (2) may require the applicant to produce a certified copy of the decree. It has not been suggested in the case before us, that the Court made any such order. In fact such order would be wholly needless, because the Court in which the application for execution was made, was the very Court which had made the decree and if any reference to the decree was needed, the original could easily have been examined. We must consequently hold that the decree-holders are not entitled to charge the amount spent by them in obtaining a copy of the decree as part of the costs mentioned in section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Another item claimed by the decree-holders is the amount of Court-fees paid by them upon the Vakalatnama which they attached to their application for execution. It has been contended on behalf of the respondent that the Vakalatnama was wholly unnecessary and in support of this view reference has been made to the case of Sadashiv Ganpatrao v. Vithaldas Nanchand (19) and Gopal Jayachand v. Hargobind (20). These cases affirm the doctrine that the authority of a Pleader engaged in the suit does not terminate with the decree, but that it is competent to him to appear on behalf of his client in the course of execution proceedings without a fresh authority. This principle is supported by the decision of the Judicial Committee in the case of Thakur Prasad v. Fakirullah (21) where it was pointed out that an execution proceeding is essentially a continuation of the suit. We may further point out that, as observed by this Court in the case of Mohin Mohan Patra v. Ram Narain Patra and Baroda Kanta Sircar (22), the proposition cannot be maintained that the authority af a Pleader necessarily terminates with the decree in the suit in which he has been engaged. This principle is also supported by the cases of Lady Dela Pole v. Dick (23) and Bagley v. Mople & Co. (24). The contention of the respondent that the Vakalatnama was unnecessary must, therefore, prevail.

The third item claimed by the decree-holders is the poundage-fee paid by them in respect of the execution sale at which they

(12) A. W. N. (1895) 140.
(13) 22 M. 286.
(14) 9 W. R. 362.
(15) 10 W. R. 144; 1 B. L. R. (s. N.) 9.
(16) 11 W. R. 271.
(17) 16 W. R. 25.
(18) 5 Ind. Cas. 660; 11 C. L. J. 243.
(19) 20 B. 198.
(20) 5 B. H. C. R. A. C. J. 83.
(21) 17 A. 106; 22 I. A. 44.
(22) 14 C. L. J. 445; 12 Ind. Cas. 780.
(23) (1885) 29 Ch. D. 351; 54 L. J. Ch. 940; 52 L. T. 457; 33 W. R. 585.
(24) 27 T. L. R. 284.

purchased. This poundage-fee is a per centage of the gross amount realised by the sale and is calculated at the rate of 2 per cent. upon sums not exceeding Rs. 1,000. The decree-holders urge that they were obliged by the rules and circular orders of this Court to pay the amount at the time when they applied for permission to set off the purchase-money against the decretal amount and, as they have actually paid that money, they are legitimately entitled to claim it from the judgment-debtors as part of the costs incurred by them. In our opinion, this contention is not well founded. The rules and circular orders of this Court (Vol. I. p. 129) provide that when a sale of immoveable property is set aside under Order XXI, rules 89, 91 or 92, Code of Civil Procedure or under section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the decree-holder becomes entitled to a refund of the fee. It is, therefore, not right to contend that the decree-holders are entitled, in spite of the reversal of the sale, to recover from the judgment-debtor the poundage-fee. But it has been urged that as the sale has not been reversed, the decree-holders are entitled to treat the poundage-fee as an integral part of the costs incurred by them. This contention is fallacious. If the contingency mentioned happens, namely, if the sale is reversed, the decree-holders will forthwith become entitled to a refund of this money. If, on the other hand, the sale is not set aside, he will not be entitled to a refund. In either event, it is clear that he is not entitled to claim the money from the judgment-debtors.

There are other items also claimed by the decree-holders in respect of which objection has been taken by the judgment-debtors: they relate to the fees paid for the service of processes. It is not necessary, however, to examine this part of the case in detail, because it is clear that if the amount claimed for copy of the decree, for Vakalatnama and for poundage-fee is disallowed, the amount paid by the judgment-debtors is amply sufficient for the reversal of the sale under section 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. But we may add that we are by no means satisfied that the amount claimed by the decree-holders in the shape of fees for service of processes is not excessive.

The conclusion follows that although the order of the District Judge cannot be supported on the ground assigned by him, the order is substantially right on the merits and must be affirmed. The appeal is, therefore, dismissed, but, under the circumstances of the case, there will be no order for costs in any of the Courts.

Appeal dismissed.

(S. C. 38 C. 797.)

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL CIVIL No. 37 OF 1910.

June 9, 1911.

Present:—Sir Lawrence Jenkins, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Woodroffe.

McINERNY, J. F. H.—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Plaint, amendment of—Original plaint based on negligence—Proposed amendment based on nuisance—Different cause of action—Suit against Government—Notice of suit—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 80—Withdraw, leave to

The plaint in a suit against the Secretary of State originally proceeded upon negligence, and the notice which was served as a preliminary to the plaint pointed to a suit based on negligence. Afterwards, the plaintiff prayed for an amendment of the plaint and the new proposed plaint proceeds upon nuisance:

Held, that the cause of action being different, no permission to amend the plaint can be given.

Leave to withdraw with liberty to bring a fresh suit, is granted.

Appeal from the judgment of Fletcher, J., who dismissed the action of the plaintiff brought against the Government for Rs. 40,000 as damages for personal injuries, by the following

JUDGMENT.—This is a suit brought by the plaintiff against the Secretary of State claiming damages for negligence in respect of an accident which happened to him on the public highway.

The first point to be decided is whether the plaint discloses any cause of action. Now, the allegations made in the plaint are as follows. On the 24th August 1908, the plaintiff says, he was injured by falling over a post which, in the plaint, is stated to be placed on the maidan (now Counsel for the plaintiff says it was on the public highway) on the western side of the Chowringhee Road. The plaint then alleges that the post is the property of Government and is maintained and kept in position by Government. These are the material allegations, except one that relates to the ownership of the maidan, which the plaintiff says is the property of Government and subject to the trusts for the benefit of the public of Calcutta. In paragraphs 9, 10 and 11 the plaint sets forth particulars of the unfortunate accident which happened to the plaintiff on the evening of the 28th August, and it is admitted that his hand was very seriously injured by a tramcar.

Now, there is one proposition of law that cannot be doubted, and that is that no suit can lie against the Crown unless that right is given by statute. It requires no authority to support that. In this case the plaintiff has got to show that the statutes have given him a right against the Secretary of State in Council as representing the Crown. The first statute that is material is the statute of 3 and 4 William IV, Chapter 85, section 9. That was the statute which put an end to the commercial undertaking and general trading business of the East India Company and continued the Charter for a short time. Section 9 enacts that "from and after the said twenty-second day of April one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four all the Bond-debt of the said Company in Great Britain, and all the Territorial debt of the said Company in India, and all other debts which shall on that day be owing by the said Company, and all sums of money, costs, charges and expenses which, after the said twenty-second day of April, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, may become payable by the said Company in respect or by reason of any covenants, contracts or liabilities then existing, and all debts, expenses and liabilities whatever which, after the same day, shall be lawfully contracted and incurred on account of the Government of the said territories, and all payments by this Act directed to be made, shall be charged and chargeable upon the revenues of the said territories."

Then comes the "Act for the Better Government of India," 21 and 22 Vict., Chapter 106. Section 65 enacts: "That the Secretary of State in Council shall and may sue and be sued as well in India as in England by the name of the Secretary of State in Council as a body corporate; and all Persons and Bodies Politic shall and may have and take the same suits, remedies, and proceedings, legal and equitable, against the Secretary of State in Council of India as they could have done against the said Company; and the property and effects hereby vested in Her Majesty for the purposes of the Government of India or acquired for the said purposes, shall be subject and liable to the same judgments and executions as they would while vested in the said Company have been liable to in respect of debts and liabilities lawfully contracted and incurred by the said Company."

Now, if these two sections stood alone, I should have shared the doubts expressed by the present Chief Justice, when he was the Chief Justice of Bombay, in the case of Shivabhajan v. Secretary of State for India (1). I should have thought that the word "lawfully" governed not only the word "contracted" in section 65, but also the words "liabilities incurred." That I should have thought so was because the liabilities to which the East India Company were liable after the passing of the Act of 1883, were liabilities which should have been incurred on account of the Government of the said territories. There is, however, a decision of this Court in the case of P. & O. S. N. Co. v. Secretary of State for India (2), in which it is expressly laid down that the suits which may be brought against the Secretary of State in this Court are not limited to the suits which may be brought against the Crown, but beyond that I do not think that this case is an authority for the wide proposition that the learned Counsel for the plaintiff has tried to establish. The other case in this Court is the case of Nobin Chunder Dey v. The Secretary of State for India (3), which is a decision of Chief Justice Garth and Mr. Justice Macpherson on appeal from the Original Side, and laid down expressly what is the nature of the liability of the Secretary of State under section 65 of the Act of 1858, and the headnote expresses precisely what was the result of that judgment, that suits such as might,

(1) 28 B. 314.
(2) 5 B. H. C. R. App. 1.
(3) 1 C. 11.

previously to the passing of the Statute 21 and 22 Vict. Chapter 106, have been brought against the East India Company are limited to suits for acts done in the conduct of undertakings which might be carried on by private individuals. That case is binding upon me. The case of The Secretary of State for India v. Hari Bhanji (4) is not a decision of this Court. The case of Nobin Chunder Dey v. The Secretary of State for India (3) is binding upon the Judges of the original side. That being so, the only point one has to consider in this case is, is this a suit brought as stated in the decision of Chief Justice Garth and Mr. Justice Macpherson in Nobin Chunder Dey v. The Secretary of State for India (3)? In my opinion, obviously it is not. This case is a case to make the Government liable to pay compensation out of Government revenues. What for? For an act which happened to the plaintiff on the public highway. What commercial undertaking or other trading operation were the Government of India carrying on in maintaining the public path on the public highway? It is clear that it does not appear that this case comes within the decision of Nobin Chunder Dey v. The Secretary of State for India (3), and the plaint discloses no cause of action.

Learned Counsel for the plaintiff has asked leave to amend the plaint. If there was any real bona fide intention to amend the plaint, so that the unfortunate plaintiff might recover compensation for the injuries he has suffered, I should have immediately granted it. I am satisfied, however, on the statement of the plaintiff, that this plaint cannot be amended so as to show any cause of action against the defendant. That being so. there remains nothing for me but to dismiss the suit. The general costs of this suit must go to the Government. The costs will be taxed on scale No. 2.

The plaintiff appealed.

Messrs. B. Chakravarti and Chatterjee instructed by Messrs. Pugh & Co., for the Appellant.

Mr. Kenrick K. C., Advocate-General, and Mr. B. C. Mitter, Standing Counsel, instructed by Mr. Kesteven, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

JENKINS, C. J.—This case comes before us by way of appeal from a decree of Mr. Justice Fletcher who dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

On the case being placed before us it was perceived that, apart from the difficulty that there might be in bringing a suit against the Secretary of State for India in Council for a tort, alleged to have been committed by an agent of the Government, there was a further obstacle in the plaintiff's way that the facts as alleged in his plaint could not be supported by evidence, inasmuch as it had been discovered and was the case that the obstacle in respect of which the plaintiff claimed, was not, as the plaint alleged, on the land of the Crown; in other words, on a part of the maidan but on a part of the highway which was adjacent to the maidan. Therefore, leave was sought from us to amend the plaint so as to bring it into conformity with the facts which the plaintiff believed he could prove, and we required as a condition of this application that the proposed plaint should be drafted and placed before us. That has now been done. The plaint as now proposed by way of amendment differs in an essential degree from the original plaint. The original plaint proceeded upon negligence, whereas the new plaint proceeds upon nuisance in the form of obstruction on the highway, so that it is impossible to say that the cause of action is the same. This brings in the plaintiff's way the difficulty created by section 80 of the Code which prescribes that "no suit shall be instituted against the Secretary of State for India in Council. . . . . until the expiration of two months next after notice in writing has been delivered to, or left at the office of, a Secretary to the Local Government or the Collector of the district. . . . . stating the cause of action, the name, description and place of residence of the plaintiff and the relief which he claims." The notice which was served as a preliminary to the plaint as originally framed pointed to a suit based on negligence and it stated a cause of action different from that on which the plaintiff would rely in his proposed plaint. It follows, therefore, that it is not open to us to give the plaintiff permission to amend his plaint.

In these circumstances, Mr. Chatterjee on behalf of the plaintiff has asked for leave to withdraw the suit under Order XXIII, rule 1 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and he desires that he should have permission to withdraw from the suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit in respect of the subject-matter of this suit.

(4) 5 M. 273.

The defendants give no opposition to this application, though they do not encourage it, and their attitude is, no doubt, referable to the terms of rule 2 of Order XXIII of the Code. What the effect of that rule may be on the proposed new suit, it will be out of place for me now to discuss. But, in the circumstances, we give the plaintiff permission to withdraw the present suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit in respect of the subject-matter of this suit.

We do not interfere with the decision of Mr. Justice Fletcher as to costs, which will stand, and the plaintiff-appellant will pay the costs of this appeal.

WOODROFFE, J. concurred.

(s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 272.)

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 69 OF 1910.

June 14, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Twomey.

MG PO THWE AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPLICANTS

versus

MA BAW AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Buddhist Law—Guardian—Minor—Grand-uncle acting as guardian in the life-time of grand-father—De facto guardian—Contract made in good faith for minor's benefit binding on minor.

Failing the father and mother and their appointees, no person however nearly related is of right entitled to the custody of a minor Buddhist or to the guardianship of his property.

The grand-uncle of a minor undertook the duties of guardian of minor's property without opposition on the part of the minor's grand-father. In the capacity of guardian the grand-uncle made a contract on behalf of the minor in good faith for the minor's benefit:

Held, that the grand-uncle acted as a de facto guardian of the minor and as the contract was made in good faith for the minor's benefit, it was binding on the minor.

Application for revision of the decision of the District Court of Toungoo, in Civil Appeal No. 94 of 1909, dismissing the appeal against the judgment and decree of the Township Court of Yedas, in Civil Suit No. 187 of 1909.

Mr. Palit, for the Applicants.

Mr. Rahman, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The chief point taken in revision is that Thet She who made the contract on behalf of the minors was not their natural guardian. He was their grand-uncle and as their grand-father was a nearer living relative, the latter was the natural guardian. I am asked to infer that Thet She acted merely as agent of the minors and that as a minor cannot appoint an agent, the contract made by Thet She was unenforceable. There is evidence that Thet She reaped the crop with the minors. His reaping the crop with them, his nearness of kin, and his action in making the compromise with Ma Baw are facts justifying the Court in treating him as de facto guardian of the minors' property. Failing the father and mother and their appointees, no person, however nearly related, is of right entitled to the custody of minor Buddhists or to the guardianship of their property. There is no necessity, unless the interests of the minor demand it, to interfere with a de facto guardianship not improperly obtained. See Trevelyan's Law relating to Minors, Third Edition, page 77.

There can be no doubt that it was in the capacity of guardian of the minor's property that Thet She purported to act and that the other party to the agreement regarded him as such. A guardian is merely a person having the care of a minor's person or property and it appears that Thet She undertook the duties of guardianship of the minors' property in this case without opposition on the part of his brother who was the minors' grandfather. Thus he was de facto guardian.

As to the contract itself, it is clear that it was made in good faith and was for the benefit of the minors. Their step-mother had possession of the land. She allowed Thet She and the minors to take the crop on condition that they would pay Rs. 146 debts due by their father and 55 baskets of paddy for herself. They got at least 500 baskets of paddy from the land and could have paid the debts and still had a large surplus.

I think the lower Courts were right in enforcing the agreement. Application dismissed with costs.

Application dismissed.

(s. c. 14 C. L. J. 603.)

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL RULE No. 2432 OF 1911.

July 14, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Holmwood and Mr. Justice D. Chatterjee.

JASODA DASSI—DECREE-HOLDER—PETITIONER

versus

RAMESWARI DASSI—DEFENDANT—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Ex parte decree—Defendant's case partly gone into—Refusal of application for adjournment—Withdrawal of Counsel for defendant from case—Whether decree is ex-parte—Ex parte decree obtained by fraud—Defendant's remedy—Ex parte final decree, after preliminary decree—Defendant unavoidably absent, whether decree is ex parte—Decree for accounts—Opportunity to defendant to prove what amount due.

Where the case of a defendant is partially entered into and his Counsel applies for adjournment and on such adjournment being refused he withdraws from the case, and the Judge in his absence gives judgment on the merits of the case, such decree cannot be held to be ex parte.

Kadar Khan v. Juggeswar Prasad Singh, 35 C. 1023, followed.

If the decree was obtained by fraud, the defendant's remedy would be by way of review or by a suit properly framed for the purpose.

A decree for accounts is not a mere direction to inquire and report. It proceeds and must always proceed upon the assumption that the party calling for it is entitled to the sum found due. It is a decree affirming his rights, only leaving it to be ascertained how much is due to him from the party accounting; and such a decree directing the defendant to account is a final decree.

Janokey Doss v. Brindabun Doss, 3 M. I. A. 175 and Rahimbhoy v. Turner, 18 I. A. 6; 15 B. 155, relied upon.

After the passing of a preliminary decree for accounts, if the final decree be passed in the absence of the defendant who is unavoidably absent, the final decree would be held to have been passed ex parte and liable to be set aside and the defendant would have an opportunity of being heard on the question of how much is due.

Rule against an order of the First Subordinate Judge of 24-Pergunnahs, dated the 24th April 1911.

Mr. B. C. Mitter and Babu Provas Chandra Mitter, for the Petitioner.

Babu Atul Krishna Roy, for the Opposite party.

JUDGMENT.—This was a Rule calling on the other side to show cause why the order of the first Subordinate Judge, Alipore, dated 24th April 1911, setting aside the decree should not be set aside on the ground that the decree so expressed to be set aside was not passed ex parte and so there was no jurisdiction to make the order.

Now it is perfectly clear that the order of the 24th April 1911 and the Rule both refer to the preliminary decree in this case and that on the authorities cannot be held to have been passed ex parte; for the evidence of the defendant was taken on commission and that evidence was evidently considered by the Court in its judgment where it says that it is proved and admitted that the plaintiff now represents the estate of the deceased Sib Nandan Lal, and on the authority of Kadar Khan v. Juggeswar Prasad Singh (1), where the case of the defendant has been partially entered into and the Counsel for the defendant applied for adjournment which was refused and thereupon withdrew from the case, and the Court in his absence passed its judgment on the merits of the case, such decree cannot be held to be ex parte. No doubt, if the decree was obtained by fraud which the defendants maintain, they have their remedy by way of review or by a suit properly framed for the purpose. But the learned Judge goes further in his order of the 24th April. He holds that, apart from the fraud which appears to have been practised upon the defendants in respect of the preliminary decree, their agent continues to deceive them after the passing of the preliminary decree, and he says, it appears from the evidence that even after the preliminary decree Jugger Nath went on representing to the lady defendant that the case was going on well and that she had no cause for anxiety. Under those circumstances, the lady, who was at Gazipur, of course, did not return and was certainly unavoidably absent at the final hearing so that the final decree which settled the amount due was certainly passed ex parte and the defendant has succeeded in showing that she was unavoidably absent and unrepresented at that final hearing.

We must, therefore, make the Rule absolute as regards the preliminary decree holding, on the authority of Janokey Dass v. Brindabun Doss (2), and of Rahimbhoy v. Turner (3), that a decree for accounts is not a mere direction to inquire and report. It proceeds, and must always proceed, upon the assumption that the party calling for it is entitled to the sum found due. It is a decree affirming his rights, only leaving it to be inquired into how much is due to him from the party accounting; and such a decree directing the defendant to account is a final decree and one which is appealable to the Privy Council. But, while we hold that the order directing the defendant to furnish account is final and that the plaintiff has a right to obtain those accounts, we can see no reason for differing from the learned Judge that the defendant ought to have an opportunity of being heard on the question of how much is due, and we, therefore, discharge the Rule as regards the so-called final decree which ought more properly to be called a supplementary decree, and direct that the parties be given a further opportunity to show what is the amount due on the account which has been ordered. There can be no hardship to the plaintiff who alleges that he has obtained much less than he was entitled to and takes credit to himself for having remitted a large amount on the account.

(1) 35 C. 1023.

As each party has partially succeeded, each party will bear his own costs.

Rule made absolute.

(2) 3 M. I. A. 175.
(3) 18 I. A. 6; 15 B. 155.

(s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 265).

UPPER BURMA JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL No. 272 OF 1910.

April 25, 1911.

Present:—Mr. McColl, A. J. C.

NGA PAW—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

NAG LU GALE AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Redemption suit—Limitation—Mortgagee alleging transaction to be sale—Mortgagor contending fraud and asserting mortgage—Donees from mortgagee—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 91, 134, 142, 148—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92.

A suit for redemption against donees from the mortgagee is not governed by Article 134 of the Limitation Act as this Article does not apply to persons who are not transferees for valuable consideration.

In a suit for redemption of mortgage, the mortgagee pleaded that the property had been sold to him by a registered deed-sale and not mortgaged. The contention on behalf of the plaintiff was that though the deed was executed by him it was a fraudulent one inasmuch as he had been induced to sign it by a false representation that it was a mortgage-deed:

Held, that the suit was governed by Article 148 of the Limitation Act and that the plaintiff was entitled to prove the fraud and the fact that the transaction was a mortgage.

Held, further, that Article 91 or 142 of the Limitation Act was inapplicable to the case.

Appeal against the judgment of the District Court, Magwe, in Civil Suit No 5 of 1909.

Mr. S. Mukerjee, for the Appellant.

Mr. J. M. Xavier, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff-appellant and his wife Ma Me sued the defendant-respondents and another for redemption of two oil wells alleged to have been mortgaged to the first defendant-respondent by Ma Me for Rs. 70 in 1265. The 2nd and 3rd defendants-respondents were made defendants as they proposed to have acquired the wells by gift from the 1st defendant-respondent and the Burma Oil Company was also made a defendant as they had purchased one of the wells from the 2nd defendant-respondent:

The first defendant-respondent pleaded that the wells had been sold to him by a registered deed of sale and not mortgaged. The plaintiff-appellant, however, contended that though she had executed this deed, it was a fraudulent one, inasmuch as she had been induced to sign it by a false representation that it was a mortgage-deed, that she was illiterate and the deed had been wrongly read out to her.

The lower Court framed two preliminary issues as to whether it had jurisdiction and whether the suit was barred by limitation. The first issue was decided in the affirmative by this Court on appeal and the suit was remanded for trial on the merits. The lower Court then examined witnesses and dismissed the suit on the ground that it was barred by limitation.

The point has been very inadequately dealt with by the lower Court. The learned Additional Judge said that he had no doubt whatever that the suit was barred by limitation but he did not even set out what Article of the first Schedule of the Limitation Act, in his opinion, governed the case. From this remark that the plaintiff-appellants had not even alleged possession within 12 years of the suit and from the rulings quoted by him, it would appear that he applied Article 142. This Article, however, has no application. The plaintiffs-appellants were not dispossessed whilst in possession, nor can it be said that they discontinued possession.

Article 91 relied upon by the other side does not apply either. The plaintiffs-appellants did not sue to set aside the deed of sale; and they were not bound to do so. Their suit was for redemption.

The second plaintiff Ma Me's case as against the 1st, 2nd and 3rd defendants-respondents is governed by Article 143. She alleges that there was a mortgage and she claims the right to prove by oral evidence that the deed of sale relied upon by the defendants-respondents does not correctly represent the transaction under the 1st proviso to section 92, Evidence Act, on the ground of fraud, and if she can prove the fraud, she is entitled to prove the remainder of her allegation. Her suit as against the 4th defendant, the Burma Oil Company, would have been governed by Article 134, but apparently the plaintiffs-appellants have withdrawn the suit as against the 4th defendant. The suit as against the 2nd and 3rd defendants-respondents is not governed by Article 134, because they are not transferees for valuable consideration. They allege a gift.

So far as the present appellant's interests are identical with those of his wife, ie., so long as he claims the right to redeem, he must prove the fraud and then the mortgage and the suit is still governed by Article 148. He, however, claims that his wife mortgaged the wells without his knowledge or consent and that even if the transaction were a sale and not a mortgage, it could not affect his share of the property, which he alleges to be Hnapason. He, therefore, claims that even if the transaction be found to have been a sale he is entitled to recover half the property and that his claim is not time-barred as the defendants-respondents' possession would not be adverse to him until they affected him with notice. This contention raises difficult points as to whether this part of the case is governed by Article 134, Ma Me being looked upon as a trustee or by Article 142 or by Article 144 and as to whether the present appellant had actual or imputed notice or not that the defendants-respondents claimed an adverse title. If Ma Me acted without her husband's consent, express or implied, apparently notice to her would not be notice to him (section 229, Contract Act) and it would be necessary to prove actual notice.

For the present plaintiff-appellant to succeed on this ground, however, it would be necessary for him to amend the plaint. This can be done in the lower Court and it is unnecessary for me to say any more as the suit has been erroneously dismissed on the preliminary point that on the allegations in the plaint, it is time-barred, whereas on those allegations, the suit is governed by Article 148 and is within time.

The learned Counsel for the respondents has urged some arguments on the merits, but the suit has not been tried and issues have not been framed on the merits.

I set aside the decree of the lower Court and remand the suit to that Court in order that it may be re-admitted under its original number and disposed of on the merits.

Decree set aside;
Case remanded.

(s. c. 14 C. L. J. 646.)

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 507 OF 1909.
July 14, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

NAGENDRA KUMAR NATH AND ANOTHER —PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

HARA CHANDRA PODDAR AND OTHERS —DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Co-owner—Joint property—Liability to be ejected—Sale of joint property by one member as his exclusive property—Hostile title.

One co-owner is not liable to be ejected from joint property at the instance of his co-sharer unless there has been an ouster in the technical sense of the term.

Dijendra Narain v. Purnendu Narain, 11 C. L. J. 189; 5 Ind. Cas. 171, followed.

Where one co-owner dealt with joint property as if it belonged exclusively to himself and alienated the whole property to a stranger, there was an assertion of hostile title on his part, and inasmuch as the transferee has claimed the entire property in denial of the rights of the co-owners of the transferor, the co-owners are entitled to be restored to possession of their share of the property.

HEDLOT KHASIA v. KA RAN KHASIANI.

Appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Chittagong, dated the 18th December 1908, modifying that of the Munsif of Chittagong, dated the 5th February 1908.

Babu Baldeo Narain Singh (for Moulvi Serajul Islam) and Babu Jyotis Chundra Sarkar, for the Appellants.

Babus Mahendra Nath Roy, Krishen Prosad Sarbadhikari and Biraj Mohan Mojumdar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The subject matter of the litigation which has given rise to this appeal is a small parcel of land owned originally by three brothers Aukhil, Nagen and Rajani. Rajani is dead and his interest has passed by inheritance to his mother Subarna. Aukhil transferred the property to the father of the defendants-respondents on the assumption that the property belonged exclusively to him and he was competent to deal with it as his own. At that time his brothers Nagen and Rajani were infants. Upon attainment of majority Nagendra and his mother Subarna have brought this suit for declaration of title to two-thirds share of the land and for recovery of possession thereof. The defendants have sought to resist the claim substantially on the ground that Aukhil was the person exclusively entitled to the property and that the plaintiffs have no title to enforce against them. That defence has completely failed and it has been established that Aukhil was interested to the extent of a third share only. On these facts, the Court of first instance made a decree in favour of the plaintiffs for recovery of possession and mesne profits. Upon appeal, the Subordinate Judge has held that the plaintiffs are entitled merely to a declaration of title and cannot claim to eject the defendants. In our opinion this view cannot be supported.

The learned Vakil for the respondents has explained that the decision of the Subordinate Judge is based on the doctrine that one co-owner is not liable to be ejected from joint property at the instance of his co-sharer unless there has been an ouster in the technical sense of the term. Dijendra Narain v. Purnendu Narain (1). But even if this principle be assumed to have been applied in this case, it is obviously of no assistance to the defendants. As already stated, Aukhil dealt with the property as if it belonged exclusively to himself. The moment he alienated the whole of the property to the father of the defendants there was an assertion of the hostile title on his part, and that assertion has continued up to the time of the institution of the present suit inasmuch as the transferees have claimed the entire property in denial of the rights of the two brothers of Aukhil. Consequently, they or their representatives-in-interest are entitled to be restored to possession of their share of the property. The Subordinate Judge also seems to have held that the defendants as purchasers from Aukhil might be entitled to claim the whole of this property if upon a partition it fell entirely in the share of Aukhil. No doubt, such a claim on the part of the defendants as against Aukhil might be sustained on the principle recognised in section 43 of the Transfer of Property Act. As between them and their vendor, the latter might not be in a position to deny that he had a good title to the whole of the property. But that contingency has not yet happened and the defendants cannot anticipate events which may never happen. At any rate, even upon partition, it is conceivable that the whole of this property may not be allotted to them alone. Under these circumstances, we are of opinion that the defendants cannot resist a decree for possession of the immoveable property.

The result is, that this appeal is allowed, the decree of the Court below set aside and that of the Court of first instance restored. This order will carry costs both here and in the Court below.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 11 C. L. J. 189; 5 Ind. Cas. 171.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 989 OF 1909.

JULY 18, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

U. HEDLOT KHASIA AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

KA RAN KHASIANI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Ex parte decree—Appeal by contesting defendants—Confirmation of decree of first Court—Application by defendants against whom ex parte decree was made to set it aside—Jurisdiction of primary Court to entertain application—Presentation of returned plaint to competent Court—Suit to be treated as instituted when presented in competent Court—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 57—Limitation (Act XV of 1877), s. 14—Lease for term—Death of lessee—Expiry of lease—Changes in title pendente lite—Regulation Act (I of 1886), s. 8 sub-s. (1) cl. (b), ss. 39, 62—Khasias—Inheritance—Sister to be preferred to brother.

HEDLOT KHASIA v. KA RAN KHASIANI.

Where an Appellate Court affirms a decree of the first Court, which was made ex parte against some of the defendants and on contest against the others, it is competent to the primary Court to set aside the ex parte decree at the instance of those defendants against whom the decree had been made ex parte and who had not been made parties to the appeal preferred at the instance of the contesting defendants.

Dhanai Sardar v. Tarak Nath Chowdhuri, 5 Ind. Cas. 525; 12 C. L. J. 53, distinguished.

Indu Meah v. Dar Baksh, 10 Ind Cas. 275: 14 C. L. J. 42; 15 C. W. N. 798, relied upon.

Kumdu Nath Roy Chowdhuri v. Jatindra Nath Chowdhury, 9 Ind. Cas. 189: 15 C. W. N. 399; 13 C. L. J. 221;38 C. 394, distinguished.

The combined effect of section 57 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 and section 14 of the Limitation Act of 1877 is that when a plaint which has been returned is presented in a Court of competent jurisdiction, the suit must be taken to be instituted on the date of such presentation.

The Court may for the sake of justice take into consideration changes in the title pendente lite.

Ram Ratna v. Mohant, 6 C. L. J. 74; 11 C. W. N. 732 and Ramyad v. Bindeswari, 6 C. L. J. 102, followed.

A lease for a term of years does not terminate with the life of the grantee.

The mere recognition by the lessor of a wrong person as successor of the original grantee does not prejudice the position of the lawful successor.

Section 8, sub-section (1), clause (b) of Regulation I of 1886 applies to a case in which a person has acquired land, not merely because it has been directly settled with him by the Government, but also because he has obtained it from the original grantee by transfer, succession or otherwise.

The clause includes a case in which a person has before the Regulation acquired land by inheritance from a person with whom it had been settled by the Government under a lease for a term not less than ten years.

Amongst the Synting Khasias a sister inherits the property of her brother in preference to a brother.

One T. a Khasia obtained a settlement of certain lands from the Government on October 21st, 1884, for a term of ten years. T. died shortly after, and left behind him a brother H. and two sisters S and L. Immediately after his death, his brother in 1886 got his own name entered as his successor-in-interest and continued in possession. In 1895 the two sisters sued for recovery of possession:

Held, that the case is completely covered by clause (b) of sub-section (1) of section 8 of Regulation I of 1886, that upon the death of T. and in spite of the hostile act of his brother, his sisters became owners of the interest originally vested in him, that as soon as the Regulation came into force on July 1st 1886, the sisters became land-holders within the meaning of clause (b) of sub-section (1) of section 8 and were entitled to claim settlement from the Government, that although they did not do so, their rights have not been affected by the settlement made with their brother, and that they are entitled to recover the property from the hands of the brother.

Madub Nath Surma v. Myarani Medhi 17 C. 819 and Patan Maria v. Bahibaram, 24 C. 239; 1 C. W. N. 94, relied upon.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Sylhet, dated March 24th, 1908, affirming that of the Sub-Judge of that district, dated June 1st, 1908.

Babus Tarakishore Chowdhury and Brojo Lal Chakravarti, for the Appellants.

Babu Harendra Narain Mitra and Birendra Chandra Das, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The subject-matter of the litigation which has given rise to this appeal is a tract of land whereof settlement was obtained by one U. Timon from the Government on the 21st October 1884, under a qabuliat executed for a term of ten years. The grantee died shortly after, and left behind him a brother U. Hedlot and two sisters Ka Sengai and Ka Laban. Immediately after his death, his brother, in 1885, got his own name entered in the qubuliat as his successor-in-interest and apparently continued in possession thereafter. U. Hedlot transferred a portion of his interest in the disputed land to some of the defendants on the 22nd March 1887. On the 13th November 1895, the two sisters of U. Timon commenced an action for declaration of title to the disputed land and for recovery of possession. Their case in substance was, that they were Khasias and that under the customary rules of inheritance prevalent amongst them, sisters were entitled to succeed in preference to brothers. The defendants to the suit were U. Hedlot and six other persons who claimed to have derived an interest in the disputed land from him. Apart from objections in bar, one of which related to the jurisdiction of the Court, the claim was resisted substantially by the second and third defendants on the ground that the plaintiffs were not entitled to any interest in the land as it had been acquired by U. Hedlot. The other defendants did not enter appearance. The Court first tried the objection of jurisdiction based upon the value of the subject-matter of the litigation, and came to the conclusion that the value of the property was within the limits of its pecuniary jurisdiction. The case was then tried on the merits, and a decree made in favour of the plaintiffs on the 18th April 1896. Upon appeal that decree was affirmed by the Subordinate Judge on the 21st September 1897 and a second appeal to this Court was dismissed on the 20th April 1900. Subsequently, the defendants other than the second and third defendants applied to have the ex parte decree made against them discharged. That application was successful and the suit was revived in so far as they were concerned. They resisted the claim on the ground that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit because the pecuniary value of the subject-matter of the land in dispute exceeded the limits of the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court. This contention was successful, and the result was that on the 15th January 1906, the Court returned the plaint for presentation to the Court of Subordinate Judge, the plaint was duly presented to that officer on the day following. The case was then tried on the merits. The substantive defence to the claim was two fold; namely, first, that the plaintiffs did not acquire any valid interest in the disputed property, because upon the death of U. Timon there was no interest left which could pass to them by succession; and secondly, that if the interest of U. Timon was transmissible by inheritance, the plaintiffs were not the heiresses of their brother. The Court of first instance decided in favour of the plaintiffs on the 1st June 1908 and that decision was affirmed on appeal by the District Judge on the 24th March 1909. Two of the defendants, the fifth and the seventh, have now appealed to this Court and on their behalf the decision of the District Judge has been assailed on four grounds namely, first, that the suit has not been properly framed, because after the plaint had been returned for presentation to the proper Court, the pleadings ought to have been amended with reference to the circumstances as they stood on the 16th January 1906; secondly, that the suit is barred by limitation; thirdly, that the plaintiffs have acquired no title to the disputed property, because upon the death of U. Timon there was no interest left to be transmitted to them; and fourthly, that if the interest of U. Timon was transmissible, the plaintiffs are not the heirs of their brother. These arguments have been strenuously contested by the respondents and a preliminary point has been raised on their behalf that the ex parte decree was improperly set aside, inasmuch as after the decree of the original Court had been affirmed on appeal by the Subordinate Judge and on second appeal by this Court, it was not competent to the primary Court to discharge that decree and direct a re-trial of the suit. We must first examine the validity of the objection taken on behalf of the respondents.

HEDLOT KHASIA v. KA RAN KHASIANI.

It appears from an examination of the record that the decree was originally made upon contest as against the second and third defendants, and was made ex parte, as against the others. The second and third defendants alone appealed against the adverse decision of the Subordinate Judge. To that appeal, the only respondents were the successful plaintiffs. The Sub-Judge affirmed the decision of the original Court. A second appeal was presented to this Court by the second and third defendants, and, as in the Court of Appeal below, the only respondents in this Court were the plaintiffs. The decision of the Court of first instance, which has been affirmed on appeal, was confirmed by this Court. Upon these facts, the learned Vakil for the respondents has contended, upon the authority of the decision in Dhonai Sardar v. Tarak Nath Chowdhuri (1) that the decree of the original Court was superseded by the decree of the Appellate Court, and that, consequently, after the appeal had been decided, it was not competent to the primary Court to set aside the ex parte decree even at the instance of persons against whom the decree had been made ex parte and who had not been made parties to the appeal preferred at the instance of the contesting defendants. It may be conceded that the contention of the respondents is apparently supported by the decision upon which reliance is placed, but we are of opinion that this position cannot be maintained on principle. No doubt, when a decree is attached by way of appeal to a superior Court, if the decision of the Court of Appeal affirms that of the Court of first instance, the original decree becomes merged in the decree of the Court of Appeal. But the application of this general principle may be modified by special circumstances. Here, as we have already explained, the decree of the primary Court was challenged on behalf of the contest-ing defendants. They assailed that decree only in so far as they themselves were concerned and this is conclusively evidenced by the circumstance that they did not join the other defendants as parties to the appeal. When, therefore, their appeal was dismissed and the decree of the Court of first instance was affirmed, it must be taken that the decree of the primary Court was merged in the decree of the Appellate Court only in so far as the original decree affected the two contesting defendants. In so far as that decree affected the other defendants, who had not entered appearance, the Court of Appeal was not invited to consider the matter and to pronounce any judicial opinion thereupon. A similar observation applies to the decree made by this Court. Consequently, the view cannot be maintained that merely because the appeal of the two contesting defendants was unsuccessful, the other defendants were deprived of their remedy, available under section 108, to have the ex parte decree made against them discharged on proper grounds. The view we take is in accordance with that taken by this Court in the case of Indu Meah v. Dar Baksh Bhuiyan (2). Much reliance was placed upon the decision in Rumud Nath Roy Chowdhry v. Jatindra Nath Chowdhry (3); but that case is clearly distinguishable, because there the application to set aside the ex parte decree was made during the pendency of an appeal. Consequently, the question did not arise for consideration, whether it would have been competent to the primary Court to set aside the ex parte decree upon the invitation of the defendants who had not entered appearance, after the appeal preferred by the contesting defendants had been dismissed. We are clearly of opinion that the preliminary point urged by the respondents cannot be supported. We are further of opinion that it is too late for them to take this objection. The suit has been revived and re-tried. If the plaintiffs were of opinion that the ex parte decree ought not to have been set aside by the primary Court, they ought to have applied to this Court to discharge that order as made without jurisdiction. The objection which the plaintiffs, as respondents, now seek to urge, is not taken, with a view to support the decree in their favour; if it is allowed to prevail, the decree, though in their favour, must be discharged as made without jurisdiction. The preliminary objection is, therefore, overruled, and we proceed to consider the points urged by the defendants in support of their appeal.

(1) 12 C. L. J. 53; 5 Ind. Cas. 525.

The first point taken by the appellants is that the suit has not been properly constituted because the plaint, as it now stands, seeks relief on the basis of events as they happened before the 13th November 1895 (the date of the original presentation of the plaint) and all intermediate transactions between that date and the date of the presentation of the plaint in the Court of the Subordinate Judge have been ignored. In support of this proposition reliance has been placed upon section 57 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882 and section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act of 1877. Section 57 of the Code of 1882 provides that the plaint shall be returned to be presented to the proper Court if a suit has been instituted in a Court whose grade is lower or higher than that of the Court competent to try it, where such Court exists or where no option as to the selection of the Court is allowed by law. Section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act provides that in computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the time during which the plaintiff has been prosecuting with due diligence in another civil proceeding, whether in a Court of first instance or in a Court of Appeal, against the defendant, shall be excluded, where the proceeding is founded upon the same cause of action and is presented in good faith in a Court which from defect of jurisdiction or other cause of a like nature is unable to entertain it. It has been argued on behalf of the appellants, that the combined effect of these two sections is that when the plaint which has been returned is presented in a Court of competent jurisdiction, the suit must be taken to be instituted on the date of such presentation. In our opinion, this contention is well founded and is not opposed to the decision in Huri Mohun v. Naimuddin (4), which was a case of amendment and not of return of plaint [Greesh Chunder v. Pran Kishen (5); Ram Coomar v.

(2) 14 C. L. J. 42; 15 C. W. N. 798; 10 Ind. Cas. 275.

(3) 13 C. L. J. 221; 38 C. 394; 9 Ind. Cas. 189; 15 C. W. N. 399.

(4) 20 C. 41.

(5) 7 W. R. 157.

HEDLOT KHASIA v. KA RAN KHASIANI.

Dwarkanath (6) ; Sham Chand v. Kally Kanth (7); Husrutoollah v. Aboo Mahomed (8)]. In fact, if the contrary view were adopted, the inference would follow that the provisions of section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act were superfluous. It would have been needless to formulate the rule embodied in section 14, unless the theory were adopted that the suit was instituted only when the plaint was presented in the Court of competent jurisdiction. Consequently, the view may well be maintained that the plaint in this case ought to have been amended and the plaintiffs required to base their claim to relief on the footing of circumstances as they stood on the 16th January 1906. We are clearly of opinion, however, that the suit ought not to fail on this ground. No such objection was taken in the Court of first instance after the plaint had been presented. If the objection had been taken, the plaintiffs might easily have amended their allegations. It is further plain that the defendants have not been in any manner prejudiced by reason of the omission of the plaintiffs to amend the plaint. The events upon which the defendants rely have all been investigated by the Courts below. The most important of these, is the settlement with them by the Government after the institution of the suit in 1895. The defendants have, as a matter of fact, throughout contended that the plaintiffs are entitled to relief, if any, on the footing that the defendants are now settlement-holders for a term of 15 years under a lease granted to them on the 1st April 1898. The defendants will be amply protected, as we propose to take this fact into account, and determine thereon the relative rights and liabilities of the parties, this is in accord with the principle that the Court may, for the sake of justice, take into consideration changes in the title pendente lite ; Ram Ratan v. Mohant Schu (9) and Ramyad v. Bindeswari (10). The first contention of the appellants, though technically correct, must consequently be overruled.

In support of the second contention of the appellants it has been argued that the view is barred by limitation, because admittedly defendants and their predecessor U. Timon have been in possession of the disputed land from 1885, while the present suit, for the purpose of limitation, must be deemed to have been commenced on the 16th January 1906. The plaintiffs, however, are clearly entitled to the benefit of the provisions of sub-section (1) of section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act. It cannot be disputed that the plaintiffs have prosecuted with due diligence the original suit as against these defendants, and that they have been obliged to institute the present suit, because the first suit could not be entertained by the Court on account of defect of jurisdiction. There can be no controversy that the plaintiffs have throughout acted in good faith. As already stated, the second and third defendants raised the objection of valuation at the original trial. Upon evidence, the Court held that the objection was groundless. At the instance of the present appellants, however, the Court subsequently, on the revival of the suit came to the conclusion that the objection was well founded. Under these circumstances, in view specially of the divergence of opinions, expressed by the Court on the two occasions, it is clear that absence of good faith cannot be imputed to the plaintiffs. It is further plain, that as against the present defendants, the suit must be treated to have been pending from the 12th November 1895 when the suit was instituted up to the 15th January 1906 when the plaint was ordered to be returned for presentation to the proper Court. This is so, irrespective of the proceedings by way of appeal at the instance of the second and third defendants to which the present defendants were not parties. If the period, between the 13th November 1895 and 15th January 1906, is excluded, it is clear that no question of limitation arises, because the dispossession by the defendants took place after the death of U. Timon in 1885. The view we take is in accord with that previously taken by this Court [Takhuroodeen v. Kurimbux (11) Khellat Chunder Ghose v. Nusseeb-un-nissa (12)]. The second contention of the appellants must, therefore, be overruled as untenable.

In support of the third ground, it has been urged that upon the death of U. Timon his interest terminated and consequently

(6) 5 W. R. 207.
(7) (1863) 2 Hay 314.
(8) 6 W. R. 39.
(9) 6 C. L. J. 74 ; 11 C. W. N. 732.
(10) 6 C. L. J. 102.
(11) 3 W. R. 20.
(12) 16 W. R. 477.

HEDLOT KHASIA v. KA RAN KHASIANI.

even if it be assumed that his sisters were the heiresses-at-law, they did not acquire any interest by inheritance. In our opinion, this contention is not well founded. In the first place, it is clear that as the lease in favour of U. Timon was for a term of years, it did not terminate with the life of the grantee. As was observed by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the cases of Tej Chand v. Sreekanth Ghose (13), Raja Burdakanth Roy v. Aluk Munjoore Dasiah (14) and Gobind Lal Roy v. Hemendra Narain Roy Chowdhury (15), in the absence of a specific provision to that effect, a lease for a fixed term of years does not terminate upon the expiration of the stipulated term by the mere fact of the death of either the lessor or the lessee. Upon the death of U. Timon, therefore, there was a transmissible interest which vested in his heirs by succession. We shall assume, for the present, that his two sisters were the heiresses. Notwithstanding the fact that they were heiresses, the brother of U. Timon took possession of the property and got his name entered in the qubuliat as the successor-in-interest of the original grantor. This happened in May 1886, before Regulation I of 1886 had come into operation on the 1st July 1886. It cannot be disputed that before the Regulation came into force the rights of the parties were governed by the terms of the contract between the grantor and grantee, as also the customary rules of inheritance to which the parties were subject. The mere recognition by the grantor of the brother as successor of the original grantee, obviously, did not prejudice the position of the heiresses. The question, therefore, arises whether when the Regulation came into force, it altered the status and rights of the parties. Now section 8 of the Regulation deals with the question of the status of land-holders and the mode in which that status may be acquired. Sub-section (1) of section 8 is divided into two clauses (a) and (b) which deals with two different set of circumstances. Clause (a) provides for the case in which a person has, before the commencement of the Regulation, held immediately under the Government for 10 years continuously any land not included either in a permanently settled estate or in a revenue free estate, and who has during that period paid to the Government the revenue due thereon, or held the same under an express exemption from revenue. Clause (b) deals with the case in which a person, whether before or after the commencement of the Regulation, acquired any such land under a lease granted by or on behalf of the Government the term of which is not less than 10 years. Each of such persons is under section 8 deemed to have acquired the status of a land-holder in respect of the land. It is obvious that clause (a) has no application to the circumstances of the present case because U. Timon did not, before the commencement of the Regulation, hold for 10 years continuously the disputed land under the Government. Clause (b), on the other hand, plainly applies to the case; but it has been argued that in view of sub-section (2) of section 8, the operation of clause (b) is excluded. Sub-section (2) provides that when land held by one person has come, immediately by transfer or succession to be held by another, the holding shall, for the purpose of sub-section (1), clause (a), be deemed to have been continuous, and the latter person may, in reckoning the length of his holding, add the holding of the former to his own. It has been argued in substance for the appellants that as sub-section (2) is limited in its application to cases falling within clause (a) of sub-section (1), clause (b) of sub section (1) cannot be applied to the circumstances of the present case. In our opinion, the contention is not well founded. The Legislature did not extend the application of sub-section (2) to cases under clause (b) of sub-section (1) for the obvious reason that it was needless to do. Clause (b), as we read it, applied to a case in which a person has acquired land, not merely because it has been directly settled with him by the Government but also because he has obtained it from the original grantee by transfer, succession or otherwise. In our opinion, clause (b) may be read so as to include a case in which a person has, before the commencement of the Regulation, acquired the land by inheritance from a person with whom it has been settled by the Government under a lease for a term not less than ten years. The learned Vakil for the appellants does not dispute that the term "acquired" may be interpreted in the

(13) 3 M. I. A. 261; 6 W. R. 48 (P. C.).
(14) 4 M. I. A. 321.
(15) 17 C. 686.

HEDLOT KHASIA v. KA RAN KHASIANI.

wider sense just indicated. But he contends that a narrower construction may very well be put upon it. We are of opinion that the restricted interpretation suggested ought not to be adopted and we are fortified in this view by the circumstance that the Legislature has not thought fit to make the provisions of sub-section (2) applicable to cases covered by clause (a). The policy of the Legislature is obvious. In the case covered by clause (a) where title is acquired by continuous possession for ten years, the Legislature provides that the possession of the successor-in-interest may be added to the possession of the previous holder. In a case comprised within clause (b) it is not necessary to make a provision of this character, because the original grantee holds under a lease and the interest of the successor-in-interest may be taken to have been acquired for him, whether it has been acquired by succession, transfer or any other manner. The present case is thus completely covered by clause (b) of sub-section (1). It has been finally argued by the learned Vakil for the appellants that the sisters of the original grantee cannot be said to have acquired the land, because admittedly they never obtained possession. It has been argued in substance that the term "acquired" connotes entirely over the property; in other words, that a person cannot be said to have "acquired" land unless he has acquired physical possession thereof. We are not prepared to accept this contention as well founded; the ordinary meaning of the term "acquired" undoubtedly does not lend any support to this argument. The true position, therefore, is that upon the death of U. Timon and in spite of the hostile act of his brother his sisters became the owners of the interest originally vested in him, and as soon as the Regulation came into force on the 1st July 1886, the sisters became land-holders within the meaning of clause (b) of sub-section (1) of section 8 of the Regulation. Once the conclusion is firmly established, the case proves reasonably plain and free from difficulty. Section 9 provides that a land-holder shall have a permanent, heritable and transferable right of use and occupancy in his land, subject to the payment of revenue and the other items mentioned in clause (a) and subject also to other conditions needless to enumerate for our present purposes. Consequently, it cannot be maintained that upon the expiry of the term of ten years fixed in the lease of the 21st October 1884, the interest of the sisters completely terminated; they were completely entitled to claim settlement from the Government. True it is, that they have not done so. But it is plain from the other parts of the Regulation, to which we shall presently refer, that their rights have not been affected by the settlement made with their brother. Section 39 provides that no person shall, merely on the ground that a settlement has been made with him or with some person through whom he claims, be deemed to have acquired any right to or over any estate as against any other person claiming rights to or over that estate. The same doctrine is recognised in section 62, which provides that nothing contained in Chapter IV of the Regulation and nothing done in accordance therewith, shall be deemed to preclude any person from bringing a suit in the Civil Court for possession of a declaration of his right to any immoveable property to which he may deem himself entitled. Consequently, the inference is irresistible that in spite of the Settlement of 1898, the plaintiffs, as the sisters of the original grantee, are entitled to recover the property from the hands of the brother who has unlawfully seized it. The view we take is supported by the decision of this Court in the cases of Madhub Nath Surma v. Myarani Medhi (16) and Patan Maria v. Bhabiram (17). The third ground upon which the decree of the District Judge is assailed cannot consequently be supported.

In so far as the fourth ground is concerned, it raises a question of the customary rules of inheritance which govern the parties to the suit. It has been argued that the District Judge has overlooked the fact that the plaintiffs are not Khasias but Syntings, and has, therefore, erroneously applied to the plaintiffs a rule of succession which obtains only amongst Khasias. We are of opinion that there is no substance in this contention. It may be conceded that in the settlement proceedings it was alleged that the plaintiffs were not Khasias but Syntings and that the customs and usages of the Khasias and Syntings were radically

(16) 17 C. 819.
(17) 24 C. 239; 1 C. W. N. 94.

distinct. When the case came to be argued, however, before the Courts below, it does not appear to have been urged that the customary rules of inheritance were different in the two classes. In so far as we have been able to gather, the name Synting is applied properly to person residing in the Jaintia hills, but as they are the residents of the Khasia hills are popularly known as Khasias. The Sub-Judge found upon the evidence that amongst the Syntings, a sister inherits the property of her brother in preference to a brother. This conclusion is supported not merely by the oral evidence but also by the opinion of experts. [The Khasias by Major Gardon; Statistical Accounts of Assam by Sir William Hunter, Volume II, 203, 489; Diary of Mr. Heath; Report of Mr. Shadwell]. When the matter was taken on appeal before the District Judge, objection was taken to the judgment of the Sub-Judge, not on the ground that different rules govern the Khasias and the Suntings in this respect, but that he had misconceived the evidence as to the rules of succession amongst the Khasias. It was further urged that the rules of inheritance, so far as the Khasias are concerned, did not apply to the case. The District Judge has overruled all these objections, and, in our opinion, rightly done so. It is plain from the record that the distinction now sought to be raised was never suggested in the Courts below. We may further observe that this point might and ought to have been raised at an earlier stage of the case when upon the death of the original plaintiffs their daughters applied to be brought on the record as their representatives-in-interest. They were allowed, however, to be substituted without any question. The District Judge held upon the evidence that the rule of succession applicable to the case was that which prevailed amongst the Khasias, namely, that a sister succeeds to the estate of her brother in preference to a brother. This conclusion, in our opinion, cannot be successfully assailed, and the fourth ground of appeal, must be negatived.

The result is that all the objections taken by the appellants fail, and the appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 75 OF 1911.

January 3, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chamier.

MUTSADI LAL—APPLICANT

versus

MULE MAL—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Bengal North Western Provinces and Assam Civil Courts Act (XII of 1887), ss. 8, 21—District Judge—Power to assign cases to Additional Judge—Jurisdiction.

A District Judge has power to assign any case to an Additional Judge, who in entertaining an appeal in pursuance of such assignment, does not act beyond his jurisdiction.

Revision against the order of the Additional District Judge of Meerut, dated 1st May 1911.

Mr. Ross Alston, for the Appellant.

Dr. Tej Bahadur Sopru, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—On November the 24th I called upon the Additional Judge to explain how he came to exercise jurisdiction in this case and to forward to this Court copies of any general or special orders bearing upon the question. The report now made by the Additional Judge and the copies of orders submitted by him show that in 1907 the District Judge of Meerut assigned to the Additional Judge all appeals, applications and miscellaneous cases coming from the Muzaffernagar district, and it is in pursuance of those orders that the present Additional Judge entertained the appeal in the present case. It is contended that the District Judge had no power to make over the work of the Muzaffernagar district to the Additional Judge and that the word 'assign' in section 21 sub-section (3) of the Civil Courts Act does not refer to action to be taken by the District Judge but to action to be taken by the Local Government. There is no section in the Act which empowers the Local Government to assign to an Additional Judge work which in the ordinary course would come before a District Judge but there is a provision in section 8 sub-section (2) to the effect that an Additional Judge shall discharge any of the functions of the District Judge which the District Judge may assign to him. It is quite clear to me that the District Judge had power to assign appeals and other cases coming from the Muzaffernagar district to the Additional Judge. Therefore, the Additional Judge had jurisdiction to hear the appeal in the present case. The application for revision fails and is dismissed with costs.

Application disallowed.

NGA PYAN v. EMPEROR.

(s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 267.)

UPPER BURMA JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 172 OF 1910.

March 21, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Shaw, J. C.

NGA PYAN—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 84, 307, 471—Unsoundness of mind—Proof—Evidence.

The accused was convicted for an offence, under section 307 of the Penal Code. It was found from the evidence for the prosecution that he was known as "Mad Nga Pyan"; that immediately before he committed the offence he was noticed by persons to be in one of his mad fits, that he was under a delusion that the Phongyi whom he attacked was keeping his sisters and daughters in the monastery, that he confessed to the investigating Officer and the headman, that he discontinued the attack when he was asked to do so and that the act was utterly unprovoked and motiveless:

Held, that under these circumstances the accused was at the time of committing the offence incapable, by reason of unsoundness of mind, of knowing the nature of the act or that it was wrong or contrary to law.

Appeal against the finding and sentence of the Sessions Judge, Magwe, in Sessions Trial No. 32 of 1910, whereby appellant was convicted under section 307 of the Indian Penal Code, and sentenced to 10 years' transportation. Mr. H. M. Lutter, Public Prosecutor, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Appellant Nga Pyan, 43, has been convicted under section 307, Indian Penal Code, and sentenced to 10 years' transportation for having on the 18th September 1910 at Aingtha attempted to murder a Pongyi U. Ahsinna by cutting him with a da.

The facts are not open to doubt. There were several eye-witnesses and the appellant does not seriously attempt to deny what he did. The Pongyi was lying on a bedstead under his monastery when appellant, without any sort of provocation, attacked him with a dama that had been lying on the bedstead. The Pongyi succeeded after the first cut in getting away, but when he tripped and fell, appellant who had pursued him renewed his attack. There was no sort of motive for ill-will on the appellant's part towards the Pongyi. There were eight wounds on the Pongyi, four of which were declared by the Medical Officer as grievous and at least two were in dangerous situations. Having regard to the number and character of the wounds, an intention to cause death must be inferred.

The appellant in his defence pleaded insanity. But the Sessions Judge after studying Mayne's Commentary came to the conclusion that appellant was not incapable of knowing the nature of his act or that it was wrong or contrary to law.

The evidence as to appellant's state of mind was all given by the witnesses for prosecution. The appellant called no witnesses. There is, however, practical unanimity. Appellant was known as "the Mad Nga Pyan." He was sometimes mad and sometimes sane. When mad he was restless and could not eat and went about shouting, crying out that he was surrounded and attacked and praying for help and trying to hide. It is to be remarked that here we have evidence indicating an unmistakable delusion characteristic of insanity. On the 18th, immediately before his attack on the Pongyi, appellant was noticed by more than one person to be in one of his mad fits. One observed that he was restless, another that he was silent and sullen. He himself explained to the Pongyi that his "mind was hot." The Pongyi advised him to continue telling his beads. This was only a short while before he attacked the Pongyi. As the Sessions Judge also observed, appellant immediately before the attack said that he wanted to see his children. The Pongyi himself gave one explanation to the trying Magistrate, viz, that appellant thought his children were dead. Another explanation would seem to be furnished by what appellant said to the Sub-Inspector when the latter arrived to begin his investigation on the day on which the occurrence in question took place. As a confession what he said to the Sub-Inspector could not, of course, be proved against appellant. But I see no reason why it should not be proved in appellant's favour in reference to his state of mind. It was to this effect, that he met the Pongyi because the Pongyi was keeping his sisters and daughters in the monastery. Appellant had, as far as the proceedings show, no sisters, and only one daughter, a girl of 12, who was in the village at the time of his attack on the Pongyi. It seems to be quite clear that the Pongyi was not keeping any women folk in the monastery. As the Sessions Judge perceived, a delusion seems to be involved here, whichever explanation we accept. To the headman, on the same day, appellant said that he had apologised to the Pongyi and the Pongyi had accepted his apology. I cannot see in this statement evidence of sanity On the contrary, such a statement could hardly have been made by a man in his senses It does not, to me, appear to afford any indication that appellant knew (at the time of committing the act) that he was doing what was wrong or contrary to law. The failure to appreciate the gravity of his act, is so great as to be inconsistent with such knowledge even at the time of the statement nor can I see any evidence of sanity in the fact that after having very nearly killed U. Ahsinna appellant desisted from his attack when U. Lekkana ordered him to do so. Next day appellant was apparently quite sane and thenceforward he exhibited no symptoms of mental unsoundness. But this does not mean that he could not have been insane before, and there is no reason for doubting the truth of the evidence that he had been, which I have already summarised. The learned Sessions Judge believed it, for he held that the accused before his assault on the complainant had not been in a normal state of mind and was subject to delusions. I agree that it is unsafe to admit a plea of insanity upon arguments merely derived from the character of the crime—though cases are not unknown in which such a plea has been admitted on no other ground. But here we have other evidence, viz., the evidence just referred to, and taken in connection with that evidence, the utterly unprovoked and motiveless character of the act in question indicates very strongly that appellant was of unsound mind and incapable within section 84, Indian Penal Code, at the time he committed it. Appellant's omission to escape or conceal himself is a fact tending in the same direction. My opinion is that appellant is entitled to be acquitted. I find that the accused Nga Pyan attempted to murder U. Ahsinna, an offence punishable under section 307, Indian Penal Code, but that at the time he did so he was incapable by reason of unsoundness of mind of knowing the nature of the act or that it was wrong or contrary to law and I direct that he be acquitted of the said offence.

The case is to be reported to the Local Government under section 471, Criminal Procedure Code, and meanwhile the accused is to be detained in safe custody as required by that section.

(S. C. 4 Bur L. T. 279.)

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 342 OF 1911,
August 4, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ormond.

NGA PO YON—APPELLANT

versus

MESSRS. MOHR BROTHERS AND COMPANY LIMITED—RESPONDENTS.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 420—Cheating—Advance obtained on false representation—Promissory note executed—Admissibility of oral evidence to prove representation of intention—Prosecution bound to prove falsity of representation—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92.

The accused obtained an advance from the complainants through a broker on the representation that he had two boat-loads of paddy in the creek and that he would bring them to the mill and would sell them to the complainants. The accused and the broker jointly executed a promissory-note for the advance in favour of the complainants. The promissory-note contained no statement of the representation made by the accused. Subsequently the accused absconded; and it appeared he had no boat-loads of paddy. The complainants thereupon preferred a charge of cheating against him:

Held, (1) that oral evidence was admissible to prove the representation of fraudulent intention and as the representation of intention was not inconsistent with the written agreement and would not have been embodied in it, there was nothing in the Evidence Act to preclude evidence being given of the representation of intention.

Reid v. So Hlaing, 5 L. B. R. 241; 3 Bur. L. T. 124; 8 Ind. Cas. 952; 11 Cr. L. J. 738, explained and distinguished.

(2) That it was not sufficient to prove that the accused promised to bring paddy to the mill at some time or other and failed to do so; the prosecution must show that the representation made by the accused was false, that is, at the time of making it he had no intention of carrying out the promise.

(3) That the facts warranted the inference that the accused's representation was false.

Mr. Jordan, for the Appellant.

Mr. McDonell, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—On the 14 June 1907, the accused sold one boat-load of paddy to the complainants at their mill through their broker, Ko Hmya. Accused asked the broker for an advance of Rs. 1,500 saying that he had two more boat-loads of paddy in the Kanaungto Creek and that he would bring them to the mill and would sell the paddy to complainants. The broker took the accused to the Manager of the mill and repeated to him the accused's statement and obtained for the accused an advance of Rs, 1,500, for which he and the accused jointly executed a promissory-note in favour of the complainants. The promissory-note bears these words: "For value received, this day in cash advance for the supply of grain." The accused absconded and the complainants preferred a charge of cheating against him. He has been convicted under section 420 of the Indian Penal Code and now appeals.

Mr. Jordan for the accused contends that the transaction was one between the accused and the broker, and not between the accused and the mill: and that upon the authority of the Full Bench case of Reid v. So Hlaing (1), no evidence of the arrangement between the parties besides the promissory-note is admissible. Mr. McDonnell, who appears for the prosecution, asks me to hold that under proviso 1 to section 92 of the Evidence Act such evidence is admissible, in accordance with the opinion of Mr. Justice Twomey expressed in So Hlaing's case (1), and also in accordance with the opinion of Mr. Justice Hartnoll expressed in the present case, when ordering further inquiry on the 16th September 1910.

I find it difficult to apply the first proviso of section 92 of the Evidence Act to the present case, because the promissory-note is not impugned in any way. But I think evidence of the false representation is clearly admissible. All that was decided in So Hlaing's case (1) was that where a party to a written contract institutes a criminal proceeding against another party to such contract, and the question arises what the real contract between the parties was, the provisions of section 92 of the Evidence Act apply, and the complainants must be deemed to be a "party" to the case within the meaning of that section.

In a case of cheating such as the present case, the question primarily is:—Did the accused fraudulently or dishonestly induce the complainants to part with the money mentioned in the promissory-note by an untrue representation of fact? The representation of fact in this case being that the accused had two boat-loads of paddy in the creek and that it was his intention to bring them to the mill and to sell the paddy to the complainants. The question of admissibility of evidence only arises in connection with the representation of intention if the intention is expressed in an oral promise and if the oral promise is inconsistent with a contemporaneous written agreement which is not impugned, or if the oral promise is such that (had it in fact been made) it would have been expressed in the written agreement; the rules of common sense, apart from the provisions of the Evidence Act, would exclude evidence attempting to prove such oral promise:— because any such evidence would not be sufficient to support a conviction in the face of the written agreement. But it would be open to the accused to show that the alleged representation was embodied in an oral promise which was inconsistent with the written agreement. Such evidence would be adduced not "for the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to or subtracting from the terms of the written agreement," but for the purpose of showing either that the alleged representation could not have been made, or that it could not have operated as an inducement to the complainant to part with his property. On the other hand, if the alleged representation of intention is not inconsistent with the written agreement, and would not have been embodied in it, there is nothing in the Evidence Act to preclude evidence being adduced to prove the representation.

A promissory-note is essentially a self-contained and complete contract in itself; and a promise to deliver goods could not be a term of that contract. To admit, therefore, evidence to prove such a promise would not be to add to the terms of the promissory-note. And the only question that could arise as to the admissibility of evidence to prove the alleged representation of intention would be:—Is the alleged representation inconsistent with the contract embodied in the promissory-note? No presumption arises that, because there was a promissory-note, there were no other contemporaneous transactions or negotiations between the parties. Promissory-notes are frequently used as security in commercial dealings when advances are made; and I see nothing inconsistent in a mill giving as a loan re-payable on demand, money to a trader who has agreed to sell paddy delivery of which is to be given on a future date; even though it may be understood by both parties that in all probability the loan would not be called in before the date for delivery of the paddy, and that on delivery the price would be deducted from the loan. The loan is in fact independent of the contract of sale; although the contract of sale (or, more strictly speaking, the representation of the vendor that it was his intention to deliver the paddy in accordance with the contract of sale) operated as an inducement to the purchaser to make the loan. In the present case there was no contract of sale. The intention of the accused (if true) to bring and to offer for sale the paddy would be a fact independent of any contract and would not be inconsistent with a contract of loan, though it might have been induced by, and was an inducement for, the loan.

(1) 5 L.B. R. 241; 3 Bur. L. T. 124; 8 Ind. Cas. 952; Cr. L.J. 738.

There can be no doubt that the alleged representation was made by the accused to the broker, in order that the broker might obtain the Rs. 1,500 from the complainants upon the faith of that representation, as a loan from the complainants to the accused; and that the complainants were induced by such representation of the accused to deliver the Rs. 1,500 to the accused. If then the representation has been proved to be false, the offence of cheating has been made out. It is not sufficient to prove that the accused promised to bring paddy to the mill at some time or other and failed to do so; the prosecution must show that the representation made by the accused was false, i.e., that at the time of making it he had no intention of carrying out the promise. The accused's representation was that he had the two boat-loads of paddy then in the creek and that his intenion was to bring that paddy to the mill the next day. After receiving the Rs. 1,500 the accused absconded; I think it is legitimate to draw the inference from those facts that the accused's representation was false; and his defence is that he does not remember the transaction. The accused has been sentenced to three years' rigorous imprisonment. I uphold the conviction, but I think that a sentence of one year's rigorous imprisonment is sufficient. I alter the sentence accordingly.

Sentence altered.

(s. c. 4 Bur. L. T. 259.)

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 160-B OF 1910.

July 5, 1910.

Present:—Mr Justice Twomey.

MADAR SAHIB—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Lower Burma Land and Revenue Act (11 of 1876), ss. 18, 19,—Rules 51, 52 68, 69—Failure to comply with notice of ejectment--Demarcated grazing land—Admission of receipt and disobedience of notice—Prosecution bound to prove illegal encroachment—Application of Rules—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 190 (c), 191--Magistrate acting on his own knowledge of fact--Failure to inform accused of his right to be tried by another Court.

In a prosecution for failure to comply with a notice of ejectment from land said to form part of demarcated grazing ground, an admission by the accused of the receipt of notice and of his failure to comply with it does not amount to an admission that he has committed an offence, as it does not imply that the accused admits his liability to ejectment. The prosecution must prove not only that the accused was served with a notice and disobeyed it but that he was actually occupying the land in contravention of rules under the Land and Revenue Act.

Rules 51 and 52 only refer to land available for temporary occupation under section 19 of the Act, and do not apply to demarcated grazing grounds.

Rule 69 deals with persons who encroach on grazing grounds.

King-Emperor v. Po Chon, 2 L. B R. 311; 1 Cr. L. J. 1118, referred to.

Where a Magistrate acts on his own knowledge of facts under section 190 (c) of the Criminal Procedure Code, he is bound to proceed under section 191 and inform the accused that he is entitled to be tried by another Court. Failure to comply with this imperative rule of law in section 191, is a defect which invalidates the proceedings.

Application to revise the order of the First Class Township Magistrate of Insein, dated the 3rd day of May, 1910.

Mr. R. N. Burjorji, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant was fined Rs. 25 under rule 51 (should be rule 52) of the rules under the Lower Burma Land and Revenue Act for failing to comply with a notice of ejectment from land said to form part of a demarcated grazing ground.

The Sessions Judge declined to interfere in revision remarking that the accused admitted the offence and that there was no reason to think the conviction was wrong. The accused only admitted that he had received the notice of ejectment. The Magistrate further noted, it is true, that "the accused pleads guilty," but the plea clearly meant no more than that he admitted receipt of the notice and failure to comply with it. There is nothing to show that he admitted liability to ejectment. On the contrary, the village headman states that the accused gave as his reason for disobeying the notice that he was working on the land with the Deputy Commissioner's permission for some years and in a later petition to the Magistrate (in his capacity as Township Officer) the accused contends that the land occupied by him is not within the grazing ground and that he has possessed it and paid revenue on it for twenty years. If the latter statement is true the accused would have acquired landholder's rights. But in any case it is clear that the accused by no means admitted the commission of any offence and that evidence should have been recorded for the purpose of establishing his guilt before punishing him under rule 52. The Magistrate should have required proof not only that he had been served with a notice and disobeyed it but that he was actually occupying the land in contravention of rule 51.

